

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

HL 5HKP J

3d. Aug. 1914

HARVARD LAW LIBRARY

Received March 27, 1890

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH RAILROAD CASES.

A complete collection of all the railroad law as decided by the American, English and Canadian courts of last resort.

Elaborate notes to the more important cases. As a means of giving the working lawyer a full collection of all the cases on the subjects treated, together with able and judicious criticism upon the points presented, they are simply invaluable.

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH CORPORATION CASES.

This series presents a full collection of the cases in all the courts of last resort, both in America and England, on the law of private and municipal corporations other than railroad companies.

1.—SCOPE. Among the topics treated of will be the following:

PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.—Agency, Assessments, Building Associations, Dissolution of Corporations, Dividends and Earnings, Ecclesiastical and Religious Corporations, Elections, Mandamus, Officers, Organization, Powers, Stock and Stockholders, Taxation.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.—Assessments, Bonds, Powers, Ordinances, Poor Laws, Streets, Taxes, Intoxicating Liquors, Injuries to Person and Property, etc., etc.

2.—NOTES. The annotations are a special feature, being very full and exhaustive.

These works are issued in monthly Parts, each Part containing not less than 224 pages. Three Parts make a complete volume. When Part 3 is published, the Parts are returned to the publisher by the subscriber, and are bound in best law sheep and returned by mail WITHOUT CHARGE FOR BINDING. The subscription price is $4.50 per volume, including NOTES OF CASES.

EDWARD THOMPSON CO., Publishers,
Northport, Long Island, N. Y.

July 24

c #
8

THE AMERICAN AND ENGLISH
ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF LAW.

COMPILED UNDER THE EDITORIAL SUPERVISION OF

JOHN HOUSTON MERRILL,

Late Editor of the American and English Railroad Cases and the American and English Corporation Cases.

VOLUME XI.

S US
013
AME

80

NORTHPORT, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.:
EDWARD THOMPSON COMPANY, LAW PUBLISHERS, 1890.

IX
A571236

COPYRIGHT, 1890,
BY EDWARD THOMPSON CO.

Rec. March 27, 1890.

LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS, VOL. XI.

| | |
|--|---|
| Inns and Inn-Keepers, | NATHAN NEWMARK, of the San Francisco (Cal.) Bar. |
| Insanity, | ALBERT B. WEIMER, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| Insolvency, | WILLIAM M. ROCKEL, of the Springfield (Ohio) Bar. |
| Instructions, | WILLIAM M. ROCKEL, of the Springfield (Ohio) Bar. |
| Insurance, | L. K. MIHILLS, of the Akron (Ohio) Bar. |
| Intent, | ALBERT B. WEIMER, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| Interest, | JOSEPH WHITAKER THOMPSON, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| International Law, | RUFUS WAPLES, of the Ann Arbor (Mich.) Bar. |
| Interpleader, | CHARLES CHAUNCEY BINNEY, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| Interpretation, | LEIGH BONSAI, of the Baltimore (Md.) Bar. |
| Interpreter, | JOSEPH WHITAKER THOMPSON, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| Interrogatories, | LUTHER E. HEWITT, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| Interstate Commerce, | CHARLES CHAUNCEY BINNEY, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| Intoxicating Liquors, | JAMES M. KERR, of the Rochester (N. Y.) Bar. |
| Invention (In Patent Law), | MARK WILKS COLLET, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| Investments, | RUFUS WAPLES, of the Ann Arbor (Mich.) Bar. |
| Irrigation, | NATHAN NEWMARK, of the San Francisco (Cal.) Bar. |
| Issue, | HOWARD WURTS PAGE, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| Jeopardy, | FRANK H. BOWLBY, of the Rochester (N. Y.) Bar. |
| Jettison, | WILLIAM CUSHING WAIT, of the Boston (Mass.) Bar. |
| Joinder, | CHARLES K. ZUG, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| Joint Executors and Administrators, | WILLIAM WHARTON SMITH, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| Joint Stock Companies, | ALBERT B. WEIMER and H. S. P. NICHOLS, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bar. |
| Joint Tenant and Tenants in Common, | FRANK H. BOWLBY, of the Rochester (N. Y.) Bar. |

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

See index for numerous sub-titles and definitions contained in the notes.

- Injury, 1
 Inland, 1
 Inlet, 2
 Inmate, 2
 Innocent Conveyances, 3
INNS AND INN KEEPERS, 3
 Innuendo, 104
 Inquest of Office, 104
 Invoice, 104
INSANITY, 105
INSOLVENCY, 167
INSOLVENT LAWS. See Bankruptcy.
 Inspection, 234
 Instant, 236
 Instantly, 236
 Instead of, 236
 Institution, 236 INSTRUCTIONS, 236 instrument, 275
 Insufficiency, 276
 Insufficient, 276
 Insulting, 277
INSURABLE INTEREST. See Insurance.
INSURANCE, 278
 Insured, 355
 Insurgent, 355
INSURRECTION, 356
 Imperance, 365
INTEMPERATE. See Habit; Habitual.
 Intend, 365
INTENT, 367 Intention, 378
 Intentionally, 378
 Intercourse, 379
 Interdiction, 379
INTEREST, 379
 Interested, 422
 Interfere, 425
INTERFERING PATENTS. See Patents.
 Interim, 426
 Interior, 426
INTERLINEATIONS. See Alteration of Instruments; Ambiguity.
 Interlocutory, 427
 Intermeddle, 429
 Intermediate, 430
 Internal, 430
INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS. See Improvements.
INTERNAL REVENUE. See Revenue Laws
INTERNATIONAL LAW, 431
INTERPLEADER, 494
 Interpose, 506
INTERPRETATION, 507
INTERPRETER, 523
INTERROGATORIES, 526
 Interrupt, 538
 Interruption, 538
 Intersect, 538
INTERSTATE COMMERCE, 539 Interval, 565
 Intervene, 565
 Intervening Damages, 565 INTERVENTION. See Interpreter; Parties to Actions.
 Intestate, 565
INTESTATE LAWS. See Statutes of Distribution.
 Intimate, 565
 Intimidation, 565
INTIMIDATION OF VOTERS. See Elections.
 Into, 566
 Intoxicated, 566
INTOXICATING DRINKS. See Intoxicating Liquors.
INTOXICATING LIQUORS, 567
INTOXICATION AS A DEFENCE TO CON-TRACTS, 773
INTOXICATION AS A DEFENCE TO CRIME.
 See Criminal Procedure.

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

| | |
|--|--|
| Intrinsic, 779 | IRRIGATION, 846 |
| Intromission, 779 | ISLANDS, 855 |
| Intrude, 779 | ISSUE, 868 |
| Intrusion, 779 | Item, 925 |
| Invalid, 780 | JAIL. See Prisons. |
| Invasions, 780 | JAIL LIBERTIES. See Prisons. |
| Inveigle, 780 | Jeofails, 926 |
| INVENTION (IN PATENT LAW), 780 | JEOPARDY, 926 |
| Inventory, 812 | Jetsam, 970 |
| Investigate, 812 | JETTISON, 970 |
| Investigation, 812 | Jewel, 984 |
| Investiture, 812 | Jewelry, 984 |
| INVESTMENT, 813 | Job, 986 |
| Involuntary, 842 | Jobber, 986 |
| Involve, 843 | Jockey, 986 |
| I O U, 843 | JOINDER, 986 |
| Irregularity, 843 | JOINT EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRA- |
| Irrelevant, 845 | TORS, 1016 |
| IRREPARABLE INJURY. See Injunction. | JOINT STOCK COMPANIES, 1036. |
| Irresistible Violence, 845 | JOINT TENANTS, 1057 |

THE AMERICAN AND ENGLISH ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF LAW.

INJURY—(See DAMNUM ABSQUE INJURIA; INTENT; MALICIOUS MISCHIEF; TORTS; WRONG).—A wrong for which the law provides a remedy.¹

INLAND.—See note 2.

1. "An injury, legally speaking, consists of a wrong done to a person, or in other words, a violation of his rights—an injury . . . necessarily imports damage, there can be no such thing as an injury without damage. An injury is a wrong, and for the redress of every wrong there is a remedy." Parker v. Griswold, 17 Conn. 302. "We understand the word 'injury' (or injured) as used in the constitution, to mean such a legal wrong as would be the subject of an action for damages at common law." Pa. R. R. Co. v. Marchant, 119 Pa. St. 541; s. c., 21 W. N. C. (Pa.) 300; 13 Atl. Rep., 698.

"By injuria is meant a tortious act, it need not be wilful and malicious; for though it be accidental, if it be tortious an action will lie." Winsmore v. Greenbank, Willes 581; Wright v. C. & N. R. Co., 7 Bradw. (Ill.) 446.

Injury means in general "any wrong or damage done to a man's person, rights, reputation or goods." Webster quoted in N. Ry. of France v. Carpentier, 13 How. Pr. 222; s. c., 3 Ab Pr. 259.

An intent to injure is a general guilty intent. United States v. Taintor, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 374; United States v. Harper, 33 Fed. Rep. 481; People v. Carmichael, 5 Mich. 10; People v. Adwards, 5 Mich. 21.

In an act providing that the party injured shall be a competent witness in criminal actions, "by injured party is meant the person who is the immediate and direct sufferer from the offense committed." People v. Howard, 17 Cal. 83.

"Injuriously affected," in the Land Clauses act, does not mean wrongfully or unlawfully, but damnously. "The consequential right to compensation is the creature of the statutes to be ascertained and measured by the positive language of the enactments, and not by analogy to actions of tort or trespass." Lord Westbury in Ricket v. Metropolitan R. Co., L. R., 2 H. L. 202; and see Reg. v. Essex, 55 L. J., Q. B. 315.

2. Inland Navigation.—Within the meaning of the Act of Congress of March 3rd, 1851. The act of congress, passed March 3rd, 1851, which enacts that the owner of any vessel shall not be liable for the loss of freight by fire happening to or on board the vessel, unless the fire is caused by the design or negligence of such owner, contains a provision that the exemption from liability given by the act "shall not apply to the owners of any canal boat, barge or lighter, or to any vessel of any description whatsoever used in rivers or inland navigation." Goods were put upon a vessel at Buffalo for transportation to Detroit; on the next day they took fire, and the vessel and goods were entirely destroyed. The vessel, a steam propeller, was of more than twenty tons burden, and was enrolled and licenced for the coasting trade, and engaged in navigation and commerce as a common carrier, between ports and places in different states upon the great lakes, and navigable waters connecting the same. It was held, that the vessel was not a "vessel used in inland navigation" within the meaning of the above exception. Said the court: "They (the great lakes) form a boundary between a foreign country and the United States for a distance of some twelve hundred miles The aggregate length of these lakes is over fifteen hundred miles, and the area covered by their waters is said to be some ninety thousand square miles. The commerce upon them corresponds with their magnitude The vessels (engaged in commerce on the lakes) are duly licenced for the foreign trade, as well as for that carried on coastwise. This commerce, from its magnitude, and the well known perils incident to the lake navigation, deserves to be placed on the footing of commerce on the ocean; and we think, in view of it, congress could not have classed it with the business upon the rivers, or inland navigation, in the sense in which we understand these terms The policy and justice of the limitation of the liability of the owners, under this act of 1851, are as applicable to this navigation as to that of the ocean. The act was designed to promote the building of ships, and to encourage persons engaged in the business of navigation, and to place that of this country upon a footing with England and on the continent of Europe." Moore v. American Trans. Co., 24 How. (U. S.) 1; S. C. in State Court, 5 Mich. 368.

INLET.—See note 1.

INMATE.—See note 2.

The War Eagle was a steamer of more than twenty tons burden, duly enrolled and licenced for the coasting trade, and plying on the Mississippi river between the ports of Dubuque, Iowa, and St. Paul, Minnesota, touching at intermediate points. While making one of her regular trips she was burned with her cargo. It was held, that she was a vessel engaged in "inland navigation," within the meaning of the act. The War Eagle, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 364.

Navigation on Currituck Sound in South Carolina, is "inland navigation," within the meaning of the act. Woodhouse v. Cain, 95 N. C. 113.

Inland Waters.—The act of congress of July 2nd, 1864, ch. 225, § 7, provides "that no property seized or taken on any of the inland waters of the United States by the naval forces thereof, shall be regarded as maritime prize." Said the court in construing this section: "The term 'inland' as here used was evidently intended to apply to all waters of the United States upon which a naval force could go, other than bays and harbors on the sea coast. In most instances property of the enemy on them could be taken, if at all, by an armed force without the aid of vessels of war." Porter v. United States, 106 U. S. 607; The Cotton Plant, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 577.

1. A statute incorporating a railroad company which was to construct its road along the shore of the Hudson river enacted that bridges of a certain kind should be built over "Duyvel Creek and other navigable streams or inlet," and bays crossed. It was said by the court in construing this statute: "The word 'inlet' seems to be used by the statute to denote the indentation in the shore, at the mouth or outlet of a navigable stream falling into the Hudson river, and the word 'bay' to describe an indentation or curve where there is no such stream." Tillotson v. Hudson River R. R., 9 N. Y. 580.

2. "By the St. 31 El. 7, no inmate, or more families than one, shall dwell in any cottage, on pain that the owner of such cottage, placing or suffering such inmate, etc., shall forfeit to the lord of the leet 10s. per mensem A man is accounted an inmate, who not having sufficient to live of himself by his land, art or trade, dwells in part of another's house. As, if common breakers of hedges, or other idle or suspicious persons dwell in a house with another; Or, if a poor laborer dwells with another, and both go by the same door into the high street. Or, if a man, not of ability, take certain rooms in an house. But if a man demise parcel of the house where he dwells, and severs it from the other part, and makes separate doors to the high street, the lessee is not an inmate; for they are two houses. Or, if a man take another ad mensem, or to sojourn with him, and he has certain rooms, he is not an inmate. Or, if a man take his married daughter

INNOCENT CONVEYANCES.—A technical term used to signify those conveyances made by a tenant of his leasehold which do not occasion a forfeiture; these are conveyances by lease and release, bargain and sale, and a covenant to stand seized by a tenant for life.¹

INNS AND INN KEEPERS—(Including Boarding-House Keepers).

- | | |
|--|---|
| 1. Inns in General , 4. | 26. Obligation to Receive Goods , 45. |
| 2. Inn Keepers in General , 7. | 27. Articles Covered by Lien , 45. |
| 3. Who Are Not Inn Keepers , 9. | 28. General and Special Lien , 46. |
| 4. Who Are Guests , 12. | 29. Enforcement of Lien , 46. |
| 5. Restriction of Term "Guests" to Travellers , 15. | 30. Waiver of Lien , 47. |
| 6. Who Are Travellers , 17. | 31. Boarding House Keeper's Lien , 49. |
| 7. Guests and Boarders , 18. | 32. Inn Keeper's Liabilities in General , 49. |
| 8. Obtaining Temporary Refreshment , 19. | 33. Liability for Personal Injuries , 50. |
| 9. Mere Visitor , 20. | 34. Extraordinary Liability of Inn Keeper , 51. |
| 10. Object of Stay , 22. | 35. Liability Compared with That of Common Carrier , 52. |
| 11. Showing Goods for Sale , 23. | 36. Scope of Liability , 53. |
| 12. Personal Presence of Guest , 23. | 37. Acts of Parties Within the Inn , 56. |
| 13. Leaving Horse as Constituting Guest , 24. | 38. Acts of Parties Without the Inn , 57. |
| 14. Insufficiency of Merely Leaving Horse , 26. | 39. Liability of Inn Keepers as Insurers , 58. |
| 15. Creation of Relation of Host and Guest , 27. | 40. Prima Facie Liability of Inn Keepers , 60. |
| 16. Continuance of Relation , 28. | 41. Exoneration by Showing Extreme Care , 62. |
| 17. Termination of Relation , 30. | 42. Loss by Accidental Fire , 63. |
| 18. Duties in General , 32. | 43. Injuries to Animals , 64. |
| 19. Extent of Duty to Receive Guests , 32. | 44. To What Articles Liability Attaches , 66. |
| 20. Unreasonable Demands and Obnoxious Visitors , 35. | 45. Baggage of Guest , 68. |
| 21. Callers Upon Guests , 36. | 46. Responsibility for Valuables , 68. |
| 22. Inn Keepers' Rights in General , 37. | 47. Goods Kept for Show and Sale , 71. |
| 23. Inn Keeper's Lien in General , 38. | |
| 24. Lien on Third Person's Goods , 41. | |
| 25. Knowledge of Ownership of Goods , 43. | |

with her husband, according to agreement, and suffer them to have certain rooms in his house, or, if he suffer a gentleman to have certain rooms in his house, who does not table with him, but goes to a victualler's for his sustenance. Kit. 456". Comyn's Dig., tit. Jus. of Peace, B. 85.

By the English Public Health act, 1848, § 69, if any street not being a highway, be not sewered, levelled, paved, etc., to the satisfaction of the local board of health, such board may, by notice in writing to the respective owners or occupiers of the premises fronting such parts as may require to be sewered, etc., require them to sewer, etc., the same within a time to be specified in such notice; and if such notice be not complied with, the local board may execute the works, and the expenses shall be paid by the owners in default. By section 150 it is provided that in all cases in which any notice is required to be given to the owner or occupier of any premises, the notice shall be served either personally or by delivering the same to some "inmate" of the owner's or occupier's "place of abode." It seems that a place of business is a "place of abode," and a clerk an "inmate," within the meaning of the 150th section. Mason v. Bibby, 2 Hurl. & Colt. 881.

1. Bouv. Law Dict.

48. Inn Precincts, 72.
49. Duration of Inn Keeper's Liability, 75.
50. Liability for Goods of Departing Guests, 76.
51. Inn Keeper's Negligence, 77.
52. Contributory Negligence of Guest, 80.
53. Failure to Lock or Bolt Door, 83.
54. Assuming Special Custody of Goods, 86.
55. Ordering Goods to Particular Room, 87.
56. Limitation of Inn Keeper's Liability by Contract, 87.
57. Limitation by Custom or Usage, 89.
58. Limitation by Statute, 89.
59. Enactments Concerning Loss by Fire, 92.
60. Enactments Concerning Goods for Sale, etc., 93.
61. Statutory Notice Limiting Liability, 93.
62. Actual Notice, 94.
63. English Inn Keeper's Act, 95.
64. Valuables Covered by Statutes Limiting Liability, 96.
65. Inn Keepers as Ordinary Bailees, 99.
66. Liability of Boarding House Keepers, 100.
67. Remedies Concerning Inn Keepers, 101.

1. Inns in General—Definition of Inn.—An inn is a public house of entertainment for all who choose to visit it.¹ More precisely it is a house where all who conduct themselves properly, and who are able and ready to pay for their entertainment, are received, if there is accommodation for them, and are, while there, without any stipulated engagement as to the duration of their stay, or as to the rate of compensation, supplied at a reasonable charge with their meals, their lodging, and such ser-

1. Wintermute v. Clark, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 242, 247, states this to be the true definition of an inn. In The People v. Jones, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 311, 316, an "inn" is said to be "a house for the lodging and entertainment of travellers." To like effect, see Lewis v. Hitchcock (N. Y.), 10 Fed. Rep. 4, 6.

Liquors and Care of Animals.—In Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 660, RHODES, J., says: "The definition of an inn, given by MR. JUSTICE BAILEY in Thompson v. Lacey, 3 Barn. & Ald. 286, as a house where a traveller is furnished with everything which he has occasion for while on his way," is comprehensive enough to include every description of an inn, but a house that does not fill the full measure of this definition may be an inn. It probably would not be regarded as essential to an inn that wine or spirituous or malt liquors should be provided for the guests. At an inn of the greatest completeness entertainment is furnished for the traveller's horse as well as for the traveller, but it has long since been held that this was not essential to give character to the house as an inn. 2 Kent's Com. 595; 1 Smith's Lead. Cas., 8th ed.; notes to Coggs v. Bernard; Story on Bailments, § 475; Kister v. Hildebrand, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 74; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416."

Parties Accommodated.—In Carter v. Hobbs, 12 Mich. 52; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 762, 764, the court through CHRISTIANCY, J., said: "By the original writ, specially framed for enforcing the liability of inn keepers, as well as by the cases generally, an inn would seem to be a house kept for the accommodation and entertainment of travellers and wayfaring men, and not for those residing in the same neighborhood who may visit or others who may remain at the house for some special purpose not connected with passage or travel. See Calye's Case, 8 Coke 63, and note to same; 1 Smith's Lead. Cas. *131; Coggs v. Bernard, Ld. Raym. 909; s. c., 1 Smith's Lead. Cas. *199." As it is stated in the same opinion, "in Calye's Case, 8 Co. 63; [s. c., Smith's Lead. Cas. *131, 132], it is said: 'Common inns are instituted for passengers and wayfaring men, and therefore if a neighbor, who is no traveller, as a friend, at the request of the inn holder, lodges there and his goods be stolen, etc., he shall not have an action, for the writ is ad hospitandos hom- vices and attention as are necessarily incident to the use of the house as a temporary home.¹

Definition of Tavern.—A tavern is a house licenced to sell liquors in small quantities, to be drunk on the spot, and denotes a house for the entertainment of travellers, as well as for the sale of liquors.²

Definition of Hotel.—A hotel, in this country, is what in France was known as a hotellerie, and in England, as a common inn of that superior class usually found in cities and large towns.³

ines, etc., transeuntes et in eisdem hospitantes, etc. Carter v. Hobbs, 12 Mich. 52; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 762, 765." But a different view is developed in Walling v. Potter, 35 Conn. 183, 185.

1. Cromwell v. Stephens, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 15, 24, holding this to be exactly what is understood in this country by a hotel. For English statutory definitions of terms "inn" and "inn keeper" see act 26 and 27 Vict., ch. 41, § 4; Schouler on Bailments (2nd ed.), § 277, note on p. 286. For discussion of various definitions of terms "inn" and "guest" see Walling v. Potter, 35 Conn. 183, 185.

Not Mere Eating Place.—An inn has been judicially defined to be "a house where the traveller is furnished with everything which he has occasion for whilst on his way." But a mere coffee house or eating room or boarding house is not an inn. The Civil Rights bill, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 541, 543. See 2 Pars. Contr. (7th ed.) *145. In Bonner v. Wellborn, 7 Ga. 296, 307, the leading ideas which pervade all the authorities are said to be "that inns are houses for the entertainment of travellers—wayfarers, as they are called in Calye's Case, 8 Co. 32—for the entertainment of all travellers, at all times and seasons, who may properly apply and behave with decency; and that as guests for a brief period, and not as lodgers or boarders by contract for a season." A house of reception and entertainment for all comers, but especially for emigrants, is an inn. Willard v. Reinhardt, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 148, 149.

2. State v. Chambliss, Cheves (S. Car.) 220. s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 593, 596, reaching this conclusion after a full discussion of the meaning of the term, as merely synonymous with inns. On statutory scope of term, see Bonner v. Wellborn, 7 Ga. 296; St. Louis v. Seigrist, 46 Mo. 593.

3. Cromwell v. Stephens, 2 Daly (N.

Y.) 15, 21, fully discussing the origin of the term, and holding that a house kept for letting lodging rooms without any arrangements to provide board or meals in connection therewith, does not constitute a "hotel" or become liable to pay a water tax imposed by ordinance upon "hotels." On English scope of term, see Smith v. Scott, 9 Bing. 14, 17. It is treated as settled in Taylor v. Monnot, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 116, 117, upon the authority of Wintermute v. Clark, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 242, that a hotel in a city which receives transient persons as guests is a common inn.

European Plan.—A public house designated as a "hotel," where all comers register their names and are furnished with rooms for an uncertain period, and under no express engagement, and where meals are furnished on the "European plan," the only variation from ordinary hotels being that a refectory is kept on the same premises at which guests take their meals, if they please, paying for them then and there, is an inn and the proprietor an inn keeper with all the responsibilities attaching to such a character as respects guests who lodge in the house. Krohn v. Sweeney, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 200, 202. To like effect see Bernstein v. Sweeney, 33 N. Y. Super. Ct. 271, 274. Compare also Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657.

In Hancock v. Rand, 94 N. Y., 1; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 112, 116; the view was taken that a general in the United States army and his family, who were guests at the restaurant of a hotel at the time when the loss of some of their valuables by theft occurred, and paid as such for each meal, were not boarders because their lodgings were in the hotel, or in rooms connected therewith, especially as the proof did not establish a contract for any fixed time. MILLER, J., said: "Hotels in modern days are differently conducted from what they were in times gone by. Furnishing rooms at a fixed price, and meals at prices depending upon the orders given, at the usual hotel rates, constitutes a material difference in the system of keeping hotels from that which formerly existed."

Synonymous Use of Terms "Inn," "Tavern," and "Hotel."—These terms are often used in American statutes as synonymous.¹

Distinguished from Similar Establishments.—But a distinction is made between an inn or equivalent establishment, and a mere boarding house, lodging house, etc.²

1. Thus the terms "inn, tavern or hotel," employed in an act restricting the granting of licences to sell intoxicating liquors, are considered to be "used synonymously to designate what is ordinarily and popularly known as an inn or tavern, or place for the entertainment of travellers, and where all their wants can be supplied." People v. Jones, 54 Barb. (N. Y.), 311, 316.

In St. Louis v. Siegrist, 46 Mo. 593, 594, WAGNER, J., said: "'Tavern,' 'hotel' and 'public house' are, in this country, used synonymously, and while they entertain the travelling public, and keep guests, and receive compensation therefor, they do not lose their character, though they may not have the privilege of selling liquors;" and it was accordingly held that the word "tavern" includes a hotel within powers granted by a city charter to licence; etc., so as to sustain an ordinance requiring a license from keepers of a hotel or boarding house. "Tavern or house of entertainment" are deemed synonymous terms, within a law requiring a licence, in Bonner v. Welborn, 7 Ga. 296, 304. Throughout a statute regulating taverns and groceries, the terms "inn" and "tavern," and "inn holder" and "tavern keeper," are considered to be used synonymously, in Overseers etc. v. Warner, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 150, 156.

On the synonymous scope of "hotel" and "inn" see Cromwell v. Stephens, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 15, 25. But a different view is taken under an English statute in Smith v. Scott, 9 Bing. 14, 17. See also In re Jones, Law Rep., 3 Ch.D. 457. So a distinction has been made in that country between a tavern and an inn, in a case where there was a refreshment bar within a hotel, on the ground that in such a place no one had a right to be served more than in any other shop. The Queen v. Rymer, Law Rep., 3 Ch. D. 136, 140.

2. Boarding House. "The distinction between a boarding house and an inn," says DALY, J., in Willard v. Reinhardt, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 148, 149, "is this: In a boarding house the guest is under an express contract, at a certain rate for a certain period of time; but in an inn there is no express engagement, the guest, being on his way, is entertained from day to day, according to his business, upon an implied contract." See Cromwell v. Stephens, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 15, 24. Reference is made to city houses of entertainment, in which the guest or traveller pays so much per day for his room and takes his meals or not, as he thinks proper, in the restaurant, paying separately for each meal as he takes it; and where the restaurant forms a part of the establishment, and the house is kept under one general management for the reception of all travellers or guests that may come, it is said to be an inn, and to differ from a boarding house, "for the reason that all who come are received, and because the guest engages for no specific period, but pays only for the time he is there."

In Cady v. McDowell, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 484, 486, JOHNSON, J., delivering the opinion of the court, says: "A boarding house is not, in common parlance or in legal meaning, every private house where one or more boarders are kept occasionally only, and upon special considerations. But it is a quasi public house, where boarders are generally and habitually kept, and which is held out and well known as a place of entertainment of that kind." He further remarked: "A boarding house is as well known and as distinguishable from other houses, in every city and village in the country, as an inn or a tavern. It is a house where the business of keeping boarders generally is carried on, and which is held out by the owner or keeper as a place where boarders are kept." So in Commonwealth v. Cuncannon, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 344, 347, in passing upon the question whether a person residing in a boarding house, whose lower story was occupied as a tavern, was entitled to registration as "a private resident,

2. Inn Keepers in General—Definition of Inn Keeper.—A common inn keeper is defined to be "a person who makes it his business to entertain travellers and passengers, and provide lodging and necessities for them, and their horses and attendants."¹ actually residing with a private house-keeper," it was said: "The true distinction is perfectly understood. The public house is for the entertainment of all who come lawfully and pay regularly. The boarding house is for the accommodation of those who are accepted as guests by the proprietor. Such an establishment is as much a private house as if there were no boarders."

Restaurant.—A restaurant, to which a person resorts for the mere temporary purpose of obtaining a meal, is not an inn. Carpenter v. Taylor, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 193, 195. In this case INGRAHAM, J., said: "It cannot now be held that restaurants are to be deemed inns, subjecting the keepers thereof to all the responsibilities of an inn keeper. On the contrary, as the customs of society change, and the modes of living are altered, the law, as established under different circumstances, must yield and be accommodated to such changes. A mere eating house for meals cannot now be considered an inn, nor can the liabilities attaching to inn keepers be extended to the proprietors of such establishments. They are wanting in some of the requisites necessary to constitute them inns, as no lodging places are provided for travellers; and, although the defendant may carry on in another part of his premises the business of an inn keeper, it does not follow that the liability for that part of his premises is to be extended to the whole."

In Lewis v. Hitchcock (N. Y.) 10, Fed. Rep. 4, the court, after stating that the term "restaurant" has no definite legal meaning, said: "As currently understood it doubtless means only or chiefly an eating house. But not unfrequently a bar forms a part of it; sometimes lodgings in addition; and it is just as currently understood that in numerous resorts termed restaurants some lodgings for travellers are provided, or alleged to be provided, so as to obtain a licence for the sale of liquors, which is allowed under the excise laws of New York to hotels, taverns or inns only. Sess. Laws N. Y. 1857, ch. 628, §§ 2, 8, 13; Behan v. People, 17 N. Y. 516; Schwab v. People, 4

Hun (N. Y.) 520. However this may be, it is sufficient to say that the term "restaurant" has no such fixed and definite legal meaning as necessarily to exclude its being an inn in the legal sense. It may be an inn or it may not be, according to its real character. The name by which it goes is of little or no account. Carpenter v. Taylor, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 195. And the court cannot say judicially that the place in question, though described under a videlicet as a restaurant, may not also be an inn, as previously averred."

Lodging House.—A mere lodging house, in which no provision is made for supplying the lodgers with their meals, wants one of the essential requisites of an inn. Cromwell v. Stephens, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 15, 24.

1. Bacon's Abr., Inns and Innkeepers, B; Story Bailm., § 475. The Civil Rights Bill, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 541, 542. This definition is thus quoted and supported in Kisten v. Hildebrand, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 72; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416, 418, where it is further remarked: "But it has been decided that a man may be an inn keeper, and liable as such, though he have no provision for horses. It is not necessary that he should have a sign indicating that he is an inn keeper, but it must be his business to entertain travellers and passengers. His duty extends chiefly to the entertaining and harboring of travellers, etc., and therefore, if one who keeps a common inn refuses to receive a traveller, or to find him in victuals, etc., for a reasonable price (without good excuse, as that his house is full), he is liable not only to a civil action, but to an indictment. For having taken upon himself public employment, he must serve the public to the extent of that employment. Bacon's Abr., Inns and Innkeepers, ch. 1." To same effect, see Southwood v. Myers, 3 Bush. (Ky.) 681, 684. It has also been pointed out that, in order to charge a party as an inn keeper, it is not necessary to prove that it was only for the reception of travellers that his house was kept open, but it is sufficient to prove that all who came were received as guests, without any previous arrangement as to the duration of their stay or Keeper of Boarding House, Lodging House, etc.—The keeper of a private boarding house or lodging house, or of a restaurant or coffee house, is not an inn keeper in the view of the law, notwithstanding he may furnish lodgings or food or both for the entertainment of his guests.¹

Occasionally Entertaining Travellers.—So, one who only occasionally entertains travellers for compensation, when it suits his pleasure, and who does not hold himself out to the public as a keeper of a house for the accommodation of the travelling public, is not an inn keeper.²

the terms of their entertainment. Wintermute v. Clark, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 242, 246.

Licence.—The possession of a licence does not make, or the want of it prevent, a person from being an inn holder at common law. Narcross v. Narcross, 53 Me. 163, 168. See also Lyon v. Smith, Morris (Iowa), 184, 186, concerning rule under statutes. See Beale v. Posey, 72 Ala. 323, 329, 330; Larider v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 590. Compare Dickerson v. Rogers, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 179; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 642, 644, 645; Lord v. Jones, 24 Me. 439; s. c., 41 Am. Dec. 391. In an action to recover the value of property of the plaintiff, stolen while he was dining at the defendant's restaurant, in which it is proved that liquors were sold, the court will take judicial notice that no liquors could be legally sold there unless under a licence, and that no licence could be issued for the sale of liquors upon the premises except the same were kept as an inn, tavern or hotel; and will presume in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the defendants are inn keepers, and liable as such for the property of guests. Korn v. Schedler, 11 Daly (N. Y.) 234, 235.

Holding Out.—Where a person, by the means usually employed in that business, holds himself out to the world as an inn keeper, and in that capacity is accustomed to receive travellers as his guests, and solicits a continuance of their patronage, and a traveller, relying on such representations, goes to the house to receive such entertainment as he has occasion for, the relation of inn keeper and guest is created, and the inn keeper cannot be heard to say that his professions were false, and that he was not, in fact, an inn keeper. Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 660. In this case the court said: "The rules regulating the respective rights, duties and responsibilities of inn keeper and guest have their origin in considerations of public policy, and were designed mainly for the protection and security of travellers and their property. They would afford the traveller but poor security if, before venturing to entrust his property to one who, by his agents, cards, bills, advertisements, sign, and by all the means by which publicity and notoriety can be given to his business, represents himself as an inn keeper, he is required to enquire of the employes as to their interest in the establishment, or take notice of the agencies or means by which the several departments are conducted. The same considerations of public policy that dictated those rules demand that the inn keeper should be held to the responsibilities which, by his representations, he induced his guest to believe that he would assume." See also Howth v. Franklin, 20 Tex. 798; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 218, 219.

Keeping Livery Stable.—An inn keeper who also keeps a livery stable may be liable as an inn keeper for a horse, chaise and harness put into his charge by parties who are not guests. Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, 474.

The fact that a licence was taken out in the name of the paid manager of a hotel which was owned by a company, does not make such manager liable for goods lost at the hotel, but the company is the real inn keeper. Dixon v. Birch, Law R., 8 Ex. 135, 136.

1. Blum v. Southern etc. Car. Co., 1 Flip. (U. S.) 500, 502.

2. Howth v. Franklin, 20 Tex. 798; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 218, 219. The case of a farmer along a public road. To like effect see State v. Mathews, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 424; Kisten v. Hildebrand, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 72; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416, 419.

In Lyon v. Smith, Morr. (Iowa) 184, 186, the court said: "To render a person

Acting in Special Capacity.—An inn keeper may be a bath-house keeper, and may conduct a sea-bathing house as a separate and distinct employment, without being responsible in the one capacity for liabilities incurred in the other.¹

3. Who Are Not Inn Keepers—Those Furnishing Food and Drink to Public.—One who merely furnishes food and drink to the public is not an inn keeper, whether his establishment be called a tavern, a coffee house, an ale house, a restaurant or a bar room.²

liable as a common inn keeper, it is not sufficient to show that he occasionally entertains travellers. Most of the farmers in a new country do this without supposing themselves answerable for the horses or other property of their guests which may be stolen or otherwise lost without any fault of their own. Nor is such the rule in older countries, where it would operate with far less injustice, and be less opposed to good policy than with us. To be subjected to the same responsibilities attaching to inn keepers, a person must make tavern keeping to some extent a regular business, a means of livelihood. He should hold himself out to the world as an inn keeper. It is not necessary that he should have a sign or a licence, provided that he has in any other manner authorized the general understanding that his was a public house, where strangers had a right to require accommodation. The person who occasionally entertains others for a reasonable compensation is no more subject to the extraordinary responsibility of an inn keeper than is he liable as a common carrier, who in certain special cases carries the property of others from one place to another for hire." Accordingly, a party was held not chargeable as an inn keeper where the only proof was that he had entertained several individuals at his house over night and been paid a compensation for his care and attention, but there was no proof that he held himself out in any manner as a common inn keeper, or that he was so regarded by the public.

1. Minor v. Staples, 71 Me. 316; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 318. But an inn keeper who also keeps a livery stable may be liable as an inn keeper for a horse, chaise and harness put in his charge by parties who are not personal guests. Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, 474.

Conclusion as to Who Are Inn Keepers.—"We may gather," remarks a writer on a cognate subject, "that the legal conclusion as to who are inn keepers must depend upon many circumstances combined: such as the regularity of one's occupation, publicity, one's method of receiving compensation, and his means of accommodating all who may choose to come and go. In short, an inn keeper, one who exercises the public vocation we are now describing, may well be defined as one who regularly keeps open a public house for lodging and entertaining transient comers on the general expectation of his suitable recompense." Schouler on Bailments (2nd ed.), § 279.

2. Schouler on Bailments (1st ed.) 252; see Doe v. Laming, 4 Camp. 77 (coffee house); Carpenter v. Taylor, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 195 (restaurant); Queen v. Rymer, L. R., 2 Q. B. D. 136, 139 (refreshment bar with hotel).

Occasionally Entertaining Travellers.—The keeper of a coffee house or boarding house may occasionally entertain travellers without incurring the liability of an inn keeper. Kisten v. Hildebrand, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 72; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416, 419. See further on effect of occasionally entertaining travellers. Howth v. Franklin, 20 Tex. 798; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 218, 219.

Retailing Liquor.—Nor will the simple fact of a person selling spirituous liquors by small measure constitute a person who keeps an ordinary boarding house a tavern keeper, where such person has not received a licence for that purpose, and does not hold herself out as such, or entertain the travelling community. Rafferty v. New Brunswick Fire Ins. Co., 3 Har. (N. J.) 480; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 525, 529.

Hotel Bill.—It is said to be settled in this country that a person keeping a house for the entertainment of travellers with board and lodging is an hotel keeper, and that as such hotel keeper he is under an obligation to furnish guests with board and lodging; but it is ruled, in the same case in which this statement is made, that an hotel

Keeping Mere Boarding House, Lodging House, etc.—So a person who keeps a mere boarding house or lodging house, or even one who keeps a house for lodging strangers for a season, as visitors to watering places, unless he be the keeper of a tavern, has not the character of an inn keeper or the privilege of retaining the goods of his guest until his charges are paid.¹

keeper is not bound to furnish his guests with liquors, cigars or billiards, and that the person guaranteeing the payment of a "hotel bill" would not be liable for such articles, because he would not expect or anticipate them to be included in the bill. Patterson v. Gage, 37 Alb. L. J. 248, where the court said: "It is clear that such articles as an hotel keeper is under obligation to furnish his guests with upon request are proper articles to be included in the term 'hotel bill.' But if the term is extended so as to include items which the hotel keeper is not obligated to furnish, but which he does furnish as a matter of convenience to his guests, then it can have no general and common meaning. But the hotel bill of one hotel keeper might include board and lodging only; that of another might include board, lodging and liquors; and still another might include board, lodging, liquors, cigars and billiards; and this list of articles might be continued so that such bill could be made to include all articles that the guests might order that are kept for sale by the proprietor of the hotel."

1. Southwood v. Myers, 3 Bush (Ky.) 681, 685.

Proprietor of Watering-place Establishments.—One whose business it is to rent houses and furnish board, lodging and attention for a season at a watering place to the visitors who resort to it, is not the keeper of a tavern or house of entertainment within the statutory scope of those terms as synonymous with inn, but is rather the keeper of a private boarding house, as he provides for tenants for a season rather than for guests for a day, night or week, for health seekers rather than for travellers, and for special visitors rather than for the general public. Bonner v. Welborn, 7 Ga. 296, 307; following Parkhurst v. Foster, 5 Mod. 426, and Parker v. Flint, 12 Mod. 254, 255. To like effect see statement in Kisten v. Hildebrand, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 72; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416, 418.

Owner of Apartment Hotel in "Flats."—The owner of an apartment hotel rented out in suites or flats to families for housekeeping purposes is not an inn holder, though he furnishes heat, hot and cold water and janitor's services to each suite, if no board, lodging or accommodation is furnished for transient patrons. Davis v. Gay, 141 Mass. 531, 534.

Restaurant Keeper in Twofold Capacity.—It has been suggested that it may well be that a person occupies a twofold character, viz., that of a mere restaurant keeper, so far as relates to his refectory only for the purpose of taking meals, while he is an inn keeper with all the responsibilities attaching to such a character, as respects travellers who are received and accommodated by him, as guests, with lodgings in that portion of the building arranged as lodging places for an uncertain price and with no express engagements. Krohn v. Sweeney, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 200, 202. But it has been considered that no such distinction could be maintained consistently with adjudged cases, where there is no doubt of the fact that the party keeps an inn, unless the one business is carried on separate and distinct from the other in the same building (as was the case in Carpenter v. Taylor, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 193, 195), or it appears (as in Seward v. Seymour, Anthon's Law Student 51 [stated in Cromwell v. Stephens, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 15, 23, 24]) that the guest makes a specific contract with the inn keeper as a regular boarder at a fixed compensation per week or otherwise. Kopper v. Willis, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 460, 464.

Boarding-house Keeper.—There is, in the case of the inn keeper, in the absence of any lawful excuse, a necessity to receive the party which does not exist in the boarding-house keeper. Dansey v. Richardson, 3 El. & B. 144, 159. "The inn keeper is bound to receive everyone who applies, if in a fit condition to be received, while the boarding-house keeper is not bound to receive anyone, except upon special contract." Cady v. McDowell, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 484, 486. See on distinction between an inn and a boarding house or similar establishment, Willard v. Reinhardt, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 148, 149; Cromwell v. Stephens, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 15, 24.

Keeping Occasional Boarders.—In this case it was held that a grocer, who was a housekeeper, but not accustomed to take persons to board, and who, upon the application of his wife's brother, received such relative and his children into his own house, for an indefinite time, with a general understanding that he was to be compensated for board and accommodations, was not a boarding house keeper, within the meaning of a statute allowing the detention of the baggage and effects of boarders, for board due; and upon this matter JOHNSON, J., delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Who is a boarding house keeper within the meaning and intention of this act? Is it every housekeeper who in a single instance takes an individual to board for a limited time by way of accommodation, though for compensation, or who occasionally takes one or more persons in that way and no other, but who does not make it his regular business or calling, or is it a person who belongs to a well understood class of persons, which makes the keeping of boarders a business or calling in whole or in part? I am clearly of the opinion that it is the latter class only that the statute was designed to protect, or that comes within its terms and meaning."

"Private House Keeper."—In deciding a question of the parties entitled to registration, it was said by BREWSTER, J.: "I do not see why the proprietor of a private boarding house is not a private house keeper. Shall we say that the house is not private because the head of the family boards his son, and if taking a relative to board does not change the character of a private house, is it affected by receiving a stranger as a lodger? It will hardly be contended that it is any the less a private house because it contains one such person, and the moment that is admitted there is an end of this difficulty, for we cannot draw the line and say one, two or six persons may lodge in a house and it still be private, but that the moment it receives seven it becomes a public house." Commonwealth v. Cuncannon, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 344, 347.

Lodging House Keeper.—A lodging house keeper must make a contract with every man that comes, and charges by the week or month instead of for the number of days, while an inn keeper is bound, without making any special contract, to provide lodging and entertainment for all at a reasonable price. Thompson v. Lacy, 3 Barn. & Ald. 283, 287. See statement of this case in Cromwell v. Stephens, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 15, 23, which discusses at (p. 26) the case of one who kept a separate lodging house and restaurant on the same premises.

Sleeping Car Company.—The company owning a sleeping car, and receiving pay for particular berths for a particular trip from passengers, who have paid their fare on the railroad, no part of which goes to such owner, it was held not liable, either as a carrier or an inn keeper, for money stolen from passengers on his car, in Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Smith, 73 Ill. 360; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 258, 260, 261. The grounds for the ruling were that the company did not, like an inn keeper, undertake to accommodate the travelling public indiscriminately, but only a certain class, or to furnish victuals and lodging, but lodging alone, or to care for the necessary goods of the traveller, or any goods whatever.

The court further remarked: "The same necessity does not exist here as in the case of a common inn. At the time when this inn keeper's liability had its origin, wherever the end of the day's journey of the wayfarer man brought him, there he was obliged to stop for the night, and entrust his goods and baggage into the custody of the inn keeper. But here the traveller was not compelled to accept the additional comfort of a sleeping car. He might have remained in the ordinary car, and there were easy methods within his reach by which both money and baggage could be safely transported."

It has since been remarked that it is apparently settled "that sleeping car companies are not liable, either as inn keepers or common carriers, for personal goods stolen from the person of an occupant of a berth in a sleeping car." Woodruff etc. Co. v. Diehl, 84 Ind. 474; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 102, 107; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 294. To the same effect is the later case of Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Gaylord, 30 Alb. L. J. 424; s. c., 23 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 788. These cases cite or review Welch v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 16 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 352; Palmeter v. Wagner, 11 Alb. L. J. 149; and Blum v. Southern etc. Car Co., 1 Flip. (U. S.) 500; s. c., 13 Alb. L. J. 221; s.

4. Who Are Guests—Lien and Liability Limited to Guests.—Neither the lien of an inn keeper upon goods entrusted to him, nor his liability for their loss, exists where the owner of the goods was not actually or constructively the guest of the inn keeper.¹

c., 3 Cent. L. J. 592, which fully discusses the liability of such companies. Consult further Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Gardner, 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 324; Dargan v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 2 Tex. App. 607; s. c., 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 149; Lewis v. New York Sleeping Car Co., 143 Mass. 267; s. c., 28 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 148. On the liability of a sleeping car company for refusing to permit a party to occupy a sleeping berth assigned to him, and which he offered to pay for, see Nevin v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 106 Ill. 222; s. c., 27 Alb. L. J. 303; 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 92. See also on expulsion of passenger from sleeping car, Lawrence v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 144 Mass. 1; s. c., 28 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 151. Where a passenger in a day parlor car, when about to go from the car for the purpose of obtaining refreshments, left a small satchel or reticule upon the sill of the car window, and during her absence it was stolen, it was held that she was guilty of negligence contributing to the loss, and that the company owning the car was not liable. Whitney v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 143 Mass. 243; s. c., 28 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 147.

Steamship Company.—A company owning a steamship carrying passengers and goods for hire is not an inn keeper or liable as such for the loss of a watch stolen from the state room of a passenger. Clark v. Burns, 118 Mass. 275; 19 Am. Rep. 456, 458, where the court said: "The liability of an inn keeper extends only to goods put in his charge as keeper of a public house and does not attach to a carrier who has no house and is engaged only in the business of transportation."

1. Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 665.

Deposit with Clerk.—"Inn keepers are not liable as such for goods deposited with them by any but guests of their inns. While an individual proprietor of an inn may incur a liability as bailee for the safe keeping of goods which he has voluntarily undertaken to keep for others than guests, it is not within the course of employment of a mere clerk of such inn keeper to receive on deposit the goods of any except guests of the inn; and if he does so, it is a transaction between him and the owner, and no liability for the loss of such goods attaches to the inn keeper." Arcade Hotel Co. v. Wiatt, 44 Ohio St. 33; s. c., 58 Am. Rep. 785.

Leaving Horse.—In Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242, 244, COLE, C. J., remarked: "JUSTICE WILDE says, in Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 283; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, that it is clearly settled that to constitute a guest in legal contemplation it is not essential that he should be a lodger or have any refreshment at the inn. If he leaves his horse, then the inn keeper is chargeable on account of the benefit he is to receive for the keeping of the horse. JUDGE BRONSON, in commenting on this case in Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485, 490; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, says [that] where the owner of a horse sent the animal to an inn to be kept, but never went there himself and never intended to go as a guest, it seemed but little short of downright absurdity to say that in legal contemplation he was a guest. On principle it would seem that a person should himself be either actually or constructively at the inn or hotel for entertainment in order to establish the relation of landlord and guest."

In the same case it is said: "If a traveller have no personal entertainment or refreshment at an inn, but simply care and food for his horse, he may be a guest, for he makes the inn his temporary abode—his home for the time being. Ingalsbee v. Wood, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 452; Coykendall v. Eaton, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 188. The term "guest" is held to cover a traveller or wayfarer who obtains entertainment for his beasts for pay. Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 260.

In McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 577, the court, through REDFIELD, C. J., said that to the extent of the horse and equipage "it must be regarded as fully settled by authority, both in England and this country that the inn keeper is liable as such where the horse of a

Scope of Term "Guest."—The prominent idea in the definitions of the term "guest" is that a guest must be a traveller, wayfarer or transient comer to an inn for lodging and entertainment.¹

But the question whether the relation of host and guest had attached only becomes of consequence when the inn keeper is sued for the loss of goods of an alleged guest, and is immaterial where the only complaint is that the inn keeper would not receive parties as guests.²

Fixing Price or Length of Stay.—Though the decisions upon the subject have not been entirely harmonious, yet recent cases indicate a tendency in the courts to conform the old rule to the changes made in hotel keeping in modern times, by holding that a special agreement fixing in advance the price to be paid or the traveller is put at the inn, although the owner or traveller himself puts up at another place. Peet v. McGraw, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 653." And the cases of Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663; Thickstun v. Howard, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 535; Hickman v. Thomas, 16 Ala. 666, which are often referred to as denying that the relation of guest is thereby created so as to impose the increased responsibility of inn keeper, certainly do not decide that point, since it was not involved in the cases, although such an opinion is there intimated. All that is there decided is, that the horse of one not a traveller put at an inn created only the ordinary liability of a bailee for compensation on the part of the inn keeper. And this is altogether consistent with the cases of Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471; supra, and York v. Grindstone, 1 Salk. 388."

1. Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242, 244.

Purchasers of Liquor on Sunday.—Persons who resort to an inn in Massachusetts on the Lord's Day, for the purpose of procuring and drinking liquor, are not guests within the meaning of the screen liquor law of that State. Commonwealth v. Moore, 37 Alb. L. J. 37; citing Com. v. Hagan, 140 Mass. 289.

2. Atwater v. Sawyer, 76 Me. 539, 544.

Definitions of "Guest."—A guest is a "traveller or wayfarer who puts up at an inn. Calye's case, 8 Coke 32. A lodger or stranger in an inn. Jacobs, Law Dict., tit. Guest. A traveller who comes to an inn and is accepted, becomes instantly a guest. Story, Bailments, § 477; Curtis v. Murphy, 62

Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242, 243.

In Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 260, CHIEF JUSTICE COMEGYS, in his charge to the jury, said: "Every one who is received into an inn and has entertainment there, for which the inn keeper has compensation by way of remuneration or reward for his service, is a guest. The relation of host and guest exists. This general definition, however, only includes those who in a legal sense are travellers or wayfarers; and boarders, or persons who reside in the same place, are not embraced by it. It is only travellers or wayfarers that the inn keeper is bound to accept as guests, and it is to them alone that he is under extraordinary responsibility for the safe keeping of beasts and goods. Inns are for them, as the books teach us; that is, for their sustentation and nourishment, and protection of their goods from depredation by thieves and robbers at stages of repose in their journeyings. The liability of inn keepers to others than those just mentioned are not so great, but are very adequate."

But in Walling v. Potter, 35 Conn. 183, 185, CARPENTER, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "A guest is one who patronizes an inn as such." "In short, anyone away from home, receiving accommodations at an inn as a traveller, is a guest, and entitled to hold the inn keeper responsible as such."

So in Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242, 244; COLE. C. J., said: "In these definitions [of a guest] the prominent idea is that a guest must be a traveller, wayfarer, or a transient comer to an inn for lodging and entertainment. It is not now deemed essential that a person should length of the stay, does not absolutely disturb the relationship of inn keeper and guest, and constitute the person so acting a boarder or lodger.¹

Situation of Parties and Circumstances of Case.—In the absence of a specific agreement, the question whether a party sustained the relation of guest or boarder to one keeping an inn at the time of the loss of articles sued for, would require, for its correct decision, a consideration of the situation of the parties and all the circumstances.²

Nor, as it has been considered, can a party become a guest without the express or implied assent of the inn keeper, as by entering the dining-room of a hotel and ordering dinner.³

have come from a distance to constitute a guest."

1. See Hancock v. Rand, 94 N. Y. 1; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 112, 117.

In Norcross v. Norcross, 53 Me. 103, 160, it is said: "Who are guests, in legal contemplation, and when the property of guests may be regarded as committed to the care of the inn keeper, are sometimes questions of no little intricacy. If a person goes to an inn as a wayfarer and a traveller, and the inn keeper receives him into his inn as such, he becomes the inn keeper's guest, and the relation of landlord and guest, with all its rights and liabilities, is instantly established between them. Neither the length of time that a man remains at an inn, nor any agreement he may make as to the price of board per day or per week, deprives him of his character as a traveller and a guest, provided he retains his status as a traveller in other respects." This statement of the law is adopted as well settled in Jalie v. Cardinal, 35 Wis. 118, 128. To like effect see Mowers v. Fethers, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 112; Ross v. Mellin, 36 Minn. 421, 422; Hall v. Pike, 100 Mass. 495, 497, where COLT, J., said that it is expressly decided "in Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 417, 424, that an agreement with an inn keeper for the price of board by the week is not decisive that the relation is that of boarder instead of guest. Story, Bailm., § 477."

Payment in Advance.—In Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 659, 661, the rule observed at a house where a group of miners laden with gold dust and money stopped, was that persons who applied for rooms and lodging were required to pay for the same in advance. But the court said, through RHODES, J., "A traveller who enters an inn as a guest does not cease to be a guest by proposing to remain a given number of days, or by ascertaining the price that will be charged for his entertainment, or by paying in advance for a part or the whole of the entertainment, or paying for what he has occasion for, as his wants are supplied. We see no reason why the inn keeper may not require payment in advance, or why the guest may not pay in advance, for lodgings for a part or all the time he intends to remain as a guest at the inn."

2. Hall v. Pike, 100 Mass. 495, 497, where COLT, J., said: "If the defendant was only an inn keeper, the presumption would be that a temporary sojourner, in the absence of other proof, must be a guest. Where in the same house he carries on the business of inn keeper and keeper of boarders, it is more difficult. The more prominent occupation would perhaps control in a case where there was no other evidence. The duration of the plaintiff's stay, the price paid, the amount of accommodation afforded, the transient or permanent character of the plaintiff's residence and occupation, his knowledge or want of knowledge of any difference of accommodation afforded to, or price paid by, boarders or guests, are all to be regarded in settling the question."

"It is not easy, says Mr. Schouler, to lay down on the whole who should be deemed a guest in the common law sense: the facts in each case must guide the decision. Bailments 256; Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242, 243.

3. See Gastenhofer v. Clair, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 265, 267, VAN HOESSEN, J., in his concurring opinion in a case where the proprietor of a hotel was held not responsible for the loss of an over coat

5. Restriction of Term "Guests" to Travellers—Nature of Restriction.—The term "guest" is usually confined in its scope to travellers or wayfarers, as distinguished from neighbors, friends or boarders.¹

Basis of Restriction.—The basis of this restriction is that the peculiar liability of inn keepers is limited to those who, as strangers and sojourners, are compelled to put up in an inn without knowing the character of the house.²

left by a party who had ordered and taken a dinner while waiting for his uncle, who was a guest and had invited him to dine at the hotel, placed his decision on the following ground: "There must be at least two parties to every contract, and when it is attempted to charge an inn keeper with liability for the loss of goods belonging to a person who asserts that he was a guest, the enquiry is how was the relation of guest and inn keeper created? No person can make himself a guest without the inn keeper's assent. Of course that assent may be given by an agent or a servant entrusted with the duty of receiving and rejecting travellers. There need be no formal bargain, for the acceptance of a person as a guest will be implied, where he calls for refreshment which is furnished to him by a servant who has the discretion either to give or to withhold it. But a man cannot make himself a guest by slipping into the dining room of a hotel and ordering a dinner of a waiter, who has no discretion whatever, and who brings what is ordered, under the belief that the person who gives the order is in the dining room by permission of the inn keeper. Permission to enter the dining room cannot be implied. A man can no more enter the dining room without permission than he can enter a sleeping room and go to sleep without permission. He must first give the inn keeper an opportunity to receive or to reject him. If he be accepted as a guest, he is, of course, entitled to the usual privileges of a guest, and if the inn keeper refuse, without reason, to receive him, an indictment and a civil action for damages will lie against him."

1. Thus in Manning v. Wells, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 746; s. c., 51 Am. Dec. 688, 689, it is said: "But a guest is a traveller or wayfarer who comes to an inn and is accepted. Story on Bailm., § 477. A neighbor or friend who comes to an inn on the invitation of the inn keeper is not deemed a guest: Bac. Abr., Inns and Inn Keepers, 5; Com. Dig., Action on Case for Negligence, B. 2. Nor is a person a guest, in the sense of the law, who comes upon a special contract to board and sojourn at an inn; he is deemed a boarder. And if he is robbed, the host is not answerable for it. 5 Bac. Abr., Inns and Inn Keepers, 5."

2. Thus in Manning v. Wells, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 746; s. c., 51 Am. Dec. 688, 689, where the principles determining that neighbors, friends and boarders are not guests are stated to be "settled by the authorities and founded in sound reason," the court, through GREEN, J., remarks: "A passenger or wayfaring man may be an entire stranger. He must put up and lodge at the inn to which his day's journey may bring him. It is, therefore, important that he should be protected by the most stringent rules of law enforcing the liability of the inn keeper. In such case, therefore, the law makes the inn keeper an insurer of the goods of his guest, except as to losses occasioned by the act of God or public enemies. But as a boarder does not need such protection, the law does not afford it. It is sufficient to give him a remedy when he shall prove the inn keeper has been guilty of culpable negligence."

Similarly in Neal v. Wilcox, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 46; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 266, 267, the court, through PEARSON, J., said: "The ground of public policy on which an action on the case on the custom is given against inn keepers is, that persons who are travelling through the country are under a necessity of putting up at inns for entertainment—transeuntes causa hospitandi (from which last word they are called 'guests') without knowing anything about the character of the house; for which reason the law gives an assurance of the safety of their property; that is, the goods and animals (bona et catalla) which they have with them for the purposes of their journey. The reason

Scope of Restriction.—But though the rights, duties and liabilities of guests are usually considered to be confined to transient or wayfaring men,¹ yet a town man or neighbor may be a guest according to a more liberal view, under which it is not now deemed essential that a person should have come from a distance to constitute a guest.² restricts this action to guests as distinguished from boarders, who sojourn at an inn on a special contract. 3 Bac. Abr. 666, tit. Inns."

Recent Statements of Grounds.—So in Horner v. Harvey, 5 Pac. Rep. (N. M.) 329, AXTELL, C. J., said: "The liability of inn keepers is strict, and justly so; but it is a liability limited to their relation to travellers or wayfaring men. The law of civilized countries benignantly protects men away from home and from those resources with which the denizen or citizen can guard himself from wrong, and protect his property from loss or injury."

Again in Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 259, CHIEF JUSTICE COMEGYS, in his charge to the jury, remarked: "It is said that inns exist for the benefit of the travelling community. In fact, they are almost as much a necessity to travellers as the public means of locomotion are. . . . In them wayfaring people of every kind, if they can afford the expense which the host charges for that service, can be accommodated with diet and lodgings; in other words, can be entertained in their journeyings. The necessities of such people oblige them to solicit entertainment at the public or commort inn, both for themselves and for their beasts, where they travel with such; otherwise they would be without shelter and food. Because of this necessity, and that the host or entertainer is generally unknown to a party resorting to his house or inn, and that such party is compelled to trust himself and his property to his keeping, and that he is charged by the inn keeper for entertainment of himself and his beasts and the custody of his property, the law holds the inn keeper to a strict liability, not from any contract between the parties, but from the duty growing out of his public employment."

1. "The cases show that to entitle one to the privileges and protection of a guest he must have the character of a traveller, one who is a mere temporary lodger, in distinction from one who engages for a fixed period at a certain agreed rate. The main distinction is that one is a wayfarer, or transiens, and it matters not how long he remains provided he assumes this character. [Note 6.] Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 451;" Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242, 244.

In Horner v. Harvey, 5 Pac. Rep. (N. M.) 329, AXTELL, C. J., said: "When a traveller comes to an inn and is accepted, he instantly becomes a guest. The inn keeper, when he accepts him and his goods becomes his insurer, and the inn keeper must answer in damages for the loss or injury of all goods, money and baggage of his guest brought within his inn and delivered into his charge and custody, according to the usage of travellers and inn keepers; but he must be a guest, and before he can be a guest he must be a traveller. When he ceases to be a traveller or a transient or wayfaring man, and takes up a permanent abode, even in an inn, he ceases to be an object of the law's especial solicitude, and he is no longer a guest, but a boarder; no longer a traveller, but a citizen."

2. Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242, 244.

Distance Not Deemed Material.—In Walling v. Potter, 35 Conn. 183, 185, after referring to a definition of an inn in which the word "traveller" was considered to be used in a broad sense to designate those who patronize inns, CARPENTER, J., delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Distance is not material. A townsman or neighbor may be a traveller, and therefore a guest at an inn, as well as he who comes from a distance, or from a foreign country. If he resides at the inn, his relation to the inn keeper is that of a boarder, but if he resides away from it, whether far or near, and comes to it for entertainment as a traveller, and receives it as such, paying the customary rates, we know of no reason why he should not be subjected to all the duties of a guest, and entitled to all the rights and privileges of one."

8. Who Are Travellers.—Transient or Temporary Visitor.—

There can be no question that a party is a traveller, and that the relation of inn keeper and guest arises when the character of mere transient or temporary visitor exists and is retained.¹ But the mere length of the party's story is not decisive.²

Fixed Resident.—On the other hand, a person who has long been a resident of a place, engaged in the pursuit of a profession which rendered a fixed residence indispensable, could not be in any wise regarded as coming under the category of travellers so as to enable a tavern keeper to detain his goods for the price of his board.³

Change of Position or Location.—So, one is not a traveller who merely walks about a town or city, or changes his dwelling place therein.⁴

1. "There may be, sometimes, much of difficulty in determining whether the relationship of guest exists. But when the character of traveller, or mere transient or temporary visitor exists and is retained, the relation of guest and inn keeper exists." Beale v. Posey, 72 Ala. 323, 331, where it is held that the simple fact that a resident of one town, visiting another for the temporary purposes of his business, contracted for board and lodging for a less price than the inn keeper usually charged, does not change the fact that he was a mere traveller, or temporary, transient visitor.

2. See Ewart v. Stark, 8 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 423, 424, where JOHN-SON, J., said that it "seems not to be well ascertained who was or was not a traveller, for whom the inn keeper was bound to provide. By the old law it seems he was called a traveller the first day of his sojourn, a hogenbind the second day, and a menial servant the third. But now, it seems, he will not lose that character, although he remains a week or a month at the same place," and, "perhaps the only mode of ascertaining that fact is to enquire whether he is resident or transient," which "depends necessarily upon the object, nature and extent of time which he has been resident, and must be resolved by the general understanding."

Flying Visit to Family.—A father who comes from another State, wherein he resides, and stays for a month with his family at a hotel in which the family is stopping, is a traveller, and can recover for the theft of his watch from the rooms occupied by himself and family at the hotel, where his purpose evidently was to make a flying visit to his family, and a merely temporary stay in the city in which the inn was located. Lusk v. Belote, 24 Minn. 468, 470. In this case it was laid down that the father's "status as a traveller, like any other status, once shown to exist, is to be presumed to have continued;" and that neither "the agreement by which he was to pay special rates for himself and family, lower than those ordinarily charged for transient guests, nor the fact that he remained in the inn for a month," nor any other facts appearing in the case, furnished "any evidence that his character was changed from that of a traveller to that of a boarder."

Army Officer.—A general of the U. S. army, liable to be called to distant and remote places by the government, and thus obliged to change his headquarters, has been regarded, when stopping at a hotel, as being a transient person, the same as any other traveller or passenger, and not chargeable as a boarder in the absence of a showing of an explicit contract changing his relation to the inn keeper. Hancock v. Rand, 94 N. Y. 1; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 112, 114.

3. Ewart v. Stark, 8 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 423, 424.

4. Promenader in Town.—In Queen v. Rymer, L. R., 2 Q. B. D. 136, where there was an indictment against an inn keeper for refusing to supply the prosecutor with refreshments at a bar within a hotel, some counts of the indictment describing the prosecutor as a traveller, and others not, and it was not proved that the prosecutor was a traveller in any sense, otherwise than that he was walking about the town with his dog for his own recreation and amusement, a conviction was held not sustainable, partly upon the ground that the prosecutor was not a traveller. On this point KELLY, C. B., said: "I need hardly cite authorities to show that it is essential to such a prosecution that the prosecutor should be a traveller. If any be wanted, the case of Rex v. Llewellyn, 12 Mod. 445, in which an indictment was held bad for want of an allegation to that effect, is an express authority upon the point. Here the prosecutor was not a traveller in any sense whatever." DENMAN, J., also remarked: "The principles laid down in Burgess v. Clements, 4 Maule & S. 306, show that the object of the law upon the subject of an inn keeper's liability is merely to secure that travellers shall not, while upon their journeys, be deprived of necessary food and lodging."

7. Guests and Boarders—Distinction Between.—There are two classes of persons who are entertained by inn keepers for reward, guests and boarders.¹ The distinction between a guest and a boarder, which it is difficult to draw, and which is variously stated, is based mainly upon the fact that boarders contract for a definite stay at specific prices.²

Changing Dwelling Place.—The strict common law liability of inn keepers existing only in favor of travellers has been held not applicable in favor of children of a nonresident who had with their mother been living in a city for several years, sometimes keeping house and sometimes staying at a hotel or boarding house, the father being in the habit of making them an occasional visit as often as two or three times a year. Lusk v. Belote, 22 Minn. 468, 469, 470.

Railroad Employee.—It has ever been held that an employee of a railroad company, making his regular trips as conductor and stopping over at each end of his route, is not a guest at a terminus hotel where he rents a room by the month, at least in the legal sense of the word "guest" as correlative with traveller, so as to maintain an action for damages against the inn keeper for coin stolen from his satchel placed in his room at the hotel. Horner v. Harvey, 5 Pac. Rep. (N. M.) 329. Such an employee was regarded as neither a traveller, a wayfaring man, nor a transient person, but a citizen of the community at both ends of his route: and the fact that he worked upon a train which ran thirty miles an hour was regarded as no more making him a traveller than if he worked in the company's shops.

1. Pollock v. Landis, 36 Ia. 651, 652. In Carter v. Hobbs, 12 Mich. 52, s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 762, 765, it is said that "if a person comes to an inn on a special contract to board there, the law treats him, not as a guest, but as a boarder. Bac. Abr., tit. Inns, ch. 5; Parkhurst v. Forster, 1 Salk. 388; and the goods of a permanent boarder are not protected as those of a guest. Manning v. Wells, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 746; s. c., 51 Am. Dec. 688; Kisten v. Hildebrand, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 72, 74; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416."

2. See Lawrence v. Howard, 1 Utah, 142, 143, where BOREMAN, J., who delivered the opinion of the court, said: "In this country hotel keepers act in a double capacity, being both inn keepers and boarding house keepers. As inn keepers they entertain travellers and transient persons, those who come without bargain as to time or price, and go away at pleasure, paying for only actual entertainment received. As boarding house keepers they entertain residents and regular boarders and lodgers for definite lengths of time and at specific prices previously agreed upon." Compare, however, Hancock v. Rand, 94 N. Y. 1; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 112. In Shoecraft v. Bailey, 25 Iowa 553, 555, BECK, J., said: "The distinction between a guest and a boarder seems to be this: 'The guest comes without any bargain for time, remains without one, and may go when he pleases, paying only for the actual entertainment he receives, and it is not enough to make [one] a boarder, [and] not a guest that he has staid for a long time in the inn in this way.' 1 Parsons' Contracts 628; Story on Bailments, § 477." This statement of the distinction is also quoted under article BOARDER, 2 Am. & Eng. Encycl. of Law, 437.

Difficulty of Discriminating.—In Neal v. Wilcox, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 146; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 266, 267, the court said, through PEARSON, J.: "It is sometimes

Length of Stay Immaterial.—The mere length of time that a party stays at an inn, however, is not so far material in determining his status as to transform him from a guest into a boarder, provided he retains his transient character as a traveller.¹

Question of Fact, etc.—But the question whether a party is a guest or a boarder is a fact to be found on all the evidence by the court when trial by jury has been waived, and unless the evidence is wholly insufficient to support a verdict of a jury, no exceptions will lie.²

8. Obtaining Temporary Refreshment—Sufficiency of Slight Entertainment.—Where it appears by the party's own showing that the establishment he keeps is an inn, it is immaterial how slight may be the entertainment or how temporary the use made difficult to draw the line between guests and boarders. They frequently run into each other like light and shade. So the line between a common carrier and a bailee to carry is sometimes scarcely perceptible; but the law makes the distinction and it is the province of the judge to draw the line. A transient customer at an inn, although he be not a traveller or a stranger, is considered as a guest; a lodger, who sojourns at an inn, and takes a room for a specified time and pays for his lodging on a special agreement, as by the month or week, is a boarder. Bennett v. Mellor, 5 Term Rep. 273."

Distinction as to Inn Keeper's Liability.—In Chamberlain v. Masterson, 26 Ala. 371, 378, GOLDTHWAITE, J., said that "there is a distinction between the liability of inn keepers towards guests and boarders, which was taken at an early day. Calye's Case, 8 Co. 32; Bacon's Abr., Inns and Inn Keepers, ch. 5; Story on Bailm. (4th ed.), § 477 (3). If the goods lost belong to a boarder, in order to charge the inn keeper, he would be required to show that the loss was owing to the failure on his part to discharge the duties which his situation as boarding house keeper, or the special contract with the other party, imposed on him; and these duties must be measured by the analogies of the law applicable to other species of bailments." Consult further on this subject, Vance v. Throckmorton, 5 Bush (Ky.) 41, 44; Chamberlain v. Masterson, 26 Ala. 371, 378.

1. In Kisten v. Hildebrand, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 72; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416, 418, the court, through MARSHALL, C. J., said: "The length of time that a man stays at an inn does not make the difference, though he stay a week or a month or more. So always, though not strictly transiens, he retains his character as a traveller." Story on Bailm., § 177; Bacon's Abr., Inns and Inn Keepers, ch. 5. "But if a person comes upon a special contract to board and sojourn at the inn, he is not in the sense of the law a guest, but a boarder. Same authorities." See to like effect Hancock v. Rand, 94 N. Y. 1; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 112, 117; Vance v. Throckmorton, 5 Bush (Ky.) 41, 44; Johnson v. Reynolds, 3 Kan. 251.

2. Hall v. Pike, 100 Mass. 495, 498.

Allegation That Party "Boarded."—An allegation that one "boarded" with an inn keeper does not affirmatively show that he was entertained in the character of a boarder as distinguished from a "guest." Pollock v. Landis, 36 Iowa 651, 652, where it is said that "boarded" is the imperfect tense of the verb board, which means to receive food as a lodger, or without lodgings, for a compensation, and that the averment in controversy does not state whether the party received this food as a boarder or as a guest. This case is also stated under article BOARDER, 2 Am. & Eng. Encycl. of Law, 437.

Lodger.—In Parker v. Flint, 12 Mod. 254, 255 (almost literally quoted in Hancock v. Rand, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 279, 284; s. c., on appeal, 94 N. Y. 1; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 112), LORD HOLT remarks: "If one come to an inn and makes a previous contract for lodging for a set time, and do not eat or drink there, he is no guest, but a lodger, and as such is not under the inn keeper's protection. But if he eat and drink there, it is otherwise; or if he pay his diet there, though he do not take it there."

of it, if the party loses his property in the inn while there in the character of a guest.¹

Purchasing Liquor.—Thus, purchasing liquor at an inn has been held sufficient to constitute one a guest.² So, an inn keeper has been held liable where a servant went to the inn and asked if he might leave his master's goods until the next market day, and the inn keeper's wife told him that she could not tell, as they were full of parcels, whereupon the servant sat down in the inn, putting his master's goods immediately behind him on the floor, and had some liquor, but when he got up, after sitting there a little while, the goods were missing.³

Entering Refreshment Rooms, etc.—But a traveller will not be regarded a guest when, after leaving his luggage with the porter of a hotel adjoining a railroad station, he decided not to spend the night at the city in which he had just arrived, and went into the coffee-room to order some refreshments, but not being able to obtain exactly what he desired, passed into the station refreshment room, which was under the same management as the hotel, and connected with it by a covered passage, but shortly afterwards went out, telling the porter to lock up his luggage.⁴

9. Mere Visitor—Transient Visitor or Caller Not Protected.—The rule that makes the landlord of an inn responsible for the goods of his guest is a severe one, and can only be applied where the conventional relation of inn keeper and guest exists. It can-

1. Kopper v. Willis, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 460, 465.

2. McDonald v. Edgerton, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 560, 562.

Limits of Doctrine.—In Fitch v. Casler, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 126, 127, it is admitted to be true "that even the purchasing of liquors has been held sufficient, under some circumstances, to make one the guest of the inn keeper." This is said to show, however, "that it is not the amount of refreshments, but the character under which the purchaser buys them, which determines the relation of the parties."

In Atkinson v. Sellers, 5 C. B., N. S. 442, 443 (quoted in Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242, 243), COCKBURN, C. J., remarks: "Of course a man could not be said to be a traveller who goes to a place merely for the purpose of taking refreshment. But if he goes to an inn for refreshment in the course of a journey, whether of business or of pleasure, he is entitled to demand refreshment, and the inn keeper is justified in supplying it."

3. Bennett v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 273. This case is supported in McDonald v. Edgerton, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 560, 563; distinguished in Strauss v. County Hotel and Wine Co., L. R., 12 Q. B. D. 604; and upheld with expressions of doubt in Kopper v. Willis, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 460, 465, and McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 577.

4. Strauss v. County Hotel and Wine Co., L. R., 12 Q. B. D. 27; s. c., 37 Eng. Rep. 604. In this case MATHEW, J., said: "The counsel for the plaintiff [the traveller] were called upon to show at what point of time the relation of landlord and guest commenced. They suggested that it was when he gave his luggage to the porter. But at that time the plaintiff had not made up his mind to become a guest. The fact that he ordered his goods to be locked up is no more than if he had said that in the meantime he wished his goods to be locked up." LORD COLERIDGE remarked: "The case of Bennett v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 273, has been relied on by the plaintiff as showing that it is not necessary, to make the defendant liable, that the guest should spend the night at the inn. But there it was expressly found that the plaintiff had come within the house and not be extended so as to protect one who is not a guest, but a mere caller on a guest, or a transient visitor upon the invitation of a guest.¹

Party Attending Ball at Inn.—So the relation of inn keeper and guest does not exist between the inn keeper and one who merely attends a ball given on the inn premises by the proprietor,² or by other parties, as a firemen's company, to whom he furnishes the dancing-room, supper and dressing-room, at a price less per head than that charged for tickets.³

had placed his goods near his chair, so that the case is clearly distinguishable. On the other hand, the case of Reg. v. Rymer, L. R., 2 Q. B. D. 136, is, so far as it goes, against the plaintiff."

1. Gastenhofer v. Clair, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 265, 266, where J. F. DALY, J., said: "Such was the status of the plaintiff in this case. He claims to have become a guest himself by ordering and taking dinner while waiting for his uncle. This put him in no different position from that he would have occupied had he sat down with his uncle as he had been invited to do. He was there upon the invitation of that gentleman, and with no intent to sojourn at the hotel as a guest for even the briefest period. This distinguishes the case from Kopper v. Willis, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 460 [in which case the friend, who asked a party to go to a restaurant, paid for his dinner], and from Bennett v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 273 [in which case a servant ordered liquor and put his master's goods near his chair], where the parties came to the inn to partake of its entertainment or accommodation, and for no other purpose. . . . It is not the fact that a person does or does not take lodgings that makes him a guest. It is the motive with which he visits the place, whether to use it even for the briefest period, or the most trifling purpose, as a public house or not, and I think it will be long before the courts will be disposed to hold landlords liable for the property of persons who call to visit their guests, and incidentally enjoy the hospitality of the house. The taking of the dinner without notice to the proprietor or the clerk, no more constitutes plaintiff a guest than his sitting in the parlor, using the reading room or writing room, etc., for any period while waiting for his host to appear."

2. See Fitch v. Custer, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 126, 127, in which case the relation of inn keeper and guest was held not to arise where the defendant, in a suit for injury to plaintiff's horse, was an inn keeper, who issued cards of invitation for a "Fourth of July party" at his inn, and in pursuance of one of these invitations plaintiff went to the hotel, stabled his horse in a barn engaged by the defendant for the occasion, took part in the dance and paid his bill, including an extra charge for liquors which he drank at the hotel. LEARNED, P. J., said: "It certainly cannot be that if an inn keeper invites a friend to dinner, that peculiar liability [of an inn keeper for his guest's property] arises. And so in the present case, the plaintiff came on the invitation of the defendant. He came not as to an inn or hotel, but as to a ball room, for the purpose of engaging in a dance. He was to pay a certain charge for admission, and this charge included the care of his horse. Still he was not a traveler, and did not come in that character. He would have had no right to come if he had not been invited. . . . The defendant, in this instance, was in the same position with any other owner of a ball room, who should, for the purpose of profit, invite certain persons to come to it for a dance, and should charge them a certain price for the dance, the supper, and the care of their horses."

3. Carter v. Hobbs, 12 Mich. 52; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 762, 765, where the inn keeper was held not liable, in the absence of negligence, to a nonresident, stopping at another inn in the same town, for the loss of his overcoat, fur collar and gloves, which he had delivered to the clerk at the office on coming in to attend the ball. This was ruled, although at the same time he registered his name, and during the night spent some money for liquors and cigars at a saloon kept by the inn keeper in connection with the hotel. The court, through CHRISTIANCY, J., said: "The plaintiff was no more the guest of the inn than any person residing across the street, and attending the ball on the same occasion. If a guest at all, he was rather the guest of the fire company. The defendant on this occasion was no more acting in the character of inn keeper, as to those attending the ball, than any other person furnishing the rooms and supper at any other house for such special occasion. The plaintiff did not resort to the hotel for any purpose which brings him within the common law definition of the guest of an inn."

10. Object of Stay—Propagation of Horses.—Where a party does not come to an inn for entertainment as an ordinary wayfarer, but with a horse to be used, under a special arrangement, in serving mares, the inn keeper is not bound to receive and treat the party as his guest, and is not liable for the destruction of the horse without his fault.¹

Showing or Selling Goods.—So a party cannot hold an inn keeper to his liability, strictly as such, in respect to goods brought to an inn, where such party, who is a guest, has a room specially for the purpose of showing or selling such goods.²

Unlawful Purpose.—Nor, it seems, is a party a guest who hires a room for some purpose of convenience, particularly if his object be an unlawful or immoral one.³

1. Thus where an arrangement was made and carried out by which plaintiff's stallion was to stand at defendant's inn certain days each week, under an agreement made for the season, for serving mares that should be brought to the enclosure, and the plaintiff was to have the exclusive use of the designated box-stall in defendant's barn, and was to feed and care for the horse while the defendant was to furnish the oats for the horse and meals for the plaintiff, who took charge of the horse, at prices less than those ordinarily charged to travellers, it was held that defendant was not liable for the destruction of the barn and horse by fire without negligence on his part, as the plaintiff did not come to the inn for entertainment as an ordinary wayfarer, but under a special arrangement previously made, and that in such case the utmost limits of the defendant's liability was that of an ordinary bailee for hire. Mowers v. Fethers, 61 N. Y. 34; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 244. It was considered that the defendant, as an inn keeper, was under no common law obligation to receive and entertain the plaintiff and his horse for such a purpose, "and where he is not bound to receive and entertain the person as his guest, the strict rule of common law liability for the preservation of his property does not obtain. The obligation to respond for injury to property depends upon his duty to receive and entertain as an inn keeper, and they must stand or fall together. Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663; Ingalsbee v. Wood, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 455; s. c., 33 N. Y. 577; Hulett v. Swift, 33 N. Y. 571."

2. See Carter v. Hobbs, 12 Mich. 52; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 762, 765; Neal v. Wilcox, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 146; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 266; Burgess v. Clements, 4 Maule & S. 306; Mowers v. Fethers, 61 N. Y. 34; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 244, 246.

3. Hiring Rooms for Immoral Purposes.—Where a party, who lived near a hotel in the same town, went there at midnight with a disreputable woman, registered the name of himself and wife, was assigned a room, and delivered some money to the clerk, who absconded therewith, it was held that he was not a guest, and could not recover the money from the inn keeper. Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242. COLE, J., said that "while the definition of a guest has been somewhat extended beyond its original meaning, it does not include every one who goes to an inn for convenience to accomplish some purpose. If a man and woman go together to meet by concert at an inn or hotel in the town or city where they reside, and take a room for no other purpose than to have illicit intercourse, can it be that the law protects them as guests? Is the extraordinary rule of liability which was originally adopted from considerations of public policy to protect travellers and wayfarers, not merely from the negligence but the dis-

11. Showing Goods for Sale—Inn Keeper Not Bound to Provide for.—An inn keeper is not bound to receive or accommodate persons desirous of exposing their commodities for sale, nor is he liable as an inn keeper in respect to such goods.¹

Scope of Inn Keeper's Liability.—But his liability is confined to those who come for entertainment, and he is not bound to find show rooms for his guests.²

12. Personal Presence of Guest—Deemed Unnecessary Where Goods in Bailee's Charge.—It has been considered not necessary that one should be at an inn in person in order to constitute him a guest, if his goods be there in charge of a bailee for him.³

Leaving Horse at Inn.—But the tendency of the modern cases is to hold that merely leaving a horse at an inn cannot of itself suffice to constitute one a guest,⁴ though, according to the earlier honesty of inn keepers and their servants, to be extended to such persons?" After stating that if this were the case, "then for a like reason it would protect a thief who takes a room at an inn and improves the opportunity thus given to enter the rooms and steal the goods of guests and boarders." The conclusion is reached that one "whose status is a guest, is a traveller or transient comer, who puts up at an inn for a lawful purpose, to receive its customary lodging and entertainment," and not "one who takes a room solely to commit an offence against the laws of the State."

1. See Mowers v. Fethers, 61 N. Y. 34; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 244, 246, where REYNOLDS, C., said: "It seems to be apparent from the nature of the duties and obligations of the keeper of a common or public inn that he is not, in his capacity of inn keeper, bound to receive or furnish accommodation for persons desirous of exposing their commodities for sale, or bound to permit his establishment to be made a depot for the propagation of horses."

In Carter v. Hobbs, 12 Mich. 52; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 762, 765, it is said that "if a person, who is a guest, have a room specially for the purpose of showing or selling his goods, he cannot hold the inn keeper to his liability, strictly as such, in respect to these goods. Burgess v. Clements, 4 Maule & S. 306." See to like effect Myers v. Cottrill, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 465, 471; Fisher v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 383, 385; s. c., 16 Fed. Rep. 71, 74.

2. See Neal v. Wilcox, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 146; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 266, 267, where, after discussing the reason why an action on the case "on the custom" is given against inn keepers, and showing that it is restricted to guests as distinguished from boarders, the court, through PEARSON, J., says: "So the reason restricts the action to one who comes for entertainment—causa hospitandi. If one peddling merchandise puts up at an inn, and besides his sleeping apartment takes a separate room in which to show and sell articles—clocks and watches, for instance—these articles are not within the protection of the rule. Burgess v. Clements, 4 Maule & S. 306. So if one having a drove of horses or hogs to sell, puts up at an inn, and besides entertainment for himself procures from the landlord a lot in which to keep his animals for the purpose of showing and selling them, they are not specially protected; and it makes no difference whether by the agreement the landlord has them fed, or whether the drover buys provender of the landlord or a third person; for, as LORD ELLENBOROUGH says in the above case, an inn keeper is not bound by law to find show rooms for his guests, but only convenient lodging rooms and lodging."

3. See Coykendall v. Eaton, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 188, 190. The court said, through FOSTER, J.: "To constitute one a guest it is not necessary that he be at the inn in person. It is enough that his property be there in the charge of his wife or servant or agent, who is there in his employment or as a member of his family. But they must be there in such a way that the law implies the property while there to be in his possession, and not in the possession of the person who is there with it as his bailee."

4. See Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 666; cases, and others which have followed their views, it is not essential, in order to constitute one a guest, in legal contemplation, that he should receive personal entertainment at the inn, but it may be enough that he leave his horse, particularly if he be a traveller, in the strict sense.¹

13. Leaving Horse as Constituting Guest.—The older doctrine that the mere leaving a horse at an inn may constitute the owner a guest, is supported, in the leading American case in which this view is taken,² by an early English decision, recognizing, by a divided court, the lien of an inn keeper in regard to a horse left at his stable by a traveller who did not himself put up at the inn,³

Ingallsbee v. Wood, 33 N. Y. 577, 579; Healey v. Gray, 68 Me. 489; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 80; Thickstun v. Howard, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 535, 538; admitting that if the traveller sought even temporary shelter while his horse was being fed at the inn, this might make him a guest, but stating that in general the privileges granted to travellers "must be regarded as incident to their personal presence." Note to McDaniels v. Robinson (26 Vt. 316) in 62 Am. Dec. 588, where it is said that the "doctrine that the mere leaving of a horse at an inn constitutes the owner a guest" seems "to rest on a very slender foundation," and that "it is very doubtful if any court would now so decide."

1. See Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, 474; McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 575, 577; Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 260.

In Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, 474, where the hirer of a horse, chaise and harness remained a visitor at the house of a friend, but sent the animal and equipage to the stable of an inn keeper, WILDE, J., speaking for the court, said that "it is clearly settled that to constitute a guest in legal contemplation it is not essential that he should be a lodger or have any refreshment at the inn. If he leaves his horse there, the inn keeper is chargeable on account of the benefit he is to receive for the keeping of the horse. LORD HOLT held a different opinion in the case of Yorke v. Grenaugh, 2 Ld. Raym. 866 [s. c. as Yorke v. Grindstone, 1 Salk. 388]; but the opinion of the majority of the court has ever since been considered as well settled law."

But on the other hand, in Healey v. Gray, 68 Me. 489; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 80, it was held that where one leaves his horse with an inn keeper, with no intention of stopping at the inn himself, but stops at a relative's house, he is not a guest of the inn, and the liability of the landlord is simply that of an ordinary bailee for hire. APPLETON, C. J., said: "In Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 417, 425, the authority of Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, was somewhat doubted. But in Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 85; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, its authority was denied."

2. Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, 474.

3. Yorke v. Grindstone, 1 Salk. 388; s. c., as Yorke v. Grenaugh, 2 Ld. Raym. 866.

In McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 3, 6; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 576, the court, through REDFIELD, C. J., said: "The case of Yorke v. Grindstone, 1 Salk. 388, has been understood by most of the elementary writers as deciding, by a divided court, that one by leaving his horse at an inn becomes a guest. And such is virtually this decision, inasmuch as defendant's lien as inn keeper is recognized, in regards to a horse left at his stable by a traveller who did not himself put up at the inn. And such lien does not exist as to horses put at the stable of an inn keeper, even by those who are not travellers and guests. And so this case is perhaps justly regarded by judges and elementary writers as settling the point that one becomes a guest, as to all the property which the inn keeper consents to take in his keeping, by leaving his horse, from which profit is derived, although the same relation is not created by leaving a dead thing, as a trunk, from which no profit arises, as is intimated, although not decided, in Golley v.

and is further sustained by judicial declarations,¹ and statements of legal writers.² It also receives qualified support in this country from a modern leading case, where the point does not seem to be directly involved; and from a recent case in which a preference is given to the view of the older authorities, and it is held that a traveller or wayfarer journeying over the country becomes a guest by obtaining and paying for entertainment for his beasts at an inn;³ but in both these cases the doctrine is apparently confined in its application to those who are travellers or wayfarers as distinguished from residents.⁴

Clerk, Cro. Jac. 188. But that point has since been regarded as settled by this case, although the case was adjourned for advisement, 'being a new case.' . . . And I cannot find that the doctrine of this case of York v. Grindstone, supra, to the extent above laid down, has ever been questioned in England."

1. See Peet v. McGraw, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 653, 654, adopted in McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 577, but explained in Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 664.

2. See note to Calye's Case, 8 Co. 32, in 1 Smith's Lead. Cas. 50, 3 Bac. Abr., Inns and Inn Keepers, ch. 5, p. 666; as quoted in McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 577.

See McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 3, 6; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 575, where one who deposited four thousand dollars in gold with a common inn keeper, the theft of which was the cause of the litigation (afterwards continued, as shown by the report of the same case in 28 Vt. 387, 67 Am. Dec. 720), took a room at the inn and became a guest in the strictest sense, and continued to lodge and board constantly at the inn, apart from an absence at his brother's over one Saturday and Sunday; and the fact that he left his wagon, harness and buffalo skins in the inn keeper's custody does not seem to have called for the opinion expressed in the case, to the effect that the inn keeper is liable to the extent of the horse and equipage at least, if not for other goods, where the horse of one who is strictly a traveller is put up at the inn, although the traveller himself puts up at another place.

3. See Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 260, where CHIEF JUSTICE COMEGYS, in his charge to the jury, says that according to the strict definition of the term, "it would seem that the word

'guest' only applies to those who lodge or obtain meat or drink at an inn for compensation to the inn keeper. But this is not the case, as we think. Upon this subject the authorities are unfortunately not agreed, but after a careful consideration of them, especially upon review of the older ones, those nearest the time when inns began to be recognized and controlled by law,—we are satisfied that the law may be given to you by us, and we now declare it for your guidance, that if a person who comes within the meaning of the term 'traveller' or 'wayfarer,'—that is, being upon a journey passing over the country from place to place, or from one place to another and returning,—has occasion to seek entertainment for his beasts, and obtains it for them, upon a consideration of reward or pay charged him by the host or landlord, he is in [the] legal sense a guest, as much so as if he had himself received personal entertainment; and while such entertainment for his beasts continues, if any damage or injury happen to them, or they be stolen, he is, subject to certain exceptions . . . absolutely liable for them to the same extent as if he had undertaken against the particular damage by a special agreement."

4. Thus in McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 575, the following cases are distinguished upon the ground that all that is therein decided is, that "the horse of one not a traveller put at an inn, created only the ordinary liability of a bailee for compensation on the part of the inn keeper." Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663; Thickstun v. Howard, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 535; Hickman v. Thomas, 16 Ala. 666. So in Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 260, it was said by CHIEF JUSTICE COMEGYS: "The existence of an inn involves, in legal contemplation, a stable attached to it also, and travellers with horses

14. Insufficiency of Merely Leaving Horse—Status of Party Never Stopping at Inn.—According to the modern doctrine on the subject, the owner of a horse or other goods could not be regarded as a guest, in legal contemplation, where he had never been at the inn, and never intended to go there as a guest.¹ Hence, where one leaves his horse with an inn keeper with no intention of stopping at the inn himself, but stops at a relative's house, he is not a guest of the inn, and the liability of the landlord is simply that of an ordinary bailee for hire.² and carriages are not to be presumed to put them up at the inn otherwise than as in inn stables strictly, whereas those not travellers in the sense I have been employing, but merely putting up their teams at the inn stables as a livery (as is the case with persons residing near towns, who use such stables as mere conveniences), are not to be considered in the light of guests and entitled to the same degree of protection as travellers are."

1. See Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 666, where BRONSON, J., delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Now when a man, after he has actually become a guest and delivered his property to the host, goes away for a brief period, leaving his goods behind him, the law is chargeable with no absurdity in considering him as still continuing a guest, so far as relates to the rights and liabilities of the parties. And if one send his horse or his trunk in advance to the inn, saying he will soon be there himself, it may be that he should be deemed a guest from the time the property is taken in charge by the host. But when, as in Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, the owner has never been at the inn and never intends to go there as a guest, it seems to me little short of a downright absurdity to say that in legal contemplation he is a guest. If our law-givers had intended that the inn keeper should be answerable as such for everything he received in charge, guest or no guest, they would have said so. They would not have taken the roundabout mode of saying that he must answer for the goods of his guest, and that every one is a guest who has goods." The case under consideration was shown to differ from that of Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, because in the present instance the party who owned the horse never was the guest of the inn keeper, and was not a traveller or a transient person, but a neighbor; but JUDGE BRONSON said that he should "feel no disposition to follow that case if this difference did not exist," and that he thought that "the extraordinary liability of the inn keeper does not attach until he actually has a guest, and without such liability the inn keeper, as such, has no lien on the goods."

2. Healey v. Gray, 68 Me. 489; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 80.

Horse Left During Visits to Wife.—In Ingallsbee v. Wood, 33 N. Y. 577, the brother of one who had been recently married, and resided with his father, but lodged and took his meals with his wife at the residence of her mother, was held not entitled to recover as assignee, against the personal representative of an intestate inn keeper, whose barn had been consumed by fire, for the destruction of a horse which the assignor was in the habit of leaving without charge under the inn keeper's shed, during his visits to his wife, and which he had directed to have put in the stable and fed on the night when the fire occurred. PORTER, J., said that the intestate was not liable because there was no negligence, or express contract of insurance, and "none could be implied, unless it sprang from the relation of inn keeper and guest." But he considered that no such relation existed between the parties, as the "horse was left at the stable by one who was not, and did not expect to be, a guest at the inn." "There was no contract," he declared, "either express or implied, except for the keeping of the animal for the night, and this created no other or greater liability than if the intestate, instead of being an inn keeper, had been the proprietor of a livery stable." Concerning the state of the authorities, the same judge said that the view "that one who contracts for the stabling of his horse by an inn keeper is constructively an inmate of his house" is supported by a case reported in Massachusetts, but we think that decision was made under a misapprehension of law. Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471. Its correctness has since been questioned in the able opinion delivered by JUDGE BRONSON in the case of Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, and by JUDGES POTTER and BOCKES, in the present case, in the court below, Ingalsbee v. Wood, 36 Barb. 452, and we think their reasoning conclusive against the doctrine that an inn keeper can be held as an insurer of property received from one who is neither traveller nor guest."

Other Acts Besides Leaving Horse.—But where a party not only leaves his horse at an inn, but also takes refreshment there and stays there awhile, it would seem beyond question that he becomes a guest, and that the inn keeper becomes liable for the loss of any of his goods.¹

15. Creation of Relation of Host and Guest—Coming and Being Received as Traveller.—In general, if a person puts up at an inn as a traveller, and is received as such, the relation of inn keeper is immediately established with all its rights and liabilities.²

Putting Up Horse.—Some of the cases seem to consider, as already noted, that the relation of host and guest is created by putting up a horse at an inn.³

Horse Found Dead in Stall.—Where an inn keeper had taken a party's horse to keep a few days before the occurrence which occasioned the suit, and one evening such party rode out the horse, and, on returning to the stable, tied the halter in the stall where the horse had been previously kept, but the next day the horse was found dead in the same stall, with his head fast in the trough, it was held that there could be no recovery against the inn keeper in the absence of a showing of a want of ordinary care on the part of the inn keeper, or that the party who had the horse was a guest at the inn. Thickstun v. Howard, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 535, 538. In this case it was laid down by SMITH, J., that "as inns are established for the personal accommodation of travellers, or those in want of temporary shelter or house room, the privileges with which the law invests such persons must be regarded as incident to their personal presence. The custody of the goods which they carry with them is a secondary matter, and is 'part and parcel of the contract to feed, lodge and accommodate the guest for a suitable reward.' 2 Kent. Com. 592." "The law imposes this part of the contract upon the inn keeper," the opinion continues, "from considerations of public policy, but it is only a part of the contract, and for that reason, if no other existed, we should be obliged to conclude that the mere custody of property belonging either to a resident of the same town or vicinity in which the inn is situated, or to one who may not be such resident, is not sufficient of itself to create by implication of law the entire contract which is held to subsist between an inn keeper and guest."

1. See Read v. Amidon, 41 Vt. 15, 18; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 560; citing McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, and cases there referred to.

Stallion Standing at Inn.—When, however, the party did not come for entertainment as ordinary wayfarer, but under a special arrangement previously made, whereby his stallion was to stand at the inn certain days each week, for the purpose of serving mares, it has been held that the inn keeper was not subject to his common law liability for the preservation of the animal. Mowers v. Fethers, 61 N. Y. 34; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 244.

2. Ross v. Mellin, 36 Minn. 421, 422.
Obtaining Refreshments and Staying a Day, etc.—The relation of inn keeper and guest has been held created, within the principle of all the authorities, where a minor went with his father to an inn, and put their horse and wagon in charge of the inn keeper's servant, and they ordered and obtained dinner, and remained until evening, when they left, after paying their bill. Read v. Amidon, 41 Vt. 15; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 560, 561.

3. See McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 576; and Taking Room.—By the custom of the cities, however, it appears to be “considered that the taking a room is the decisive act to create the relation.”¹

Slipping Into Dining Room.—But it has been laid down that a person cannot make himself a guest by slipping into the dining room of a hotel and ordering a dinner of a waiter who has no discretion whatever, and who fulfils the order under the impression that the party is there by the inn keeper's permission.²

16. Continuance of Relation—During Traveller's Sojourn.—The relation of inn keeper and guest, with all its rights and liabilities, continues so long as the person received as a guest sojourns at the inn as a traveller.³

Where Entertainment Only Partial.—It subsists though a party who has put up his horse and taken a room at an inn merely takes some of his meals and lodges there part of the time.⁴

to like effect Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, 474; Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258. But see different view sustained in Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 666; Ingallsbee v. Wood, 33 N. Y. 577, 579; Healey v. Gray, 68 Me. 489; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 80.

1. McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 578.

2. See concurring opinion of VAN HOSSEN, J., in Gastenhof v. Clair, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 265, 267.

3. See Ross v. Mellin, 36 Minn. 421, 422, where VANDERBURGH, J., says: “It is often a question of no little intricacy to determine who are guests, especially where the hotel is also a boarding house. If a person puts up at an inn as a traveller, and he is received as such, the relation of inn keeper and guest is immediately established with all its rights and liabilities; and once established, neither duration of time nor a special agreement in respect to price necessarily changes such relation, which continues so long as the person so received sojourns as a traveller, which is also to be presumed until the contrary appears. Norcross v. Norcross, 53 Me. 163; Lusk v. Belote, 22 Minn. 468; Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 417; 1 Smith Lead. Cas. (8th ed.) 412; Story Bailm., § 477; Jalie v. Cardinal, 35 Wis. 118, 128; 2 Pars. Cont. 150, 152. And see Hall v. Pike, 100 Mass. 495.”

So it is laid down that where parties come to an inn and are entertained there as travellers, the contract they commenced with must be presumed to continue until a new contract is shown to have been entered into. ERLE, C. J., in Allen v. Smith, 12 C. B., N. S. 638, 644.

4. Thus in a case which seemed to present, in the first instance, the relation of guest in the strictest sense, on the part of one who sued an inn keeper for the loss of four thousand dollars in gold deposited with the inn keeper and stolen from the premises, it was thought not to be necessary to continue that relation, that the plaintiff should have continued his dwelling for the time being within the inn; and on this point it was remarked: “The relation of guest was clearly created by putting the horse at the inn, and it was undeniably extended to all the plaintiff's goods left at the inn by his taking a room, and taking some of his meals at the inn, and lodging there a portion of the time.” McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 578. “This matter seems to be perfectly settled,” it was further said in the same case, “by the custom of the cities. It is there considered that taking a room is the decisive act to create the relation. That being done, the guest is charged as such for his meals and lodging, whether he takes them at the inn or with his friends, as anyone may know who has had experience in such matters. And this,” continues the opinion, “seems to us well enough. One in so extensive a city as New York might find it convenient to have a room for his parcels and to take his dinner at a down town hotel, while he might choose to have his lodging and most of his personal apparel and baggage at an uptown house. And it would certainly be unreasonable, if one chose to be at this expense, that he shall not have the same security for his goods left at the one hotel as at the other. Or if one took lodgings at a hotel, and should subsequently find it more comfortable to lodge with a friend, and for any reason should not choose at once to give up his room and break up his connection with the hotel, it would certainly sound very strange that he should not have the same security for his goods as if he made the hotel his constant abiding-place for the time. He would certainly be bound ordinarily to pay till he gave up his room, and in all the books pay, or the right to charge, is made the criterion of the inn keeper's liability. But after one has given up his room, and closed his connection with the hotel, then indeed it is generally understood, and no doubt correctly, that for any baggage left at the inn the landlord is only liable as ordinary bailee."

Nor is it definitely settled how long a person may stay away entirely from an inn without ceasing to be a guest.¹

1. In Whitemore v. Haroldson, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 312, 314, it is said that "one who is in fact a guest may leave the inn for a time, and still leave his property under the safeguard of the landlord's liability, but that how long 'he may stay away or leave his property without ceasing to be a guest seems not to have been determined,' though 'it is said [that] he cannot by leaving valuable property over an indefinite period and staying away as long as he pleases, subject the landlord to the peculiar liability of an inn keeper.'" See to like effect 2 Pars. Contr. 153, 154.

Viewing Town on Training Day.—In McDonald v. Edgerton, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 560, 563, it was thought that a party who treated at the bar of an inn on general training day was still to be considered a guest if he was only out to see the town or view the training, intending to return before he left for home and get his overcoat. The court, through MASON, J., said: "It has been expressly adjudged that if the guest goes out to view the town for a while, intending to return, the inn keeper is liable for his goods lost in his absence. (2 Croke's R. 189.) And so if he goes out and says he will return at night (1 Comyn's Dig. 412, 413), JUSTICE BRON-SON, in the case of Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 666, affirmed this doctrine in the following language: 'Now when a man, after he has actually become a guest and delivered his property to the host, goes away for a brief period, leaving his goods behind him, the law is chargeable with no absurdity in considering him as still continuing a guest, so far as relates to the rights and liabilities of the parties.'"

Occasional Absences of Guest at Races.

—So where a party went to an inn with two race horses and a groom, in the character of guest, and they remain at the inn for several months, taking the horses out every day for exercise and training, and being occasionally absent for several days together at races in different parts of the country, but always with the intention of returning to the inn, it was held that in the absence of evidence of any alteration in the relation of the parties, that of inn keeper and guest must be presumed to have continued; and that the occasional absences did not destroy the inn keeper's lien upon the horses for his bill. Allen v. Smith, 12 Com. B., N. S. 638, 644.

Guest Leaving Horse During Absence.

—The doctrine that if the owner of a horse once becomes a guest, he does not cease to be a guest by a temporary absence from the inn, seems also fairly derivable from the opinions holding the inn keeper liable given in Day v. Batten, 2 Hurl. & C. 14, 18, 19, where a party came to an inn, where he became a guest and where his horse and gig were put up, but subsequently left, saying that he would not be back till the following Monday, and did not return for about a fortnight, during which time the inn keeper's hostler drove the horse out for the asserted purpose of giving it exercise, when it took fright at a locomotive and was injured.

A rigid view is sometimes maintained. Thus in Golley v. Clerk, Cro. Jac. 189, it is said by WILLIAMS, J.: "Where he leaves goods to keep, whereof the defendant is not to have any benefit, and goes from thence for two or three days, although he saith he will return, yet he is at liberty, and therefore is not a guest during that time." Lynar v. Mossop, 36 Up. Can., Q. B. 230, 235.

Liability for Property of Guest Temporarily Absent.—A distinction is sometimes maintained, however, in the case of a guest who stays away for a time from the inn, between the liability of the inn keeper for the care of a horse, from which he derives profit, and for which he is therefore chargeable, and his liability for the care of money and other dead property, for which he is deemed not liable, because he was deriving no direct or indirect profit therefrom.¹

17. Termination of Relation—Settling Bill, Leaving Inn and Promising Return.—The relation of inn keeper and guest no longer exists when the guest settles his bill and departs from the inn, leaving his baggage behind him and requesting the inn keeper to keep it until his return, which he says will be in a few days.²

1. See Towson v. Havre de Grace, Bank 6, Har. & J. (Del.) 47; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 254, 256, where the court, through BUCHANAN, J., said: "Inn keepers are answerable, by reason of the profit arising either from the keeping of the horses etc. of their guests, or from the entertaining of the guests themselves, in the case of money or other property, from the keeping of which alone no profit can arise. So that if a guest goes to an inn, and leaves his horse there with the host and goes away himself for a time, and in his absence the horse is stolen, the host is chargeable on account of the profit arising from the keeping of the horse; but if he goes away for several days, leaving money or other dead property there, which is stolen or lost during his absence, the host is not answerable for the loss, as at that time he was deriving no profit or gain, either from the keeping of the money or goods, or from the entertaining of the guest himself."

2. O'Brien v. Vaill, 22 Fla. 627.

Derivation of Profit and Expectation of Return.—In the case just cited McWHORTER, C. J., said: "We think the current of authority and the weight of reason is opposed to the conclusion reached by the supreme court of Georgia in Adams v. Clem, 41 Ga. 65; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 524, and the supreme court of New York in McDonald v. Egerton, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 560, supra. The law imposes on an inn keeper an extraordinary liability for the protection of the baggage of his guest. He can avoid it only on the grounds of the loss being occasioned by the act of God, the public enemy, the misconduct of the guest, or [of] the friend he brings with him. We can think of no other reason for the imposition of this liability upon the inn keeper than the profit he receives from entertaining his guest. When the traveller ceases to be his guest, and the inn keeper ceases to derive a profit from his entertainment, the relation of inn keeper and guest has ceased as such, and as a consequence their relative liabilities. . . . The expectation to become a guest, at another time did not continue the relation of inn keeper and guest." The same conclusion was reached where a party spent the night at a hotel in company with two fellow travellers, and the next morning paid his bill and had his name checked off the register, in order to relieve himself of liability as a guest during a day's absence at a neighboring town, but stated to the clerks that he would return at night. On returning and reregistering he discovered that during his absence a valise left by him in his room, with other light baggage in charge of a friend, was lost; and on being refused the payment which he demanded, for the valise and contents, he brought action for the value thereof against the inn keeper, but was held not entitled to recover. Miller v. Peeples, 60 Miss. 819, 822; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 423. CAMPBELL, C. J., who delivered the opinion of the court, said: "The relation of inn keeper and guest was intentionally ended by the act of the guest, who paid his bill and had his name stricken from the register of guests for the purpose of freeing himself from liability as a guest, and he could not thereafter, and while he was not a guest, claim the rights of one as to the baggage he left behind him. The expectation thereafter to become a guest did not continue the relation terminated at his instance and for his advantage by settling his account for entertainment. An inn keeper is chargeable for such 'because of the profit derivable from entertaining.' The right to charge is the criterion of the inn keeper's liability. When the liability of the guest to be charged as such ceases, his claim on the inn keeper as such expires, subject only to the right to hold him responsible for the baggage of the guest for such time as may be reasonable to effect a removal, to be determined by circumstances. Upon the facts of this case the respective rights which spring from the relation of inn keeper and guest did not exist, for one cannot escape the just burdens of a particular relation, and at the same time claim the advantages incident to it."

Guest's Property Still on Inn Premises.—But such relation may still subsist while property of the guest is not yet removed from the inn premises.¹

Right of Compensation for Property Left Behind.—The case of McDonald v. Egerton, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 560, is said in O'Brien v. Vaill, 22 Fla. 627, to be partly based upon the case of Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, but to have misconstrued the opinion in that case, wherein JUDGE BRONSON "drew a well founded distinction, in respect of the inn keeper's liability for property left by the guest, as to whether the inn keeper was to receive compensation for keeping the property during the absence of the guest," who "had left a horse, which required feed and attention, for which the inn keeper had a right to charge a reasonable compensation." But in McDonald v. Egerton, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 560, according, the plaintiff left behind his coat, and there was no compensation agreed on or expected for keeping it. "Leaving property for which a compensation for keeping was to be paid," however, according to the commenting case, "continued the relation of inn keeper and guest so far as that property was concerned."

Intention to Return Not Told to Inn Keeper.—Where a party arrived in Toronto from Ireland, and drove from the railway station to a hotel, bringing with him a portmanteau, carpet bag, etc., and asked for a room, saying he wanted only to change his dress before going to a friend, had his things taken to the room, and after occupying it for about an hour, went to his friend, with whom he remained, but next morning, when he returned to get his things, the portmanteau could not be found, it was held that such party, who said to a friend, but not to the inn keeper, that he intended to return that night, was not there as a guest after he had dressed and left the inn, and that the inn keeper was not liable for the subsequent loss of the portmanteau. Lynar v. Mossop, 36 Up. Can., Q. B. 230, 235.

Subsequent Liability of Inn Keeper.—The liability of an inn keeper after the relation of host and guest ceases, is fully discussed in the light of modern views in the recent case of Murray v. Marshall, 9 Colo. 482; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 152.

1. Thus where a party stopped at a tavern with two horses, which he had put in the barn and fed, and took dinner himself, and having paid his bill, requested the inn keeper to get his horses, but the latter told him to go on and be hitching up, promising to be out in a few minutes, whereupon the guest went to the barn and put the headstalls on the horses, but while the horses were being led out by the driver, one of them, which followed on, was injured by a kick from a stallion, it was insisted that before the injury the servant of the guest had taken the horses into his own possession and charge, and that the relation of landlord and guest had terminated, but it was held that the liability of the inn keeper was not at an end when the injury occurred, the horses being still on his premises and in his barn. Seymour v. Cook, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 451, 453; s. c., 35 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 180, 183.

Leaving Horse and Bag of Gold.—Where, however, a departing guest leaves a horse which had been put in the stable of the inn and kept there during the stay of the guest, this may not continue the relation of inn keeper and guest, so as to render the inn keeper liable as such for a bag of gold left with him by the guest while stopping at his house. McDaniels v. Robinson, 28 Vt. 387; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 720, 722. This was held, in a suit by the former guest against the inn keeper. BENNETT, J., said for the court that "we are to understand from the case that when the plaintiff handed the gold to the defendant he had made up his mind to leave the defendant's inn not to return again

18. Duties in General—Scope at Common Law.—At common law the inn keeper was compelled to furnish lodgings and entertainment for travellers and passengers, and was bound to protect the property they brought with them, and was liable if it was lost or injured.¹

Reasonable Accommodation Alone Requisite.—The law only obliges an inn keeper, however, to furnish proper and convenient accommodations for his guests, and in doing this he may arrange his business to suit his own advantage, while he complies with the reasonable requirements of his guests.²

Similarity to Those of Common Carrier, etc.—The duties, rights and responsibilities of an inn keeper are in most respects kindred to those of a common carrier, but in order to enforce the strict common law liability of an inn keeper, the technical relation of guest and inn keeper must be established.³

Care of Persons of Guests.—The duty of a hotel keeper is not to insure the persons of his guests against injury, but merely to take reasonable care of their persons, so that they should not be injured by anything happening to them through his negligence while they are his guests.⁴

Procurement of Licence.—The failure of an inn keeper to perform the obligation, frequently imposed upon him by statute, of procuring a licence from municipal officers, does not relieve him of his other obligations to travellers and strangers.⁵

19. Extent of Duty to Receive Guests—In General.—An inn keeper is bound by our law, as a servant of the public and exercising a public vocation, to lodge and entertain, to the extent of his accommodations, all suitable persons who may apply; and he cannot, if he has room enough in his house, unreasonably refuse on any pretence to receive as guest any person who tenders him to it as a guest, and that he did immediately thereafter leave, with the intention not again to return; and in no proper sense could the plaintiff be said to be the personal guest of the defendant at the time of the loss; and it would be going too far to hold that the leaving of the horse at the inn, under the circumstances of the case, made the plaintiff constructively a guest in relation to the bag of gold."

1. Hancock v. Rand, 94 N. Y. 1; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 112, 117. See Mowers v. Fethers, 61 N. Y. 34; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 244, 246; the Civil Rights Bill, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 541, 542.

2. The Civil Rights Bill, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 541, 543, concerning obligation of an inn keeper, under the statute of Maine, to "be at all times furnished with suitable provisions." See Atwater v. Sawyer, Me. 539, 542, 543.

3. Mowers v. Fethers, 61 N. Y. 34;

s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 244, 246, where it is also said: "The obligation to respond for injury to property depends upon his [that is, the inn keeper's] duty to receive and entertain as an inn keeper, and they must stand or fall together. Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 665; Ingalsbee v. Wood, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 455; s. c., 33 N. Y. 577; Hulett v. Swift, 33 N. Y. 577.

4. Sandys v. Florence, 47 L. J., C. P. 598, concerning liability of inn keepers for personal injuries to guests. See Rommel v. Schumbacher, 11 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 779; s. c., 27 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 156, with full note, 158.

5. Atwater v. Sawyer, 76 Me. 539, 543, 545. See Norcross v. Norcross, 53 Me. 163, 168; Dickerson v. Rogers, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 179; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 642, 645.

Compare Korn v. Schedler, 11 Daly (N. Y.) 234.

reasonable recompense therefor, without rendering himself liable to the party in damages, and perhaps criminally indictable besides.¹

Insufficient Excuses for Refusing Admission.—Indeed, it is no excuse for the inn keeper that the party applying for admission to the inn was travelling on Sunday, or came to the inn at a late hour of the night, or refused to tell his name and abode,² or that the applicant for entertainment was an infant;³ or that other guests of the same class, as militiamen, had been guilty of misconduct.⁴

1. See Schouler on Bailments (2d ed.), § 318; Bacon's Abr., Inns and Inn Keepers (c); Watson v. Cross, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 147, 148.

In Rex v. Ivens, 7 Car. & P. 213, 219, COLERIDGE, J., in summing up, said that "an indictment lies against an inn keeper, he having at the time room in his house; and either the price of the guest's entertainment being tendered to him, or such circumstances occurring as will dispense with that tender." In regard to the grounds of the doctrine, it was declared that the law "is founded in good sense. The inn keeper is not to select his guests. He has no right to say to one, you shall come into my inn; and to another, you shall not, as every one coming and conducting himself in a proper manner has a right to be received; and for this purpose inn keepers are a sort of public servants, they having in return a kind of privilege of entertaining travellers, and supplying them with what they want."

In Hawthorn v. Hammond, 1 Car. & K. 404, 407, PARKE, B., in summing up, said: "There is no doubt that the law is, that a person who keeps a public inn is bound to admit all persons who apply peaceably to be admitted as guests."

Holding Out House as Public Place, etc.—In Markham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523, 528; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 209, PARKER, J., said: "An inn keeper holds out his house as a public place to which travellers may resort, and of course surrenders some of the rights which he would otherwise have over it. Holding out as a place of accommodation for travellers, he cannot prohibit persons who come under that character in a proper manner, and at suitable times, from entering so long as he has the means of accommodation for them."

Similarity to Common Carrier.—"By the common law, an imperative duty of an inn keeper was, to receive and entertain, for a reasonable compensation, all persons applying, not of disorderly conduct, and having the means of payment. There was as little discretion left him in the choice of his guests as there was to the common carrier in the selection of the persons for whom he would perform his duties. Each is engaged in public employment, bound, in the absence of reasonable grounds for refusal, to serve all having a necessity for their services." Beale v. Posey, 72 Ala. 323, 330.

2. Rex v. Ivens, 7 Car. & P. 213, 219, 220.

3. Watson v. Cross, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 147, where CHIEF JUSTICE SAMPSON, delivering the opinion of the court, said "that the inn keeper was legally bound to receive and entertain all guests apparently responsible and of good conduct, who might come to his house; and if he refused to do so, he was liable alike to an indictment and an action by the party aggrieved; and the mere fact of infancy would not justify him in any such refusal." "Where a party voluntarily contracts with an infant," the opinion proceeds, "then the infant may avail himself of his legal disability and avoid the contract, if not for necessities; but to apply the principle to contracts which are compulsory on the side of the other contracting party would be to make the law an instrument of oppression. It would be a legal absurdity to compel a man to make a contract, and at the same time permit the other party, who is the instrument of such compulsion, to avoid the contract."

4. Atwater v. Sawyer, 76 Me. 539; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 634, 635.

Civil Rights Bill.—In the Civil Rights Bill, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 541, 544, DICK, J., after reviewing the principles and regulations governing inns, said: "It is thus apparent that all the rights to the full and equal enjoyment of the advantages, accommodations, facilities and privileges of inns, public conveyances, Sufficient Grounds for Exclusion.—But it is reasonable excuse for an inn keeper to allege that the person refused admission came to the inn drunk or behaved in an indecent or disorderly manner, or was an utterly disreputable or irresponsible person, or came to use the house for prostitution.¹

etc., are derived from the common law and State statutes, and fully existed before the passage of the Civil Rights bill. By the common law and statutes of this State [North Carolina], no discrimination is made against colored men as a class, or against nonresident citizens."

Stage Drivers of Opposition Line.—In Markham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 209, 211, in holding that an inn keeper has no right to exclude stage drivers soliciting passengers for an opposition line of coaches, while admitting those of other lines, PARKER, J., said: "There seems to be no good reason why the landlord should have the power to discriminate in such cases, and to say that one shall be admitted and another excluded, so long as each has the same connection with his guests, the same lawful purpose, comes in a like suitable condition, and with as proper a demeanor; any more than he has the right to admit one traveller and exclude another, merely because it is his pleasure. If one comes to injure his house, or if his business operates directly as an injury, that may alter the case; but that has not been alleged here. And perhaps there may be cases in which he may have a right to exclude all but travellers and those who have been sent for by them. It is not necessary to settle that at this time."

1. Schoul. Bailments (2nd. ed.), § 318.

Drunk or Disorderly Persons.—"If a person came to an inn drunk, or behaved in an indecent or improper manner," says COLERIDGE, J., in Rex v. Ivens, 7 Car. & P. 213, 219, "I am of opinion that the inn keeper is not bound to receive him." So in Markham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523, 529; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 209, 210, it is said of an inn keeper that he "has a right to prohibit common drunkards and idle persons from entering and to require them . . . to depart if they have already entered." "An inn keeper may refuse to receive a disorderly guest, or require him to leave his house." The Civil Rights bill, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 541, 543. See 2 Pars. Contr. (7th. ed.) *150. In Commonwealth v. Power, 7 Met. (Mass.) 596, 601, it is said that an owner of a steamboat or railroad "is in a condition somewhat similar to that of an inn keeper, whose premises are open to all guests. Yet he is not only empowered, but he is bound so to regulate his house, as well with regard to the peace and comfort of his guests who there seek repose, as to the peace and quiet of the vicinity, as to repress and prohibit all disorderly conduct therein; and of course he has a right, and is bound, to exclude from his premises all disorderly persons, and all persons not conforming to regulations necessary and proper, to secure such quiet and good order." See, to like effect, McKee v. Owen, 15 Mich. 115, 131.

Thieves.—The inn keeper "is indictable if he usually harbor thieves (1 Hawk., ch. 78, § 1; Bac. Abr., Inns, etc.), and he is answerable for the safe keeping of the goods of his guest (Story on Bailm. 307), and is not bound to admit one whose notorious character as a thief furnishes good reason to suppose that he will purloin the goods of his guest, or his own." Markham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 209, 210.

Visitor with Prostitute.—In the case of an action brought against an inn keeper for the loss of money, by one who lived very near the hotel and came there at midnight with a disreputable woman whom he had met on the street, and whose name he did not know, registering her as his wife, and on being assigned a room, delivering his money for safe keeping to a clerk, who absconded therewith, COLE, C. J., said: "Now, if the defendant had been aware of the purpose of the plaintiff in applying for a room [inferred in the opinion to be that of having sexual intercourse with the woman], could he not have refused to receive him into his house? Nay, more; if the plaintiff had been received by the clerk and a room had been assigned him, could not the defendant, on learning the purpose for which the room had been taken, have incontinently turned the plaintiff and the woman into the street, or have called the police and had them arrested? It seems to us there can be no doubt of the right of the defendant thus to have treated the plain-

20. Unreasonable Demands and Obnoxious Visitors—Compliance with Caprices of Guests.—The landlord of an inn is legally bound to do no more than provide reasonable and proper accommodation for his guest, and he is not under obligation to comply with the capricious desire of his guest to occupy a particular apartment, as a bed room, in which to sit up all night.¹

Removal of Obnoxious Person.—If a person has entered a public inn and his presence, for reasons best known to the proprietor, is disagreeable to him or to his guests, he has the undoubted right to request the individual to depart; and if the latter retiff. But if the plaintiff was a guest and entitled to all the rights and privileges of a person having that status at the hotel, he could not have been turned into the street, though his profligate conduct was outraging all decency and ruining the reputation of the hotel." Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242, 245.

Brawlers.—An inn keeper "is liable if his house is disorderly (1 Hawk. 451) and cannot be held to wait until an affray is begun before he interpose, but may exclude common brawlers, and any one who comes with intent to commit an assault, or make an affray. So he may prohibit the entry of one whose misconduct in other particulars, or whose filthy condition, would subject his guests to annoyance." Markham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 209, 210. But compare Atwater v. Sawyer, 76 Me. 539; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 634.

1. Fell v. Knight, 8 Mees. & W. 269, 276.

"An inn keeper may refuse to receive a disorderly guest, or require him to leave his house. He is not bound to examine into the reasonableness of the guest's requirements. And while travellers are entitled to proper accommodations, they have no right to select a particular apartment, or to use it for purposes other than those for which it was designed." The Civil Rights bill, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 541, 543. See 2 Pars. Contr. (7th ed.) *150. In the above cited case of Fell v. Knight, 8 Mees & W. 269, 276, LORD ABINGER, C. B., said: "I do not think a landlord is bound to provide for his guest the precise room the latter may select. When the guest expresses a desire of sitting up all night, is the landlord bound to supply him with candle light in a bedroom, provided he offers him another proper room for the purpose?"

. . . I think he is not bound to do so. All that the law requires of him is to find for his guest reasonable and proper accommodation: if he does that he does all that is requisite."

Bringing Dogs Into Inn.—On an indictment charging the defendant, as an inn keeper, with refusing refreshments to the prosecutor, who entered with a large St. Bernard mastiff, one of two dogs which had previously been charged by the inn keeper with being obnoxious visitants, it was held that the defendant could not be convicted because the refreshment bar was not an inn, the prosecutor was not a traveller, and the defendant had reasonable ground for his refusal. The Queen v. Rymer, L. R., 2 Q. B. 136; s. c., 19 Eng. Rep. 261 (p. 140). On the last point KELLY, C. B., said: "I do not lay down positively that under no circumstances could a guest have a right to bring a dog into an inn. There may possibly be circumstances in which, if a person came to an inn with a dog, and the inn keeper refused to put up the dog in any stable or outhouse, and there were nothing that could make the dog a cause of alarm or annoyance to others, the guest might be justified in bringing the dog into the inn. But it is not necessary to decide any such question. In this case, looking at the previous facts, the number of dogs previously brought, and their kind and behavior, the nature of the right claimed by the prosecutor in his letter [insisting upon being allowed to follow his inclinations as heretofore, as against the remonstrance of the defendant], and the size and class of the dog, I think the defendant would have had ample ground for his refusal even if the place had been an inn and the prosecutor a traveller." MANISTY, J., said (p. 141): "I agree upon all points. I only wish to add that, in my opinion, a guest cannot, under any circumstances, insist on bringing a dog into any room or place in an inn where other guests are."

fuses, the inn keeper can lay his hands gently upon the other party and lead him out, or if resistance is made, use all the force necessary to put him out.¹

21. Callers Upon Guests—Duty to Receive Business Callers.—An inn keeper may be bound to permit the entry not only of persons who have been sent for by guests, but also of those who have business with guests, provided that such parties come at a suitable time, in a proper manner, demean themselves properly, and remain no longer than is necessary.²

Qualified View.—But in a case where it was merely the caller's friend who had business with the guest, it was considered that the admission of a caller upon business was rather a matter of courtesy than of sheer right, and that if the landlord should re-

1. Commonwealth v. Mitchel, 2 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 431, 434, where PARSONS, J., delivering the opinion of the court, said: "This rule I deem sound and necessary for the protection of the proprietor and his guests. Any other rule would expose all well regulated public houses to the constant intrusions of the idle, dissolute and abandoned in the community, and every guest to that annoyance which would make a hotel anything else than the quiet home of the stranger, which it ought to be. And there is the soundest reason why such should be the law, for if a theft be committed on a guest that lodgeth in an inn, by the servants of the inn or by any other person (not the guest's servant or companion), the inn keeper is answerable in an action on the case. 8 Mod. Rep. 32, 33; 1 Salk. 388. Now if he is liable for the loss of property taken from his guests, surely he should be permitted to protect himself from the intrusion of pickpockets and robbers. If it should be held, as was contended on the argument, that because a man keeps a public house all who choose have a right to enter and occupy the hall or bar-room, or even the public parlor in a hotel, and that the proprietor has not a right to request them to leave, and if they do not, and he gently lays his hands on one to lead him out, he is guilty of assault and battery, but few persons would be found as lodgers in public houses. For where is the distinction to be drawn? If one may enter the inn and tarry there, all may. The pickpocket, the burglar, gambler and horse thief can come and take his seat by the side of the most virtuous man in the community in the gentleman's common parlor at the hotel, and the proprietor cannot eject him (no matter how annoying it may be to the guest) without being indicted for an assault and battery. Nor would the line of distinction be drawn here—the filthy and unclean would claim the same right. It is only necessary to state such a proposition to show its absurdity."

Party Creating Disturbance.—It appears to be considered that in the case of a party creating a disturbance in a public house, the landlord may lay hands on the unruly party and give him into the custody of a watchman witnessing his actions, if he forcibly resists being turned out, or even where he makes no resistance, if the disturbance is such as to alarm the neighborhood and the passers by. Howell v. Jackson, 6 Car. & P. 723, 725, where the party suing for false imprisonment was in company with several other young men who were "skylarking, bonneting and kicking up a rumpus." See also Markham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 209, 212, where the driver of a stage coach was sued by an inn keeper in trespass, and it appeared that the defendant, while soliciting passengers for an opposition line of coaches, entered the plaintiff's inn in violation of a previous prohibition, got into an altercation and affray with another driver, and being ordered by the plaintiff to leave the house, made forcible resistance, or, according to other testimony, merely refused to leave until plaintiff laid down a club he had taken up.

2. Markham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 209, 212, where PARKER, J., said of the inn keeper: "As he is bound to admit travellers, under certain limitations, he may likewise be held, under proper limitations, to admit fuse to suffer the visitor to come in, or if had entered, should request him to depart, and on his refusal, gently lead him out, he would not be guilty of an assault and battery for so doing.¹

22. Inn Keeper's Rights in General—Compensation and Lien Therefor.—The most important of an inn keeper's rights is that of compensation for the entertainment he provides,² and his further right of lien for such compensation upon the goods of his guest.³

Hotel Bill of Another.—A drummer who is a transient patron at a hotel does not bind his employer for board furnished him from time to time, through an extended period, when it is the custom for transient patrons to pay cash, and notice is not given the employer of the failure of the drummer to do so.⁴

Tender of Price.—"An inn keeper may demand the expenses before he receives the guest." An inn keeper has no right, however, to refuse a suitable guest for whom he has room, when either the price of the guest's entertainment is tendered to him, or such circumstances occur as will dispense with that tender.⁵

those who have business with them as such. This may be considered as derived from the right of the traveller. It is conceded that he may be bound to permit the entry of persons who have been sent for by the guest. But we think the rule is not to be limited, in all cases, to this. There may be such connection between travellers and those engaged in their conveyance, that the latter, although not specially sent for, may have a right to enter a common inn, or such that the landlord, if he give a general licence to some of those whose business is connected with his guests, in their characters as travellers, cannot lawfully exclude others pursuing the same business, and who enter for a similar object."

1. Commonwealth v. Mitchel, 2 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 431, 436. It is admitted, however, that he would doubtless be liable, both to the guest and the visitor, in an action for any injury either might sustain in consequence of such proceedings of the proprietor.

2. See, concerning this right, Mulliner v. Florence, L. R., 3 Q. B. D. 484, 488; s. c., 28 Eng. Rep. 390, 394; Proctor v. Nicholson, 7 Car. & P. 67, 68, 69; Rex v. Ivens, 7 Car. & P. 213, 219; Fell v. Knight, 8 Mees. & W. 269, 276.

3. On existence and nature of this right, see statements in Manning v. Hollenbeck, 27 Wis. 202, 204; Nichols v. Halliday, 27 Wis. 406, 407; Watson v. Cross, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 147, 149; Grin- nell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 664; Cook v. Kane, 13 Ore. 482; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 28, 29.

Also of Property.—The inn keeper has the right to use property left on his hands without any discoverable owner, moderately and prudently, to the extent of compensating him for his charges for keeping, but if he has used it sufficiently for this purpose, he is liable in conversion for refusing to deliver it to the owner on demand. Alvord v. Davenport, 43 Vt. 30, 34.

4. Covington v. Newhouse, 99 N. Car. 523. The term "hotel bill," when used in a contract which constitutes a guaranty of payment of such a bill, includes board and lodging, these being items which every common inn keeper is bound to furnish each guest, but excludes billiards, cigars and liquors: Patterson v. Gage, 16 Pac. Rep. (Colo.) 560; s. c., 37 Alb. L. J. 248.

5. Rex v. Ivens, 7 Car. & P. 213, 219, where COLERIDGE, J., in summing up, said: "With respect to the nontender of the money by the prosecutor [upon an indictment for refusing to receive him into the inn], it is now a custom so universal with inn keepers to trust that a person will pay before he leaves an inn, that it cannot be necessary for a guest to tender money before he goes into an inn; indeed, in the present case, no objection was made that Mr. Williams [the prosecutor] did not make a tender; and they did not even insinuate

Connected with Character of Guest.—An inn keeper appears also to have various rights connected with the character of the guest, such as the right to refuse to receive a disorderly guest, or to require him to leave his house.¹

23. Inn Keeper's Lien in General—When Exists.—Whenever, by virtue of the relation of inn keeper and guest, the law imposes the extraordinary responsibility which is placed upon inn keepers for the goods of the guest, it gives the inn keeper a corresponding security upon the goods put by the guest into his possession.²

Qualified Denial of Lien.—It has been laid down, however, in a case which involved the claim to keep a bill until the party tendered the proper change, and which was decided on a different ground, that an inn keeper has no right to detain the property of his guest as a pledge for what is due him, though he may detain his person, unless in the case of a horse, etc., which may be detained for his feeding, but not for the meat of his master.³

any suspicion that he could not pay for whatever entertainment might be furnished to him." But in Fell v. Knight, 8 Mees. & W. 269, 276, LORD ABINGER, said: "I am also inclined to think, notwithstanding the case which has been cited of Rex v. Jones [meaning Rex v. Ivens, 7 Car. & P. 213], that the declaration [in an action for refusing to receive a party at an inn, and turning him out therefrom] is bad for want of an allegation of a tender of the amount to which the inn keeper would be reasonably entitled for the entertainment furnished to his guest; it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to allege that he was ready to pay; he should state further that he was willing and offered to pay. There may be cases where a tender may be dispensed with, as, for instance, where a man shuts up his doors or windows, so that no tender can be made; but I rather think these facts ought to be stated in the indictment or declaration, and I have therefore some doubt as to the complete correctness of the judgment of my brother COLERIDGE, in the case cited; but it is not necessary to decide that point in the present case."

1. At least such is the implication from The Civil Rights bill, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 541, 543; 2 Pars. Contr. (7th ed.) *150; Markham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 209, 210. Compare Atwater v. Sawyer, 76 Me. 538; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 634.

2. Cook v. Kane, 13 Ore. 482; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 2831.

Lien Dependent on Liability.—In Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 664, 665, BRONSON, J., for the court, said: "On account of this extraordinary liability [of an inn keeper for the goods of his guest] the law gives the inn keeper a lien on the goods of his guest for the satisfaction of his reasonable charges. It was once held that he might detain the person of his guest (see Newton v. Trigg, 1 Show. 268), but that doctrine is now exploded (see Sunbolt v. Alford, 3 Mees. & W. 248, 253, 254), and the lien is confined to the goods. . . . The lien and the liability must stand or fall together. Inn keepers cannot claim the one with any just expectation of escaping the other." So it is said of an inn keeper that "his lien as an inn keeper would seem to involve a concession of his liability as an inn keeper. Since the law gives the lien on account of his extraordinary liability." Murray v. Marshall, 9 Colo. 482, 485; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 152.

General Doctrine.—"It is a well settled principle," says CHIEF JUSTICE SIMPSON, in delivering the opinion of the court in Watson v. Cross, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 147, 149, "that an inn keeper has a lien on the property of his guest for the price of his entertainment." See, to same effect, Manning v. Hollenbeck, 27 Wis. 202, 204.

3. Carlisle v. Quattlebaum, 2 Bail. L. (S. Car.) 452, 453. It is pointed out, however, that this case "does not rule that an inn keeper has no lien on the goods of his guest for the payment of his bill. The true principle on which Extends to Third Person's Goods.—This security consists of a lien not only upon the property of his guest, but also upon the property of third persons for whom the guest is bailee, unless the inn keeper is aware that the guest has no right to give the goods into the inn keeper's charge.¹

Extends to Exempt Property, etc.—The lien extends even to property of the guest which is exempt from execution, such as a coat for whose recovery replevin is brought against the inn keeper.²

Trial of Question of Lien.—The question of the inn keeper's

it rests is, that Quattlebaum was not an inn keeper, and therefore not entitled to the rights and remedies of one. He was one who occasionally, and only as he thought proper, afforded accommodation to travellers. Such being his situation, he was not subject to the liabilities or rights of an inn keeper without special contract." Dunlap v. Thorne, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 213, 217. Furthermore, so far as this case favors any right to detain the person of the guest, it is in conflict with Sunbolf v. Alford, 3 Mees. & W. 248, 253, 254, where this view is fully discussed and controverted.

1. See Cook v. Kane, 13 Oreg. 482; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 28, 29. LORD J. said of the inn keeper: "Compelled to afford entertainment to whomsoever may apply and behave with decency, the law, as an indemnity for the extraordinary liabilities which it imposes, has clothed the inn keeper with extraordinary privileges. It gives him as a security for unpaid charges a lien upon the property of his guest, and upon the goods put by the guest into his possession. Overton, Liens [149]. Nor is the lien confined to property only owned by the guest, but it will attach to the property of third persons for whom the guest is bailee, provided only he received the property on the faith of the inn keeping relation. Schoul. Bailm. 292; Calye's Case, 1 Smith's Lead. Cas. 247; Manning v. Hollenbeck, 27 Wis. 202. But the lien will not attach if the inn keeper knew that the property taken in his custody was not owned by his guest, nor had any right to deposit it as bailee or otherwise, except perhaps some proper charge incurred against the specific chattel." See, to like effect, Threfall v. Borwick, Law R., 10 Q. B. 210; s. c., 12 Eng. Rep. 210, 211; affirming same case, Law R., 7 Q. B. 711, or 2 Eng. Rep. 689. In regard to exception of charge against specific chattel, see Domestic Sewing Machine Co. v. Watters, 50 Ga. 573, 574. Concerning knowledge of guest's want of ownership, see Broadwood v. Granara, 10 Ex. 417.

2. Swan v. Bourne, 47 Iowa 501; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 492, 493, where ADAMS, J., said: "An inn keeper's lien exists by common law, and we see nothing in the statute exempting certain property from execution to indicate an intention to abrogate the common law in this respect. The statute exempts only from general execution. It was never designed to prevent persons from giving a lien upon whatever property they see fit. Where a lien is given, it may of course be enforced. Had the plaintiff given a chattel mortgage upon his coat to secure his hotel bill, no one would doubt the right of the defendant to foreclose it, notwithstanding the coat might have been a part of the plaintiff's ordinary wearing apparel. When the plaintiff became defendant's guest at his hotel, he gave the defendant a lien upon his coat as effectually as if he had given him a mortgage upon it. The law implied that from the act of becoming the defendant's guest and taking his coat with him. The rule is too well established to require support from authorities. Besides, it is obvious that without such a rule the business of hotel keeping could not be done."

Covers More Than Reasonable Quantity.—In a case where the guest was a lieutenant in the royal navy, and the son of a lady of fortune, who seems to have warned the inn keeper not to allow his guest more than a certain quantity of brandy and water, it was held that the lien of the hotel keeper covered all the goods ordered by the guest and supplied to him, irrespective of the question whether they were reasonable in quantity or not, as the landlord of an inn was not bound to investigate the nature of the articles which were ordered by a guest before lien upon property for charges incurred in respect to it, may be tried in defence to an action of conversion.¹

By Whom May be Exercised.—A person is not entitled to an inn keeper's lien or to the rights and remedies of an inn keeper generally, if he merely occasionally, and as he thinks proper, affords accommodation to travellers.²

Agisters and Livery Stable Keepers.—Neither the agisters of cattle nor the keepers of a livery stable have any lien, without a special agreement to that effect,³ he supplied them. Proctor v. Nicholson, 7 Car. & P. 67, 68.

1. Alvord v. Davenport, 43 Vt. 30, 35.

2. See Dunlap v. Thorne, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 213, explaining Carlisle v. Quattlebaum, 2 Bail. L. (S. Car.) 452, 453.

3. Fox v. McGregor, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 41, 42.

In Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 667 (1842), BRONSON, J., said for the court: "The right of lien has always been admitted where the party was bound by law to receive the goods; and in modern times the lien has been extended so far that it may now be laid down as a general rule that every bailee for hire who, by his labor and skill, has imparted an additional value to the goods, has a lien upon the property for his reasonable charges. This includes all such mechanics, tradesmen and laborers as receive property for the purpose of repairing or otherwise improving its condition. But the rule does not extend to a livery stable keeper, for the reason that he only keeps the horse without imparting any new value to the animal. And besides, he does not come within the policy of the law, which gives a lien for the benefit of trade. Upon the same reasons the agister or farmer who pastures the horses or cattle of another has no lien for their keeping, unless there be a special agreement to that effect. This doctrine was laid down in Chapman v. Allen, Cro. Car. 271. And in Yorke v. Grenaugh, 2 Ld. Raym. 868, LORD HOLT said a livery stable keeper had no lien. See the remarks of LORD LYNTHURST, C. B., upon this case, in Judson v. Etheridge, 1 Crompt. & M. 743. I am not aware that this rule has ever been departed from, though it has been suggested that it would be well enough to place the livery man on the same footing with other persons who bestow their labor and care upon the property entrusted to their keeping. Cowen's Tr., 299 (2nd ed.) But the question has recently undergone a good deal of discussion in England, and the result is that the old cases remain unshaken, and it must now be regarded as the settled doctrine that agisters and livery stable keepers have no lien unless there be a special contract to that effect. Wallace v. Woodgate, 1 Car. & P. 575; s. c., Ry. & M. 193; Bevan v. Waters, 3 Car. & P. 520; Judson v. Etheridge, 1 Crompt. & M. 743; Jackson v. Cummins, 5 Mees. & W. 342. And see Jacobs v. Latour, 5 Bing. 139; s. c., 2 Moore & P. 201; Sanderson v. Bell, 2 Mees. & W. 304; Scarfe v. Morgan, 4 Mees. & W. 270. It will be seen from the cases which have been mentioned, that a distinction in relation to the question of lien has been taken between the mere keeper and the trainer of a horse; and it is said that the latter has a lien, because he has done something for the improvement of the animal. And in Judson v. Etheridge [1 Crompt. & M. 743], it was suggested by Bolland, B., that the doctrine might perhaps be extended to the case of a breaker who takes a young horse to be broken, on the ground that he makes it a different animal from what it was before, and improves it by the application of labor and skill. On the same principle it has been held, that if a farmer or stable keeper receive a mare for the purpose of being covered by his stallion, he has a specific lien for the charge of covering. Whether these distinctions were well taken or not, they show that the courts have steadily adhered to the rule that one who merely provides food and takes the care of an animal, as an agister or livery stable keeper, has no lien except by contract." A further reason given why there is no lien in these cases is that the owner may have the possession of the animal and so destroy the lien beyond revival. So the law is treated as well settled or by force of statute.¹

Against Whom May be Exercised.—Inn keepers acquire no lien, by virtue of their employment as such, upon property, unless it was delivered to them by a guest;² and, while an inn keeper has a lien upon the goods of a guest, he has none upon those of a boarder.³

24. Lien on Third Person's Goods—At Common Law.—At common law the inn keeper's lien extended to property brought by the guest and not owned by him.⁴

English Doctrine.—So it is now the undoubted English doctrine, despite the raising of a question as to the character of the property and the obligation to receive it, that there is no distinction, in regard to the inn keeper's lien, between the goods of a guest and those of a third person brought to the inn by a guest, that neither the agister of cattle nor the livery stable keeper, can assert a lien on cattle or horses to pay for their keep, unless by virtue of an express contract, as against a customer who is not required to pay what may be due for their keep, on every occasion when he may take possession of the horses or cattle for the purpose of using or employing them. Hickman v. Thomas, 16 Ala. 666, 669.

No Lien by Local Custom.—A lien of a livery stable keeper upon a horse delivered to him to be fed and kept, being denied to him, in the absence of a special agreement, by the general law, cannot be created by any usage of a particular town or city such as is merely local and partial; but to acquire the form of law, such usage or custom must, according to the familiar principle, have been established and have become general, so that a presumption of knowledge by the parties can be said to arise. Saint v. Smith, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 51, 53.

Lien by Special Agreement.—But a stable keeper may by special agreement, acquire a lien on horses for their keep, and may have a right to repossess himself of them if the owner fraudulently takes them away in order to destroy the lien. Wallace v. Woodgate, 1 Car. & P. 575, 576. So the agreement may be so framed as not to divest the lien when the cow was taken away from the agister and creditor to be milked as by making provisions that if the cow was not returned, such agister might retake her whenever or wherever he found her. Richards v. Symons, 15 Law J. Q. B. 35, 36.

¹ See Young v. Kimball, 23 Pa. St.

193, 195; Colquitt v. Kirkman, 47 Ga. 555, 558. In the latter case it was held that under the construction given to the statutes of the State (Ga. Code of 1867, §§ 2096, 2097) the lien of the stable keeper is good against the true owner or prior incumbrancer of an article deposited by another, only for the expense of feeding or taking care of that particular article. See Domestic Sewing Machine Co. v. Watters, 50 Ga. 573, 575.

² Fox v. McGregor, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 41, 43. See, to same effect, Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485, 489; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, where the lien and the liability of an inn keeper are treated as correlative; also Hickman v. Thomas, 16 Ala. 666, 669; Binns v. Pigott, 9 Car. & P. 208, 209.

³ Pollock v. Landis, 36 Iowa 651, 652; Hursh v. Byers, 29 Mo. 469, 470; Ewart v. Stark, 8 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 423, 424, stating grounds of doctrine. See also Jones v. Morrill, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 623, 627. But compare Smith v. Keyes, 2 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 650, 651, 652.

⁴ Jones v. Merrill, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 623, 626. Thus it was laid down that if "A injuriously take away the horse of B and put him into an inn to be kept [and] B comes and demands him, he shall not have him until he hath satisfied the inn keeper for his meat; for when an inn keeper takes a horse into his keeping he is not bound to enquire who is the owner of the horse, which he is obliged to keep, let him belong to whom he will, and therefore no reason that the innkeeper should be obliged to deliver him until he is satisfied. Bac. Abr., Inns and Inn Keepers (D). To same at least in the absence of knowledge, on the part of the inn keeper, of the real ownership of the goods.¹

American Doctrine.—Like views prevail in this country;² and the law is substantially laid down, in a leading case, to be, that the lien of the inn keeper is not ordinarily confined to property owned by the guest, but will attach to the property of third persons for whom the guest is bailee, provided only the inn keeper received the property on the faith of the inn keeping relation.³

effect see statement of Robinson v. Walter, Poph. 127; s. c., 3 Bulst. 269, in Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 666.

1. See Turrill v. Crawley, 13 Q. B. 197, 202, 203; Threfall v. Borwick, Law R., 7 Q. B. 711, 714.

State of the Authorities.—In the former case, it was held that an inn keeper had a lien for standing room on a carriage brought to the inn by a guest, but belonging to another person. COLERIDGE, J., said (at p. 202): "I think it clear that with reference to the inn keepers' lien there is no distinction between the goods of a guest and those of a third person brought to an inn by a guest. Three judges to one were of this opinion in Robinson v. Walter, 3 Bulst. 269; s. c., 1 Roll. Rep. 449 n; Poph. 127; and their opinion may be taken as sufficient authority for so reasonable a doctrine." WIGHTMAN, J., further said (at p. 203): "Doubts have been suggested as to the inn keeper's lien on the goods of a third person; and the doubts of judges in former times have been referred to. The judges were divided equally, it appears, in the first case, Skipwith v. —, 1 Bulst. 170; 3 Bulst. 271; then in the next case, Robinson v. Walter, 3 Bulst. 269; s. c., 1 Roll. Rep. 449; Poph. 127; they were divided three to one in favor of the lien; and in subsequent cases these doubts disappear altogether. In Johnson v. Hill, 3 Stark. 172, it was stated by counsel to have been 'held' by all the judges that even in the case where a robber had brought a horse which he had stolen to an inn, the inn keeper had a lien for its keep against the owner; and ABBOTT, C. J., said he had no doubt as to the law as stated." So in the report of the case of Threfall v. Borwick, 26 L. T., N. S. 794, or 2 Eng. Rep. 689, in Law R., 7 Q. B. 711, 714; s. c., affirmed Law R., 10 Q. B. 210, or 12 Eng. Rep. 266; LUSH, J., says that if the inn keeper has a lien as against the guest upon all the goods which the guest brings with him and the inn keeper receives as his, "the cases have established beyond all doubt that he has the same right as against the real owner of the article, if it has been brought to the inn by the guest as owner." QUAIN, J., also said that the cases "show that if the thing be brought by the guest as owner, and the landlord takes it in thinking it is the guest's own, he has the same rights against the stranger, the real owner, as against the guest."

2. See Manning v. Hollenbeck, 27 Wis. 202, 205.

3. Cook v. Kane, 13 Oreg. 482; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 28.

Dissenting View.—But in the same case as re-reported in 57 Am. Rep. 28, 31, note, THAYER J., delivered a dissenting opinion in which he said that upon the main question in the case under consideration, where a lien was claimed by an inn keeper on a piano, which had been consigned to a guest to sell on commission, there was "some doubt in view of the authorities upon the subject," though "upon a common sense view there would not seem to be any;" and that "it would shock all sense of property right" that a party could pledge another's piano "for his own hotel bill, or in any way subject it to the payment thereof." He referred to the fact that numerous cases had been cited where "such a lien had attached to the property of a third person," and thereupon remarked: "I have no doubt that such lien will in many cases attach to the property taken by the guest to the inn at which he obtains accommodation, though he be not the owner of it. But in all such cases it seems to me the property must have derived some special benefit, or else the owner must have entrusted it to a party under circumstances from which he could reasonably have concluded that the party would become the guest of an inn and take the property with him there as his own; and I do not think the rule should extend further than this The property of one man should not be taken for the debt of another against the former's consent, unless he has done some act or neglected some duty creating the liability. A party cannot be deprived of his ownership to property to satisfy the claim of another unless he has in some way obligated himself to submit to it. He must have agreed to it in terms, or have done some act directly or remotely authorizing it."

25. Knowledge of Ownership of Goods—Known Ownership of Piano Loaned by Manufacturers, etc.—An inn keeper has been held not entitled to a lien where he knew that the piano sent to his guest, who was a professional pianist, did not belong to the guest, but was lent to him by a manufacturer of pianos, and the inn keeper did not receive it as a part of the guest's goods.¹

Under Statutory Regulations.—In Georgia, under a construction purporting to follow the language of the statute, it has been held that the lien of the landlord of an inn upon goods in possession of a guest, which belong to a third person, must be limited to charges for keeping, storing or feeding the specific property sought to be subjected to the lien, and does not extend to a claim for board of the guest. Domestic Sewing Machine Co. v. Watters, 50 Ga. 573, 574, 575, following like ruling as to lien of livery stable keepers in Colquitt v. Kirkham, 47 Ga. 555, 558. See Ga. Code of 1882 and 1873, § 2122, corresponding with § 2066 of the code of 1867. The keeper of a boarding house has a lien for board, under the New York statute, upon goods belonging to a boarder's mother but brought upon the premises by the boarder to furnish his room. Jones v. Morrill, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 623, 626, 627. Where the lien of inn keepers and of boarding house keepers is confined by the statute to the "baggage and other valuables of their guests and boarders," it will not cover goods of third persons taken to the inn by the guest. Wyckoff v. Southern Hotel Co., 24 Mo. App. 382, 387, where a lien was claimed on a typewriter which had been loaned to a guest at the hotel, but the court insisted upon a strict construction of the statute in this regard, though in the course of the opinion the scope and grounds of the inn keeper's lien at common law were thus stated. (p. 386) by THOMPSON, J.: "The authorities cited on behalf of the defendant (who was the inn keeper) go to show that by the common law an inn keeper had a lien upon the goods of his guest, brought to his inn for board and lodging furnished by him to the guest at the request of the latter, although the goods may not have been the property of the guest, but may have been the property of some third person, provided the inn keeper was not aware that the goods were not the property of the guest. Calye's Case, 8 Coke Rep. 32 a; Threfall v. Borwick, L. R., 7 Q. B. 177 [s. c., 26 L. T., N. S. 794, or 2 Eng. Rep. 689]; s. c., affirmed, L. R., 10 Q. B. 210 [or 12 Eng. Rep. 266]; Manning v. Hollenbeck, 27 Wis. 202; Cook v. Prentice (Supr. Ct. Oreg. 1886), 34 Alb. L. J. 93; since reported as Cook v. Kane, 13 Oreg. 482; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 28; Jones v. Morrill, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 623, 626, per Barnard, J.; Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485, 490, per Bronson, J.; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663; Turrell v. Crawley, 18 L. J. (Q. B.) 155. This rule has been thought by enlightened judges, even in recent times, to be a just rule. It is grounded upon the extraordinary liability which the law imposes upon an inn keeper in respect of goods brought by his guest to his inn, he being answerable for any loss or destruction of such goods, except such as arise from the act of God or the public enemy. Several of the decisions above quoted show that the courts have regarded it as immaterial that the inn keeper may not have been obliged to receive into his inn goods of the character of the article in controversy, since when he did consent to receive them the extraordinary liability with which the law charges an inn keeper attached to him in respect to them, for which reason, they argue, he ought to have a lien upon them. And the cases go upon the ground that the lien of the inn keeper is coextensive with his liability."

1. Broadwood v. Granara, 10 Ex. 417, 422, where the case was characterized as one relating to goods not brought to the inn by a traveller as his goods, either upon his coming to or

Want of Knowledge of Ownership of Consigned Piano, etc.—But a piano has been held not chargeable with an inn keeper's lien for board and lodging furnished his guest, where the inn keeper did not know the fact that it was the property of a third person, who had consigned it to the guest to sell on commission, but such inn keeper, at the request of the guest, paid the freight charges on the piano and took it into his custody, receiving it, in his character as an inn keeper, as the property of his guest.¹

Drummer's Goods Known to Belong to Employer.—So the doctrine that the inn keeper has no lien upon the goods of a guest which he knows to belong to a third person, has been applied to the goods of a drummer, for whose hotel bill the inn keeper brought suit against the employer.²

whilst staying at the inn, but goods furnished for his temporary use by a third person, and known by the inn keeper to belong to that person. PLATT, B., further said, at p. 423: "Here the plaintiffs sent a pianoforte to the room of the guest, and the inn keeper well knew that it was not the property of the guest, and that it was not competent for him to pledge it for a debt of his own. Then how can it be said that any act of the plaintiffs gave the defendant a right to detain the pianoforte for his guest's debt? The plaintiff might have taken it away the next minute. The case does not fall within the principles of law relating to the lien of inn keepers." It has been remarked concerning this case, that "although there are certain dicta not necessary to the decision . . . to the effect that the inn keeper was not bound to receive the piano, yet the real ground of the decision was based on the fact that the inn keeper knew that the piano sent to his guest was the property of a third person, and did not therefore receive it as part of his guest's goods, that the right to subject the piano to his lien was denied, but, e converso, if he had not known the piano was the property of a third person, and had received it as the property of his guest, would not his lien have attached?" Cook v. Kane, 13 Oreg. 482; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 28, 36.

Appropriating Horse and Cart.—In Johnson v. Hill, 3 Stark. 172, a person took a horse and cart which the servant of the owner was driving, directed the horse to be put in the stable of a neighboring inn, where had refreshment, and refused to give up the cart and horse until the owner paid a certain sum for not having his name on the cart, for which he unsuccessfully prosecuted the owner. The latter brought trover against the inn keeper, who had offered to restore the cart and horse only upon being paid for the keep of the horse up to that time. Concerning this case PLATT, B., said, in Broadwood v. Granara, 10 Ex. 417, 423: "If a person brings the horse of another to an inn, the inn keeper may detain it from the owner until its keep is paid. But if, as the jury found in Johnson v. Hill, 3 Stark. 172, the inn keeper knew that the person bringing the horse illegally got possession of it, and therefore had no right to pledge it for his debt, then the lien does not attach."

1. Cook v. Kane, 13 Oreg. 482; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 28, 29, 31. In this case LORD, J., said it was not doubted but what the inn keeper "would be liable for the loss of the piano," and "in such case it is difficult to perceive upon what principle of law or justice he can be denied his lien." But THAYER, J., in his dissenting opinion was "inclined to believe that the burden of proof" was upon the inn keeper "to show that he supposed the piano to belong to the guest, and that he entertained him upon the faith that such was the fact, before he could claim a lien upon it for the hotel bill."

2. Covington v. Newberger, 99 N. Car. 523, where DAVIS, J., said: "But counsel for the plaintiff insists that the inn keeper has a lien even upon the goods of a third person held by a guest, and brought within the inn; and and [that] when the defendant replevied the goods he became liable. The landlord's or inn keeper's lien is well recognized. And the case of Cook v. Kane, 13 Oreg. 482; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 28, cited by counsel, is authority for the

26. Obligation to Receive Goods—Declarations Treating as Criterion of Lien.—There are declarations in some of the cases to the effect that the lien of an inn keeper upon property is only commensurate with his obligation to receive it, with which his liability is inseparably connected.¹

Modern Doctrine Holding Immaterial.—But the later and better sustained view is that it "is not material whether the inn keeper is bound to receive such property or not," but that "if he does receive [it] as the property of his guest, and thereby becomes liable for it, he must be entitled to his lien."²

27. Articles Covered by Lien—All Goods Brought by Guest.—The lien of the inn keeper on the goods of his guest is not confined to such things as travelling guests ordinarily bring with them for their own use in journeying; but, like the inn keeper's liability, which covers even chests of deeds, charters or obligations, his lien extends to all the goods which the guest brings with him to the inn, and the landlord receives as his regardless of their character, in regard to bulk, etc.³

position taken by counsel, but it has the qualification 'unless he knew it was not the property of the guest.'

Lawyer's Blue Bag.—In a case concerning a letter-book in a blue bag, brought to an inn by the former clerk of an attorney with some things of his own in it, in the ordinary way, CRESSWELL, J., said that the inn keeper "could have no suspicion that it contained property belonging to any third person," and distinguished the case of Broadwood v. Granara, 10 Ex. 417.

Lien on Hired Carriage.—In commenting on a case where a lien was considered to cover the hired carriage of a guest, but the question of the inn keeper's knowledge of the true ownership was not passed on, Turrill v. Crawley, 13 Q. B. 197, the general doctrine of the existence of a lien on goods brought to the inn by a guest, where the inn keeper does not know they belong to a third person, and there is nothing in the circumstances of the case to show that the goods were not those of the guest, was asserted on the authority of the case under consideration. Threfall v. Borwick, 26 L. T., N. S. 794, 797; 2 Eng. Rep. 689, 697. Compare report of same case in Law R., 7 Q. B. 711, 714.

1. In Threfall v. Borwick, Law R., 10 Q. B. 210, 211; s. c., 12 Eng. Rep. 266, 267, LORD COLERIDGE, C. J., said: "Is there any authority except the dicta of PARKE, B. [in Broadwood v. Granara, 10 Ex. 417, 420, 423], which was unnecessary for the decision of the case in hand, that the lien is only commensurate with the obligation to receive?" In Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 664, 665, it is said that the question whether a party has a lien on horses depends on whether he was bound to receive and take care of them, and would have been answerable for their loss if they had been stolen without any negligence on his part.

2. Cook v. Kane, 13 Oreg. 482; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 28, 31; quoting opinions given in Threfall v. Borwick, Law R., 7 Q. B. 711, 713 (also reported in 26 L. T., N. S. 794, or 2 Eng. Rep. 689), which was affirmed on appeal in Law R., 10 Q. B. 210, 211; 12 Eng. Rep. 266, 267. In the latter case it was considered that, according to the advanced usages of society, an inn keeper might well be bound to receive a piano which a guest brought to the inn for his own amusement, if there was room for it. But irrespective of this point, it was regarded as too clear to be doubted that an inn keeper, having taken in such an article and safely kept it, had a lien upon it.

3. See opinions on Threfall v. Borwick, L. R., 7 Q. B. 711, 714 (also reported in 26 L. T., N. S. 794, 797, or 2 Eng. Rep. 689, 698); s. c. affirmed on appeal, L. R., 10 Q. B. 210; s. c., 12 Eng. Rep. 266. Consult also, for quotations from these opinions, Cook v. Kane, 13 Oreg. 482; s. c., 57 Am.

Carriages and Horses.—So the lien of an inn keeper covers carriages as well as horses, since carriages are commonly used in travelling in modern times, and the inn keeper's duties and privileges are extended to them.¹

28. General and Special Lien.—The lien of an inn keeper is general for his whole bill, and extends to all the goods which the guest brings with him to the inn, instead of being a separate lien on each particular article for the charges incurred in respect thereto.² But by the construction given to statutory provisions,³ the lien of an inn keeper is sometimes restricted, so far as concerns goods in possession of a guest which belong to a third person, to charges for the care of the specific property, and is not permitted to extend to a claim for the board of the guest.⁴ So it would seem that besides the general lien for all the expenses of a guest there might be a special lien on a particular thing for its own expenses, as on a carriage for its standing room.⁵

29. Enforcement of Lien—Not by Sale Without Judicial Process.—An inn keeper has a lien on the baggage of his guests for the nonpayment of their bills, but he has no power to enforce such lien by sale without judicial process.⁶ Indeed, despite a dictum to the contrary,⁷ it is settled that, except within the city of London, an inn keeper cannot, at common law, sell his guest's horse

Rep. 28, 30. Previously there were declarations of a contrary scope, to the effect that an inn keeper is bound to take in only such articles as both in nature and quality are reasonable for a traveller, and that it is questionable whether he is bound to take in articles of extraordinary bulk, like a piano, or has any lien on such or other articles which he is not under obligations to receive. See remarks of PARKE, B., in Broadwood v. Granara, 10 Ex. 417, quoted in Wilkins v. Earle, 3 Rob. (N. Y.) 352; s. c., 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 190; s. c. on appeal, 44 N. Y. 172.

1. See Turrell v. Crawley, 13 Q. B. 197, 202; Threfall v. Borwick, 26 L. T., N. S. 794, 796, or 2 Eng. Rep. 689, 696; s. c., L. R., 7 Q. B. 711; s. c. on appeal, L. R., 10 Q. B. 210, or 12 Eng. Rep. 266.

"Effects" of Boarders.—An inn keeper who is accustomed to take boarders is a boarding house keeper within the New Hampshire statutes relating to the lien of boarding house keepers on the baggage and "effects" of their guests and boarders (N. H. Stats. 1859, ch. 2230), and has a lien upon the horse his boarder for such boarder's own fare and board, but not for the keeping of his horse. Cross v. Wilkins, 43 N. H. 332, 336.

2. See Mulliner v. Florence, L. R., 3 Q. B. D. 484; s. c., 28 Eng. Rep. 390, where a lien for the guest's reasonable expenses was held to attach to his horses, his harness, his carriage, and all his goods conjointly, as there was one contract and one debt, and therefore one lien, which could not be split up and a separate lien claimed in respect of different chattels.

3. See Georgia code of 1867, § 2096.

4. Domestic Sewing Machine Co. v. Watters, 50 Ga. 573, 574, following like rule as to lien of livery stable keepers in Colquitt v. Kirkham, 47 Ga. 555, 558.

5. See opinion of LORD DENMAN, C. J. in Turrell v. Crawley, 13 Q. B. 197.

6. See Case v. Fogg, 46 Mo. 44, 48, where it appears from the opinion that a tenfold security for the husband's bill was demanded of the wife, and she was hardly permitted to take a change of clothing from her abundant stores, but in a short time without judicial process, large Saratoga trunks, loaded with rich goods when left, and of whose contents every one was ignorant except one of the firm of inn keepers, were put up at auction and sold for a song.

7. By POPHAM, C. J., in Hostler's Case, Yelv.

for his keeping;¹ but the remedy to enforce the lien is by action in the nature of a bill in chancery.²

Statutory Regulation, etc.—Under an enactment in England³ on the subject, however, the inn keeper not only has a passive lien, but also the active right, to sell the goods upon giving the notice required by the act.⁴

Under the Missouri statute creating a lien in favor of hotel, inn and boarding house keepers, upon the baggage and other valuables of their guests or boarders, etc., and upon the wages of such guests, etc., a justice's judgment for the debt is a prerequisite to the enforcement of the lien, and such enforcement must be made in conformity with the statute which affords an adequate and exclusive remedy.⁵

30. Waiver of Lien—By Loss of Possession.—Upon the ground that retention of possession is considered necessary to the continuance of a lien, the lien of an inn keeper is deemed waived by loss of possession.⁶

1. See Jones v. Pearle, 1 Strange 556; Fox v. McGregor, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 41, 43; 2 Kent Com. 642.

2. Fox v. McGregor, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 41, 43.

Distinction Between Lien by Custom, and Pawn or Pledge.—The distinction made in this connection is between a mere lien for work and materials, as in the case of mechanics, inn holders, and others, by custom, and an express pawn or pledge of goods by the owner, as collateral security for a loan of money, where, upon the lapse of a reasonable time after default the creditor may sell the pledge. Doane v. Russell, 3 Gray (Mass.) 382, 384.

3. 41 & 42 Vict., ch. 38.

4. Angus v. McLachlan, Law R., 23 Ch. D. 330, 336.

Detention of Property After Demand.—

An inn keeper is guilty of conversion if he refuses to deliver to the owner, upon demand, property left by a disappearing party, which he has used to such an extent as to amount to a full equivalent for his compensation: Alford v. Davenport, 43 Vt. 30, 34.

Third Person's Promise to Pay Debt of Guest.—When an inn keeper has a complete and enforceable lien on the trunk of his guest, a promise of a third person to pay the debt of the guest on condition that the property subject to the lien be given up, is binding and not within the statute of frauds: Dunlap v. Thorne, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 213, 215.

5. Coates v. Acheson, 23 Mo. App. 255, 260.

6. In Perkins v. Boardman, 14 Gray (Mass.) 481, 483, it is said by MERRICK,

J.: "To complete the right of lien, it is essential that the possession and right of possession of the goods pledged should be continued and uninterrupted. A relinquishment of the possession of property, by the party in whose favor a lien or pledge exists to the general owner, is an abandonment, and operates as an immediate release of it. Forth v. Simpson, 13 Ad. (N. Y.) & E. 680; Bigelow v. Heaton, 4 Denio 406; Bailey v. Quint, 22 Vt. 464. A lien may perhaps be renewed by the return and restitution of the property; but in such case it will be subordinate to any intervening incumbrance to which the property in the meantime has become subject."

Animals Used by Mail Contractor.—

The right of an inn keeper to a lien on property is denied where the owner thereof has possession of the property, as in the cases of horses of a mail contractor which were always in his possession and regularly used by him until the inn keeper locked them up to secure the debt due for providing stables and provender for them. Hickman v. Thomas, 16 Ala. 666, 670.

Drummers' Goods.—The principle that there may be a waiver of lien by relinquishing possession of the goods of the guest, as well as by an extension of credit, seems to receive recognition from statements made in a case where an inn keeper sued a merchant for his drummer's hotel bill, and where at the time of issuing the summons, and as ancillary to the action, a warrant of attachment was issued, under which certain trunks and packages of sam-

Exception Where Fraudulent Inducements to Part with Possession.—But an inn keeper does not waive his lien when he is induced to part with the possession of the property through false and fraudulent representations made by the guest.¹

By Selling Chattel.—The lien of an inn keeper over a chattel is waived if, in order to reimburse himself, he sells it, even ples in possession of the drummer were seized and afterwards replevied by the defendant. Covington v. Newberger, 99 N. Car. 523. In this case DAVIS, J., said: "Assuming that upon a notification of the failure of the drummer in the first instance, to pay cash, according to the general custom, the defendant would have been liable for the hotel bill (when the amount of the account was insignificant), and assuming that the plaintiff would then have had a lien upon the trunks and samples in the possession of the drummer to secure the cash then due from his customer, and instead of availing himself of it, had permitted the drummer to carry them away and extended the credit from time to time, in the manner indicated in the account, and from which, we think, there is no evidence of authority, then he would have had no lien upon the defendant's property for the amount of the unauthorized credit, and the fact that the defendant replevied the goods cannot help the plaintiff."

Agisters and Livery Stable Keepers.—Besides the reasons why agisters and livery stable keepers have no lien upon the animals in their charge, found in the fact that they do not impart any new value to the animal, or come within the policy of the law, which gives the lien for the benefit of trade, further reasons are given in the effect of the loss of the possession of the animal which may be taken by the owner. Thus in Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 668, BRONSON, J., said for the court: "When horses are kept at livery, the owner takes and uses them at pleasure, and the bailee only has a lien so long as he retains the uninterrupted possession. If the owner gets the property into his hands without fraud, the lien is at an end, and it will not be revived by the return of the goods. Bevan v. Waters, 3 Car. & P. 520; Jones v. Thurloe, 8 Mod. 172; Jones v. Pearle, 1 Strange 556; Sweet v. Pym, 1 East 4. So in the case of milch cows, the agister has no lien, for the reason that the owner has occasional possession for the purpose of milking them. Jackson v. Cummins, 5 Mees. & W. 342; Cross on Lien 25, 36, 332. In the same opinion it was also considered that an inn keeper in whose stable horses were placed by a resident of the same village, who never stopped at the inn, could not stand upon any better footing than a livery stable keeper, and as such had no lien. This position was taken because the inn keeper was not to have the continued and exclusive possession of the horses, but the owner was at liberty to take and use them when he pleased, and did in fact take them at his pleasure; and while it was not shown that the inn keeper was at home when the owner took the horses, yet there was no pretence that they were taken by fraud, or against the will of the inn keeper.

Trainer of Horses.—So it is held that the labor and skill employed on a race horse by a trainer are a good foundation for a lien; but that if by usage or contract the owner may send the horse to run at any race he chooses, and may select the jockey, the trainer has no continuing right of possession, and consequently no lien. Forth v. Simpson, 13 Q. B. 680, 684, 686. A trainer's lien is sustained, however, in Bevan v. Waters, 3 Car. & P. 520, 522; Harris v. Woodruff, 124 Mass. 205.

1. Manning v. Hollenbeck, 27 Wis. 202, 204. In this case it was claimed that there was a clear waiver of an inn keeper's lien on a sample trunk by accepting a draft for the hotel bill and parting with the possession of the trunk, with which the guest was allowed to depart in reliance upon his representations that the draft would be promptly paid. But it was considered that such a case is "in principle analogous to the case where a vendor is induced to part with his goods through the fraud of the vendee," under which circumstances the "vendor may recover the possession from the fraudulent purchaser, or from anyone claiming under him, not being a bona fide purchaser."

though the retention of the chattel is attended with expense.¹

By Taking Security.—An inn keeper who accepts security from his guest for the payment of hotel charges does not waive his lien at common law upon the goods of his guest for the payment of such charges, unless there is something in the nature of the security, or in the circumstances under which it was taken, which was inconsistent with the existence or continuance of the lien, and, therefore, destructive of it.²

31. Boarding House Keeper's Lien.—Inn Keeper Accustomed to Take Boarders, etc.—The lien of boarding house keepers is created by statute, and is sometimes extended to include inn keepers who are accustomed to take boarders.³

Under New York Statute.—Under the New York statute "for the protection of boarding house keepers," the keeper of a boarding house has a lien for board upon goods brought upon the premises by a boarder to furnish his room, although they do not in fact belong to the boarder, but to a stranger.⁴

Under Massachusetts Statute.—Under the Massachusetts statute relating to the lien of boarding house keepers, such lien is valid and effectual for board furnished under the original contract after a secret sale of the property brought to the boarding house by the boarder.⁵

32. Inn Keeper's Liabilities in General.—For Refusal to Furnish Entertainment, etc.—If an inn keeper refuse to receive and entertain any guest who comes to his house and is apparently responsible and of good conduct, he is liable alike to an indictment and to an action by the party aggrieved.⁶

For Personal Injuries.—So inn keepers may be liable for direct personal injuries, as assault and battery, and for those of an in-

1. See Mulliner v. Florence, Law R., 3 Q. B. 484; s. c., 28 Eng. Rep. 390. For similar expressions in earlier English cases, see Jones v. Thurloe, 8 Mod. 172; Jones v. Pearle, 1 Strange 556, 557.

2. Angus v. McLachlan, Law R., 23 Ch. D. 330, 334-335.

3. This is the case under the New Hampshire statutes of June, 1859, ch. 2330, to which the construction is given that an inn keeper has a lien upon the horse of his boarder for such boarder's fare and board, but not for the keeping of the horse. Cross v. Wilkins, 43 N. H. 332, 336. Lien of boarding house keeper under Wisconsin statute like that of inn keeper on goods of guest. Nichols v. Halliday, 27 Wis. 406, 407.

4. Jones v. Morrill, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 623, 626, 627. The intent of the statute is to give keepers of boarding-houses the same lien which an inn keeper has upon the effects of a guest, without reference to the permanent or transient character of the guests. Stewart v. McCready, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 62, 63. But the statute limits the lien to that for board actually due, and does not include board to become due under an agreement to board in future. Shafer v. Guest, 6 Rob. (N. Y.) 264; s. c., 35 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 184, 188.

5. Bayley v. Merrill, 10 Allen (Mass.) 360. But a boarding-house keeper has, under such statute, no lien for board on the property of a husband brought to the boarding house by his wife and child, although they have been driven from home by the cruelty of the husband. Mills v. Shirley, 110 Mass. 158, 159.

6. Watson v. Cross, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 147, 148. See also the Civil Rights bill, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 541, 542; Rex v. Ivens, 7 Car. & P. 213, 219.

Enactments Against Bad Food and Extra Prices.—Inn keepers were also direct nature, such as result from negligence, and even for those of more remote origin, as the communication of an infectious disease, or a harmful trick played by a fellow guest.¹

Liability for Goods of Guest.—But the chief liability of an inn keeper, and that which has been the subject of the most discussion in the courts, is his extraordinary common law responsibility for the loss of the goods of his guest.²

33. Liability for Personal Injuries—Assault and Indirect Injuries.—Although there are early expressions adverse to the liability of an inn keeper where the guest is beaten in the inn,³ yet in a modern case there seems to be a recognition of the liability of an inn keeper for an assault and battery committed by his employes.⁴

Injuries by Other Guests.—The doctrine has further been laid down and applied so as to hold a tavern keeper liable in damages for injuries suffered by a minor, to whose back another intoxicated guest pinned a paper and set it on fire. Where one restrained by ancient statutes from charging exorbitant prices for "horse, bread," etc., or disposing of "corrupt wine or victuals." See Bac. Abr., Inns and Inn keepers (c) 2.

1. See Wade v. Thayer, 40 Cal. 578, 585; Sandys v. Florence, 47 Law J. Com. P. 598; Gilbert v. Hoffman, 66 Iowa 205; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 263, 264; Rommel v. Schambacher, 11 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 779; s. c., 27 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 156, and note, 158.

2. For general statements of the existence of this liability, see Curtis v. Murphy, 62 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242, 243; Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258; s. c., 23 The Reporter 267.

3. See Calye's Case, 8 Co. 32, 33 b; s. c., 1 Smith's Lead. Cas. *135; Bac. Abr., Inns and Inn keepers (c).

4. Wade v. Thayer, 40 Cal. 578, 585. In this case there was evidence tending to show that the plaintiff, in violation of the rules of a hotel, and without first having obtained leave to do so, entered one of the bedrooms while in a state of intoxication, and went to sleep on the bed without undressing, in which condition he was discovered by the clerk and the porter, who made a violent assault upon him, inflicting serious bodily injuries. In passing upon instructions requested by the hotel keeper and the immediate assailants, who comprised the defendants, it was held, that exemplary damages might be given for a wanton, malicious and unprovoked assault upon the person, and that if the assault was committed by the clerk and porter while in the performance of their duties as the servants and employes of the hotel keeper, the latter would be responsible for the actual damage which the plaintiff suffered, even though he was not present and in no manner consented to the assault or aided therein. CROCKETT, J., who delivered the opinion of the court, said: "He would be responsible as principal for all the actual damage caused by his agents and servants in the performance of their official duties, but would not be liable for wanton and malicious acts done without his consent or approval. This question was fully discussed and the authorities cited in Turner v. N. etc. R. Co., 34 Cal. 599, and need not be further noticed." But a landlord of an inn has been held not indictable for assault and battery for gently leading out an obnoxious guest. Commonwealth v. Mitchell, 2 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 431, 436.

Negligence Where Ceiling Fell.—A statement of claim has further been held to sufficiently show a cause of action against the proprietor of a hotel, where it alleges that while the plaintiff was using such hotel as a guest for reward, by the negligence of the defendant the ceiling of the room in which the plaintiff then was fell upon and injured him. Sandys v. Florence, 47 L. J., C. P. 598.

Communication of Infectious Disease.—So where a jury was justified in finding that inn keepers, with knowledge of the prevalence of smallpox in their hotel, kept it open for business, and permitted a party to become a guest enters a saloon or tavern, opened for the entertainment of the public, the proprietor is bound to see that he is properly protected from the assaults or insults not only of those who are in his employ, but also of the drunken or vicious men whom he may choose to harbor.¹

34. Extraordinary Liability of Inn Keeper—Beyond Nearly All Bailees.—The liability of an inn keeper is more severe than that of any other bailee, except a common carrier.²

At Common Law.—The common law, as is well known, upon grounds of public policy, for the protection of travellers, imposes an extraordinary liability upon an inn keeper for the goods of his guest, though they may have been lost without his fault.³

Uncertain Extent and Limits.—But the exact extent and limits of an inn keeper's liability for the goods of his guest are not harmoniously settled by the decisions,⁴ and, indeed, the rulings and declarations of the cases are remarkably uncertain upon the vital phases of the subject.⁵

without informing her of the presence of the disease, such inn keepers would be liable to the guest if she contracted the disease while in their house, and was herself guilty of no negligence contributing to the injury. Gilbert v. Hoffman, 66 Iowa 205; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 263, 264.

1. Rommel v. Schambacher, 11 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 779, s. c., 27 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 156, with full note, 158, treating this as a novel but sustainable case. After stating the case of Railroad Co. v. Pillow, 76 Pa. St. 510, the opinion proceeds: "If then a railroad company is liable for the conduct of drunken men who may chance to board its cars, much more the tavern keeper who not only permits drunken men about the premises, but furnishes liquor to make them drunk, and who is thus instrumental in fitting them for the accomplishment of just such an insane and brutal trick as that disclosed by the evidence of the case in hand."

2. See McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 3, 6; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 580, where REDFIELD. C. J., speaking for the court, said: "We have never intimated that we were prepared to put the liability of an inn keeper upon the same ground as that of other bailees. On the contrary, we regard it as well settled that the liability of an inn keeper is more severe than that of any other bailee, with the single exception of common carriers."

3. Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 241, 243. See characterization of this liability as "very nearly absolute" in Myers v. Cottrill, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 465, 470.

4. See notes to Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 452, 453, and notes to Cutler v. Bonney, 30 Mich. 259; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 130, 133. Consult also Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557, s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 662.

5. See McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 579, where the court said, through REDFIELD, C. J.: "In regard to the general liability of an inn keeper it is surprising that the law should still be so indeterminate. But the cases are fewer and less decisive upon this important subject than might have been expected. . . . So too, we find numerous creditable judges, and some decisions, carrying the liability of an inn keeper to the full extent of a common carrier, and thus making him an insurer against all losses not caused by the act of God or the public enemy. But such is clearly not the course of the decisions in Westminster hall, and that extreme responsibility was expressly repudiated by this court: Merritt v. Clagham, 23 Vt. 177."

So in discussing the question of the obligation of inn keepers to respond to their guests for property destroyed by fire without negligence on the part of the inn keepers, CAMPBELL, J., said, in Cutler v. Bonney, 30 Mich. 259; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 130: "It is unfortunate that upon this subject there is some confusion, arising from the loose dicta in which many courts have indulged, when dealing with cases involving the

35. Liability Compared with that of Common Carrier—Similarity.

—The liability of the common carrier and inn keeper is very similar, as they are both bailees, and liable for losses under similar circumstances;¹ and the same rule seems to be applicable to both as to the mode of subjecting them to liability.² Indeed, the liability of an inn keeper is widely regarded as like that of a common carrier, inasmuch as both are treated by a large proportion of the cases as insurers of property committed to their care.³

Difference.—But it has been pointed out that the cases of an inn keeper and a common carrier, though analogous, may not be alike;⁴ and this difference is developed as the basis of a more restricted view of the liability of an inn keeper, making more liberal exemptions in his favor.⁵

liability of inn keepers. It is unsafe to give any force to such remarks beyond the analogies of the cases in which they are found. Upon all questions not decided by recognized and accepted precedents, we can only rest upon the ancient maxims of the common law."

1. Hallenbake v. Fish, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 547; s. c., 24 Am. Dec. 88, 89. References to the similarity of the functions and liabilities of these two classes of bailees we also found in Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 261, 262.

2. Hallenbake v. Fish, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 547; s. c., 24 Am. Dec. 88, 89, where it was accordingly held, that the same rule is applicable in an action of trover against an inn keeper which governs in that action against a common carrier or wharfinger, and that therefore an actual conversion must be proved to maintain such an action for a bridle and saddle entrusted to an inn keeper's servant by a guest at an inn, but which could not be found when called for.

3. See Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, 473; Neal v. Wilcox, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 146; 67 Am. Dec. 266.

In Johnson v. Richardson, 17 Ill. 302; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 369, 371, it is said: "Some of the cases hold inn keepers liable in regard to the property of the guest to the same extent as carriers are in reference to goods committed to them for transportation; that is, for all loss or injury not the result of accident."

Special Privileges, etc.—In Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 262, it is said: "Public policy demands that the necessities of intercourse by travel shall not involve danger of loss from inn keepers any more than from common carriers who are liable to those employing them exactly as inn keepers are to their guests; and they alike have a right to protect themselves by special contract not contravening such policy, and have also the important privilege of retaining the property for which their liability exists until their charges, in the one case for the entertainment given, and in the other for the carriage of the goods, are paid."

4. See Fuller v. Coats, 18 Ohio St. 343, 350, where it is said that the "rules of law controlling both these classes of liability have their foundation in considerations of public utility," but that "it does not therefore follow that the rule in every case is precisely the same," and that it "would seem, rather, that where the circumstances of the two classes differ, public utility might reasonably require a corresponding modification of the rules applicable to the case." The opinion by DAY, C. J., further shows how the case of a common carrier and that of an inn keeper, though analogous, may not be alike, but explained the charge of the court below, which was under consideration, without drawing any distinction between the liability in the two cases.

5. See McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 3, 6; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 580, where REDFIELD, C. J., said for the court: "In Richmond v. Smith, 8 Barn. & C. 9; s. c., 15 Eng. Com. L. 144, LORD TENTERDEN says in regard to goods stolen from the custody of an inn keeper: 'The situation of an inn keeper is precisely analogous to that of a carrier.' This may be too strongly expressed, if applied to all cases of goods taken from the custody of an inn keeper. For it may be done by superior force, and without his fault, and still not the force of a public enemy, which is necessary to be shown to excuse a common carrier. But in regard to goods stolen from the custody of an inn keeper, and no evidence to show how it was done, or by whom, the liability is the same as that of a carrier."

36. Scope of Liability—In General.—Despite the divergence of the decisions in regard to the scope of the liability of the inn keeper, it has generally been held that he is absolutely liable for all thefts from within, or unexplained losses of property in his charge, but that he may be discharged from liability by any contributory negligence of the guest, his servants or companions; and in many cases he has been discharged where the guest exercised any special control over his property.¹

Accidental Casualties and Acts of Force from Without.—But conflicting views have been held concerning the liability of the inn keeper for losses by purely accidental casualties or acts of force from without.²

"In order to hold a bailee liable for that which is in no respect to be imputed either to his own negligence," says CAMPBELL, J., in Cutler v. Bonney, 30 Mich. 259; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 127, "or to that of persons for whom he is responsible, there should be found clear authority. The common law has declared this liability against one class of bailees, and has made common carriers responsible for all losses not caused by public enemies, or some casualty in no way arising out of human action." Then referring to the claim that in this respect common carriers and inn keepers stand on the same footing, it is further said: "There are many cases in which it has been said by judges that the liability is not distinguishable. Most of these have been collected in the notes of Mr. Holmes to the last edition of Kent's Commentaries. 2 Kent 506. But . . . there is nothing in the facts of any authority which we have discovered which called for any such remark, or which would justify the enforcement of a liability for such a loss as the present" [where goods were destroyed by accidental or incidental fire, without fault or negligence on the part of the inn keepers or their servants]. Exception to the last statement was admitted to exist in some decisions, which, aside from one or two cases, had "arisen from thefts or unexplained losses of property, while it was within the legal custody or protection of the inn keeper." In regard to the statements of text writers it was said: "These writers, or at least such of them as are of recognized authority, have drawn a line between carriers and inn keepers, resting on the distinction between absolute and qualified responsibility. And none of the accepted writers have found any authority for disregarding this distinction. The two classes of bailees have been kept carefully separate."

1. See Cutler v. Bonney, 30 Mich. 259; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 127, 128, where it is said that the rule actually applied in all cases arising from thefts or unexplained losses of property, while it was within the legal custody or protection of the inn keeper, has been that all such losses were presumably due to the neglect of the inn keeper. Then the following comprehensive statement of the scope of an inn keeper's liability is made: "Generally, and perhaps universally, he has been held to an absolute responsibility for all thefts from within, or unexplained, whether committed by guests, servants or strangers. But he has quite as uniformly been discharged by any negligence of the guest, conducing to the injury, and he has not been held for acts done by the servants of guests, or by those whom they have admitted into their rooms. And in many cases he has been held discharged where the guest has exercised any special control over his property. The general principle seems to be that the inn keeper guarantees the good conduct of all persons whom he admits under his roof, provided his guests are themselves guilty of no negligence to forfeit the guarantee."

2. In Cutler v. Bonney, 30 Mich. 259; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 127, 128, CAMPBELL, J., said: "We have found no decision holding inn keepers liable for Various Views Maintained.—According to the stricter view, nothing short of inevitable accident, casualty of war, or act of the guest, his servants, or friends of his company, will excuse the inn keeper.¹ But three more or less distinct views of the scope of the inn keeper's liability have obtained currency, and these may be designated respectively as the doctrines of prima facie liability, superior force and strict insurance.²

losses by purely accidental casualties or from riots, or acts of force from without, such as have been from the beginning excepted by the text writers." But see statement of views of different lines of cases in Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 662, 663. Consult also Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 303, 307, 311. Compare McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 582.

In Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 591, referring to the common law liability of inn keepers it is said: "There is a conflict it is true among the authorities on one point. This liability is stated by many to be commensurate with that of the common carrier, who is regarded as an insurer, being responsible for losses of every character, except such as were occasioned by 'the act of God, the public enemy or the party complaining.' 2 Parsons' Contr. 146; 2 Story's Contr., § 909; Chitty on Contr. 675; Saunders on Negl. 212. By other writers inn keepers are held to be excused for losses occasioned by vis major or irresistible force such as robbery or fire. 2 Kent's Com. 593; Wharton on Negl., § 678; Redf. on Car., § 596; Story on Bailments, § 472. But however this may be, nothing is better settled than that they are liable, under the rules of the common law, for losses occasioned by theft, unless superinduced by the proximate contributory negligence of the owner. 2 Kent's Com. 592; Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471; Houser v. Tully, 62 Pa. St. 92; s. c., Am. Rep. 390; Dunbier v. Day, 12 Neb. 596; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 772; Story on Contr., § 748."

1. Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 261, where it is said that where the relation of guest in an inn exists, whether from personal entertainment or that given to the traveller's beasts, the inn keeper is absolutely liable for all loss or damage to the property of the guest, subject to certain exceptions. They are what is called the 'act of God', such as earthquake, lightning, flood, the public enemy, that is, the forces of a nation engaged in a hostile war with that of the inn keeper; and the act or conduct of the guest, or his friends or servants. The first of these is aptly called inevitable accident without the intervention of man. (2 Kent's Com. 597); that is, some casualty which human foresight could not discern and from the consequences of which, therefore, no protection could be provided . . . This is apparently hard law; but were it otherwise the property of guests at an inn would be in such insecurity from the practices of dishonest landlords with corrupt servants that the necessity of travel would be encountered with dread and apprehension. Compare with text Statement of New York rule in Classen v. Leopold, 2 Sweeny (N. Y.) 705, 710.

2. Perhaps the best summary of these positions is that given in the following statement in Sibley v. Aldrich, 33 N. H. 553; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 745, 751: "Three different rules appear to be laid down on this subject in different authorities: 1. That the inn keeper is prima facie liable for the loss of goods in his charge, but may discharge himself by showing that the goods were lost without his negligence or default. . . . This view of the law is sustained by Dawson v. Chauncey, 5 Ad. & E. (N. S.) [5 Q. B.] 165, and by Metcalf v. Hess, 14 Ill. 129. 2. That the inn keeper is discharged by showing how the accident happened, and that it happened by inevitable accident or irresistible force, though the accident might not amount to what the law denominates the act of God, and the force might not be the power of a public enemy. This rule is countenanced by Merritt v. Claghorn, 23 Vt. 177, and Kesten [Kisten] v. Hildebrand, 9 B. Mon. [Ky.] 72; [s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416]. 3. That the inn keeper is liable unless the loss was caused by the act of God, or the public enemy, or by the fault, direct or implied, of the guest. This rule is maintained in Burgess v. Clem-

Limited to Guests.—An inn keeper is responsible for money or other dead property lost in his inn only where the party losing it was a guest at the inn at the time of the loss.¹ Nor, according to the tendency of the modern cases as previously discussed, will the mere leaving of a horse at an inn constitute a party a guest so as to render the inn keeper liable for his goods.²

Liability to Boarders.—There is, however, a distinction, taken at an early day, between the liability of inn keepers towards guests and boarders, pursuant to which, if the goods lost belong to a boarder,³ he would be required, in order to charge the inn keeper, to show that the loss was owing to the failure on his part to discharge the duties which his situation as boarding house keeper, or the special contract with the other party, imposed on him; and these duties must be measured by the analogies of the law applicable to other species of bailments.⁴

Suggested Reconciliation of Authorities.—An attempt has been made to reconcile the conflicting decisions on the inn keeper's liability for property of his guests brought within the inn, and to present a statement of the law on the subject, as thus conceived to be harmonized.⁵

ent, 4 Maule & S. 306; Richmond v. Smith, 8 Barn. & C. 9; Farnworth v. Packwood, 1 Stark. 249; Kent v. Shackford, 2 Barn. & Ald. 803; Armistead v. White, 6 Eng. L. & Eq. 349; Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471; Shaw v. Berry, 31 Me. 478; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 628. Of text writers, Story, though with hesitation, goes for the first rule; Kent states the third rule strongly, and Metcalf adopts the same, and the civil law places the liability of the inn keeper and the common carrier on the same footing . . . On the whole, we think that the better rule is the strict one as laid down in the elaborate and very satisfactory case of Shaw v. Berry, 31 Me. 478; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 628, supra. The weight of authority is heavily that way, and the policy and analogies of the law lead to the same conclusion."

1. Towson v. Havre de Grace Bank, 6 Har. & J. (Del.) 47; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 254, 257, where this view is based on the fact that the profit arising from the entertainment of the guest is the foundation of the inn keeper's liability. "Inn keepers are answerable," it is said in this case (14 Am. Dec. 256), "by reason of the profit arising either from the keeping of the horses, etc., of their guests, or from the entertaining of the guests themselves, in the case of money or other property, from the keeping of which alone no profit can arise." "It is well settled," says BENNETT, J., for the court in McDaniels v. Robinson, 28 Vt. 387; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 720, 722, "that if a person leave at an inn property from which the inn keeper can derive no gain from its keeping, that is dead property, as it is termed, and goes away himself, and it is stolen in his absence, he shall have no action against his host as inn keeper, for the reason that he was not a guest at the time. See York v. Grindstone, 1 Salk. 388; Selman v. King, Cro. Jac. 183; 3 Bac. Abr., Wilson's Ed. 665, tit. Inn Keeper. Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663; McDonald v. Edgerton [Edgerton], 5 Barb. [N. Y.] 560. In such a case, all that could be claimed would be to charge him as bailee."

2. Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663; Ingallsbee v. Wood, 33 N. Y. 577, 579; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 409; Healey v. Gray, 68 Me. 489; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 80.

But see McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 576-578; Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 260.

3. Manning v. Wells, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 746; s. c., 51 Am. Dec. 688, 689. Compare Ingallsbee v. Wood, 33 N. Y. 577; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 409, 410.

4. Chamberlain v. Masterson, 26 Ala. 371, 378.

5. Thus in Schouler on Bailments

37. Acts of Parties Within the Inn—Servants or Agents.—The responsibility of the inn keeper extends to all his servants and domestics, and to all the movable goods and chattels and moneys of his guest which are placed within the inn."¹

Guests.—Inn keepers are furthermore answerable for the honesty, not only of their servants, but of their guests.² Indeed, all the cases are said to agree that an inn keeper is "responsible for the acts of everyone within his house, unless introduced by a guest."³

(2nd ed.), § 306, note 6, it is said: "To attempt to reconcile all that English and American courts have said concerning an inn keeper's liability for property of guests brought within the inn would be a hopeless task. But . . . some such statement as the following may be thought to bring the decisions into just harmony. The common law policy aims to promote the comfort and security of guests at an inn, by holding the inn keeper responsible as extraordinary bailee of the guest, for such property as the latter may have brought infra hospitium, to the extent of loss or damage occasioned by the negligence or misconduct of the inn keeper himself, or that of his servants and his family, and apparently of other guests and all such parties as he may have admitted upon the premises. As to these he is deemed an insurer, in which sense he cannot set up their want of authority from him or even his noncontribution to their wrongful acts to screen himself from the consequences of loss occasioned the guest. But beyond this, he is answerable only so far as he or they may have contributed, by ordinary negligence or wilful misconduct, to such loss or injury as is occasioned by those from without the inn precincts, as by rioters, genuine burglars, forcible robbers, and the like; and the same as to losses caused by accidental fire, or the act of God, or a public enemy. Yet the presumption is against the inn keeper whenever the loss occurs; so that if it be by persons not admitted, but forcing their way into the house, the burden is upon him of showing this. The inn-keeper may exonerate himself by showing that the guest himself was at fault, or excluded him from custody, and so contributed to the loss; and special contract, custom and legislation may afford him special exoneration in a certain measure, or in some particular respect."

1. 2 Kent Com. 593, as quoted in

Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 664.

Persons Officiating as Servants or Agents.—In Rockwell v. Proctor, 39 Ga. 105, 107, it was said by WARNER, J.: "It was the duty of the inn keeper, either by himself or competent servants or agents, to take charge of the goods of his guests, and if he allowed persons to officiate in that capacity during his absence in his hotel, he is responsible for their conduct, and for the loss of the goods deposited therein as directed by such servants or agents."

2. Gils v. Libby, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 70, 75, a case which keeps inn keepers to the strictest responsibility, and is said in Dessauer v. Baker, 1 Wils. (Ind.) 429, 431, to hold the absolute liability of the host for robberies or larcenies committed by his servants, and guests upon guests. In Merritt v. Claghorn, 23 Vt. 177, 182, JUDGE REDFIELD says: "The host is, we apprehend, upon principle, always liable for any act of his servants or guests. He employs such servants as he chooses, and is bound to take every quiet and orderly guest which offers; and if he takes others, even in good faith, it ought not to be at the expense of his other guests, who derive no profit and have no concern in their being there. In holding the inn keeper liable to this extent, all opinions concur." This language is quoted in Dessauer v. Baker, 1 Wils. (Ind.) 429, 432, in which case it is also held that an inn keeper is responsible for the conduct of another guest placed in a room already occupied, without the consent of the occupant. See also Baker v. Dessauer, 49 Ind. 28.

3. McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316, 337; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574.

"If the goods of the guest are damaged in the inn," it is said in Houser v. Tully, 62 Pa. St. 92, 96; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 390 (quoted in Dunbier v. Day, 12 Neb. 596; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 772, 775); "or are stolen from it by the servants or

38. Acts of Parties Without the Inn—Doctrine of Some of the Cases.—Some of the cases hold that the inn keeper is not responsible when the loss was occasioned by inevitable casualty, by irresistible force, by superior force, or by robbery, or burglary committed by persons from without the inn;¹ and some go even further, and hold that the presumption of negligence may be rebutted by showing that there was no negligence in point of fact on his part, or that of his servants.²

More General View.—But the preponderating weight of authority from the time of the decision in Calye's Case, 8 Coke 32, to the present time, is said to be in favor of the rule that he is liable as an insurer,³ and is responsible for a loss occasioned by his own servants, by other guests, by robbery or burglary from without the house, or by rioters or mobs.⁴

domestics, or by a stranger guest, he [referring to the inn keeper] is bound to make restitution, for it is his duty to provide honest servants and to exercise an exact vigilance over all persons coming into his house, as guests or otherwise. His responsibility extends to all his servants and domestics, and to all the moneys of his guests which are placed within the inn; and he is bound in every event to pay for them if stolen, unless they were stolen by a servant or companion of the guest." "In case of a loss by theft," it is further said in the same case, "it is no excuse for the inn keeper that he was sick or absent from home at the time; for he is bound, in such cases, to provide honest and faithful servants according to the confidence reposed in him by the public." The doctrine of this case is reaffirmed in Walsh v. Porterfield, 87 Pa. St. 376.

1. See Kisten v. Hildebrand, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 72, 73, 74; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416.

2. Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 662. See, on extent of inn keeper's liability, note to Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 452, 453; also note to Cutler v. Bonney, 30 Mich. 259; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 130, 133.

3. Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 663.

Grain Stolen from Sleigh.—In Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 448, a wagoner was held entitled to recover in an action against a tavern keeper for the value of several bags of wheat and barley stolen from the sleigh of the plaintiff during the night, while he was entertained as a guest in defendant's house. The court said: "On general principles applicable to this subject, the defendant is liable for the loss sustained in this case. He received the defendant as his guest for the night, with his loaded sleigh and horses. The sleigh, with all its contents, was put into an outhouse, appurtenant to the inn, 'where it had been usual for the defendant to receive loads of that description.' The doors of this wagon house were broken open, from which it may be inferred that the building was close, and the doors fastened in such a manner as to promise security. The bags of grain, therefore, may be deemed to have been infra hospitium; and being so, it is not necessary to prove negligence in the inn keeper to make him liable for the loss. Calye's Case, 8 Coke 32; Bennett v. Miller [Mellor], 5 T. R. 273."

4. 1 Pars. Contr. 523, as quoted in Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 663. Thus in Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 303, 307-311, it is held, upon a full review of the conflicting authorities, that an inn keeper is bound to keep the property of his guest safe from burglars and robbers without as well as from thieves within his house.

Superior Force.—In McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 582 (1854), it was said that "the recent decisions seem rather to incline to the view that the host is liable for all losses of the goods of his guest, even by burglary or robbery, unless produced absolutely by superior force, the vis major of the schools." In that case it was held, that an inn keeper cannot be exonerated from the loss of

39. Liability of Inn Keepers as Insurers—Common Law Doctrine.—

It is the doctrine of the common law, as generally understood, and the view maintained by many, if not a majority of the cases, that inn keepers, as well as common carriers, are, on grounds of public policy, treated as insurers, and are liable, except for acts of God or the public enemy, without proof of negligence.¹

More Exact Statement of Doctrine.—As the doctrine is more exactly expressed, inn keepers as well as common carriers are regarded as insurers of the property committed to their care, and are bound to make restitution for any injury or loss not caused by the act of God or the common enemy, or the neglect or fault of the owner of the property.²

Development of Doctrine.—The grounds for maintaining this doctrine are developed in cases which show the different views entertained on the subject.³

the goods of his guest upon presumption merely, or indeed without proof of some of the circumstances attending the breaking of a house securely fastened, but that he is bound to prove the mode in which the goods were taken from him, and that it was without any fault or negligence on his part. Under the Civil Code of Louisiana, inn keepers are responsible when the effects of travellers who lodge in their house are stolen, unless they show that the same were stolen by force and arms, or with exterior breaking of doors, or by any other extraordinary violence. Woodworth v. Morse, 18 La. An. 156, 157.

1. Thus in an action on the case on the "custom of the land," inn keepers as well as common carriers are, on ground of public policy, treated as insurers, and are liable, "except for the acts of God and the enemies of the State," without proof of negligence: Neal v. Wilcox, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 146; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 266.

2. Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, 473, where the court, through WILDE, J., said: "The law . . . rests on the same principle of policy here as it does in England and other countries, and it is wise and reasonable. Inn keepers have peculiar privileges, and great facilities to abuse their trust, if they are so disposed, and therefore it is that some peculiar liabilities are imposed upon them in order to prevent, as far as possible, any such abuse."

In Thickstun v. Howard, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 535, the court likewise says that inn keepers, as well as common carriers, "are regarded as insurers of the goods of their guests, while in their keeping, and are bound to make restitution for any injury or loss, not occasioned by the act of God, the common enemy, or by the negligence or fault of the guest." "This statement of the law as to the liability of inn keepers," says WORDEN, J., in Laird v. Eichold, 10 Ind. 212, 213; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 323, 324, "is certainly broad enough to cover the case of a loss or injury happening without the negligence or fault of the inn keeper. But the question as to his liability under such circumstances, did not arise in the case, and was not involved in the decision, hence, what is said about such liability must be looked upon, not as the point decided, but as a general statement of the law as to the liability of inn keepers, without advert- ing to possible exceptions or qualifica- tions."

3. Thus in Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 662, (1867), referring to the question discussed by counsel whether an inn keeper is an insurer of the property of his guest committed to his care, RHODES, J., said for the court: "The authorities do not agree upon this question. Some of the cases hold that the inn keeper is not responsible when the loss was occasioned by inevitable casualty, by irresistible force, by superior force, or by robbery or burglary committed by persons from without the inn; and some go even further, and hold that the presumption of negligence may be rebutted by showing that there was no negligence in point of fact on his part or that of his servants. But the preponderating weight of authority, from the time of the decision in Calye's Case, 8 Coke 32, to the present time, is in favor of the rule that he is liable as an insurer. The rule is thus stated in 1 Parsons on Contracts, 523: "Public policy imposes upon an inn keeper a severe liability. The later, and on the whole prevailing authorities make him an insurer of the property committed to his care, against everything but the act of God or the public enemy, or the neglect or fraud of the owner of the property. He would then be liable for a loss occasioned by his own servants, by other guests, by robbery or burglary from without the house, or by rioters or mobs." The rule is carried to the same extent in Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 303. We deem it unnecessary at this time to enter upon a review of the cases, or to recapitulate the argument or reasons in support of the rule, as this has very fully been done in Shaw v. Berry, 31 Me. 478; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 628; Sibley v. Aldrich, 33 N. H. 553; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 745; Hulett v. Swift, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 230; s. c., 33 N. Y. 571; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 405. See also Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill [N. Y.] 485, [s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663]; Thickstone [Thickstun] v. Howard, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 535; Piper v. Manny, 21 Wend. [N. Y.] 282; Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. [Mass.] 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471."

In Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 303, 307, in discussing the question whether robbery from without, or burglary, will excuse an inn keeper for the loss of the goods of his guest, after repeating the views of an inn keeper's liability, given in 2 Kent. Com. 591, 593; Story Bailm. § 472 and Jones Bailm. pp. 94, 96, the court, through BENNETT, J., says: "It thus appears that while Judge Story leaves the point under consideration at loose ends, the two other distinguished commentators above cited are still more uncertain, as neither of them apparently agrees with himself, and from their opposing rules, it is difficult to determine to which side of the question they intended to adhere. The contradiction found in the writings of commentators, as well as the diversity which exists in the decisions on which their various statements are rested, seem to have sprung out of a departure from the principles on which the extraordinary liability of inn keepers and common carriers is based, and from what appears to be an erroneous construction of the doctrine laid down by LORD COKE, in Calye's Case, 8 Co. 32."

In Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 262, CHIEF JUSTICE COMEGYS, in his charge to the jury, expressed the view that "the report of Calye's Case, in 8 Coke 32, did not justify the opinion of it expressed by some eminent judges, particularly JUSTICE STORY, in treating of the law concerning inn keepers." "LORD COKE certainly, we think," the opinion proceeds, "did not mean that the inn keeper was not an insurer, or he would not have used the language immediately following that relied upon by JUSTICE STORY in support of his theory of qualified liability beyond that of a carrier. His meaning seems to be that ascribed to his language by a learned California judge in Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 302."

In Hulett v. Swift, 33 N. Y. 571; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 405, 408, the court, through PORTER, J., said: "A shade of doubt has at times been thrown over the question by the unguarded language of elementary writers, and especially by the suggestion of JUDGE STORY in his treatise on the Law of Bailments, that the inn keeper could exonerate himself from liability by proving that he was not guilty of actual negligence, and this view seems to have been adopted in two of the Vermont and one of the English cases. Story on Bailments, § 472; Dawson v. Champney, 8 Ad. & E., N. S. 164 [which should be cited as 5 Q. B. 164]; Merrit v. Claghorn, 23 Vt. 177; McDaniels v. Robinson, 28 Vt. 337; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 720. The doctrine of these cases is opposed to the general current of English and American authority, and evidently had its origin in a misapprehension of the rule as stated by the judges in Calye's Case, 8 Coke 32. It is true that the liability of the inn keeper, by the custom of the realm, was not unlimited and absolute, and that the loss of the goods of the guest was merely presumptive evidence of the default of the landlord. But this presumption could only be repelled by proof that the loss was attributable to the negligence and fraud of the guest, or to the act of God or the public enemy. No degree of diligence or vigilance on the part of the inn keeper could absolve him from his common law obligation for the loss of his guest, unless traceable to one of these exceptional causes. Shaw v. Berry, 31 Me. 745; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 628; Sibley v. Aldrich, 33 N. H. 553; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 643. The rule is salutary; and should be steadily and firmly upheld, subject to the statutory regulations for the protection of hotel proprietors from fraud and negligence on the part of their guests."

Modification of Doctrine.—A modified view of the doctrine perhaps midway between the conflicting positions, exacts of an inn keeper extraordinary care of the goods of his guest, and holds him to a responsibility approximating insurance of such articles when confided to his care and custody.¹

40. Prima Facie Liability of Inn Keepers—Statement of Doctrine.

—It is the view of various cases that an inn keeper is only prima facie liable for loss or damage to the goods of his guest, and that he may exonerate himself by showing that the loss happened without any fault on his part, and that he exercised the strictest care and diligence.²

1. See Weisenger v. Taylor, 1 Bush (Ky.) 275; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 626, 627, where it is said by the court, through ROBERTSON, J.: "The common, like the civil law, but even more stringent, exacts of inn keepers as bailees of the baggage and goods of their guests, extraordinary care, and imposes on them a responsibility nearly commensurable with that of common carriers, approximating insurance of such articles when confided expressly or impliedly to their custody and care. But whenever the guest assumes the custody and control of his goods in such a way as to indicate that he does not trust the inn keeper, and concedes to him no control, they are not in the implied custody of the inn keeper, and he is therefore not responsible, unless they shall be stolen by some of his own household, whose honesty and fidelity he is presumed to guarantee."

2. Prima Facie Liability in General.—There is not an entire uniformity of opinion among legal writers, according to Hill v. Owen, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 323; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 124, upon the question "whether an inn keeper is under the same rigid liability for the loss of property committed to his care that a common carrier is subjected to by a like event." "But that the loss of the property of a guest from a common tavern," it is said by DEWEY, J., in that case: "is prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of its keeper, and unexplained, sufficient to render him liable, we believe to be a doctrine with regard to which there is no doubt. Story on Bailm. 314; Burgess v. Clements, 4 Maule & S. 306." This statement is substantially reiterated in Laird v. Eichold, 10 Ind. 212, 213; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 323, 324. Expressions involving the idea of prima facie liability are used even in cases which do not adopt the doctrine which is based on that expression.

Thus in Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 261 (1886), CHIEF JUSTICE COMEGYS, in his charge to the jury, said: "An inn keeper is like a common carrier, an insurer of the goods of his guest. When such liability is the subject of an action, he is deemed in law to be prima facie responsible, so that if a plaintiff proves himself a guest in [the] legal sense, and sustains a loss while that relation exists, the inn keeper's obligation to pay for it at once becomes perfect, unless he can show that the loss occurred by the act of God, the enemies of the country or the fault or misconduct of the plaintiff or his servants, or friends of his company, as before stated. Nothing short of inevitable accident, casualty of war, or act of the plaintiff, his servant, or such friends, will excuse him."

See on this point explanation of presumptive negligence of inn keeper in Hulett v. Swift, 33 N. Y. 571; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 405, 408.

See Laird v. Eichold, 10 Ind. 212, 215; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 323, 325, in which case it is declared to be the correct doctrine, founded on principle as well as authority, and fully established by the cases of Dawson v. Chauncey, 48 Eng. Com. Law 164; Kisten v. Hildebrand 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 72; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416; Metcalf v. Hess, 14 Ill. 129; and McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574; that "an inn keeper is only prima facie liable for loss or damage to the goods of his guest

Current Expression of Doctrine.—As the doctrine is comprehensively expressed, inn keepers are not responsible to the same extent as common carriers, but though the loss of goods while at an inn will be presumptive evidence of the negligence of the inn keeper or his domestics, yet he may, if he can, repel the presumption of negligence and show that there has been no negligence whatever, or that the loss has been occasioned by inevitable accident or superior force.¹

Complete Formulation of Doctrine.—Perhaps the most complete statement of this doctrine is contained in the following extract from the opinion in a leading case: "The general doctrine deducible from the authorities, ancient and modern, is that keepers of public inns are bound well and safely to keep the property of their guests accompanying them at the inn; and in case such property is lost or injured, the inn keeper can only absolve himself from liability by showing that the loss or injury occurred without any fault whatever on his part; or by the fault of the guest, his companions or servants; or by superior force; and the burden while in his possession, and that he may exculpate himself by proof that the loss did not happen through any neglect or fault on his part, or that of his servants for whom he is responsible." "The interests of the public," said WORDEN, J., in that case, which reviews various authorities, "are sufficiently subserved by holding the inn keeper prima facie liable for the loss or injury of the goods of his guest, thus throwing the burthen of proof upon him to show that the injury or loss happened without any default whatever on his part, and that he exercised the strictest care and diligence. And it is more in accordance with the principles of natural justice to permit him to exonerate himself by making such proof than to shut the door against him and hold him responsible for an accident happening entirely without his default, and against which strict care and prudence would not guard." It is said of this case in Baker v. Dessauer, 49 Ind. 28, 31, that it "decides that although an inn keeper is prima facie liable for the loss of the goods of his guest, yet that he may exonerate himself by showing that the loss happened without any fault on his part, and that he exercised the strictest care and diligence."

¹ See Howe Machine Co. v. Pease, 49 Vt. 477, 483, REDFIELD, J., said: "JUDGE STORY comprehensively states the rule of duty and liability of inn keepers: 'Inn keepers are not responsible to the same extent as common carriers. The loss of goods while at an inn will be presumptive evidence of the negligence of the inn keeper or his domestics. But he may if he can repel the presumption of negligence and show that there has been no negligence whatever, or that the loss has been occasioned by inevitable casualty or superior force.' This rule and definition was adopted by CHIEF JUSTICE REDFIELD in McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316, 336; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 581; and we would not attempt to improve this as a rule of duty. This rule of law is of universal application as to all species of property put in charge of the landlord by the guest. But when the matter of fact, whether the landlord is at fault in a particular case is being enquired into and ascertained, in the application of the rule to different species of property and different conditions of property, counter presumptions are often met which exonerate the landlord from any fault. Animals subject to disease, cutlery and machinery liable to rust, fresh fruits and fish liable to decay, possess within themselves the germs and susceptibilities that work out such results. If a horse becomes suddenly diseased with the botts or other malady, or if fruits perish in the package as delivered to the landlord, the natural presumption is that this condition occurred in the due course and order of things, and from the inherent qualities of the property, and the imputed fault or negligence is repelled."

In Kisten v. Hildebrand, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 72, 73; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416, of proof to exonerate the inn keeper is upon him, for, in the first instance, the law will attribute the injury to his default."¹

41. Exoneration by Showing Extreme Care—Permissibility of.—Under the doctrine of the prima facie liability of the inn keeper, he may exonerate himself from liability by showing that he has used extreme care and diligence.²

What Constitutes "Utmost Care" Uncertain.—But what facts will excuse the inn keeper, or what constitutes this "utmost care," are matters which do not seem to be well settled.³

Ordinary Care.—Sometimes, though there does not seem to be any line of cases to such purport, even "ordinary care" is spoken of as sufficient for the inn keeper to show in order to relieve himself of liability.⁴

185. CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL, who delivered the opinion of the court, also said: "An inn keeper is prima facie liable for all losses which happen to the goods of his guests in his inn, all such being attributed to him on the ground of public policy, and the confidence necessarily reposed in him, and on account of the difficulty of proving actual negligence. But he is not liable if the loss be occasioned by external force or robbery, or if it be attributable to the neglect of the guest, or to the act of his servant or companion."

1. Johnson v. Richardson, 17 Ill. 278; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 369, 371.

2. Howth v. Franklin, 20 Tex. 798; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 218, 219.

The correctness of a charge of the court is regarded as beyond question, in Dickerson v. Rogers, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 179; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 642, 643, where it was to the effect that an inn keeper is bound to take all possible care of the goods of his guests; and that if through any default of him or his servants, any injury or loss should occur, he will be liable in damages for the value of the property lost; but that if the injury occurred through accident, and from no default or neglect of the inn keeper or his servant, he will be exonerated from liability. The opinion of the court, by GREEN, J., states or quotes in support of this view the positions taken in 2 Kent Com. (2nd. ed.) 593; Story Bailm. 306, § 470, and Jones on Bailments 95. But see criticism of these authorities in Mateer v. Brown, Cal. 221; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 303, 307.

3. In Howth v. Franklin, 20 Tex. 798; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 218, 219, ROBERTS, J., said for the court: "When property committed to the custody of an inn keeper by his guest is lost, the presumption is that the inn keeper is liable for it; and he can relieve himself from that liability by showing that he has used extreme diligence. What facts will excuse him is a question, perhaps, not very well settled; but it is well settled that he cannot excuse himself without showing that he has used extreme care and diligence in relation to the property lost; Edwards on Bailments 406; 2 Kent Com. 592."

In Dunbier v. Day, 12 Neb. 596, 605; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 772, 774 (1882), reference is made, in passing upon an instruction deemed objectionable, to that extreme care which, according to the weight of authority, the law imposes upon an inn keeper, and quotations to show the nature of this "utmost care" are given from 2 Kent Com. 592; Houser v. Tulley, 62 Pa. St. 92; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 390; Redfield on Carriers and Other Bailees, pp. 458 et seq. 464. Reference is also made, in regard to the inn keeper's liability for losses by theft, to § 596 of the same work and to Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657; Sibley v. Aldrich, 33 N. H. 558; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 745; Shaw v. Berry, 31 Me. 478; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 628; McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574; Piper v. Manny, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 282; Howth v. Franklin, 20 Tex. 798; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 218; Johnson v. Richardson, 17 Ill. 302; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 369; Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471; Norcross v. Norcross, 53 Me. 163. It will be seen that many of these cases are such as hold an inn keeper to the strict liability of an insurer and would not admit proof of his negligence at all, thus including any question of the degree of care and diligence exercised by him. 4. Thus in Newson v. Axon, 1 Mc-

Guest's Contributory Negligence.—Again, it is declared that the standard of duty for the inn keeper is "extraordinary diligence," but that in case of the loss of his guest's goods, the presumption is a "want of proper diligence," though the inn keeper may relieve himself by showing contributory negligence on the part of the guest.¹

42. Loss by Accidental Fire—Conflict of Authorities.—The authorities are not harmonious in regard to the liability of the inn keeper for accidental or incidental fire occurring without his fault or negligence, and destroying or damaging the goods of his guest.²

Inn Keeper's Liability Maintained.—The doctrine that an inn keeper is responsible for the safe keeping of property committed to his custody by a guest, and that he is an insurer against loss, unless caused by the negligence or fraud of the guest, or by the act of God or the public enemy, has been applied, in a leading case in New York, so as to hold the inn keeper responsible for the value of property of a guest destroyed by fire while in the inn keeper's custody.³

Inn Keeper's Liability Denied.—But the opposite view, exempting the inn keeper from liability for goods of his guest destroyed by fire without his negligence, is strenuously maintained in a leading case in Michigan,⁴

Cord L. (S. Car.) 509; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 685, the position seems to be taken that an inn keeper is liable for all losses that might have been prevented by ordinary care; and that whether ordinary care has been exercised by him is a question for the jury, the burden being on the inn keeper to show such ordinary care.

1. By the common law as well as by the statutes of Georgia, it is said in that state, in the case of Sasseen v. Clark, 37 Ga., 242, 248 (1867), "inn keepers are bound to extraordinary diligence in preserving the property of their guests, entrusted to their care, and are liable for the same if stolen, where the guests have complied with all reasonable rules of the inns. Rev. Code, § 2091; Story Bailm. §§ 470, 471; Edwards Bailm. 4028."

"In case of the loss of the goods entrusted to the care of the inn keeper by his guest," continues WALKER, J., in the same case, "the presumption is a want of proper diligence in the landlord. Rev. Code, § 2094; Story Bailm. § 472. He may, however, relieve himself from liability by showing that the loss was occasioned by the negligence or fault of the guest himself."

2. See consideration of subject in note to Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 453, 454.

3. Hulett v. Swift, 33 N. Y. 571; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 405 (1865). But after the decision in this case the law was modified by statute in 1866, apparently with the view of mitigating the rigor of the rule declared in that case; See Faucett v. Nicholls, 64 N. Y. 377, 380. Compare Mowers v. Fethers, 61 N. Y. 34; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 244.

Party Leaving Property Not a Guest.—In Ingallsbee v. Wood, 33 N. Y. 577; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 409, it is held that an inn keeper is not responsible except as an ordinary bailee for hire, for the safe keeping of a horse left in his stable by one who is neither a lodger nor a guest, where the animal is consumed by fire without negligence on the part of the inn keeper.

Showing Want of Ordinary or Reasonable Care.—Under the statutes of Maine (Stats. 174, c. 1874, § 2) inn holders are answerable to their guests, in case of loss by fire, only for ordinary or reasonable care in the custody of their baggage or other property, and consequently cannot be held liable where no want of such care is alleged or proved. Burnham v. Young, 72 Me. 273, 274.

4. Cutler v. Bonney, 30 Mich. 259; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 127, 129, where CAMPBELL, J., said: "Accidental fire which reviews such authorities as are found on the subject.¹

43. Injuries to Animals—Without Negligence of Inn Keeper.—The inn keeper has been held liable, according to the strict view of his responsibility, in the case of an injury to an animal placed in the inn keeper's stable by a guest, where such injury happened without the fault of any one, or at any rate without actual negligence on the part of the inn keeper.²

stands on quite as strong grounds of exemption as other mishaps. The common law has in some things been modified by decisions, but it is contrary to law to follow dicta made in cases calling for no departure from the old law. It would be a manifest innovation to create a liability where no possible default exists, and to sustain such an innovation there ought to be both reason and authority. We cannot object to follow settled law in our own views of what policy ought to make it. But we are not prepared to assume there is any policy which will compel persons who are in no wise in fault to respond in damages where the law is not clear against them. And the authorities directly in point on losses by fire are not numerous, and do not, in our judgment, call for any such consequences."

1. See the case just cited, of Cutler v. Bonney, 30 Mich. 259; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 127, 130, where it is said that the doctrine imposing upon the inn keeper liability for accidental fires "may be said to rest entirely on what was said by JUSTICE PORTER in Hulett v. Swift, 33 N. Y. 571; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 405. In that case the subject is discussed at length, and with some ability. But no foundation is shown there for the doctrine asserted, beyond remarks which are confessedly opposed to the text books, and which were foreign to what was actually decided in the cases where they are found. The whole opinion of the learned judge is open to the same criticism; as he himself declares, the point discussed did not really arise, inasmuch as no proof was introduced changing the presumption raised by law against the defendant. The opinion was not unanimous, and the dissent of JUDGE DENIO would detract much from its force, even if it had been pertinent to the facts. Opposed to this is the case of Merritt v. Claghorn, 23 Vt. 177, in which JUDGE REDFIELD, delivering the opinion of the court, reached the conclusion that where there was no negligence there was no responsibility for loss by fire. This opinion is an able one, and was not given beyond the facts. It has been both approved and criticised, but no occasion has heretofore arisen to consider its correctness upon similar facts. Vance v. Throckmorton, 5 Bush (Ky.) 42; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 327, is to the same effect, but there, too, the decision might have rested on other grounds, and its authority is therefore diminished. We regard the decision in Vermont as reasonable, and as within the fair meaning of the common law rule."

2. Thus in Sibley v. Aldrich, 33 N. H. 553; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 745, 749 (1856), it is said: "The question was very fully and ably discussed in the recent case of Shaw v. Berry, 31 Me. 478; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 628, and the court there came to the conclusion that to discharge an inn keeper from liability for the loss of goods in his charge it is not sufficient for him to show that the loss did not happen by his neglect or default, but that he must go further and show that it happened by the fault, direct or indirect, of the owner." In the first of these cases "a horse placed by a servant of the guest in the inn keeper's stable was kicked by the horse of another traveller, and his leg broken, while in the other case the horse of the guest was placed in the stable in the evening and properly cared for, but in the morning one of his hind legs was found to have been broken above the gambrel joint." On facts very similar to those of the former case, however, a different conclusion was supported in Dawson v. Chauncey, 5 Q. B. 164, 168.

Inevitable Accident.—In Russell v. Fagan, 8 Atl. Rep. (Del.) 258, 261, one of the exceptions to the absolute liability of the inn keeper for the goods of his guest is said to be the act of God, "which is aptly called inevitable accident without the intervention of man (2 Kent Com. 597); that is, some casualty which human foresight could not discern, and from the consequences of which, therefore, no protection could be provided;" and the question to be decided was stated to be, whether the breaking of a mare's leg was a pure accident, that is, a casualty in no degree chargeable to any act or omission of the inn keeper or his groom.

Death of Animal.—Where the doctrine of prima facie liability prevails, it is deemed applicable to loss to the guest occasioned by the death of an animal.¹

1. Thus in Metcalf v. Hess, 14 Ill. 129, 131, it is laid down that in cases "where the loss is occasioned by the death of an animal, the requirements of public policy are fully answered by holding the inn keeper prima facie liable for the loss, leaving him to exonerate himself, if he can, by showing that the death was in no manner occasioned by a want of proper care and attention on his part."

More Stringent Rule Not Sustained.—

There has been a refusal to support a more stringent rule against the guest in Hill v. Owen, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 323, 324; s. c. 35 Am. Dec. 124, where DEWEY, J. said: "It is true, we have seen no case against an inn keeper, in which the loss complained of was caused by the death of an animal. But as this kind of loss, like that occasioned by the absence of property must take place under circumstances which may or may not excuse the defendant, as the case may be, we see no reason to distinguish between them in the application of the rules of evidence, making the loss in the latter event prima facie evidence of negligence and in the former requiring the plaintiff to go further, and show the acts of neglect which caused the loss. The policy of the law has devolved upon inn keepers a severe liability, lest they be tempted by motives of gain to collude with evil disposed persons, and afford facilities in purloining the property of their guests. This reason, we are aware, does not apply to the loss of property rendered useless by death; but as the tavern keeper has it more in his power to give to such an event the appearance of inevitable accident, by throwing around it delusive circumstances, than the owner of the property has to do away that appearance, we think there is sufficient reason why the death of an animal, while in his keeping, should be considered sufficient to charge him with the loss, unless he can exculpate himself by showing due care on his part."

Repelling Landlord's Imputed Fault or Negligence.—Indeed an extension of the rule in the other direction is indicated in Howe Machine Co. v. Pease, 49 Vt. 477, 483, 484, where it is said, in the case of an action against an inn keeper for alleged negligence in keeping a horse, whereby he fell ill and became worthless: "If a horse becomes suddenly diseased, with the botts or other malady, or if fruits perish in the package as delivered to the landlord, the natural presumption is that this condition occurred in the due course and order of things, and from the inherent qualities of the property; and the imputed fault or negligence of the landlord is repelled."

Death from Injury During Removal of Animal from Inn Premises.—An inn keeper has been held liable for an injury to a guest's horse causing its death from the kick of a stallion while passing the stall of the latter animal, where such injury occurred while the guest's driver was getting the horse off the premises. Seymour v. Cook, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 451, 453.

Horse Found Dead in Stall.—In Thickstun v. Howard, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 535, a party was held not entitled to recover from an inn keeper under the following circumstances: The inn keeper had taken the party's horse to keep a few days before the accident happened which occasioned the suit. The owner of the horse rode him out one evening, and on returning to the stable, tied him in the stall where he had been previously kept. The next morning the horse was found dead in the same stall with his head fast in the trough. The trough was made of a hollow beach log, having a bulge in the middle which rendered that part of the trough wider than it was at the top. The horse had got his head fast in the trough by the jaws, and as the witnesses supposed, had killed himself in the attempt to draw it out. The decision was based mainly upon the point particularly raised that the party was not a guest; but in sustaining the instructions and verdict of the lower court it was said that "the evidence amounts to this only, that the defendant was an inn keeper, and the horse was accidentally killed while in his keeping, without showing a want of ordinary care upon the part of the defendant or that the plaintiff was a guest at the inn." The body of the opinion, however, seems to make no reference to the need of showing "want of ordinary care," but repeats the strict doctrine of the liability of the inn keeper as an insurer.

44. To What Articles Liability Attaches—Kind or Value Immaterial.—An inn keeper's liability is not limited to property of any particular kind or value, but embraces all the personal property of the guest brought to the inn.¹

Money Included.—It includes money as well as other movable goods and chattels,² for there can be no distinction in this respect between goods and money.³

Not Confined to Travelling Appurtenances.—Furthermore, the liability extends to money and chattels other than those provided for the necessary or convenient use of the guest while travelling.⁴

1. Kellogg v. Sweeney, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 397, 403; s. c., 46 N. Y. 291.

In Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 57, 664; after quoting the resolution in Calye's Case, 8 Coke 32, concerning deeds, obligations, etc., brought into the inn, it is said: "The language of MR. CHANCELLOR KENT is equally strong: 'The responsibility of the inn keeper extends to all his servants and domestics and to all the movable goods and chattels and moneys of his guest which are placed within the inn.' 2 Kent's Com. 593." This language is also quoted in Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 414, 427.

A more limited scope is given to the liability of the inn keeper in Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 591, where it is said by SOMERVILLE, J., that it "may be considered as the fair result of all the cases" that the common law liability of inn keepers "covers all the personal property of every kind, infra hospitium, which the traveller or guest finds it convenient to carry about him, including money, jewelry or other valuables devoted to use or ornament. Redf. on Carriers, 458; Ramaley v. Leland, 43 N. Y. 539; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 728."

2. In Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 664, it is said: "In Calye's Case, 8 Coke 32, it was resolved that 'if one brings a bag or chest, etc., of evidences into the inn, or obligations, deeds, or other specialties, and by default of the inn keeper they are taken away, the inn keeper shall answer for them." In Kent v. Shuckard, 2 Barn. & Adol. 803, 804, 805, the passage from Calye's Case, 8 Coke 32, 33a, is given more at length, and it is then said of the inn keeper by TAUNTON, J.: "On the same principle he must be responsible for money."

3. See Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 414, 427, where it is said: "The liability of an inn keeper for the goods of his guest being founded, both by the civil and common law, upon the principles of public utility and the safety and security of the guest, there can be no distinction in this respect between the goods and money. Kent v. Shuckard, 2 B. & Ad. 803; Armistead v. White, 6 Eng. Law & Eq. R. 349; Quinton v. Courtney, Haywood (N. Car.) 40." In Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 667, this language is quoted as the decision of the court in that case, and is regarded as decisive authority upon the point that the liability of the inn keeper extends beyond an amount of money sufficient for reasonable travelling expenses of the guest. The facts of the case are stated to be that the sum of five hundred dollars in cash was stolen from the trunk of the plaintiff's agent, which was in a room occupied by him in the defendant's hotel.

4. See Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 664, where it is said by RHODES, J., for the court: "There are many cases in which it is held that his responsibility (meaning that of the inn keeper) extends to money and chattels other than such as are provided by the guest for his necessary or convenient use while travelling. In Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 448, the guest recovered for certain bags of wheat and barley. In Piper v. Manny, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 282, the recovery was for a tub of butter. In Sneider v. Geiss, 1

Extends Beyond Reasonable Travelling Expenses.—Indeed, the position has been repudiated that the inn keeper is not liable for an amount of money beyond what is sufficient for the reasonable travelling expenses of the guest.¹

Not Confined to Property Arriving with Guest.—Nor is the liability of the inn keeper confined to such property as the guest has in his possession at the time of his arrival at the inn.²

Yeates (Pa.) 34, the inn keeper was held liable for 230 Spanish milled dollars. In Hulett v. Swift, 33 N. Y. 571; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 405, the plaintiff recovered the value of his horses, wagon and a load of buckskin goods. In Townson [Townson] v. Havre de Grace Bank, 6 Har. & J. 47; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 254, the property in controversy was one thousand dollars in bank bills. In Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 303, the amount deposited was five thousand five hundred dollars in gold dust."

1. See Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 663, where it is said: "The doctrine of Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 303, is opposed to the limited liability contended for. It would be altogether impracticable for the court to lay down any rules for determining what would be reasonable travelling expenses. One person might choose to make the trip in the cheapest manner, and another might indulge in the most lavish expenditures. The contingencies to which the party might be subject on his journey could not be anticipated, nor the expenses calculated with any certainty." The opinion criticises at length the case of Wilkins v. Earle, 3 Rob. (N. Y.) 352; s. c., 4 Am. Law Reg., N. S. 742, which was, however, reversed on appeal, upon full consideration of the subject, in 44 N. Y. 204; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 664. In Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 414, 427, it is also said that "the principle . . . that inn keepers are liable for such sums only as are necessary and designed for the ordinary travelling expenses of the guest is unsupported by authority, and wholly inconsistent with the principle upon which the liability of an inn keeper rests. The reasoning, both of the civil and common law, by which the doctrine of the liability of inn keepers, without proof of fraud or negligence, is maintained, is that travellers are obliged to rely almost entirely upon the good faith of inn keepers; that it would be almost impossible for them in any given case to make out proof of fraud or negligence in the landlord, and that, therefore, the public good and the safety of travellers require that inn holders should be held responsible for the safe keeping of the goods of the guests. This reasoning maintains the liability of the inn keeper for the money of the guest quite as strongly as his liability for goods and chattels. To same effect see Johnson v. Richardson, 17 Ill. 302; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 369, 371, 372. But a different view is maintained in Maryland. See Treileer v. Burrows, 27 Md. 130, 147. Compare, also, Simon v. Miller, 7 La. An. 360, 361; Pope v. Hall, 14 La. An. 324, 326; Noble v. Milliken, 74 Me. 225, 229; Wisenger v. Taylor, 1 Bush (Ky.) 275; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 626, 627.

In Smith v. Wilson, 36 Minn. 334, 336, it is said in a case where the guest had the sum of nearly $500 in a belt upon his person, that the responsibility of the inn keeper in respect to the money of his guest was not limited to such an amount as was necessary for the guest's travelling expenses. Armistead v. Wilde, 17 Q. B. 261; Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Cush, (Mass.) 417; Wilkins v. Earle, 44 N. Y. 172; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 664; Quinton v. Courtney, Hayw. (N. C.) 40; Redf. Carr. 598, 605; Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557, 600; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 663.

2. See Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 662, where RHODES, J., for the court, said: "No reason is perceived why the responsibility of the inn keeper for the safe keeping of his guest's property should be limited to such property as the guest may have in his immediate possession at the moment of his arrival at the inn. The relation of inn keeper and guest, out of which springs the responsibility, is the same, whether the guest's baggage is conveyed to the inn with him or at a subsequent time; or whether he then has in his possession or afterwards procures the money, clothing, etc., that he may need on his journey." Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal.

"Dead Property" Left by Departing Guest.—If a person, however, leave at an inn property which the inn keeper can derive no profit from keeping, it is termed "dead property";¹ and if he goes away himself, and the property is stolen in his absence, he has no action against his host, for the reason that he was not a guest at the time.²

45. Baggage of Guest—Liability Not Ordinarily Confined to.—The liability of an inn keeper is not, ordinarily, limited to wearing apparel and such articles as travellers are accustomed to carry under the denomination of baggage, but it extends to the goods of a guest, and includes packages left from time to time for a guest, which are received by him for the accommodation of his customers or lodgers.³

Different Rule in Maryland.—But in Maryland, inn keepers are placed, in relation to the baggage of their guests, on the same footing with carriers of passengers, and are not held liable for any valuables of a guest beyond ordinary baggage, unless their safety is secured by special contract or arrangement.⁴

46. Responsibility for Valuables—Rigorous Rule Sustained.—Despite the rigor of the rule, the position seems to be maintained that the inn keeper is liable for money, jewelry or other valuables left in a guest's room in a trunk or other receptacle, without disclosing their character, unless the inn keeper brings home to the guest notice that such valuables must be delivered to the inn keeper or deposited in such place as he directs.⁵

221; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 303, was regarded as "authority that the inn keeper may be held responsible for the property of the guest, placed under his care, after the owner of the property has become a guest at the inn."

1. See Towson v. Haver de Grace Bank, 6 Har. & J. (Del.) 47; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 254, 256, 257.

2. McDaniels v. Robinson, 28 Vt. 387; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 720, 723. In this case a bag of gold was left by a guest who on departing also allowed his horse to remain in the stable at the inn, and subsequently sued the inn keeper for the loss of the money. BENNETT, J., said for the court: "The bag of gold was dead property, giving to the defendant no right to make gain from its keep as inn keeper; and it had no connection with the cessation or continuance of the original relation of host and guest; and to say that the leaving of the horse at the inn is to have an effect upon the capacity in which the defendant can be charged for the safe keeping of the money is to say what we cannot well understand."

3. Needles v. Howard, 1 E. D.

Smith (N. Y.) 54, 55, 60. To same effect is statement in Taylor v. Monnot, 4 Duer 116, 117. See also discussion of subject of limitation of his liability to baggage in Sasseen v. Clark, 37 Ga. 242, 249.

4. Treiber v. Burrows, 27 Md. 130, 149. Concerning baggage in general, consult further article in Am. & Eng. Cycl. of Law 1042.

5. See Kellogg v. Sweeney, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 397, 404, where it is said by MULLIN, J.: "It would seem to be just and reasonable, that when a satchel, bag, or trunk of a guest contains articles of great value, he should disclose it to the inn keeper, to the end that he may adopt such precautions against loss as the magnitude of the value makes necessary. It is very hard upon a landlord to hold him liable for large sums of money or jewelry which has been left in a guest's room in his trunk, when no intimation has been given that any such property has been taken there. But hard as it is, I find no case which exempts him unless he brings home to the guest notice that such valuables must be delivered to

Objection Coming Too Late.—An inn keeper cannot raise the objection that the amount of money brought by the guest was larger than the guest might need for his reasonable expenses, after the money committed to his special custody, according to the rules of the inn, has been stolen, even admitting that the objection would be good before the deposit was made.¹

Distinction Concerning Presumed Custody.—But a distinction has been made between articles attached to the person of the guest or carried about with him for his personal convenience, such as wearing apparel, pocket-money, etc., as to which the inn keeper is prima facie the responsible curator without delivery to him for safe keeping, and articles of special value, such as packages of money or a case of jewelry, which should be placed in the custody and control of the inn keeper in order to make him responsible therefor.²

Statutory Regulation, etc.—Statutes also sometimes modify the strict common law liability of the inn keeper, as by providing that if the proprietor of a hotel should furnish a safe at the office of the hotel for the safe keeping of money and other valuables of his guests, and should notify them thereof by posting notices in the rooms occupied by his guests, he should not be liable for any loss of money or valuables, etc., if the guests should neglect to deposit the same in such safe.³

him (the landlord) or deposited in such place as he shall direct." In Johnson v. Richardson, 17 Ill. 302; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 369, 371, it is held that a guest of a hotel is not required to place his valuables in the custody of the inn keeper, even though the inn keeper has an iron safe for that purpose, and the guest knew of that fact.

Peddler's Pack.—An inn keeper has been held liable for the safe keeping of the valise and box of a peddler who was a guest at the hotel, although the inn keeper was not notified of the nature and value of their contents, and the peddler was too drunk to take proper care of them. Rubenstein v. Cruikshanks, 54 Mich. 199; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 806.

1. Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 663.

2. Thus in Weisenger v. Taylor. 1 Bush (Ky.) 275; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 626, 627, the court, through ROBERTSON J., says: "The inn keeper's responsibility is only coextensive with his custody and control, and his pledge of the integrity of his servants. And the question of custody and control depends on facts indicative of intention. If the guest having an article not attached to his person, nor carried about him for his personal convenience,—such, for example, as a bag of gold, a case of jewelry, or a package of paper currency—the fact that he does not either notify the host of it, or offer to place it in his actual custody, would imply that he trusted to his own care, and intended to risk all consequences. And if the article thus held by himself alone should be stolen from him while abiding in the inn, the loss, like the preferred custody, might be his own alone, unless it resulted from the dishonesty of some of the household. The inn keeper, deprived of both custody and control, could not be held responsible on any just or consistent principle. But such articles as apparel worn at the time, and watch and pocket money, are not expected to be delivered to the inn keeper for safe keeping, and the retention of them in the guest's room neither keeps them from the implied custody of the inn keeper nor implies a waiver of his responsibility. In respect to such articles, therefore, thus kept, the inn keeper is prima facie the responsible curator."

3. See statement of Purvis v. Coleman, 21 N. Y. 112, in Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 665. On construction of Law of Louisiana.—Under the law of Louisiana, inn keepers are responsible only for what is usually and ordinarily in the trunks of travellers, such as their clothes and the money necessary for their journey, and are not responsible for the unknown treasure of the traveller, unless placed in the hands of his host.¹

New York statute, see Ramaley v. Leland, 43 N. Y. 539; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 728.

Special Agreement for Safe Keeping.—

The statutes of Massachusetts exempt inn holders from liability for the loss of goods which are not personal baggage and effects, unless such goods shall be delivered by the traveller to the inn holder for safe keeping: Pub. Stats., ch. 102, § 12. Where, therefore, a trunk of a commercial traveller containing goods for sale comes into the custody of the inn keeper, only in his capacity as such, the inn keeper is not liable for the loss of such trunk, which was stolen while deposited by the agent of the express company on the sidewalk in front of the inn, unless there was proof of the special agreement for safe keeping contemplated by the statute: Becker v. Haynes (Mass.), 29 Fed. Rep. 441, holding that in the absence of evidence tending to show that the loss resulted from the wilful default or neglect of the inn keeper or his servants, the jury should not have been instructed that the owner was entitled to recover if the trunk was lost by the carelessness or negligence of the inn keeper.

Proof of Posting Notices.—Where there is no clear proof that an inn keeper posted the notice required by statute, that valuables must be left with him for safe keeping, and no actual notice is brought home to the guest, the entire question of the posting of the notice is properly left to the jury. Chamberlain v. West, 37 Minn. 54.

Articles Not Covered by Enactment.—

In Maryland, where the statute provides a mode by which an inn keeper may protect himself from liability to his guests for losses of money, plate and jewelry, it has been held that a compliance with such provisions would not relieve the inn keeper from liability for the theft from the room of a guest of a watch, watch guard, pocketbook, and ninety dollars in money. Maltby v. Chapman, 25 Md. 310, 316, where it was considered that all of these articles, with the exception of the money, were of a class not within the statutory provisions referred to, while the enactment would not apply to the money if it was reasonable and necessary for travelling expenses.

Depositary not Bailee for Hire.—A deposit of valuables has been regarded as made with the inn keeper in his character as such, and not as a bailee without hire, where guests of the inn were requested by notice not to leave money or articles of value in their rooms, but to deposit the same for safe keeping in a safe, and a deposit of money and gold dust is so made by a guest in part several days after his arrival, apparently in compliance with the notice and for the better care of the property. Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 662, where RHODES, J., speaking for the court, said that there was nothing in the case to show that the deposits were made by the guests or received by the inn keeper "for any other reason or purpose than in pursuance of such request, and the better to enable the inn keeper to give that care and security to the property which are required of him by law," and that in "Needles v. Howard, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 55 and Stanton v. Leland, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 94, the material questions arising upon this point were very fully considered, and the conclusion was adverse" to the position of the inn keeper.

Failure to Disclose Contents of Pocket

Book, etc.—A guest has been held not guilty of such negligence as to defeat his right to recover against the inn keeper, in not informing the clerk of the hotel that there was money in the pocket book handed him for safe keeping, where the book was such as is commonly used for carrying money, and the evidence showed that the clerk understood that it contained money. Sheraft v. Bailey, 25 Iowa 553, 555. Concerning right of traveller to assume that clerk in charge has authority to receive money for safe keeping, see Curtis v. Murphy, 63 Wis. 4; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 242, 246.

1. Simon v. Miller, 7 La. An. 360, 361. But the inn keeper will be liable for the theft of the necessary baggage of the traveller, including his watch, and the money which he has about him for his personal use, notwithstanding a

Maryland Doctrine, etc.—In Maryland, it is considered that "money in the trunk of a guest, to constitute a part of his baggage for which the inn keeper is responsible, should be of such an amount only as would be convenient to meet his travelling expenses," and that to arrive at this the condition of the guest, his mode of life, his habits, tastes, the nature, character and objects of his journey, must be taken into consideration by the jury."¹

47. Goods Kept for Show and Sale—Use of Room for Special Purpose.—The particular responsibility imposed upon inn keepers at common law does not extend to goods lost or stolen from a room in a public inn furnished to a person for purposes distinct from his accommodation as a guest.²

Release of Inn Keeper from Common Law Liability.—Accordingly, where a guest at a hotel takes to his room valuable articles of merchandise, and keeps them there for show and for sale, inviting purchasers to examine them, the hotel keeper is relieved, as to such merchandise, from the special liability of the common law.³

Statutory Regulation.—But this matter has been the subject of statutory regulation in some of the States.⁴

regulation of the inn requiring travellers to deposit articles of value in the safe at the office. Pope v. Hall, 14 La. An. 324, 326.

1. Treiber v. Burrows, 27 Md. 130, 147, stating that "it is the province of the jury in such a case to determine the question of sufficiency, under such directions and limitations as the court can prescribe." The opinion reviews the authorities on the question of what constitutes the baggage proper of a traveller or the guest of an inn, upon which were based the decisions in Pettigrew v. Barnum, 11 Md. 434, and Giles v. Fauntleroy, 13 Md. 126.

Money Which May Be Carried as Baggage.—Where the amount of money taken for a journey is no more than is reasonably prudent for the payment of expenses, including liabilities to accident, delays and sickness, it is exempted from the provisions of the Maine statute referring to "personal baggage, or money necessary for travelling expenses and personal use," and may properly be carried as baggage, for the loss of which an inn holder would be liable without special delivery to him. Noble v. Milliken, 74 Me. 225, 229.

2. See Fisher v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 383, 385; s. c., 16 Fed. Rep. 71, 74; where JUSTICE HARLAN, delivering the opinion of the court, remarks: "Kent says that 'if a guest applies for a room in an inn for a purpose of business distinct from his accommodation as a guest, the particular responsibility does not extend to goods lost or stolen from that room.' 2 Kent Com. 596. See also Myers v. Cottrill, 5 Biss. [U. S.] 465, 470 per DRUMMOND, J.; Story on Bailments, § 476; Burgess v. Clements, 4 M. & S. 306; Redfield on Carriers and Bailees, 443; Addison Law of Contracts (6th ed.) 360."

3. Myers v. Cottrill, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 465, 471; where "the true rule of law on the subject" is said to be that if "a person, going into a hotel as a guest, takes to his room not ordinary baggage, not those articles which generally accompany the traveller, but valuable merchandise, such as watches and jewelry, and keeps them there for show and sale, and from time to time invites parties into his room to inspect and to purchase, unless there is some special circumstance in the case showing that the inn keeper assumes the responsibility, as of ordinary baggage, as to such merchandise, the special obligations imposed by the common law do not exist, and the guest, as to those goods, becomes their vendor and uses his room for the sale of merchandise and really changes the ordinary relations between inn keeper and guest." To like effect see Mowers v. Fethers, 61 N. Y. 34; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 244, 246; Carter v. Hobbs, 12 Mich. 52; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 762, 765; Neal v. Wilcox, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 146; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 266, 267.

4. The statute of Wisconsin, relating to the deposit of valuables in an iron

48. Inn Precincts—Bringing Goods Within Inn.—The general principle is well settled that an inn keeper is bound to keep safely the goods of his guest, which are in his custody, infra hospitium, but that he shall answer for nothing without the inn.¹ Thus, the liability of inn keepers does not attach unless the goods are brought within the inn or otherwise placed within their custody in some customary and reasonable way.²

Delivery Into Special Custody Unnecessary.—It is not necessary, however, that the goods should be placed in the special keeping of the inn holder,³ but it is sufficient if the goods are deposited in the house of the inn keeper or entrusted to the care of his family or servants.⁴

Inn Keeper's Liability for Goods Infra Hospitium.—If the goods are received into the care and keeping of the inn keeper, within the meaning of the terms of his common law liability, safe, however, has been held not to alter the rule, though the inn keeper would be liable in any event for the negligence of either himself or his servants. Myers v. Cottrill, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 465, 472. Under the statute of Missouri, exempting the inn keeper from liability "for the loss of any merchandise for sale or sample belonging to a guest," unless written notice of the possession of such merchandise be given, it is not sufficient to fix full responsibility for the safety of such merchandise upon the inn keeper that he has actual knowledge of the possession of such merchandise by a guest, or consents to the use of a room for the display or sale of such merchandise. Fisher v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 383, 386, 387; s. c., 16 Fed. Rep. 71, 74.

1. Albin v. Presby, 8 N. H. 408; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 679, 680; citing Calye's Case, 8 Coke (Dub. ed.) 32.

2. Norcross v. Norcross, 53 Me. 163, 170.

3. See Story Bailm. (8th ed.), § 479. In Burrows v. Trieber, 21 Md. 320; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 590, 591, GOLDBOROUGH, J., says for the court that it is "well settled that a delivery of the goods into the custody of the inn keeper is not necessary to charge him with them, for although the guest does not deliver them, or acquaint the inn keeper with them, still the latter is bound to pay for them if they are stolen or carried away, even though the person who stole them or carried them away is unknown. See Story on Bailments, § 579, cited with approbation in McDonald v. Edgerton, 5 Barb. N. Y. 560, supra."

4. Absence of Inn keeper.—Norcross v.

Norcross, 53 Me. 163, 170. This case holds the inn keeper liable for the loss of the overcoat of a traveller and wayfarer, who was received and entertained at the inn as a guest, and hung up such coat on a hook in the office, which was the place in the inn allotted for that purpose. "It was not his fault," says DICKERSON, J., in this case, that neither the inn keeper nor his servants were in the room at this time, nor was it his duty to guard his garment until they should come into the room, or to inform them where he had put it. His duty was discharged when he left his coat in the place established by the defendant for depositing such articles." In Georgia it is also not necessary to show actual delivery to the inn keeper, but depositing the goods in a public room set apart for such articles is a delivery to the inn keeper; and where an overcoat was deposited on a shelf in a reception room of the hotel, as directed by the person in charge thereof by the permission of the inn keeper, during his absence, this is sufficient to charge the inn keeper for the loss of the overcoat. Rockwell v. Proctor, 39 Ga. 105, 107. "It was the duty of the inn keeper," said WARNER, J., in that case, "either by himself or competent servants or agents to take charge of the goods of his guests, and if he allowed persons to officiate in that capacity during his absence in his hotel he is responsible for their conduct, and for the loss of the goods deposited therein as directed by such servants or agents; and it is no sufficient answer for the inn keeper to say, after the goods are lost that the persons whom he permitted to officiate that is, infra hospitium, he is liable therefor,¹ and the question of the negligence of the inn keeper or his servants is immaterial.²

Placing Goods in Appurtenant Out House.—In order that the goods should be within the inn, it is not necessary that they should be within the walls of the house or of the stables.³ Thus, where the guest put his sleigh, loaded with grain, into a wagon-house, where it was usual to receive loads of that description, it was considered that the bags of grain might be considered infra hospitium, and the inn keeper was held liable for the loss sustained by the guest, whose property was stolen during the night from such out house appurtenant to the inn.⁴

Putting Goods Near or On Highway.—An inn keeper is even responsible for the safe keeping of a load of goods belonging to a traveller who stops at his inn for the night, if the vehicle containing the goods be deposited in a place designated by the servant of the inn keeper, although such place be an open unenclosed space near the public highway.⁵

in that capacity, during his absence, were not his servants or agents.

1. In Burrows v. Trieber, 21 Md. 320; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 590, 591, the court, through GOLDSBOROUGH, J., says: "By an examination of the authorities it is clear that inn keepers are liable for the goods of a guest which are brought by him within the inn, infra hospitium. See Story on Bailments, § 478; Bennett v. Mellor, 5 Term Rep. 273; 2 Kent's Com. 593, 594; McDonald v. Edgerton, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 560."

2. Piper v. Manny, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 282, 283. This position is sustained by the rulings in Calye's Case, 8 Coke 32; Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 448; Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471. "The place therefore," it is further remarked, "when the goods are deposited, is not the test; it is whether they are in the custody of the inn keeper or at the risk of the guest. This must necessarily depend upon the particular circumstances of the case. Prima facie the inn keeper is liable, and the onus lies on him to show the contrary . . . And he cannot discharge himself from this common law liability without the concurrence of the guest." An illustration was taken from a case where the inn keeper was held liable for goods taken by direction of the guest to the commercial room, although it was the custom to take the luggage of travellers to their bedrooms, unless contrary orders were given. Richmond v. Smith, 8 Barn. &

C. 9, distinguishing Burgess v. Clement, 4 Maule & S. 306.

3. Albin v. Presby, 8 N. H. 408, 410; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 679, 680. "When goods shall be said to be in the custody of the inn keeper, within the inn," says PARKER, J., in this case, "is sometimes a question of difficult solution. Sadners v. Spencer, 3 Dyer 266 b; Farnsworth v. Packwood, 1 Stark. 249; Burgess v. Clements, 4 M. & S. 306; Richmond v. Smith, 8 Barn. & Cress. 9 . . . It is not necessary that the goods should be within the walls of the house, or of the stables, in order to be within the inn."

4. Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 448, 449. But a shed in an open yard, under which the wagon of a guest is placed for the night, is not to be deemed a part of the inn, so as to charge the inn keeper for loss, unless he neglects, upon request, to put the goods in a place of safety. Albin v. Presley, 8 N. H. 408, 413; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 679, 682. These cases are stated in Norcross v. Norcross, 53 Me. 163, 170. See also Piper v. Manny, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 282, 283.

5. Piper v. Manny, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 282, 283, where a sleigh load of butter was placed near an open shed in the yard of the inn, at the direction of the hostler of the inn, who, on being asked if there was a barn in which the load could be placed, answered that it was as safe in the yard as under lock and key.

Where a party coming on a fair day to an inn, with a horse and gig, orders

Parts of House to Which Liability Extends.—Prima facie, an inn keeper's responsibility extends to every part of his house, into which it is usual for such property to be taken.¹ But an inn keeper has been held not liable in damages for fatal injuries suffered by a guest in a part of the house to which he was not entitled or invited to go, as a "service room," used for the deposit of luggage, etc., and in which he lost his life by falling down the well of a lift.²

Putting Animal to Pasture, etc.—Nor is an inn keeper liable, in his character as such, if sheep be put to pasture under the direction of the guest, and they are injured by eating poisonous plants, though he may be responsible in damages if chargeable with negligence.³

Separate Bath House Along Sea Shore.—An inn keeper is likewise not responsible for valuables stolen from bath houses which are not bath rooms, such as are attached to hotels or kept within them, but separate buildings erected upon the sea shore and used as places in which those who bathe in the sea change their garments and leave their clothes and other valuables while so bathing.⁴

Transportation of Baggage to and from Hotel.—Where a traveller delivers his trunk or other personal property at a railroad depot to a porter to be taken to a hotel, he thereby impliedly contracts to become a guest of the hotel to which such servant is attached; and if he comply with such implied contract, the liability of the hotel keeper for the care of the goods begins from the time of the delivery to his servant, and that liability con-

the horse to be put into the stable, but gives no special directions as to the gig, and the horse is accordingly put into the stable, but the gig is placed with other carriages in the public highway, near the house, where it is the practice of the inn keeper to put carriages on fair days, the inn keeper is deemed responsible if the gig is stolen, though the case is admitted to be on the border line. Jones v. Tyler, 1 Ad. & E. 522, 524, 525; s. c., 3 Nev. & M. 576, 579, 580.

1. Epps v. Hinds, 27 Miss. 657; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 528, 529.

2. Walker v. Midland Ry. Co., 55 L. T., N. S. 489.

3. Hawley v. Smith, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 642, 643.

But an inn holder receiving cattle, driven on the road, to keep over night, may be responsible as such for the safety of the place provided for them; and in the absence of any notice to the contrary from the inn keeper at the time, the jury have been held warranted in finding that it was to him as such inn keeper that the property was delivered. Hilton v. Adams, 71 Me. 19, 20.

4. Minor v. Staples, 71 Me. 3, 6; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 318, 319, where WALTON, J., says: "It seems to us that such an establishment is not as distinct from an inn as a wharf or a boat house would be; and that an inn keeper, as such, can no more be made responsible for property stolen from such a bath house than he could be for property stolen from a wharf or boat house, if he happened to be the keeper of the latter as well as the former."

In this case there was held to be a fatal variance between the allegations and the proof where the declaration was against the defendant as an inn keeper, and averred that he kept a common inn, and received the plaintiff into said inn, together with his money, and a watch, and a chain, and a ring, said property was wrongfully taken and carried away and wholly lost to him; but the evidence showed that the property was taken from a bath house, standing upon the sea shore or beach, tinues until the goods be again delivered to the actual custody and control of the guest.¹

49. Duration of Inn Keeper's Liability—In General.—The beginning and termination of the liability of an inn keeper for goods of his guest must depend upon circumstances. Such responsibility begins from the moment the inn keeper receives the guest with his goods, and it ends when the relation between him and the guest is dissolved.²

When Liability Begins.—The liability of the inn keeper for the goods of his guest entrusted to his care or to the care of his servants begins from the time the goods are entrusted, and at the place where the inn keeper usually takes charge of the baggage of his guests.³ But the extraordinary liability of the inn keeper does not attach until he actually has a guest.⁴

Temporary Absence of Guest.—A person who is in fact a guest may leave the inn for a time and still leave his property under the safeguard of the landlord's liability; but how long he may stay away and leave his property without ceasing to be a guest seems not to have been determined, though it is said that he cannot, by leaving valuable property, aver an indefinite period, and staying away as long as he pleases, subject the landlord to the peculiar liability of an inn keeper.⁵ at a considerable distance from the inn, while the plaintiff was absent bathing in the sea.

1. Sasseen v. Clark, 37 Ga. 242, 250, 251. As to liability of inn keeper where trunk lost or stolen on the way to the hotels, see Dickinson v. Winchester, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 114; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 760, 762.

2. Sasseen v. Clark, 37 Ga. 242, 250; Edw. Bailm. (1st ed.), p. 407, or 2nd ed., p. 342, §470. Thus, according to the case just cited, where a traveller delivers his trunk or other personal property to a hotel porter at a railroad depot the liability of the inn keeper for the care of the goods begins from the time of such delivery to his servant and continues until the goods are again delivered to the actual control and custody of the guest. Concerning continuance of relation of host and guest, see Ross v. Mellin, 36 Minn. 421, 422; Whitemore v. Haroldson, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 312, 314; McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 578.

3. Sasseen v. Clark, 37 Ga. 242, 250.
Loss of Trunk by Hack Driver on Way to Hotel.—In Dickinson v. Winchester, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 114; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 760, 763, it was held that an inn keeper is liable for the loss of a trunk by a hack driver where such inn keeper has given public notice that he will furnish free carriage to and from his house, and has engaged the owner of the hack to carry his guests, and a railway passenger, having notice of the arrangement and intending to put up at such house, enters the hack and entrusts his trunk to the driver at the station. SHAW, C. J., said for the court: "Whether it be considered the defendants are to be considered as inn keepers, who assume the care of the guest and his baggage at the station, instead of waiting for his arrival at their own door or stable, or whether they are to be considered as common carriers of persons, who are responsible for the care of passengers' baggage, as incident, is perhaps immaterial. In either case the consideration for the undertaking is the profit to be derived by the inn keeper from the entertainment of the traveller as a guest, and an implied promise is founded upon such consideration."

4. See Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 667.

Concerning establishment of relation of inn keeper and guest, see Gastenhof v. Clair, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 265, 267; Ross v. Mellin, 36 Minn. 421, 422; Read v. Amidon, 41 Vt. 15; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 560, 561; McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 576, 578.

5. Whitemore v. Haroldson, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 312, 314.

End of Relation and Responsibility.—According to various cases, which perhaps constitute a preponderance of authority, the relation of inn keeper and guest, with its attendant liabilities on the part of the former, no longer exists when the guest settles his bill and leaves the inn, though he entertains or even expresses an intention to return.¹

50. Liability for Goods of Departing Guest—In General.—It is said generally that after the relation of guest ceases, the inn keeper appears liable only as an ordinary bailee, gratuitous or otherwise, for the inanimate goods his departing guest may have left in his care, unless strict proof be furnished of a different understanding.²

As Gratuitous Bailee.—According to one view of the matter, the liability of the inn keeper in such cases is merely that of a gratuitous bailee who is responsible only for gross negligence.

Thus, it is considered that when the guest settles his bill and departs from the inn, leaving his baggage behind him and requesting the inn keeper to take care of it until his return, which he says will be in a few days, the relation of inn keeper and guest no longer exists, as the inn keeper has ceased to receive any profit from the entertainment of the guest, and the expectation to become a guest again at some future time does not continue the relation.³ In such a case the inn keeper is regarded merely as the gratuitous bailee of the baggage of the traveller, and is held responsible for its loss only when guilty of gross negligence.⁴

Consult further on temporary absence of guest, Allen v. Smith, 12 Com. B., N. S. 638, 644; Day v. Butler, 2 Hurl. & C. 14, 18, 19; Lynar v. Mossop, 36 Up. Can., Q. B. 230, 235; Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663, 666; McDonald v. Edgerton, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 560, 563; Towson v. Havre de Grace Bank, 6 Har. & J. (Del.) 47; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 254, 256.

1. See Miller v. Peeples, 60 Miss. 819, 822; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 423; O'Brien v. Vaill, 22 Fla. 627; Lynar v. Mossop, 36 Up. Can., Q. B. 230, 235. On termination of relation of inn keeper and guest, see further Seymour v. Cook, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 451, 453; s. c., 35 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 180, 183, and McDaniels v. Robinson, 28 Vt. 387; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 720, 722.

2. Sch. Bailm. 270, and cases cited. In Murray v. Marshall, 9 Colo. 482; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 152, 153, after so citing this authority, quotation is made from another writer who cites as "not without weight" the case of Adams v. Clem, 41 Ga. 67; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 524, and who says: "It is an interesting question how long, when a guest leaves his baggage with the innkeeper, the inn keeper is liable as inn keeper for such. Judging from the analogy obtaining as to common carriers, we would conclude that the exceptional and owners' insurance liability of the inn keeper would not continue after the guest had permanently left the inn, allowing, of course, for a few hours which may be necessary for porters to effect a removal." Whart. Negl., § 687.

3. O'Brien v. Vaill, 22 Fla. 627, 632, disapproving Adams v. Clem, 41 Ga. 65; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 524, and McDonald v. Edgerton, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 560, and stating the latter case misconstrued the statements of JUDGE BRONSON in Grinnell v. Cook, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 485; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 663. The opinion also cites, in support of the position taken, Miller v. Peeples, 60 Miss. 819; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 423.

4. O'Brien v. Vaill, 22 Fla. 627, 632, 633, holding that there is nothing to show that the inn keeper was guilty of gross negligence, because, after the departure of the guest, he removed the baggage from the room occupied by the guest to the main hall of the hotel, from

Enlarged Liability.—But some of the cases show a tendency to enlarge the liability of the inn keeper, under such circumstances, beyond that of a bailee without compensation, and to hold him liable as a bailee holding property upon which he has a lien as security for a sum due, so as to be bound for ordinary care.¹

51. Inn Keeper's Negligence—Negligence Deemed Immaterial.—According to one line of cases, perhaps constituting a majority of the decisions, it is, as before explained, not necessary for the guest to prove negligence to support his action for the loss of his goods against the inn keeper;² nor will proof by inn keeper that he was guilty of no negligence be an excuse for him, unless he brings himself within those cases which are excepted.³

Want of Negligence Held to Exonerate.—But, according to a different line of cases, the prima facie liability of the inn keeper is based on the presumption of his fault or negligence,⁴ and that which it was stolen, where it is in evidence that the only entrance to the hotel was through the office, and that while the hotel was open some person was always in charge of the office, and when it was closed a watchman was on duty.

1. See Murray v. Marshall, 9 Colo. 482; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 152, 153, 154, where, after quoting Adams v. Clem, 41 Ga. 67; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 524, and Giles v. Fauntleroy, 13 Md. 126, ELBERT, J., says: "Departing guests not infrequently leave baggage in care of the inn keeper for a few hours or a few days, to be called for or to be forwarded to some designated destination. The great increase of modern travel creates an increased demand for more extensive accommodations in this respect. With a view of influencing travellers in selecting their hotels, inn keepers more or less generally respond to this demand and provide increased accommodations and assume voluntary duties respecting the baggage of guests thus left in their charge. In such case, if the liability of the inn keeper is that of voluntary bailee without compensation, guests are left with little or no protection. The case shows a tendency to enlarge it." It was accordingly held that when a guest, on leaving a hotel without the intention of returning as a guest, fails to pay his bill, but returned within forty-eight hours to get his valise, the inn keeper was bound to ordinary diligence and ordinary care, and the loss of the valise raises the presumption of negligence against him. Consult also Murray v. Clarke, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 102, 103.

2. See Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 448, 449; Compare Gile v. Libby, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 70, 74. In Burrows v. Trieber, 21 Md. 320; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 590, 591, it is said by the court, through GOLDSBOROUGH, J.: "The authorities fully sustain the doctrine that it is not necessary, when goods are proved to be lost, to prove negligence in the inn keeper to make him liable for the loss. See Cayle's Case, 8 Coke 32; Bennett v. Mellor, 5 Term Rep. 273; Clute v. Wiggins, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 177; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 448; 2 Kent's Com. 594, 595; McDonald v. Edgerton, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 562; Shaw v. Berry, 31 Me. 485; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 628." For application of same doctrine to baggage of guest, see Pettigrew v. Barnum, 11 Md. 434; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 213, 217.

3. See Shaw v. Berry, 31 Me. 478; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 628, 630. Consult also full discussion of subject in Sibley v. Aldrich, 33 N. H. 553; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 745. On view that inn keeper is strictly liable as insurer. See Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 663.

4. Thus in Laird v. Eichold, 10 Ind. 212; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 323, it is said: "The authorities all agree that an inn keeper is prima facie liable for any loss or injury to the goods of his guest, not occasioned by the act of Providence, the public enemies or the fault of the guest, and the prima facie liability is based upon the presumption that the he may exonerate himself by positive proof that he was not in any way negligent¹.

Degree of Care Required.—The general rule of diligence, on the part of inn keepers, is that of "uncommon care," as Lord HOLT has it, or "the extremest care," as some of the books have it.² But it has been laid down that public utility "requires that inn keepers be held liable for all losses which might have been prevented by ordinary care."³ loss or injury arose from the negligence or fault of the inn keeper. Hill v. Owen, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 323; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 124, supra; Story on Bailm., § 472." But see suggested explanation of misconception in this view, made in Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 303, 309.

1. See Baker v. Dessauer, 49 Ind. 28, 31, quoting Story Bailm. (8th ed.) § 472, note 5. In Laird v. Eichold, 10 Ind. 212; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 323, 324, reference is made to the "dicta and decisions to the effect that an inn keeper is liable" for any loss or injury to the goods of his guest, "although it happened without his default." After quoting from Washburn v. Jones, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 193 and Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, it is further said: In "Shaw v. Berry, 31 Me. 478; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 628 and Sibley v. Aldrich, 33 N. H. 553; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 745, it is held that proof by the inn keeper that there was no negligence in himself or his servants is not sufficient for his immunity. This doctrine, however, we think, is not in accordance with the weight of authority, nor are we entirely satisfied with the principle on which it rests." The cases regarded as fully establishing the different doctrine of the text are Dawson v. Chauncey, 48 Eng. Com. L. 164; Kisten v. Hildebrand, 9 B. Mon. 72; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 416; Metcalf v. Hess, 14 Ill. 129; and in McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574.

2. See McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 316; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574, 582. The duty of the inn keeper to exercise "extraordinary care" is laid down in Shoecraft v. Bailey, 25 Iowa 553, 555; Weisenger v. Taylor, 1 Bush (Ky.) 275; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 626, 627. "More than ordinary care," is the expression used in this connection in Treiber v. Burrows, 27 Md. 130, 143.

3. Newson v. Axon, 1 McCord L. (S. Car.) 509; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 685, 686.

In this case the horse of a traveller was put into a stable which was very open, although there was a bar to one door and a lock and key to the other. The servants of the guest made objections to letting the hostler lock the stable door. The inn keeper was held liable because the horse was stolen from the stable, as the question whether ordinary care was exercised by the inn keeper was for the jury, and their verdict was not to be disputed unless they had found very much against the weight of evidence. But the opinion declares that it "was a want of ordinary care to have such a stable," and that whenever it is doubtful whether ordinary care has been used or not, the presumption is against the bailee, and unless it be considered that the inn keeper was regarded as acting only in the capacity of a livery stable keeper, these expressions do not seem to be reconcilable with the usual view.

Charge Calling for Ordinary Care Only.—In Clary v. Willey, 49 Vt. 55, one count declared against an inn keeper as such, and the charge as given was stated in the opinion (p. 62) to have held the defendant, if found to be an inn keeper, to the use only "of such care as is ordinarily bestowed upon horses by inn keepers and livery stable keepers." It is thereupon remarked that the law "holds inn keepers to a stricter accountability for goods placed in hospitium to the exercise of the highest degree of care." 2 Parsons Cont. 624, 625; McDaniels v. Robinson, 26 Vt. 337; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 574. On this and other points, therefore, the charge was regarded as being fully as favorable to the defendant as was proper.

Hostler Driving out Horse for Exercise.—In Day v. Butler, 2 Hurl. & C. 14, an hostler of an inn, for the alleged purpose of exercising a horse, drove it out, when it took fright at a locomotive and was injured, whereupon the inn keeper was sued by the guest "Holding Out" Safety of Premises.—By letting a hall in his inn for public purposes, an inn keeper holds out that it is safe, and is bound to exercise proper care in providing safe arrangements for the entrance and departure of those invited to the hall; and matters held properly submitted to the jury are the question whether there was a breach of this duty, and also the question whether one who paid for admission to a dance in the hall, and was injured by walking off a piazza or wooden awning in front of the inn, was in such a state of intoxication as contributed to the injury.¹

Capacity of Ordinary Bailee.—A recovery in an ordinary action on the case against a bailee may be had against an inn keeper who is guilty of negligence in many instances, where he would not be liable in case on the custom, as in actions by boarders, and those putting animals to pasture, etc.²

Where property is delivered to the servant or agent of an inn keeper, and thus comes to the possession of the latter, and is afterwards delivered by him to a wrong person, or otherwise lost owning the horse. MARTIN, B., in his opinion (p. 19), said that "the defendant having contracted to take reasonable care of the horse, and having employed a person to look after it, who did not take reasonable care of it, is responsible for the injury." POLLOCK, C. B., however, merely said on this point (at p. 18) that it "may be that it was proper to exercise the horse, but the liability of the defendant inn keeper does not cease on that account."

1. Camp v. Wood, 76 N. Y. 92, 96; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 282, 285.

Exposing Guests to Infection.—Where the jury were warranted in finding that hotel keepers, with knowledge of the prevalence of smallpox in the hotel, kept it open for business, and permitted a party to become a guest without informing her of the presence of the disease, such inn keepers are liable to the party who became their guest under these circumstances, and contracted the disease while in their house, and who was herself guilty of no negligence contributing to the injury. Gilbert v. Hoffman, 66 Iowa 263; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 263, 264.

2. See Neal v. Wilcox, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 146; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 266, 267, where it is said by the court, through PEARSON, J., in regard to the ordinary action on the case against a bailee, that "a recovery in that action may be made against an inn keeper who is guilty of negligence in many instances where he would not be liable in 'case' on the custom; for instance, one takes boarding at an inn on a special contract; his goods are lost, the inn keeper is not liable 'on the custom,' but is liable in a special action on the case, if negligence be proved. So if one leave a trunk or carriage to be kept by an inn keeper, or if one deliver a flock of sheep or a drove of mules or horses to an inn keeper to be pastured, he is only liable as bailee on proof of negligence." In Manning v. Wells, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 746; s. c., 51 Am. Dec. 688, 689, it is held that an inn keeper is liable for the loss of the goods of a boarder only where he is proven to have been guilty of culpable negligence. In Clary v. Willey, 49 Vt. 55, one count declared against an inn keeper as a bailee for hire. It appeared that the defendant, by himself or servants, hitched the plaintiff's horse, which was in his care, next a horse that defendant or his servants knew to be in the habit of kicking other horses. As a result, plaintiff's horse was kicked and injured. It was held, that though plaintiff knew where his horse was hitched, and made no objection thereto, yet as he did not know of the vicious habit of the other horse, defendant would be guilty of actionable negligence as a bailee for hire in thus hitching plaintiff's horse, and therefore the court was justified in refusing a charge to the contrary, and in making the only ground of exemption the assumption of the sole control of the horse by the plaintiff.

by his gross negligence, he is liable, whether as inn keeper or not, and whether he is a gratuitous bailee, or a bailee for hire.¹

52. Contributory Negligence of Guest—In General.—The inn keeper may be exonerated by showing that the guest has taken upon himself exclusively the custody of his own goods, or has, by his own neglect, exposed them to peril.² Indeed, in general, it is competent for the inn keeper to show that the loss of the goods of the guest is attributable to the negligence of the guest.³

Want of Ordinary Care Sufficient.—It was formerly supposed that only gross negligence on the part of the guest would prevent

1. Coykendall v. Eaton, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 188, 193.

Where the valise of a departing guest was left behind by him, and on his coming back and presenting a return check which had been given him, the valise could not be found, it was held, that whether the property was regarded as the subject of an ordinary bailment, or as property in the inn keeper's hands, which they had a right to detain until the discharge of the lien upon it for the bill incurred by the guest for his entertainment, the inn keepers were bound to the exercise of ordinary care and diligence, and the burden was upon them to show the circumstances of the loss; and that in default of any such affirmative proof by them the presumption will arise that they were guilty of negligence. Murray v. Clarke, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 102, 103.

2. Read v. Amidon, 41 Vt. 15; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 560, 561, citing Story on Bailments, §§ 478, 480, 482, 483; 2 Kent's Com. 593; Richmond v. Smith, 8 Barn. & C. 9; Bennett v. Mellor, 5 Term Rep. 273. "It is doubtless true," says GOLDSBOROUGH, J., for the court, in Burrows v. Trieber, 21 Md. 320; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 590, 592, "that there are exceptions to the liability of inn keepers,—as inevitable accidents, the acts of public enemies, and of the owners of property or their servants. This last exception must be construed to mean a discharge of liability where the owner takes control of his property, though it be still infra hospitium, and its loss or injury may be attributed to his own neglect."

3. See Spring v. Hager, 145 Mass. 186; Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 592. In the latter case SOMERVILLE, J., said: "In addition to other defences which are authorized to be set up by an inn keeper in excuse of loss of the guest's goods, is the fraud or negligence of the guest himself, which may be classed under the head of contributory negligence. This constitutes, according to the better view, an established exception engrafted upon the rule of liability in the case of common carriers. 1 Smith's Lead. Cases (7th Am. ed.) 411; Ala. etc. R. Co. v. Little, 71 Ala. 611. The reasons are just as forcible why it should also obtain in the case of the keepers of inns, hotels and other like houses of public entertainment. [Note to] Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 455; Chamberlain v. Masterson, 26 Ala. 371; Purvis v. Coleman, 21 N. Y. 111."

Statute Declaratory of Common Law.—In Massachusetts Pub. Stat., ch. 102, § 16, provides that "an inn holder against whom a claim is made for loss sustained by a guest may in all cases show that such loss is attributable to the negligence of the guest himself, or to his noncompliance with the regulations of the inn, if such regulations are reasonable and proper, and are shown to have been duly brought to the notice of the inn holder." "This provision," it is said in Spring v. Hager, 145 Mass. 186, "was first enacted in stat. 1853, ch. 405, § 3, which was soon after the decision in Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. 417, and although this statute made some changes in the law, the clause that it is competent for an inn keeper to show that the loss is attributable to the negligence of the guest is only declaratory of the common law. Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471; Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 417, supra; Oppenheim v. Hotel Co., L. R., 6 C. P. 515; Cashill v. Wright, 6 El. & Bl. 891; Morgan v. Raney, 6 Hurl. & N. 265; Elcox v. Hill, 98 U. S. 218."

a recovery, but it is now settled that a want of ordinary care contributing to the loss will have that effect.¹

Thus, an inn keeper will not be liable for the loss of the goods of his guest if the loss is occasioned by the want of that ordinary care, on the part of the guest, which a prudent man may be reasonably expected to take under all the circumstances of the case; and the question whether or not the guest has taken such ordinary care is always a question of fact for the jury.²

Confinement to Period While Party a Guest.—But in order to exempt an inn keeper from liability for the loss of property, evidence of the neglect of the owner of the property must be con-

1. Jalie v. Cardinal, 35 Wis. 118, 130.

"It is not every slight negligence on the part of the guest, of course," says SOMERVILLE, J., in Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 592, "which will be held to excuse as coming within the principle [that fraud or negligence of the guest may excuse the inn keeper.] Nor is the rule perhaps sound as sometimes found to be intimated that the negligence required to be imputed must be gross negligence, or such as evinces a want of good faith on the part of the plaintiff. The true rule, in our judgment, and the one which seems to be sustained by the analogies of the law in other cases, is, that the want of ordinary care on the part of the guest, or of such as a prudent man may reasonably be expected to exercise under like circumstances, is sufficient to defeat a recovery against the inn keeper, where it appears that such negligence proximately contributed to the loss, and that the loss would not otherwise have happened. Cashill v. Wright, 6 El. & B. 891 [quoted in note to] Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 455."

2. Hadley v. Upshaw, 27 Tex. 547; s. c., 86 Am. Dec. 654, 656, where it is said that the rule thus announced, and believed to be the rule of the law, "was laid down by the court of queen's bench, in the case of Cashill v. Wright, 37 Eng. L. & Eq. 177" [s. c., 6 El. & B. 891, 900]; and that the "same rule was previously intimated by LORD CAMPBELL in the case of Armistead v. White, 6 Eng. L. & Eq. 349, and has been recognized in New York, in the case of Fowler v. Dornon, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 384." In Cashill v. Wright, 6 El. & B. 891, 900, it is said: "We think the rule of law resulting from all the authorities is that . . . the goods remain under the charge of the inn keeper, and the protection of the inn so as to make the inn keeper liable as for breach of duty, unless the negligence of the guest occasions the loss in such a way as that the loss would not have happened if the guest had used the ordinary care that a prudent man may be reasonably expected to have taken under the circumstances."

Intoxication of Guest.—Where there was evidence tending to show that the plaintiff, who sued for the loss of money brought to an inn was intoxicated when he retired to his room about 11 o'clock in the day, and that he was negligent in not finding the key in his door, and in not locking the door, it was held that there was no error in submitting to the jury the question of negligence on his part. Jalie v. Cardinal, 35 Wis. 118, 130, DIXON, C. J., said: "Negligence in cases of this nature, as in all others, is one of fact for the jury unless the evidence is too plain and positive to admit of doubt or controversy, when the court will be justified in taking the case into its own hands and directing a verdict. We cannot say, in view of the very stringent liability of inn keepers, and of the authorities, that the court would have been justified in doing so in this case, and hence cannot disturb the verdict as being against the evidence. If drunk, the plaintiff might still have claimed the protection of his host, as did Falstaff, when he fell asleep "behind the arras," and might say with him: "Shall I not take mine ease in mine inn but I shall have my pocket picked?" which seems to be a further proof, not noticed by the advocates of that theory, that Shakespeare was a lawyer, and therefore that Bacon wrote Shakespeare. In Walsh v. Porterfield, 87 Pa. St. 376, 378, it was held fined to the period while he was a guest at the inn keeper's house.¹

Exposure of Goods to Unnecessary Peril.—In accordance with the general doctrine, the guest is not relieved from all responsibility in respect to his goods on entering the inn, but is bound to use reasonable care and prudence in respect to their safety so as not to expose them to unnecessary danger of loss.²

Failure to Comply with Rules of Inn.—Where an inn keeper, for the purpose of securing the safety of the goods of his guest, makes a reasonable and proper rule or requirement, to be observed by them, or he will not be responsible therefor, and the goods of a guest having knowledge of the rule are lost solely by reason of

that it was not error in the court to instruct the jury that if they believed that the guest was intoxicated at the time of the alleged robbery, and this contributed in any way to his loss, he could not recover. In Rubenstein v. Craikshanks, 54 Mich. 199; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 806, 810, it is held that an inn keeper's liability for a guest's baggage placed in his charge is not diminished, but rather increased, by the fact that the guest has got too drunk at his bar to take care of it himself.

1. See Burrows v. Trieber, 21 Md. 320; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 590, 592, holding that evidence tending to show neglect and inattention of the party previous to his becoming a guest or his subsequent conduct after leaving the hotel, could not be considered by the jury touching the merits of the case. The expression used in the opinion is "gross neglect," but this has been changed in the text to conform to the law as just stated.

2. Read v. Amidon, 41 Vt. 15; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 560, 561. This case holds that the guest's carelessness, exonerating the inn keeper from liability for the loss of gloves, is a question of fact to be determined by the jury, in view of all the circumstances, where the guest laid his gloves down under his overcoat on a bench in the presence of the inn keeper, but without calling the inn keeper's attention to them. "What would be regarded as gross carelessness under one set of circumstances," said PIERPONT, C. J., for the court, "might not be so considered under other circumstances; much would depend upon the place, the number of people present, the kind of property as to its value, and the ease with which it might be removed without detection, etc." A suggestion against unnecessary exposure of money, etc., is also contained in Johnson v. Richardson, 17 Ill. 302, 305; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 369, 372.

Keeping Valuables in Room.—The leaving by a guest of a sum equal to $2000 in gold coin, in his trunk in a room in a hotel, after personal notice that there was a safe in the office which was appropriated to the custody of valuables, is such negligence as to discharge the inn keeper from any liability. Purvis v. Coleman, 21 N. Y. 111, 115.

But the fact that a guest sleeping in a room at the hotel, occupied only by himself, retained the sum of nearly $500 in money secured in a belt around his body, is not such conduct as should be deemed negligence as a matter of law, although the bolt of the door to his room could be opened with a wire from the outside. Smith v. Wilson, 36 Minn. 334, 336.

Failure to Deposit Watch and Travelling Money.—Nor is an inn keeper relieved from his common law liability for the loss of the watch and travelling money of his guest by the fact that such inn keeper has complied with statutory regulations by providing a safe and posting notice to deposit valuables. Krohn v. Sweeney, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 200, 202, 203; following Gile v. Libby, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 70.

Unnecessary Display of Articles.—In Armistead v. Wilde, 17 Q. B. 261, a direction to the jury was sustained upon the ground that it must have been understood to mean that if the guest was guilty of gross negligence contributing to the loss the inn keeper was not exonerated, and this view was based on the facts in evidence that the guest showed his money ostentatiously in the presence of several persons, and then openly put it in an ill-secured box, whence it was stolen. In Cashill v. Wright, 6 El.

his neglect to comply therewith, the inn keeper is not liable for the loss thus occasioned by the negligence of the guest.¹

Theft by Fellow Guest Put Into Same Room.—The guest is not chargeable with negligence where the goods are stolen by a fellow guest, who is put into the same room with him, with or without his consent.²

53. Failure to Lock or Bolt Door—Merely Evidence of Negligence.—It seems to be the prevalent doctrine that the failure of the guest to lock or bolt the door of his room is not negligence as a matter of law,³ but is evidence of negligence for the jury.⁴

& B. 801, where the rule as to the use of ordinary care by a guest was laid down, the guest had shown some money in the commercial room of the hotel, and had afterwards placed his watch on the table in the bed room, leaving the door ajar. The court could not say that there was not some evidence of negligence on the part of the guest, on which the opinion of the jury ought to have been taken.

1. Fuller v. Coats, 18 Ohio St. 343, 352, "To hold otherwise," says DAY, C. J., in this case, "would subject a party without fault to the payment of damages to a party for loss occasioned by his own negligence, and would be carrying the liability of inn keepers to an unreasonable extent. Story's Bailm. §§ 472 and 483; Cashill v. Wright, 6 El. & Bl. 890; Purvis v. Coleman, 21 N. Y. 111, and Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 417."

2. In Olson v. Crossman, 31 Minn. 222, 223, GILFILLAN, C. J., says: "While a theft from the guest by a companion whom he brings to the inn is imputable to the guest as his own negligence, he is not to be charged with negligence merely because the theft was committed by another guest of the inn whom he does not bring there, even though with his consent he is placed to sleep in same room with such other guest." Where the circumstances render it probable that the goods of a guest are stolen from his room by a fellow lodger with whom he is placed, notwithstanding his remonstrances, the fact of his neglecting to bolt the door of his room on retiring, as required to do, pursuant to the statute, by a notice posted in the room, will not avail the hotel keeper as a defence to an action to recover the value of the goods stolen. Gile v. Libby, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 70, 77, 78. Compare further, Buddenburg v. Benner, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 84.

3. "In the absence of notice of a rule of the inn," it is said in Murchison v. Sergeant, 69 Ga. 206; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 754, 756, "to lock and bolt the door, the failure to do so is not legal negligence at common law. Morgan v. Ravey, 6 H. & N. 265; Buddenburg v. Benner, 1 Hilt. [N. Y.] 84; Classen v. Leopold, 2 Sweeney [N. Y.] 707; Gile v. Libby, 36 Barb. [N. Y.] 70, 78. Our statutes have not altered this rule . . . So that, conceding that plaintiff did not lock and bolt his door, and that the lock and bolt were perfect, in the absence of a notice regulation published to him according to law, he would not be legally negligent in not doing so."

4. See Spring v. Hager, 145 Mass. 186, where FIELD, J., remarked: "It has indeed been said that 'in the absence of notice of a rule of the inn to lock and bolt the door, the failure to do so is not legal negligence at common law.' Murchison v. Sergeant, 69 Ga. 206; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 754. It has often been decided that not locking or fastening the door of a bed room is not, as matter of law, negligence; but this fact, in connection with others, may be evidence of negligence for the jury; and the weight of modern authority is, we think, that the failure to lock or bolt the door of a lodging room at an inn, where there is a lock or bolt upon it, is evidence of negligence for the jury. Oppenheim v. Hotel Co., Law R., 6 Com. P. 515; Spice v. Bacon, 36 L. T., N. S. 896; Herbert v. Markwell, 45 L. T. 649."

Failure to Fasten Window.—In Bohler v. Owens, 60 Ga. 185, 188, it is laid down that negligence was a question for the jury, so that the court should not instruct the jury that the guest was bound to fasten a particular window of his room if he could have seen it by the use of ordinary diligence; and that it was for the jury also to judge of the effect of an admission of the guest that

Bare Failure to Bolt Door.—Nor is the single fact that the guest did not bolt his door, after having locked it on the inside, regarded as sufficient evidence of negligence.¹ Indeed, such failure to bolt the door has been considered not to be evidence of negligence at all where there are no regulations brought to the notice of the guest requesting him to bolt the door, and it is not known to the guest that there is a bolt, and his attention is not in any way called to it.²

Simple Omission to Use Key.—So the bare fact that the guest receives a key of his bed chamber and omits to make use of it, does not constitute such fault or negligence on his part as to the loss occurred by his own fault.

Lock on Door out of Repair.—Where the lock on the door of the room furnished the guest was out of repair, and no other fastening was provided, contributory negligence cannot be imputed to him because he slept in the room without fastening the door, or because, knowing the condition of the door in this regard, he failed to notify the inn keeper thereof; and the guest being clearly free from negligence, and no doubt being raised by the undisputed facts in evidence, the question of negligence becomes one for the decision of the court, so that there is no error in withdrawing it from the consideration of the jury. Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 594, 595.

1. Thus in Spring v. Hager, 145 Mass. 186, it is said: "No case has been cited in which it has been held that the single fact that the plaintiff did not bolt his door, after having locked it on the inside, is sufficient evidence of negligence. In Spice v. Bacon, 36 L. T., N. S. 896; and in Herbert v. Markwell, 45 L. T., N. S. 649, the jury must have found that the door was left unfastened either by bolt or lock. In Morgan v. Ravey, 2 Fost. & F. 283, it is said that the plaintiff locked the door but did not bolt it. In the same case, in the court of exchequer (6 Hurl. & N. 265, 266), it is said that 'witnesses were, however, called on the part of the defendants to prove that the plaintiff had told them he had not locked the door.' It was admitted that he did not use the bolt. Pollock, C. B., at nisi prius, left the question of negligence to the jury, but told them at the same time that the guest was not bound to lock his bed room door, etc. The verdict was for the plaintiff."

2. See Spring v. Hager, 145 Mass. 186, where the plaintiff was a guest at defendant's hotel, and was taken by one of the defendants to the room assigned to him, a small hand lamp being left with him. He locked the door, the lock being a common mortised lock and went to sleep. In the morning he found that the lock had been picked and his valuables stolen. The inn keeper refused to pay the loss on the ground that plaintiff was negligent in failing to spring a bolt which was on the door about six feet from the floor, though his attention was not called to the bolt and the plaintiff said he had not seen it. There was no regulation or notice posted in the room requiring guests to lock and bolt the door. It was held that the plaintiff was not negligent and could recover. FIELD, J., said: "It must often depend much upon the circumstances of the case, the customs of the age and country, and the usages of the place, whether the plaintiff has been guilty of such negligence that the loss can be attributable to it, and we cannot say, as matter of law, that on the facts appearing in this case, if the plaintiff saw the bolt and did not use it, this was not some evidence of negligence to be submitted to the jury. The delivery of a key to a guest may be held to be an intimation to him that he is to use it in locking his door. The lock, however, is the only fastening which the guest can use when not in the room. A bolt, if seen, may itself suggest that it ought to be used. If, however, there are no regulations brought to the notice of a guest requesting him to bolt the door, and if it is not known to the guest that there is a bolt, and his attention is not in any way called to it, we think the fact that, after locking his door with a key, he does not search for a bolt and find it, is not evidence of negligence on his part . . . See Murchison v. Ser- relieve the inn keeper from liability for goods stolen from the room while the door was unlocked.¹

Supplementary Circumstances.—But there may be other facts, such as an unnecessary display and careless disposal of the property, which, taken in connection with a failure to bolt or lock the door, may be sufficient to constitute negligence on the part of the guest.²

gent, 69 Ga. 206, s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 754; Batterson v. Vogel, 10 Mo. App. 235."

1. Classen v. Leopold, 2 Sweeney, (N. Y.) 705, 711. But see comments on this case in note to Dunbier v. Day, 12 Neb. 596; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 777, 778, where the opinion is quoted, and where it is said that it seems to be in the minority, as in the Oppenheim and Spice cases. Oppenheim v. Hotel Co., Law R., 6 Com. P. 515, Spice v. Bacon, 36 L. T., N. S. 896. Calye's Case, 8 Coke 32, was also cited, but in both the fact was left to the jury. It is admitted, however, that this "was a peculiarly hard case, for the guest had at first locked his door at night, but finding it made him cold to get up in the morning to let in the porter to build his fire, he adopted the practice of leaving the door unlocked all night, and did not communicate this fact to the landlord." It is also conceded to be "true that KELLY, C. B., in Mitchell v. Woods, 16 L. T. (N. S.) 676, at miss prius, directed a verdict for the plaintiff, holding that there was no duty on the guest to lock his door, and consequently it was not negligence on his part to omit to do so," but it is declared that "this must be considered overruled in Spice v. Bacon, 36 L. T., N. S. 896, where the court of appeal reversed a precisely similar ruling of the same judge."

In Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, however, an action was brought against a hotel keeper to recover damages for the loss of money and jewelry alleged to have been stolen or wrongfully taken and carried away from plaintiff's room while he was a guest at the hotel. SOMERVILLE, J., said: "The only ground upon which we can see that the plaintiff could, in the remotest degree, be chargeable with negligence, was either in sleeping in a room without a locked door or in failing to notify the proprietor of the hotel that the lock was out of order. If the lock had been in good condition, it is questionable whether a failure to use it would be such contributory negligence on the part of the guest as to excuse the defendant's liability. It was so held, however, in Oppenheim v. White Lion Hotel Co., L. R., 6 C. P. 515; but see Herbert v. Markwell, 45 L. T., N. S. 649; Spring v. Hager, 145 Mass. 186; although the contrary seems to have been intimated by LORD COKE in Calye's Case, more than two hundred years ago; 8 Coke's Rep. 203."

In Louisiana, in a case where the guest was intoxicated, it was laid down that if the keeper of the hotel provides with a lock the room where his guest lodges, which opens inside and does not open from outside, it would be in the power of the guest to protect himself and the hotel keeper would not be responsible unless it were shown he was guilty of gross negligence in other respects. Profiel v. Hall, 14 La. Ann. 424.

2. Thus in Herbert v. Markwell, 45 L. T., N. S. 649, as stated in note to Dunbier v. Day, 12 Neb. 596; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 777, the action was against an inn keeper for loss of jewelry by robbery at night, from rooms of the plaintiffs, who were husband and wife, and were his guests. The defence was that the plaintiffs were negligent, first, in not bolting the door and in leaving the key on the outside; second, because the wife wore, the same evening, conspicuously at dinner in the hotel, some of the jewelry which was stolen; and lastly, because the articles themselves, instead of being deposited in some safe place, were left lying carelessly about the room. The court said that, assuming then that the door was not bolted in fact, was that per se evidence of negligence by the plaintiff? The cases which had been cited, Oppenheim v. White Lion Hotel Co., L. R., 6 C. P. 515, and Spice v. Bacon, 36 L. T. (N. S.) 896, showed that such an omission on the part of a guest was not by itself negligence, but that it was an element to be considered with other facts which might be proved, and which, taken together, might amount to negligence.

54. Assuming Special Custody of Goods—Guest's Exclusive Custody Exonerates Inn Keeper.—The inn keeper's responsibility is co-extensive with his custody and control, and he may be exonerated by showing that the guest has taken upon himself exclusively the custody of his own goods.¹

Guest Taking Goods from His Room, etc.—Thus, where a guest at an inn takes his goods from his room or other proper depository in the house, and from the ordinary care and custody of the inn keeper, into his own exclusive custody and control, and they are lost from the inn while so in his custody, the inn keeper is not responsible for the loss.²

Retaining Money on Person.—Possession of money upon the person of the guest does not, however, constitute such exclusive control and custody on his part as will exonerate the inn keeper, unless under certain peculiar circumstances.³

Entrusting Money to Another Inmate.—But an inn keeper is not responsible for the loss or embezzlement of money of the guest entrusted to another guest or inmate for safe keeping.⁴

Here there were other facts, of the slenderest nature, no doubt, but still not such as should be excluded from the opinion of a jury—for instance, leaving the key in the lock outside, which was a temptation to thieves, and the wearing by the wife of her jewelry in a public room a few hours before. For these reasons he thought the rule should be discharged. Probably, if he had been on the jury, he should have found the other way, but what the court had to decide now was not whether the verdict was against the weight of evidence but whether there was any evidence in law to support it. He could not say there was not, and the rule therefore must be discharged. This case was affirmed on appeal. See Weekly Notes of Cases (1882), 112.

1. See Vance v. Throckmorton, 5 Bush. (Ky.) 41, 44; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 327, where the court, through WILLIAMS, C. J., said: "In section 483, Story says the inn keeper may be exonerated 'by showing that the guest has taken upon himself exclusively the custody of his own goods;' and as said by this court in Weisenger v. Taylor, 1 Bush (Ky.) 276; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 626. 'The inn keeper's responsibility is only coextensive with his custody and control, and his pledge of the integrity of his servants; and the question of custody and control depends on facts indicative of intention.'"

Guest Allowing Another to Exercise Acts of Ownership.—Inn keepers are liable for goods put in their charge when lost without any fault on the part of the owner. But if the owner on entering a hotel allows another to exercise acts of ownership over his baggage, without informing the landlord that the baggage is his, and it is afterwards carried away by such other person, this is gross negligence on the part of the owner, and releases the landlord from any liability for the loss. Kelsey v. Berry, 42 Ill. 469, 471.

2. Fuller v. Coats, 18 Ohio St. 343, 351. On effect of ordering goods into particular room, see Packard v. Northcraft's Adm'r., 2 Met. (Ky.) 439, 442; Epps v. Hinds, 27 Miss. 657, 664; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 528, 529.

3. Jalie v. Cardinal, 35 Wis. 118, 129. See also Smith v. Wilson, 36 Minn. 334, 336.

4. Where a guest deposits his money on the credit of the inn with a person who has authority to receive it, or who acts in such a capacity as would naturally lead guests to infer that he was the inn keeper's servant, the inn keeper is responsible for the embezzlement of such money, and is bound to make restitution thereof. Houser v. Tully, 62 Pa. St. 92, 96; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 390. "But though an inn keeper is liable, on grounds of the soundest policy and public convenience, for whatever is deposited in his house by a guest, he is not responsible for the loss or embezzlement of his guest's money where he does not deposit it on the security of

55. Ordering Goods to Particular Room—Public Room of Inn.—Though the inn keeper may be exonerated by showing that the guest has taken upon himself exclusively the custody of his own goods, yet even a request by him that they shall remain in some particular place in the inn, where the place so designated is not in his exclusive possession, but under the control and supervision of the inn keeper, will not discharge the latter from his liability for the goods if they are lost.¹ Indeed, the inn keeper will be liable for the loss of goods left in the public room, unless he has given his guest notice that he will not be responsible for the goods if they are left there.²

Bed Room of Guest.—So where a father gave his son money to pay his travelling expenses on his way to college, and also to defray his expenses while there, and the son in going to college stopped at a public inn, where the money was stolen from him by a stranger who came into his bed room in the night, it was held that the fact of the son ordering his trunk to be taken to his bed room, did not exonerate the inn keeper from liability for the theft committed in such room.³

56. Limitation of Inn Keeper's Liability by Contract—Reasonable Rules of Inn.—An inn keeper is not liable for goods lost through the failure of the guest to comply with a reasonable or proper rule or requirement which is brought to his knowledge with the information that if such regulation is not observed by him, the inn keeper will not be responsible.⁴ But in the absence of an the inn, but entrusts it to another guest or inmate for safe keeping, in whom he reposes his trust and confidence. Sneider v. Geiss, 1 Yeates [Pa.] 35; Houser v. Tully, 62 Pa. 92, 96; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 390.

1. Packard v. Northcraft, 2 Met. Ky.) 439, 442.

Thus where a traveller went to an inn, and, at his desire, a package of his was taken into the commercial room to which travellers in general resorted, whence it was stolen, the inn keeper was held responsible for the loss, although it was the usual practice at that inn to take all the baggage of the guests into their bed rooms, unless orders to the contrary were given. Richmond v. Smith, 8 Barn. & C. 9, 11, distinguishing the case of Burgess v. Clements, 4 Maule & S. 306, because there the plaintiff asked to have a room which he used for the purposes of trade, and not merely as a guest in the inn.

2. Packard v. Northcraft, 2 Met. (Ky.) 439, 442. In this case an inn keeper, as his guest was about to go to bed, remarked to him that he had better take his valise to his room, to which he replied it was not necessary, that it would be safe in the bar room, where it was allowed to remain, and on the next morning it was gone and could not be found. The inn keeper was held liable for its loss.

3. Epps v. Hinds, 27 Miss. 657, 664; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 528, 529, where the court, through FISHER, J., said: "The son by such act only conformed to a general custom, and the inn keeper could only relieve himself by showing that he was to be responsible for the trunk and what might be put in it when left at a particular place. Prima facie, his responsibility for the property of his guests extends to every part of his house into which it is usual for such property to be taken. This is the general rule, which can only be limited by the inn keeper showing that there was a different understanding between him and his guest in regard to the property of the latter."

4. Fuller v. Coats, 18 Ohio St. 343, 351, where DAY, C. J., said: "The public good requires that the property of travellers at hotels should be protected from loss; and for that reason, inn express contract to the contrary, an inn holder is liable for a loss by theft of the property of his guest, although the guest knowingly fails to comply with a reasonable regulation of the inn, if the loss is not, as the statute requires, attributable to the non-compliance with such regulation.¹

Posting Notice in Room.—It has been further held that the mere posting in the room of a guest, a notice limiting the liability of the inn keeper for losses unless certain requirements are observed, does not operate as notice to the guest of its contents.²

keepers are held responsible for its safety. To enable the inn keeper to discharge his duty and to secure the property of the traveller from loss while in a house ever open to the public, it may, in many instances, become absolutely necessary for him to provide special means, and to make necessary regulations and requirements to be observed by the guest, to secure the safety of his property. When such means and requirements are reasonable and proper for that purpose and they are brought to the knowledge of the guest, with the information that, if not observed by him, the inn keeper will not be responsible, ordinary prudence, the interest of both parties, and public policy, would require of the guest a compliance therewith; and if he should fail to do so, and his goods are lost, solely for that reason he would justly and properly be chargeable with negligence. . . . Nor does the rule thus indicated militate against the well established rule in relation to the inability of carriers to limit their liability; for it rests upon the necessity that, under different circumstances of the case, requires the guest to exercise reasonable prudence and care for the safety of his property." Concerning requirement by host that guest shall put his goods in a particular chamber, under lock and key, see Bac. Abr., Inns and Inn keepers, C. Reference to the liability of the inn keeper, where the guests "have complied with all reasonable rules of the inns," is made in Sasseen v. Clark, 37 Ga. 242, 248.

1. Burbank v. Chapin, 140 Mass. 123, 124, 125. "In this case the guest had failed to leave his key in the office, as a reasonable regulation of the inn required, and in passing upon a ruling of the lower court it was said: "The question is not whether an inn holder may make an express contract with a guest limiting his liability, but what contract will the law imply against the guest who fails to comply with a known regulation of the inn. The law will not imply a contract more extensive than the terms of the statute; and in a case like the one before us, in the absence of any express contract, an inn holder is relieved from liability for a loss only when, in the words of the statutes, (Mass. Pub. Stats., ch. 102, § 16), such loss is attributable to the noncompliance with the regulations of the inn."

Unreasonable Regulation.—For construction of Georgia statutes relative to compliance with rules and regulations of inn, see Murchison v. Sergeant, 69 Ga. 206, 210; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 754. It is there suggested that a notice, printed on the register under which a guest writes his name, that "all moneys, jewels, coats, valises, and other valuables must be left at the office, and checks received for them, otherwise the proprietor will not be responsible for any loss," is not a reasonable regulation, even if it were thus properly published. CHIEF JUSTICE JACKSON says that "it cannot be that such a notice is applicable to guests in a room in a hotel. Is the guest to deposit his valise there and go or send after it to get out a clean shirt to put on? Is he to leave his coat there, go to his room in his shirt sleeves, or send it down and get a check for it after he goes to bed? Is he to deposit there his watch and pocket change and get a check for them? The whole regulation, if meant for guests in their rooms, is on its face not only unreasonable but absurd."

2. Bodwell v. Bragg, 29 Iowa, 232, 234. But it seems, according to this case, that the liability of the inn keeper will not be affected by the notice unless it be shown that the guest read it or his attention was called to its contents or that he wilfully avoided learning the same; though it was said that it may be admitted that if through negligence the guest failed to see and read the no-

Printed Heading in Register.—Nor is it sufficient to constitute a contract between the inn keeper and the guest that the guest enters his name in the register under a notice in the form of a printed heading, not shown to have been seen by the guest, or assented to by him, which required valuables to be placed in the office, or else the proprietor would not be responsible for any loss.¹

57. Limitation by Custom or Usage—Sometimes Favored.—It is sometimes suggested that local usage or custom may affect the liability of an inn keeper for the goods of his guest.²

Custom Altering Express Agreement.—But in an action upon an account for board, lodging, washing, etc., it is not competent to meet evidence on the part of the defendant tending to show an express agreement that absences should be deducted from the charges for board, by proof that it is the custom of hotels not to allow such deductions.³

Knowledge or Notice of Usage.—Nor is a usage at inn, for the guests to leave their money or valuables at the bar, or with the keeper of the house or his clerk, binding upon a guest, unless he has actual knowledge or notice of it; and whether he has such knowledge or notice is for the jury.⁴

Custom of Other Individual Inn Keepers.—So, in an action brought against an inn keeper by his guest for the loss of money stolen from the apartment of the guest, it is not competent to offer evidence of the custom of other individual inn keepers and their guests in regard to depositing the money of the guests in safes kept for the purpose.⁵

58. Limitation by Statute—Scope of Statutory Provisions.—The inn keeper's right of lien, his duties and his liability are the subject of statutory regulation in various States,⁶ and under such tice, he ought to be chargeable with knowledge thereof.

1. Bernstein v. Sweeney, 33 N. Y. Super. Ct. 271, 274. To the same effect see Olson v. Crossman, 31 Minn. 222, 223; compare Murchison v. Sergeant, 69 Ga. 206, 210; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 754.

2. Thus where the goods were left in an open yard it was said that "as the inns in this country are not generally furnished with accommodations for the protection of the carriages of all guests who may lodge at the inn, and the custom of permitting them to remain in open yards, where they cannot be protected but by a guard, is so universal, and well known, it is deemed "a sound position that the assent of the traveller is to be presumed in such case unless he makes a special request that his carriage shall be put in a safe place." Albin v. Presby, 8 N. H. 408; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 679. Reference to a difference between city and country hotels in regard to evidence that the guest had failed to use means of securing the goods, is made in Oppenheim v. White Lion Hotel Co., Law R., 3 Com. P. 515, 322. Concerning custom to make delivery of baggage at the cars, see Sasseen v. Clark, 37 Ga. 242, 251.

3. Stebbins v. Brown, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 274, where it was said: "The claim of the defendant, as well as his right to the deduction, stood upon the alleged express agreement, and such agreement, if made, could neither be disposed of nor altered by the proof of custom."

4. Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 417, 420.

5. Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 417, 422, discussing the requirement that a usage must be general and uniform.

6. See Stims. Stat. Law, §§ 4390, 4394, and First Supplement, p. 58, § 4393, enactments an inn keeper may generally relieve himself from the common law liability for money or valuables of his guests lost or stolen, which have not been delivered to him for safe keeping, by posting a notice that he keeps a safe for that purpose.¹

Thus, in New York it has been enacted that whenever the proprietor or proprietors of any hotel shall provide a safe in the office of such hotel, or other convenient place, for the safe keeping of any money, jewels or ornaments belonging to the guests of such hotel, and shall notify the guest thereof by posting a notice (stating the fact that such safe is provided in which such money, jewels or ornaments may be deposited) in the room or rooms occupied by such guest, in a conspicuous manner, and if such guest shall neglect to deposit such money, jewels or ornaments in such safe, the proprietor or proprietors of such hotel shall not be liable for any loss of such money, jewels or ornaments, sustained by such guest by theft or otherwise;² and similar acts have been passed in New Jersey,³ in Wisconsin,⁴ and in California,⁵ as well as in Georgia⁶ and Louisiana.⁷

Strict Construction.—Such statutes are sometimes regarded as being in derogation of the common law, so that they must be strictly construed, and cannot be extended in their operation and effect by doubtful implication.⁸

Compliance with Statute in Giving Notice.—An inn keeper, to avail himself of the statutory protection against claims for loss by his guests, must make substantial compliance with the statute in giving notice.⁹

Violation of Inn Rules Causing Loss.—So an inn holder is liable for a loss of the property of his guest by theft in the Murchison v. Sergeant, 69 Ga. 206, 209; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 754.

Statute Against Frauds on Hotel Keepers.—A statute against frauds on hotel keepers (Minn. Gen. Stats. 1878, ch. 124, § 3) has been held not to be unconstitutional as attempting to imprison for debt, as it imposes a penalty not because of the debt, nor for the purpose of collecting it, but because of the fraud, and where a prosecution and punishment under the act in no way affects the debt. State v. Benson, 28 Minn. 424, 426.

1. See Stims. Stat. Law, § 4392; and Ramaley v. Leland, 43 N. Y. 539; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 728; Wilkins v. Earle, 44 N. Y. 172; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 655; Elcox v. Hill, 98 U. S. 218; Murchison v. Sergeant, 69 Ga. 206, 209; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 754.

2. N. Y. Laws of 1855, ch. 421; construed in Purvis v. Coleman, 21 N. Y. 111, 112; in Ramaley v. Leland, 43 N. Y. 539; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 728, 729; and in Wilkins v. Earle, 44 N. Y. 172; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 665; Giles v. Libby, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 7076; Bendetson v. French, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 3137; s. c., 46 N. Y. 266; Rosenplänter v. Pöessle, 54 N. Y. 262; Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 448.

3. N. J. Act of April 6, 1865, construed in Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 258, 260.

4. Wis. Laws of 1864, ch. 318; construed in Stewart v. Parsons, 24 Wis. 241, 242.

5. Cal. Civ. Code, § 1860.

6. See Murchison v. Sergeant, 69 Ga. 206, 209; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 754.

7. La. Act of Jan. 16, 1860, mentioned in Woodworth v. Morse, 18 La. Ann. 156, 157.

8. Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 593; Ramaley v. Leland, 43 N. Y. 539; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 728, 730.

9. Chamberlain v. West, 37 Minn. 54. Exact compliance with the terms absence of contract to the contrary, although the guest knowingly fails to comply with a reasonable regulation of the inn, such as one requiring the guest to leave the key of his room at the office when going out, if the loss is not, as the statute requires, attributable to the noncompliance with such regulation.¹

Failure to Deposit Valuables in Safe.—But, where a safe for the keeping of specially valuable articles is provided by the hotel keeper, and the notice required by the statute is given, a loser failing to take the benefit of the protection thus furnished him must bear his own loss.²

Negligence of Inn Keeper or His Servants.—Statutes exempting the inn keeper from liability where he has given notice that he keeps a safe for the deposit of valuables, sometimes make an

of the statute is required by Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 593, concerning notice which is not such as the statute prescribes. See Olson v. Crossman, 31 Minn. 222, 223.

1. Burbank v. Chapin, 140 Mass. 113, 124, 125. In this case MORTON, C. J., said, after stating the common law liability of inn holders as insurers: "Our statutes have, in some respects, limited this extreme liability. Pub. Sts., ch. 102, §§ 12-16. Among other things they provide that an inn holder, against whom a claim is made for loss sustained by a guest, may in all cases show that such loss is attributable to the negligence of the guest himself or to his noncompliance with the regulations of the inn, if such regulations are reasonable and proper, and are shown to have been duly brought to the notice of the guest by the inn holder. Pub. Sts., ch. 102, § 16. The statute exonerates an inn holder from his common law liability for a loss sustained by a guest who has knowingly failed to comply with a reasonable regulation of the inn, if the loss is attributable to such noncompliance. The ruling of the superior court went further, and held that an inn holder is exonerated by the fact of such noncompliance, without any enquiry into the question whether the loss is attributable to the noncompliance." This was held erroneous because the law would not imply a contract more extensive than the terms of the statute.

No Publication by Printing on Register.—In Georgia it has been held that sections 2117 and 2120 of the Code, which provide for the liability of the inn keeper, where a guest at an inn has complied with all reasonable rules thereof, and that the inn keeper may adopt reasonable regulations for his own protection, the publication of which to the guests binds the latter to a compliance therewith, are to be construed in connection with § 2119 of the Code, prescribing the posting of notice that an iron safe or other place of deposit is provided for valuable articles, and that, therefore, there was no publication by placing on the register on which the guest wrote his name a notice that "all moneys, jewels, coats, valises and other valuables must be left at the office and checks received for them, otherwise the proprietor will not be responsible for any loss." Murchison v. Sergeant, 69 Ga. 206, 210; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 754. It was considered in this case that if the statute authorized any different mode of publication than by posting, it was of other regulations than those concerning the safe, or other place of deposit, and it was further held that the regulation printed on the register was not a reasonable one.

2. Elcox v. Hill, 98 U. S. 218, 224; citing Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 258, and Stewart v. Parsons, 24 Wis. 241. The statute of Illinois, considered in the first named case, made one exception to this rule, to the effect that if the loss occurs by the hand or through the negligence of the landlord, or by a clerk or servant employed by him in the hotel or inn, the liability remains. But the judge submitted that question to the jury, and the jury found against the plaintiffs, who were manufacturing jewelers, and sued to recover the value of a stock of jewelry lost from one of their travelling bags, which had been left unlocked in the coat room of the hotel over night.

exception of cases where the loss is due to the negligence of the inn keeper or his employees.¹

Design to Protect Inn Keeper.—Where it is provided that the keeper of a public inn or hotel in a city, complying with the requirements of the statute, may relieve himself from liability for the loss of money, jewelry, watches, etc., within the inn or hotel, not occurring through his fraud, or the fraud of some clerk or servant employed by him,² it has been considered that such statute is for the benefit of the inn keeper, intended to afford him the opportunity of protecting himself from losses to which his fraud, or that of his servants, does not contribute.³

Territorial Scope of Statute.—A statute relieving an inn keeper from liability when he has posted notice to deposit valuables, etc., which, by its terms, is limited to the keepers of inns or hotels in a city, cannot be extended to towns or villages, or to inns or hotels situated in the country.⁴

Opportunity to Make Deposit.—Where the statute provides that the proprietor of any hotel shall not be liable for the loss of money, jewels or ornaments of guests, when he has posted notice in the rooms of the guests that he has provided a safe for keeping such valuables, if such guests shall neglect to deposit their money, jewels or ornaments in such safe, the statutory exemption applies to every case where the guest has time and opportunity to make the deposit, and his omission to do so is a neglect within the meaning of the statute.⁵

59. Enactments Concerning Loss by Fire—In New York.—The rigorous common law liability of inn keepers for loss of the property of guests by fire occurring without the inn keeper's fault or negligence,⁶ was modified and limited by statute in New York;⁷ and under this statute the burden is upon the inn keeper claiming the benefit of the enactment to show that the fire occasioning the loss of the goods of the guest was an incendiary one, and the absence of negligence on his part connected with the transaction.⁸

1. Thus the statute of Illinois on this subject makes one exception whereby the liability remains if the loss occurs "by the hand or through the negligence of the landlord, or by a clerk or servant employed by him in such hotel or inn." Elcox v. Hill, 98 U. S. 218, 224.

2. As under Ala. Code of 1876, §§ 1549-51.

3. Beale v. Posey, 72 Ala. 323, 331. So in Rosenplaenter v. Roessle, 54 N. Y. 262, 268, it is said of the rule there laid down that it is the duty of the guest to make the deposit of his valuables whenever he has time and opportunity to do so. "This rule may be inconvenient to guests, but the statute was not intended for their benefit. It was manifestly enacted for the protection of the hotel keepers."

4. Beale v. Posey, 72 Ala. 323, 331.

5. Rosenplaenter v. Roessle, 54 N. Y. 262, 266-268. In this case the guests were in their rooms nearly an hour before going to dinner, but failed to deposit their valuables, and during their absence at dinner, lasting about twenty minutes, their room was unlocked, the trunk broken, and various articles of jewelry worn in ordinary dress abstracted. The opinion discusses and distinguishes Bendetson v. French, 46 N. Y. 266.

6. As declared in Hulett v. Swift, 33 N. Y. 571; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 405.

7. N. Y. Laws of 1866, ch. 638.

8. Faucett v. Nichols, 64 N. Y. 377, 380, 381, stating that the negligent omission by a bailee, like an inn keeper, to take reasonable and prudent precau-

In Maine.—In Maine, effect has been given to an enactment¹ which provides that "in case of loss by fire, inn holders shall be answerable to their guests only for ordinary and reasonable care in the custody of their baggage and their property."²

60. Enactments Concerning Goods for Sale, etc.—Enforcement of Written Notice.—Where a statute provides that no inn keeper shall be liable for the loss of any merchandise for sale or sample belonging to a guest, unless the guest shall give him written notice of having such merchandise for sale or sample in his possession after entering the inn, and furthermore provides that the inn keeper shall not be compelled to receive guests with merchandise for sale or sample in their possession,³ a notice in writing is absolutely necessary to fix an inn keeper's responsibility, and he waives nothing by admitting a guest whom he knows has merchandise for sale or sample in his possession.⁴

Delivery for Safe Keeping.—The statutes of Massachusetts exempt inn holders from liability for the loss of goods which are not personal baggage and effects, unless such goods shall be delivered by the traveller to the inn holder, for safe keeping;⁵ and, under such statutes, the inn keeper has been held not liable for the loss of a trunk, and containing goods for sale, and belonging to a commercial traveller who stopped at the inn and delivered to the clerk a paper which he said was a check for his trunk, which would shortly arrive, where such trunk was, according to custom left on the sidewalk in front of the inn by the agent of the express company after he had summoned the porter by ringing a bell.⁶

61. Statutory Notice Limiting Liability—Need of Compliance with Terms of Statute.—The posting of notices in the manner prescribed by the statute must be shown to exempt the inn keeper from liability for the loss of goods of his guest.⁷

tions to guard against an incendiary fire, as by failing to keep closed the window of a hay loft, is such negligence as would deprive him of the benefit of the act.

1. Me. Acts of 1874, ch. 174, § 2.

2. Burnham v. Young, 72 Me. 273, 274.

3. As is done by Rev. Stats. Me., § 5786, Laws of 1872, p. 55, § 1.

4. Fisher v. Kelsey (Mo.), 16 Fed. Rep. 71, 74; affirmed on appeal, 121 U. S. 383, where the subject is more fully discussed.

5. Mass. Pub. Stats. ch. 102, § 12.

6. Becker v. Haynes (Mass.), 29 Fed. Rep. 441.

7. Chamberlain v. West, 37 Minn. 54, where MITCHELL, J., said, in an action to recover the value of a diamond scarf pin alleged to have been stolen from the room of plaintiff while he was a guest at defendant's hotel: "The defendant sought to relieve himself from his common law liability as inn keeper by showing compliance with Minn. Gen. Stats. 1878, ch. 124, §§ 21, 22 (Gen. Laws 1874, ch. 52). This statute requires the inn keeper, in order to bring himself within its provisions, to keep in his hotel an iron safe suitable for the custody of money, jewelry or other valuables, and to keep posted conspicuously at the office, also on the inside of every entrance door of every public sleeping, reading, bar, sitting and parlor room of the hotel a notice to the guests that they must leave their money, jewelry and other valuables with the landlord for safe keeping. It is incumbent on an inn keeper claiming the benefit of this statute affirmatively to show a substantial compliance with all its requirements. Much of the evi-

Printed Heading in Register.—Notice to the guest to deposit valuables with the landlord, where not such as the statute prescribes, as by a mere printed heading in the register, does not relieve the landlord from liability, unless it be brought to the knowledge of the guest, so that his assent to limiting the liability of the landlord may be presumed.¹

Place of Posting Notice.—Under the very strict construction deemed proper to be given to a statute providing that an inn keeper may protect himself from liability to his guest for loss of valuables by keeping an iron chest or other safe depository for such valuables, and by posting on his door, and other public places in his house of entertainment, notices to his guests that they must leave their valuables with him for safe keeping, etc., the notices must be posted on all the doors of rooms occupied by guests.²

62. Actual Notice—Insufficiency of.—According to various authorities, the statutes limiting the liability of inn keepers being in derogation of the common law, must be strictly construed so dence on this point was so vague and indefinite, and mere impressions not within the personal knowledge of the witnesses, that it cannot be said that the posting of any such notices in the manner required was conclusively or even satisfactorily proven anywhere, even in the sleeping room occupied by plaintiff. No actual notice was brought home to plaintiff. Under these circumstances, defendant cannot complain that the court left it to the jury to determine from the evidence whether he had posted notices as required by the statute."

1. Olson v. Crossman, 31 Minn. 222, 223. In this case, in an action by a guest against an inn keeper to recover for money stolen from the former in the inn, it was in evidence that the statutory notice for exemption from liability was not posted, but it appeared that at the top of the page in the register where plaintiff signed his name (and at the top of each page in the book) there was a printed notice that "all moneys, jewels and other valuables must be left at the office; otherwise the proprietor would not be responsible." GILFILLAN, C. J., said: "The statute (Gen. Stat. 1878, ch. 124, §§ 21, 22) enables an inn keeper to limit his liability as to certain property of a guest, by keeping an iron safe and posting certain notices. The evidence does not indicate that defendant had complied with this. A notice at the head of the register of guests, or a verbal notice to the guest, not being such notice as the statute prescribes, is of no avail unless the guest consent to it so as to constitute a contract limiting the inn keeper's liability. Of course it would not amount to such a contract unless the guest's attention was called to it, so that he might be presumed to have understood and assented to it." See to like effect Bernstein v. Sweeny, 33 N. Y. Superior Ct. 271, 274. Compare Murchison v. Sergeant, 69 Ga. 206, 210; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 754.

2. Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 593, construing Ala. Code of 1876, §§ 1549-1551, and saying of the statute: "Its purpose is constructive notice which conclusively imputes knowledge to the guest, where there has been an exact compliance with the requirements of the statute, but not otherwise. Beale v. Posey [72 Ala. 323]."

Posting on Single Door Insufficient.—Where the keeper of a public inn or hotel in a city, complying with the requirements of the statute (Ala. Code of 1876, §§ 1549-51) may relieve himself from liability for the loss of money, jewelry, watches, etc., within the inn or hotel, not occurring through his fraud, or the fraud of some clerk or servant employed by him, the inn keeper is not entitled to the benefit of the statute unless he gives notice to the guest that a safe depository for his money or other valuables is provided; and the mere posting of notice on a single door of the hotel, however public it may be, is not a compliance with the

as to exclude the sufficiency of actual notice to the guest requiring deposit of valuables, etc., where there is no express provision for such notice.¹

Sufficiency of.—But the position is sometimes maintained that where the guest has actual notice of the facts intended to be imparted by the written or printed notice which was omitted to be posted upon the door of his room, this is sufficient, and must be taken to be a substitute for the constructive or statutory notice required.²

Notices in Other Rooms Within a Year.—Yet this principle has been considered inapplicable, even if admitted to be sound at all, where the actual notice which the guest is shown to have had was acquired by his having observed and read the contents of printed notices in other rooms of the hotel, at some time within the twelve months previous to the loss of the goods for which the action was instituted.³

63. English Inn Keeper's Act—Provisions of Enactment.—The English inn keeper's act of 1863 declares that no inn keeper shall be liable to make good to any guest any loss of or injury to goods or property brought to his inn, not being a horse or other live animal, to a greater amount than £30, except (1), where such goods or property shall have been stolen, lost or injured through the wilful act, default or neglect of such inn keeper or any servant in his employ. (2) Where such goods or property shall have been deposited expressly for safe custody with such inn keeper, provided, always, that in the case of such deposit it shall be lawful for such inn keeper, if he think fit, to require, as a condition of statute, and will not justify the inference of notice to the guest. Beale v. Posey, 72 Ala. 323, 331.

1. In Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 594, SOMERVILLE, J., said: "The sounder reasoning, perhaps, is that the statute prescribes the exact manner in which the common law liability may be escaped, and, being in derogation of the common law rule, it must be strictly construed; and a strict construction excludes actual notice by failing to expressly provide for it. This view is adopted in Batterson v. Vogel, 8 Mo. App. 24, and seems to be sustained by the general current of decisions, at least so far as the reasoning of the adjudged cases extends. Porter v. Gilkey, 57 Mo. 235; Beale v. Posey, 72 Ala. 323. . . . Wilkins v. Earle, 44 N. Y. 172; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 655; Ramaley v. Leland, 43 N. Y. 539; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 728; Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 457, note."

2. This was the view taken by the court of New York in Purvis v. Coleman, 21 N. Y. 111. It was shown in that case (according to the opinion in Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 593) that while no notice was posted on the door of the room assigned to the plaintiff, as required by the New York statute, yet that full notice in fact was given to him at the time of his arrival at the hotel, and of the occupancy of his room. It was held by five out of the eight judges who sat, that the actual notice proved to have been given the guest was "far more satisfactory and ample than the constructive notice required by the statute," and that the object and purpose of the statute had been "more than complied with." Three of the judges, however, including CHIEF JUSTICE COMSTOCK, dissented from this construction, as adopted by a majority of the court. The case is also fully stated in Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 665.

3. Lanier v. Youngblood, 73 Ala. 587, 594, where it is said: "It may be that the knowledge thus imputed may have lapsed from his memory, or that the absence of the notice from the his liability, that such goods or property shall be deposited in a box or other receptacle, fastened and sealed by the person depositing the same; and it is further made obligatory on the inn keeper to receive his guest's property under these conditions.¹

Omission in Copy of Portion of Act.—A further provision of the act (section 3) required the inn keeper to exhibit a copy of the first provision thereof (section 1) in a conspicuous part of the hall or entrance to the inn, and enacted that he should be entitled to the benefit of the act only as to goods brought to the inn while such copy was exhibited; and where a copy so exhibited was unintentionally misprinted so as to omit the word "act" before "default or neglect," it was held that it did not protect the inn keeper.²

64. Valuables Covered by Statutes Limiting Liability.—Statutes Concerning Safe Deposit of Valuables.—Statutes frequently permit a proprietor of a hotel to relieve himself from his strict common law liability, in respect to certain classes of property, upon compliance with prescribed conditions, such as providing a safe in the office or other convenient place, and posting notice to the guests to deposit their valuables therein, or be precluded from holding the inn keeper liable therefor.³

Limitation of Exemption to Specified Species of Property.—But it has been considered that the exemption is limited to the particular species of property named, and that as such a statute is in derogation of the common law, it cannot be extended in its operation and effect by doubtful implication, so as to include property not fairly within the terms of the act.⁴

Construction of Special Phraseology.—The construction given to such a statute depends, however, in general, on the special phraseology used in regard to the articles required to be de-door [of his room] may have induced the belief that the defendant has ceased his compliance with the statute."

1. Act 26 & 27 Vict. ch. 41, §§ 1, 2, as quoted in Schouler Bailm. (2nd ed.), § 312.

2. Spice v. Bacon, L. R., 2 Ex. D. 463, 465, 466; s. c., 21 Eng. Rep. 558, 560, 561, holding that there was an omission of the substantial part of the notice.

3. See Ramaley v. Leland, 43 N. Y. 539; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 728, 729; Wilkins v. Earle, 44 N. Y. 172; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 655, 658. In the former case ALLEN, J., however, said: "The rules of the common law touching the liability of inn keepers, common carriers and the like, have not been relaxed by the courts, and are in full force, except as expressly changed by statute, or as they may be modified by special contract."

4. Ramaley v. Leland, 43 N. Y. 539; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 728, 729, 730, where it was said of a statute mentioning "money, jewelry or ornaments:" "Certain property particularly valuable in itself, taking but small space compared with its value for its safe keeping, easy of concealment and removal, holding out great temptation to the dishonest, and not necessary to the comfort or convenience of the guest while in his room, is made the subject of the statutory exemption. Property of a different description, including that which is useful or necessary to the comfort and convenience of the guest, that which is usually carried and worn as a part of the ordinary apparel and outfit, or is ordinarily used and is convenient for use by travellers, as well in as out of their rooms, is left, as before the statute, at the risk of the inn keeper."

posited;¹ and the same observation applies to exceptions in

1. Money, Watch, etc., Not Deposited in Safe.—An inn keeper has been held liable for the theft from a guest's room of a watch, but not for the sum of $50 in money so stolen, where the statute requires the deposit by the guest, upon posted notice, of "money, jewels, ornaments" in a safe in the office of the hotel. Ramaley v. Leland, 43 N. Y. 539; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 728, 729. In regard to the money the court said: "The defendants [in the action by the guest against the inn keepers] were exonerated from liability for the money, if they had provided a safe in the office of the hotel for the safe keeping of money, jewels and ornaments, and a notice stating the fact was conspicuously posted in the room occupied by the plaintiff. Laws of 1855, ch. 421; Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 258." In regard to the watch it was said: "The words of the statute must be taken in their ordinary sense in the absence of any indication that they were used either in a technical sense, or in a sense other than that in which they are popularly used. A watch is neither a jewel nor ornament, as these words are used and understood either in common parlance or by lexicographers. It is not used or carried as a jewel or ornament, but as a time piece or chronometer, an article of ordinary wear by most travellers of every class, and of daily and hourly use by all. It is as useful and necessary to the guest in his room as out of it, in the night as the day time. It is carried for use and convenience and not for ornament. But it is enough that it is neither a jewel nor ornament in any sense in which these words have ever been used." But where the statute provided for the exemption of an inn keeper who should constantly have in his inn an iron safe in good order and suitable for the safe custody of money, jewelry and articles of gold and silver manufacture, etc., and who complied with the requirements of the act, it was held that this enactment was applicable to a gold watch and chain worn by the guest about his person, as articles worn upon the person were not specially excepted, and the articles in question came within the very language of the statute. Stewart v. Parsons, 24 Wis. 241, 242, 243.

Necessary Amount of Money.—Where the statute provides for exemption from liability for losses of money, plate and jewelry, this was held not to cover a watch, watch guard, or pocket book, as these articles were of a class not within the provisions of the statute; nor ninety dollars in money, as this was money necessary for the personal expenses of the traveller. Maltby v. Chapman, 25 Md. 310, 316. The opinion follows on the last point the construction given to a similar statute in Gile v. Libby, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 70, 76. The latter case is also followed, upon a construction of the same statute, in Koohn v. Sweeny, 2 Daly, 200, 203, where it is held that an inn keeper is not relieved from his common law liability for the loss of his guest's watch and a small sum of money, amounting to about $50, by providing a safe and posting notice, as required by the statute. But in Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 258, 260; s. c., 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 632, it is held that the protection to inn keepers given by a similar statute of another state is held not limited to money or valuables in excess of what the guest may reasonably require for his travelling expenses or personal convenience, but to embrace all "money, jewels or ornaments" which the guest brings with him, without reference to the amount or value.

Money Deposited in Sealed Envelopes.—Under the same statute, where a guest at a hotel delivered a sealed envelope to the inn keeper's authorized clerk, stating that "it contained money," whereupon the clerk, without further enquiry, deposited it in the safe, and the package contained over $20,000, but had no endorsement of the amount upon it, it was held that the inn keeper was liable for the whole amount of money in the package thus deposited, which was stolen from the safe. Wilkins v. Earle, 44 N. Y. 172; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 655; the court were of the opinion that the question of the sufficiency of the label was not before the court, and also that the liability stood as under the common law, and that, therefore, as shown by a full review of the authorities, it was not limited to such an amount of money as was necessary for the reasonable expenses of the guest. Omission to disclose the contents of a package had, however, been held one ground to relieve the inn keeper of liability for valuables, as inducing a failure to exact their deposit, in Bendetson v. French 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 31, 37. The last named case of Hyatt v.

statutes limiting the liability of inn keepers.¹

Valuables Regarded as in Custody of Guest.—It has been held that the inn keeper who has posted the notice to deposit valuables in the safe, as prescribed by statute, is liable for losses occurring only when he has the actual possession and custody of the articles by their being placed in the safe provided for them, and not when they are out of the safe, so as to be regarded as within the personal care and custody of the guest.²

Taylor, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 632, and 42 N. Y. 258, is followed as disapproving Gile v. Libby, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 70; in Rosenplaenter v. Roessle, 54 N. Y. 262, 266, where it is said: "The law is thus settled in this State, that if a guest, on retiring to bed at night, removes a watch or jewelry from his person, or leaves money in his pocket, and neglects to deposit the same in the safe provided for the purpose, he cannot hold the landlord liable for the loss of the same, provided the notice required by the statute has been posted in his room."

Under a statute of Maine (Stat. 1874, ch. 174) it is held that where an amount of money taken for a journey is no more than is reasonably prudent for the payment of expenses, including liabilities to accident, delays and sickness, it is exempted from the provisions of the statute, and may properly be carried as baggage, for the loss of which an inn holder would be liable after delivery to him. Noble v. Milliken, 74 Me. 225, 229. DANFORTH, J., says on this point: "The statute referred to does, in certain cases, relieve inn holders from their common law liability unless the property is specially delivered to the inn keeper or his servants. But from its operation, among other things, "personal baggage and money necessary for travelling expenses and personal use" are excepted. Such necessary amount of money is classed as personal baggage and may be carried as such baggage. Dunlap v. Steamboat Company, 98 Mass. 371. For such money the liability of the inn holder is the same as before the statute. The word "necessary" in this connection is not to be construed as in its restricted meaning, but rather as indicating an amount of money which a man of common prudence would deem it proper to take for such a journey, including the ordinary expenses as well as the liabilities on account of sickness, accidents and necessary delays. Merrill v. Grinnell, 30 N. Y. 594. That the amount of money taken in this case was no more than reasonable prudence would dictate is sufficiently shown by the fact that in consequence of the loss the plaintiff found it necessary to borrow before reaching his journey's end."

1. Jewelry Taken Along for Personal Use.—In Maine, in a case where a guest at a hotel lost from her trunk a gold watch, a pair of gold bracelets, a gold thimble, three gold rings and a gold neck pin, all of which she had taken along for her personal use, and altogether of the value of $158, the inn keeper was held liable for the value of these articles, as they came within the exceptions in the statute limiting the liability of an inn holder for losses sustained by his guest (Me. Rev. Stats., ch. 27, § 7), specifying "wearing apparel, articles worn or carried upon the person to a reasonable amount, personal baggage and money necessary for travelling expenses and personal use." Noble v. Milliken, 77 Me. 359, 360. EMERY, J., said: "From the case it seems that all these articles were taken along by the plaintiff for her personal use, and for no other purpose. They were not merchandise nor business articles. They were not taken along simply for transportation of them. They were such articles as she might properly use daily while travelling or resting. The amount does not appear to be unreasonable in view of the plaintiff's situation. Such articles we think are within the exception. Macrow v. Great Western R. R. Co., L. R., 6 Q. B. 612; Benty v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 32 Upper Canada [Q. B.] 66, and cases there cited."

2. Bendetson v. French, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 31, 36, 37. This was held where a package was taken to the room of the guest by the latter at the suggestion of the clerk of the hotel, who was considered to have been misled into supposing that the package was not valuable by the failure to disclose that it contained jewelry.

65. Inn Keepers as Ordinary Bailees—Different Liability in General.—While “ordinary bailees are held responsible only on proof of loss arising from some fault on their part, such as negligence or want of diligence,” the inn keeper is, as before shown, strictly and perhaps generally “held liable without proof of any negligence or fault; and except in special cases, cannot discharge himself by showing that the loss occurred without his fault, or that of those in his employ.”¹

Liability as Ordinary Bailee to Boarders and Others.—But there are various circumstances under which the inn keeper is held to act only in the capacity of an ordinary bailee, and to be liable only as such.² Thus, where a party lives as a regular boarder, by the month, at a fixed price, he is in no sense a guest, so as to hold the proprietors liable as inn keepers, but in such case they are liable only as boarding house keepers, and are merely held to ordinary diligence.³

1. Carter v. Hobbs, 12 Mich. 52; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 762, 764.

2. See Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 303, 311, 312, and cases next cited.

3. Lawrence v. Howard, 1 Utah 142, 143.

Goods Kept for Show and Sale.—Furthermore the particular responsibility imposed upon inn keepers at common law does not extend to goods lost or stolen from a room in a public inn furnished to a person for purposes distinct from his accommodation as a guest, such as the display and sale of goods. See Fisher v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 383, 385; s. c., 16 Fed. Rep. 71, 74; Myers v. Cottrill, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 465, 471. To like effect see Mowers v. Fethers, 61 N. Y. 34; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 244, 246; Carter v. Hobbs, 12 Mich. 52; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 762, 765; Neal v. Wilcox, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 146; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 266, 267.

Attending Firemen's Ball on Inn Premises.—So where a party attends a firemen's ball given at another inn from which he stops, buying his ticket of the firemen's company, to whom the keeper of the inn supplies the dancing room, supper and dressing room at a certain price per head, the relation of inn keeper and guest does not exist between such party and the host, and the latter does not receive the garments of the visitor in his capacity of inn keeper, but merely as an ordinary bailee. Carter v. Hobbs, 12 Mich. 52; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 762, 764, 765. The court laid down the rule that to hold a party sued liable as an inn keeper, it must appear not only that he kept an inn, and that the goods were lost there, but that he was acting in the capacity of inn keeper on the occasion when the goods were received, and that the plaintiff was his guest; or in other words, that the plaintiff visited the inn for purposes which the common law recognizes as purposes for which inns are kept.

Arrangement for Stallion to Serve Mares.—Again, where a party did not come to an inn for entertainment as an ordinary wayfarer, but under an arrangement for his stallion to serve mares, the inn keeper was not subject to his common law responsibility for the preservation of the animal, but in such the utmost limit of his liability was that of an ordinary bailee for hire. Mowers v. Fethers, 61 N. Y. 34; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 244, 247.

Care Required of Sleeping Car Companies.—While it is well settled that sleeping car companies are to be regarded neither as inn keepers nor common carriers, nor subject to the onerous liabilities of either in respect to the property of those enjoying their accommodations, it is equally well settled that it is their duty to exercise ordinary care for the security of passengers' valuables. Durgan v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 149, 151. To same effect see Lewis v. New York etc. Car Co., 143 Mass. 267; s. c., 28 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 148, 150. Where, however, a passenger on a night train entered a sleeping car, having in a pocket of his overcoat a sum of money, and gave the overcoat to the porter without mentioning the money,

Depository Liable for Gross Negligence.—An inn keeper who gratuitously receives a deposit of valuables, is responsible in case of their loss only for gross negligence; that is, for the omission of that care which the most inattentive and thoughtless never fail to take of their own concerns.¹

Presumption of Want of Ordinary Care.—The doctrine that whenever it is doubtful whether ordinary care has been used or not, the presumption is against the bailee, and that he is responsible if he does not rebut the presumption of a want of ordinary care, arising from the loss of the goods bailed, has, however, been laid down, as if applicable to an inn keeper in whose stable horses of a traveller were placed, and from which one of them was stolen.²

Liability for Goods of Departing Guest.—When the guest settles his bill and departs from the inn, leaving his baggage behind him, the relation of inn keeper and guest no longer exists,³ and, according to some of the cases, the inn keeper is then merely the gratuitous bailee of the baggage of the traveller, and in case of its loss, is responsible only if he is guilty of gross negligence;⁴ but, according to other cases, his liability is greater than that of a bailee without compensation, and he is responsible for want of ordinary care.⁵

66. Liability of Boarding House Keepers—English View of Liability of Keepers of Boarding and Lodging Houses.—In England, it has been held that a boarding house keeper, though not bound to keep baggage safely to the same extent as an inn keeper, is yet bound, as a hired bailee, to take such care of a boarder's baggage as a prudent person would take of his own property.⁶

and the porter hung the coat in the passenger's berth, it was held that the money was in his own custody, and at his risk; and the fact that soon afterwards an accident overturned the car, and on the passenger making his way out, he told the porter and the brakemen of the railroad company that the money was in the car, put no liability for the money on the company as gratuitous bailee or otherwise. Hillis v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 72 Iowa 228; s. c., 31 Am. & Eng. R.R. Cas. 108.

1. Wiser v. Chesley, 53 Mo. 547, 549, 550, holding also that a depositor makes out a prima facie case when he shows a deposit made, and a demand and refusal of the thing deposited, and that the onus is then upon the depository to exonerate himself from the liability which attached when he assumed the custody of the article.

Valise Left in Office of Hotel.—If a party stopping at a hotel left a valise in the office without calling attention thereto, and the clerk, without knowing who the owner was, took it into a room where baggage was kept, the landlord would be a naked depository, and would be liable, under the Code of Georgia, only for gross negligence, and not for ordinary neglect. Stewart v. Head, 70 Ga. 449, 452, 453.

2. Newson v. Axon, 1 McCord (S. Car.) L. 509; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 685.

3. See Miller v. Peeples, 60 Miss. 819; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 423.

4. Consult discussion of subject in O'Brien v. Vaill, 22 Fla. 627, 632. Compare Whitemore v. Haroldson, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 312, 314, 315. But see contra, Adams v. Clem, 41 Ga. 65; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 524, 525.

5. Murray v. Marshall, 9 Colo. 482; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 152, 154.

6. Dansey v. Richardson, 3 El. & B. 144, 148, 171, where the court was, however, divided on the question whether a boarding house keeper is liable for the negligence of his servant, as

But in a later case in the same country, it was held that the law imposes no obligation upon a lodging house keeper to take care of the goods of his lodger.¹

American View of Inn Keeper's Liability to Boarders.—In this country it has been laid down that the responsibilities of landlords towards those who are, in a legal sense, not guests, but boarders, are of a different character from those which ordinarily exist towards guests, and are not to be regulated by the rigid rules which, as matters of public policy, both the civil and common law have adopted in regulating the liabilities of inn keepers to their guests.²

It has further been declared that if the goods lost belong to a boarder, he would be required, in order to charge the inn keeper, "to show that the loss was owing to the failure on his part to discharge the duties which his situation as boarding house keeper, or the special contract with the other party, imposed on him," and that "these duties must be measured by the analogies of the law applicable to other species of bailments."³

Boarding House Keeper's Liability in This Country.—In regard merely to boarding house keepers, it has been held, in New York, that it is incumbent on a boarding house keeper to exercise due and proper care of the baggage or property of his boarder, comprising such care as a prudent person would take of his own property.⁴

67. Remedies Concerning Inn Keepers—Master's Recovery for Loss of Servant's Goods.—If a servant is robbed of his master's money where the latter leaves a door ajar and thus facilitates the theft of goods. This case very fully discusses these points in every respect.

1. Holder v. Soulbey, 8 Com. B., N. S. 254, 264, 270, where upon ample consideration it was held that a lodging house keeper was not responsible for the loss of certain property of a lodger who was about to quit, which had been stolen by a stranger who in the absence of such lodger was permitted by the occupier of the house to enter the rooms for the purpose of viewing them.

2. Vance v. Throckmorton, 5 Bush (Ky.) 41; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 327, 328, 329. See to like effect Manning v. Wells, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 746; s. c., 51 Am. Dec. 688, 689, where it is said of the boarder that it "is sufficient to give him a remedy when he shall prove the inn keeper has been guilty of gross negligence." In Chamberlain v. Masterson, 26 Ala. 371, 378, it is said that "there is a distinction between the liability of inn keepers toward guests and boarders, which was taken at an early day. Calye's Case [8 Coke 32] supra; Baron's Abr., Inns and Inn Keepers, C. 5; Story on Bailm. (4th ed.), § 477 (3)."

3. Chamberlain v. Masterson, 26 Ala. 371, 378. See further Lawrence v. Howard, 1 Utah 142, 143. But compare Wiser v. Chesley, 33 Mo. 547, 548, 549; Johnson v. Reynolds, 3 Kan. 251.

4. Smith v. Read, 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 14, 18; s. c., 6 Daly (N. Y.) 33, 37, following the doctrine laid down in England in Dansey v. Richardson, 3 El. & B. 144, and giving a very complete consideration to the point under discussion. In this case it is further held, following the general rule of the liability of a master to third persons for the negligence of his servants, and adopting the views expressed by CHIEF JUSTICE CAMPBELL and JUSTICE COLERIDGE in the English case just cited, that a boarding house keeper is liable for the loss of his guest's goods, occasioned through the negligence of his own servants while they are acting within the scope of their employment.

or goods while a guest at an inn, the master may maintain an action against the inn keeper.¹

Where Guest is Bailee of Goods.—A guest at a hotel can likewise recover from the inn keeper the full value of property lost, though the guest was only a bailee thereof.²

1. Towson v. Havre de Grace Bank, 6 Har. & J. (Del.) 47; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 254, 256, 257, holding that one receives notes of a bank with the request to pass them off for the bank, is, quoad hoc, a servant of the bank. The opinion makes reference to a case in Yelverton [Bedle v. Morris, Yelv. 162], where it is said that "if A sends his money by a friend who is robbed in the inn at which he is a guest, A shall have the action," and remarks that there is no reason why it should not be so, the inn keeper being chargeable, not on the ground that he entertains the owner of the money, or other goods, but because he receives, no matter by whom paid, a compensation for the risk." So the principle that the owner may maintain an action against the inn keeper for property left by a servant with the inn keeper, has been applied where a horse and chase were hired from the owner and entrusted to the inn keeper. Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, 474.

Liability to Corporations for Loss of its Agent's Goods.—So an inn keeper is liable to a corporation if the agent of the corporation, engaged in their business, becomes the guest of the inn keeper, and, while such guest, is robbed in the inn of money delivered to him by his principals to be expended in their behalf. Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 417, 424, 426; fully considering actions against inn keepers for property lost by servants, agents, etc., and citing Bedle v. Morris, Yelv., 162; s. c., Cro. Jac. 224; Bac. Abr., Inns and Inn Keepers, C. 5; Towson v. Havre de Grace Bank, 6 Hon. & J. (Del.) 47, 53 [s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 254]; and referring also to Bennett v. Mellor, 5 Term Rep. 273. The opinion further relies on Mason v. Thompson, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 280; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 471, in regard to the lack of necessity of the personal presence of the guest, and refers to other cases on that point. See also, on the same point, Coykendall v. Eaton, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 188, 190.

2. Chamberlain v. West, 37 Minn.

54, where in an action brought to recover the value of a diamond scarf pin alleged to have been stolen from plaintiff's room while a guest at defendant's hotel, it was shown that the plaintiff was not the owner of the pin, but that it had been lent him by a friend some time before, for ten years. MITCHELL, J., said: "Nothing is better settled than that, in actions for torts in the taking or conversion of personal property against a stranger to the title, a bailee, mortgagee or other special property man is entitled to recover full value, and must account to the general owner for the surplus recovered beyond the value of his own interest, but as against the general owner or one in privity with him he can only recover the value of his special property. 1 Sedgwick on Dam., note a; 1 Sutherland on Dam. 210; Jellett v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 30 Minn. 265; Russell v. Butterfield, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 300; Mechanics' etc. Bank v. Farmers' etc. Bank, 60 N. Y. 40; Atkins v. Moore, 82 Ill. 240; Fallon v. Manning, 35 Mo. 271. A mere depositor or gratuitous bailee may maintain such an action. The bailee may maintain it, although not responsible to the general owner for the loss. This he may do, not only against one who has tortiously converted the property, but also against one through whose negligence or failure of duty it has been lost; as for example, a common carrier or inn keeper. Edwards on Bailm. § 37; Faulkner v. Brown, (N. Y.) 13 Wend. 63; Moran v. Portland etc. Co. 35 Me. 55; Finn v. Western R. Co., 112 Mass. 524; Kellogg v. Sweeney, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 397, 46 N. Y. 291."

When Owner Not Guest.—But it has been held that the owner is not constructively a guest where the goods are left by a bailee to whom he has lent them and who is not there in his employment or as a member of his family; and that in such case the owner can claim only his ordinary rights as such, and not the special rights of a guest, not expressly transferred to him by his bailee, as against an inn keeper acting either in that capacity or as a compen-

Father's Recovery for Loss of Son's Property.—Where means provided by a father for the support of his minor son while travelling and attending college are stolen from the room of the son while he is stopping at an inn, the father may maintain an action against the inn-keeper to recover the amount so stolen.¹

Company Liable as Inn Keeper.—Where the plaintiff's goods were stolen at a hotel, of which a company was the proprietor, and he sought to recover their value in an action against the paid manager, in whose name the licence had been granted, it was held that the company was the real inn keeper, and that, therefore, the action was not maintainable.²

Judgment in Gold Coin and Other Matters.—In an action against an inn keeper for the loss of gold coin occurring while plaintiff was his guest, and during the period of the late civil war, when the legal tender act had been enacted, and there were two currencies in the United States established by law, it was held that the judgment should be for gold, and not for its value in paper currency at the time of the loss.³

sated or gratuitous bailee. Coykendall v. Eaton, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 188, 191.

1. Epps v. Hinds, 27 Miss. 657; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 528, 529, where it is said that the son "was merely invested with a discretion as to the expenditure of the money," and that "the loss necessarily fell upon the party who was bound to furnish other means for the same purpose."

Baggage and Clothing.—So a father may recover for the loss of the baggage of his minor son by an inn keeper or common carrier, where the son is not emancipated and is sent on a journey by his father, and the baggage belongs to the father. Dickinson v. Winchester, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 114; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 760, 761, 764, holding that the plaintiff need not himself be the traveller or guest, but may recover though the traveller or guest be his agent or servant, or a party standing in that relation. In this case it is also ruled that clothing purchased by a father for a minor son belongs to the father, and that he may recover for its loss by an inn keeper or carrier, unless it appears to have been given to the son, or unless the son has been emancipated, but that clothing purchased by an infant with money furnished by his father for general purposes on sending him to a distant place to reside as a clerk, belongs to the infant, and he may sue for its loss.

2. Dixon v. Birch, Law R., 8 Ex. 135, 136; s. c., 5 Eng. Rep. 330, 331.

3. Kellogg v. Sweeney, 46 N. Y. 291; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 333. So in California it has been held that good coin deposited by a guest with an inn keeper was received by the latter in a fiduciary capacity, and that accordingly, in case of loss, the guest was entitled, under the Specific Contract act of that state, to recover judgment payable in gold coin. Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 657, 669.

Drummer's Hotel Bill.—In an action by an inn keeper against a merchant for his drummer's hotel bill, in the absence of evidence sufficient to justify an inference upon the point in issue that plaintiff notified defendant of the drummer's failure to pay cash, according to custom, or that the case is an exception to such general custom, the issue should not be submitted to the jury, but verdict directed against the plaintiff. Covington v. Newberger, 99 N. Car. 523.

Trover Against Inn Keeper.—To maintain trover against an inn keeper for goods entrusted to him by a guest, an actual conversion must be shown, and it is not sufficient to show refusal or failure to deliver on demand. Hallenbake v. Fish, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 547; s. c., 24 Am. Dec. 88, 89, and note.

Authorities for Inns and Inn Keepers.—Story on Bailm. (9th ed.) 1878; Edwards on Bailm. (2nd ed.) 1878; Schouler on Bailm. (2nd ed.) 1887; Bacon's Abr., tit. Inns and Inn Keepers; Wandell on Inns, Hotels

INNUENDO—INQUEST OF OFFICE—INVOICE.

INNUENDO—(See SLANDER and LIBEL).—The office of an innuendo in pleading is to explain, not to enlarge, and is the same in effect as "that is to say." It is used almost exclusively in practice in actions for defamation.¹

INQUEST OF OFFICE—(See also DENOUNCEMENT).—Sometimes simply termed office, as in the phrase "office found." In English practice an enquiry made by the king's officer, his sheriff, coroner or escheator, either virtute officii, or by writ sent to him for that purpose, or by commissioners specially appointed, concerning any matter that entitles the king to the possession of lands or tenements, goods or chattels.²

INVOICE—(See INVENTORY).—A written account of the particulars of merchandise shipped to a purchaser, factor or consignee, with the value or prices and charges annexed.³

and Boarding Houses; 1888; Rogers' Law of Hotel Life, 1879; Jones' Index to Legal Periodicals, title, Inns and Inn Keepers, 1888; Stimson's American Statute Law, Index. 1886.

1. Whitsett v. Womack, 8 Ala. 482.

2. As to inquire whether the king's tenant for life died seised, whereby the reversion accrues to the king; whether A who held immediately of the crown, died without heir, in which case the lands belong to the king by escheat; whether B be attainted of treason, whereby his estate is forfeited to the crown; whether C, who has purchased land, be an alien, which is another cause of forfeiture. These inquests were more frequent in practice during the continuance of the military tenures than at present; and were devised by law as an authentic means to give the king his right by solemn matter of record. Burrill's Law Dict.; 3 Blk. Com. 258.

3. Pipes v. Norton, 47 Miss. 61. It was here decided that a statement of amounts of invoices was not sufficient in a bill of particulars. "An 'invoice' of goods is merely another term for 'bill rendered.'"

Evidence is admissible to show the meaning among underwriters of "invoice and five per cent." in an application for marine insurance. "Literally it means, after supplying the word price or cost as understood, the amount stated as price or cost in the invoice of the goods and would imply the existence of a paper properly called an invoice. The word is used, however, to denote other meanings. As is often the case in the use of words, the word invoice is sometimes used to designate things of which it is the frequent accompaniment or evidence. An invoice accompanies goods and states price or cost. Consequently an invoice of goods sometimes means the goods themselves, and invoice price or cost means the prime price or cost of goods although there was no invoice in fact. On the trial, therefore, the defendant had a right to show in what particular manner those words were used in the business of underwriting." Sturm v. Williams, 6 J. & S. (N. Y.) 325.

"In the case of Mumford v. Broome, (1 Ins. Ca. 120) it is said to be a settled rule that in an open policy on goods the invoice price is the value which, upon a total loss, the insured is entitled to recover . . . The invoice price, as here understood, is evidently the prime cost, this being a fixed and certain criterion, which is the reason assigned for the rule . . . Although an invoice, strictly speaking, may be a document transmitted from the shipper to his factor or consignee, containing the particulars and prices of the goods shipped; and when understood in this sense, and made out without regard to the prime cost of the articles, it might be objectionable as a rule of evidence by which to estimate the value of the subject; yet invoice is sometimes used and understood as containing an account of the prime cost of the article specified. Thus, in Marshall, it is said, the loss is estimated according to the prime cost, that is the invoice cost. And in Magens (vol. 1, p. 37) it is laid down that the invoice of the cost is the rule by which the loss is to be computed" (Burns on Ins. 158). LeRoy v.

INSANITY.

1. Definitions, 105.
 - (a) Insane Person, 105.
 - (b) Lunatic, 105.
 - (c) Idiot, 105.
 - (d) Non Compos Mentis, 106.
 - (e) Delusions or Illusions as a Test of Insanity, 107.
 - (f) Imbecility, 111.
 - (g) Lucid Interval, 112.
 - (h) Moral Insanity, 112.
2. Confinement of Persons Alleged to be Insane, 112.
3. Jurisdiction Over Insane Persons, 114.
4. The Inquisition, 115.
 - (a) The Petition and Commission, 115.
 - (b) Notice, 115.
 - (c) Execution of the Commission, 116.
 - (d) Finding of the Inquisition, 117.
 - (e) Traverse of the Inquisition, 118.
 - (f) Supersedeas, 119.
 - (g) Costs, 120.
5. Committees and Guardians, 120.
 - (a) Who May be Appointed, 120.
 - (b) Management of the Estate, 121.
 - (c) Suits by Lunatics or Their Committees, 124.
 - (d) Suits Against Lunatics or Their Committees, 127.
 - (e) Accounts, 130.
 - (f) Compensation, 131.
 - (g) Discharge of Committee, 131.
6. Contracts of Insane Persons, 132.
7. Insanity as Affecting the Contract of Insurance, 137.
8. Insanity as Affecting the Contract of Marriage, 140.
9. Insanity as Affecting Partnerships, 142.
10. Insane Persons as Makers or Endorsers of Promissory Notes, 143.
11. Torts of Insane Persons, 144.
12. Insane Persons as Witnesses, 144.
13. Deeds of Insane Grantors, 146.
 - (a) When Void or Voidable, 146.
 - (b) Ratification, 148.
 - (c) Power of a Court of Equity to Set Aside Deed of an Insane Grantor, 149.
 - (d) Specific Performance, 151.
14. Testamentary Capacity, 151.
 - (a) Definition, 151.
 - (b) Delusions, 154.
 - (c) Presumptions of Sanity, 155.
 - (d) Declarations of Testator, 156.
 - (e) Declarations of Legatees and Devisees, 157.
15. Evidence, 158.
 - (a) Province of Judge and Jury, 158.
 - (b) Presumptions, 159.
 - (c) Opinions of Witnesses, 161.
 - (d) Expert Witnesses, 163.
16. Power of Insane Persons to Choose Settlement in a Poor District, 166.
17. Insanity as a Defence to Crime. See Criminal Law, Homicide, 167.

1. Definitions—(a) Insane Person.—An insane person is one whose mind is affected by general imbecility, or is subject to one or more specific delusions.

(b) Lunatic.—At common law, a lunatic was one "who hath had understanding, but by disease, grief or other accident, hath lost the use of his reason."¹

(c) Idiot.—An idiot was one "who hath had no understanding from his nativity."²

Mut. Ins. Co., 7 Ins. (N. Y.) 354.

In an action for commissions upon an agreement to consign goods to be sold upon commissions on the invoice price, it is not necessary to produce the invoice, and the value of the goods may be proven. The invoice may not have been sent, or may have misrepresented the price. Plank v. Gavila, 3 C. B., N. S. 807.

"Invoice value," in a customs act, means cash value, where cash has been paid. Arthur v. Goddard, 96 U. S. 145.

1. 1 Blackstone Com. 304; Ex parte Barnsley, 3 Atk. 168.

2. 1 Blackstone Com. 303. In Browning v. Reane, 2 Phill. 69, idiocy was defined as "total fatuity from birth." In Iowa it was held that a person who was ordinarily termed an idiot, but who only became imbecile after reaching the age of nine years, was not an "idiot" but an "insane person" under Iowa Code, § 1434, which restricts the term "idiot" to persons foolish from birth. Speedling v. Worth Co., 68 Iowa 152. In Perrine's Case, 41 N. J. Eq. 409, it was held that a person born deaf and dumb, but not blind, is not an idiot.

(d) Non Compos Mentis.—The words non compos mentis seem to have been used as a generic term including both idiocy and lunacy.¹ They had, in the earlier cases both in England and the United States, a more restricted meaning than they bear at present, and were held to impart a total deprivation of sense, and not to include mere imbecility or weakness of mind.² In the more modern cases they are held to include not only cases of idiocy and lunacy as strictly defined at common law, but all cases of imbecility where the subject is incapable of conducting the ordinary affairs of life and liable to become the victim of his own weakness.³

1. Rochford v. Ely, Ridgway 528; Ex parte Collins, 3 C. E. Green (N. J.) 253; Co. Litt. 246 b.

2. Non Compos Mentis.—In Beaumont's Case, 1 Wharton (Pa.) 52 (1835), the earlier English view was explained by KENNEDY, J., as follows: "Littleton, § 405, speaks of a man of non sane memory as one who is non compos mentis, upon which LORD COKE, in his commentary (Co. Litt. 246 b, 246 a), says 'here Littleton explaineth a man of no sound memory to be non compos mentis. Many times (as here it appeareth) the Latin word explaineth the true sense and calleth him not amens, demens, furiosus, lunaticus, fatuus, stultus, or the like, for non compos mentis is the most sure and legal.' Now, it is obvious that LORD COKE considered non compos mentis not only the legal but the sure term, and not amens, demens, etc. He also divides non compos mentis into four sorts: '1st, An idiot who, from his nativity, by a perpetual infirmity, is non compos mentis; 2nd, He that by sickness, grief or other accident wholly loseth his memory and understanding; 3rd, A lunatic, who hath sometimes his understanding and sometimes not, alequando gaudet lucidus intervallis, and, therefore, is called non compos mentis, so long as he hath not understanding; lastly, he that by his own vicious act for a time depriveth himself of his memory and understanding, as he that is drunken. And this last kind of non compos mentis shall give no privilege or benefit to him or his heirs.' And in Beowleg's Case, 4 Co. 124, a non compos mentis of the second sort is described to be 'he who was of good and sound memory, and by the visitation of God lost it.' Now, it must be admitted that there are various degrees of memory and understanding, from that of the most powerful and vigorous down to that of the most abject and imbecile, yet it is perfectly manifest that LITTLETON and LORD COKE did not consider a non compos mentis as embraced within any of the several grades of mind, but as one wholly destitute of it, at least occasionally, that is, of both memory and understanding. But such, I apprehend, was the prevailing sentiment down to the time of LORD HARDWICKE, who, in 1745, decided the case of Barnsley, already mentioned, in conformity to it. In 3 Atk. 173 he says: 'Being non compos mentis, of unsound mind, are certain terms in law, and import a total deprivation of sense. Now weakness does not carry this idea along with it. But courts of law understand what is meant by non compos, or insane, as they are words of a determinate signification.' Then he gives LORD COKE for authority 'that they are persons of non sane memory,' and adds, 'non compos mentis is used in the statute of limitations, so that it is legitimated now under several acts of parliament.' Hence, it would appear that non compos mentis had become a technical term in the English law of fixed and determinate import, denoting a person entirely destitute or bereft of his memory and understanding." In accordance with these views, JUDGE KENNEDY held that the return of an inquisition that Beaumont "by reason of old age and long continued sickness, has become so far deprived of reason and understanding as to be wholly unfit to manage his estate," was not a sufficient finding that he was non compos mentis.

Crazy.—The word "crazy," in a popular sense, imports a broken, shattered or deranged mind, rather than one enfeebled by age or disease. Shaver v. McCarthy, (Pa.) 1 Cent. Rep. 142.

3. Modern Rule as to Meaning of Non Compos Mentis.—The latter view is stated by LORD ELDON in Ridgway

(e) Delusions or Illusions as a Test of Insanity.—Except in cases of general imbecility, which did not formerly fall within the definition of lunacy, the test of insanity is the presence of delusion in the mind of the subject.¹ A delusion is a belief in

v. Darwin, 8 Vesey 65, as follows: "I have reason to believe the court did not in Lord Hardwicke's time grant a commission of lunacy in cases in which it has since been granted. Of late the question has not been, whether the party is absolutely insane, but the court has thought itself authorized to issue the commission provided it is made out that the party is unable to act with any proper and provident management; liable to be robbed by anyone; under that imbecility of mind, not strictly insanity, but as to the mischief calling for as much protection as actual insanity." See also Mannin v. Ball, Smith & Batty 183.

In McElroy's Case, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 451, the supreme court of Pennsylvania modified the ruling in Beaumont's Case, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 52, holding that the question for the jury on a traverse of an inquisition finding the party non compos mentis was "whether the mind is deranged to such an extent as to disqualify the traverser from conducting himself with personal safety to himself and others, and from managing his own affairs and discharging his relative duties." McElroy's Case was subsequently affirmed and followed in Commonwealth v. Schneider, 59 Pa. St. 328. In Barker's Case, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 232, CHANCELLOR KENT, in refusing to follow the earlier English rule, said: "I should imperfectly discharge my trust if I crippled the jurisdiction of this court by confining it to the strict common writ of lunacy." See also Nailor v. Nailor, 4 Dana (Ky.) 339.

In New Jersey an inquisition finding the alleged lunatic "of unsound mind, so that he is not capable of the government of his lands, tenements, goods and chattels," was held to be sufficient, though it did not state that the alleged lunatic was also incapable of governing himself. Re James, 35 N. J. Eq. 58. In the same state an inquisition was set aside which found that a deaf mute sixty-five years old, who had been such since she was two or three years old, who was ignorant, and could neither read nor write, nor communicate her ideas to others by signs or otherwise, and who could not be made to understand an ordinary business transaction, was "of sound mind and capable of controlling her property by her own selection of a proper person to act for her." Perrine's Case, 41 N. J. Eq. 409. These cases seem to materially modify the earlier view in Vanauken's Case, 2 Stockt. (N. J.) 186, where it was held that in order to justify a jury in finding a man a lunatic, they must be satisfied that he suffers from a total deprivation or suspension of the ordinary powers of the mind.

The rule laid down in McElroy's Case, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 451, has been generally adopted in the more recent cases in the United States. Hale v. Hills, 8 Conn. 39; Greenwade v. Greenwade, 43 Md. 313; Dennett v. Dennett, 44 N. H. 531; In re Carmichael, 36 Ala. 514; Commonwealth v. Haskell, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 491; Nailor v. Nailor, 4 Dana (Ky.) 339; Hovey v. Chase, 52 Me. 304; Rawdon v. Rawdon, 28 Ala. 565; Kenworthy v. Williams, 5 Ind. 375; Willett v. Porter, 42 Ind. 250; Meurer's Appeal, 119 Pa. St. 115; Robertson v. Lyon, 24 S. Car. 266; Cochran v. Amsden, 104 Ind. 282.

"Unsound Mind."—The words "unsound mind" as used in the Indiana statutes relating to guardianships, include every species of insanity or mental unsoundness. McCammon v. Cunningham, 108 Ind. 545.

In Jackson v. Jackson, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 306, it was held error to charge that to render one a fit subject for guardianship, his mind must be so far impaired that he has no more intelligence than an idiot.

1. Delusions.—"All writers and jurists agree that an immovable delusion as to facts past or present is not merely a symptom of insanity, but is in fact insanity or the effect of an unsoundness of mind." McElroy's Case, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 451, 463; see also Dew v. Clark, 3 Add. Ecc., 79; Stanton v. Wetherwax, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 259; Mullens v. Cottrell, 41 Miss. 201; Forman's Will, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 274; Merrill v. Rolston, 5 Redf. (Vt.) 220; Commonwealth v. Rogers, 7 Met. (Mass.) 500; Regina v. Higginson, 1 Car. & K. 129; MacNaghten's Case, 10 Cl. & Fin. 200; Regina facts the existence of which no rational person would believe.¹ Such delusions, in order to be a test of insanity, must be delusions of the senses, or such as concern certain facts. Mere

v. Burton, 3 F. & F. 772; Nichols v. Binns, 1 Sw. & Tr. 239; Waring v. Waring, 6 Moo. P. C. C. 341; Creogh v. Blood, 2 J. & La T. 509; In re Dyre Sombre, 1 Mac. & G. 116; Dew v. Clark, 3 Addams, 79; Gass v. Gass, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 278; Commonwealth v. Meredith, 14 W. N. C. (Pa.) 188.

But an instruction requested to be given to a jury, that "the only legal test of insanity is delusion," cannot properly be given as a rule of law. Manhattan Ins. Co. v. Broughton, 109 U. S. 121.

1. If a person persistently believes supposed facts which have no real existence except in his perverted imagination, and against all evidence and probability, and conducts himself, however logically, upon the assumption of their existence, he is, so far as they are concerned, under a morbid delusion, and a delusion in that sense is insanity. Seamen's Friend Society v. Hopper, 33 N. Y. 619; Riggs v. American Home Missionary Soc., 35 Hun (N. Y.) 656. A peculiar form of delusion is illustrated in an incident in the life of Erskine. An indictment had been brought against the keeper of an insane hospital by the keeper's brother for false imprisonment. Erskine, who was for the defence, had not been informed of the nature of the insanity of the prosecutor. The prosecutor was placed upon the stand and Erskine cross examined him for more than an hour, and left no means untried which his knowledge or experience could suggest; and when the jury and judge and audience were satisfied that it was a most flagrant case of oppression and injustice, the physician who had attended the patient came in and stated to the counsel the nature of the malady, on which Erskine, with great apparent humility, begged forgiveness for his rudeness, as he had not known the witness. Immediately the prosecutor replied with great gravity, "I forgive you—I am the Christ," and the trial ended.

In Commonwealth v. Meredith, 14 W. N. C. (Pa.) 188, on a traverse of an inquisition on lunacy, the court in the charge described the defendant as follows: "Mr. Meredith is possessed of great intellectual ability, and has been carefully educated; his life has been that of a close student, and his attainments are those of a ripe scholar. He has an accurate and retentive memory; his mind is capable of close and logical thought, of clear and forcible expression; the powers of memory, of reasoning, of expression, he enjoys to day to their fullest extent, unimpaired in any way. His life has been honorable and without reproach, and in his relation to others he has been uniformly kind, considerate, gentle, commanding the respect and winning the affection of all who knew him . . . It is clearly established that since 1877 Mr. Meredith has believed that he is the object of a secret and mysterious persecution; that he, at times, hears voices of persons who are not near him, but who are planning danger to him; that he has invisible foes, who, through some scientific agency, make their voices audible to him. He does not claim to understand this, or attempt to account for it, except to attribute it to some secret invention in electricity and acoustics, by means of which unknown persons, of evil intent, are persecuting him. He believes this to be a fact; accepts it as such. He does not regard the voices as imaginary or spiritual, but as the real voices of real people, who communicate with him through some unknown means. The means of communication he does not ascribe to a supernatural agency, but to natural causes." The judge left it to the jury to decide under the evidence, which was conflicting, whether the defendant was capable or not of managing his affairs. The verdict was for the defendant.

In Norton's Case, 45 Leg. Intel. (Pa.) 434, the delusions were of a remarkable character. Lysander S. Norton was a member of the bar. His mind becoming deranged he was placed for treatment in the Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane. He procured a writ of habeas corpus and conducted his own case at the hearing, though represented by counsel. He displayed marked ability and made an earnest appeal for his discharge from the hospital. The court, in an opinion dismissing the writ, said: "No one who was present at the hearing of this case, and who had been unacquainted with the past history of Lysander S. Norton, would for a moment have suspected that he was a man of unsound mind. He conducted his case with a degree of professional skill and ingenuity which would have been creditable to any member of the bar, exhibiting throughout the whole ordeal, which must have been to him a most trying one, great self-control, moderation and propriety, with no trace of the excitement and incoherence which are usually associated with unsoundness of mind. He told the story of his arrest and confinement in a connected, dignified and pathetic manner, which appealed most strongly to the sympathies of every one who heard it, and argued his case with a logical ability and acuteness which seemed successfully to challenge the charge of mental unsoundness upon which he had been committed to the hospital. Mr. Norton had been for some years a prominent and successful practitioner of the Erie bar. In the latter part of March, 1888, in consequence of certain evidences of insanity then apparent in his conduct, he was examined by Dr. Edward Cranch and Dr. J. C. M. Drake, of Erie, who certified that he was of unsound mind, and he was thereupon, at the request of his wife, Mrs. Mattie C. Norton, sent as a patient to the Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane. The testimony of Dr. John B. Chapin, the physician in chief at the hospital, and of the other physicians there, under whose care he has been since March last, was that Mr. Norton is of unsound mind; that he is afflicted with that form of disease known as parésis, a disease which is attended with mental delusions, and is characterized by a tendency to commit acts of violence and aggression; that for some weeks past Mr. Norton has improved in health and is now much better than when he came to the hospital; that these vicissitudes of condition are characteristic of the disease, the patient at intervals appearing to be quite well and restored, but soon again relapsing into his former condition of mental unsoundness. The physicians were all of opinion that Mr. Norton still required restraint and medical care and treatment, and that he could not with safety be permitted to go at large at present. Their statements with regard to his mental condition since he has been an inmate of the hospital were fully corroborated by numerous letters written by Mr. Norton himself since his confinement. These letters contain indubitable evidence that his mind has been filled with the most absurd delusions. For example, in a letter to Mr. Merchant from the hospital, he says: 'Major General Henry Heintz, the Baron von Rothschild, who was in all the wars of Germany since 1831, is here for treatment and has taken a wonderful fancy to me. He is worth in his own right five hundred thousand millions of dollars. He expressed his love and admiration of me by giving me last Sunday vouchers representing one hundred million dollars. I have bought me a private drawing room car and a dining car, and expect the last of this week to start with some of my friends as my guests for a month's trip to Florida, Old Mexico and California. Would you like to go along with your family?' It will be a very delightful trip, and I would dearly love to have you all go. I expect the president and several of his cabinet, and also several judges and senators to go with us, but there is yet room for more. You might bring your own car if you wish to do so. We will have the Washington Marine Band along, and also Thomas's or Gilmore's. Will probably start either Friday or Saturday. Please let me hear from you by telegraph.' In a postscript he adds: 'I forgot to mention to you that I lately discovered that I am of royal descent and am a grandson of King Henry VIII, of England.' The letter is signed 'L. S. Norton, Lord Norton Norval, the Duke of Brandega.' In a letter to his former partner he repeats the same hallucinations, with the addition that 'he intends to stop for one day on his trip at Washington to be confirmed as Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court' and 'to be made General in Chief of the United States Army, and to have his son, who is 11 years old, made a Major General, to be attached to his staff as chief aid-de-camp.' 'I will have you,' he adds, 'made Attorney General, or I will get my friend George A. Jenks, who is now Solicitor General, to resign and take a foreign mission until I get ready to take a trip of one year to Europe, when I will have you exchange places with Jenks and be accredited as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary. I have castles now on the Rhine [the building of one cost over $5,000,000] and on the Danube, and in every country in Europe. The Baron de Rothschild gave me last Sunday $100,000,000. He will spend the rest of his life as a member of my family. Although he has a wife and six children living, he says he loves me better than all of them put together. He gives me $100,000,000. I think the reason of his strange infatuation is that I can talk with him in Latin, Greek, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Hebrew and English, in all of which languages he is au fait. If you can get ready to join me you can come to Cincinnati and join me. I expect the president and his cabinet and the senators, and the Judges of the Supreme Court, and the heads of the departments, and officers of the army and navy, and some of the congressmen and the diplomatic corps, to go with me. Come one, come all, and see the elephant go round. Telegraph L. S. Norton, alias Lord Norvall, the Duke of Brandega.' On the 4th of August, 1888, he wrote to his wife: 'If you do not take me out not later than Tuesday, just as soon as I do get out I shall go straight to Elmira and deliberately murder you in cold blood; and if I find you flown from there, I will follow you to the ends of the earth, if need be, and when I find you, be it days, weeks, months or years from now, I will take your life. I would think no more of killing you than I would to kill a deadly scorpion, which has stung me with its murderous fangs. No jury in the world would convict me of murder, because you have sworn to my insanity and sent me to a mad house. I would, at the trial, enter a plea of insanity and the verdict of the jury would be 'not guilty, by reason of insanity.'" To his son, a little boy of 11 years old, he wrote on August 8th, 1888: 'When I get out, God only knows what will become of myself and of you and your mother. Your mother has made me a perfectly reckless and desperate man and I care not what, in my reckless desperation, I may do. I fear the very worst.'

"I have quoted these passages from the recent letters of the relator, in order that it may clearly be seen that, notwithstanding the sane appearances at the time of his hearing before me, and notwithstanding the ability and propriety with which he conducted his own case on that occasion, the evidences of his insanity at a very recent day are so numerous and so strong that the fact of that insanity at the time the letters were written is indubitable and beyond the possibility of denial. Many such letters as those which I have already quoted from are in my hands. The relator, at the hearing, admitted that he wrote them all, and confessed to the only inference which is fairly deducible from them, but insisted that he was now quite well and in his proper mind again, and the only question for the court was what is his present condition. This argument he pressed upon the court with great force and with all that eloquence with which infinite misfortune and misery appeal to pity. Mr. Norton is undoubtedly at the present time much better than he has been. This is apparent from his conversation and demeanor, and is the evidence of his physicians. It may be the beginning of a complete restoration of his health, bodily and mental. That it may turn out to be so will, I am sure, be the sincere and earnest hope of any person who has heard the story of his great misfortune. If the present improvement shall continue and develop into a perfect cure of the disease with which he has been afflicted, he will in a few months go forth from his present seclusion freed from the painful ailment which it has been his misfortune to suffer, and which for a time has withdrawn him from his friends. The great writ of habeas corpus will always be at his command to test his right to freedom from restraint. At present it must be obvious to every one acquainted with the facts, and will, upon reflection, probably be seen by himself, that a further period of probation is absolutely requisite before he can be pronounced recovered, and that it is a duty which the court owes to him, as well as to his relatives and friends, and to the public, to leave him under medical treatment until such time as his recovery shall be no longer a doubtful question, but a demonstrated fact. That that time may arrive speedily no one can more earnestly hope than the judge who heard his unhappy case. I have but a single suggestion to add, and that is that, in view of the deeply seated dislike which the relator has conceived to his present place of residence and the strong antipathy which he has shown to his present surroundings, it would perhaps be as well for his wife and relatives to consider whether, on the whole, it would not be better to transfer Mr. Norton to some other place for treatment. The court has no power to do so. This remark is not to be considered in any degree as a reflection upon the management of the institution which is his present abode, but it seems highly beliefs on questions of opinion, however absurd, are not a proper test.¹ Where a person is affected with a delusion upon one specific subject, but is rational in other respects, he is to be considered insane upon that subject, but not upon other subjects.²

(f) Imbecility.—Imbecility is a general weakness of the intellect which may be ex nativitate, as in the case of idiots, or may be caused by disease or old age. As distinguished from lunacy, it is without delusions, and is rarely, if ever, attended by lucid intervals. The test of this form of insanity is the inability of the subject to transact the ordinary affairs of life, to understand their nature and effect, and to exercise his will in relation to them.³

probable that, under the circumstances, and in view of the strong feelings of Mr. Norton upon this subject, a change of his residence would be beneficial to him. The present writ of habeas corpus is dismissed."

In a recent case in Wisconsin a man whose health had been impaired by excessive drinking, and who for twenty years had lived happily with his wife, suddenly and without cause became convinced of her infidelity and insisted on it at all times and places; he became morose, neglected his business, refused to take medicine under a belief that he was in danger of being poisoned, and changed his abode, leaving his family. The court held that he was insane. Barbo v. Rider, 67 Wis. 598.

1. Matters of Opinion.—In the Chafin Will Case, 32 Wis. 557, the court said: "If a man really believes that he is made of glass, or that he is the Christ, or that he is dead, and persists in the opinion, we readily conclude that he is the victim of hallucination or insane delusion, because such opinions are inconsistent with the condition of sanity. But we can draw no such conclusion from the mere belief in witches, ghosts, dreams or spiritual manifestations, or in strange or absurd views on scientific or religious subjects, because such opinions are consistent with sanity." Thus in Bonard's Will, 16 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 128, a belief that the souls of men after death passed into animals was held not inconsistent with sanity.

2. Partial Insanity.—In Blakely's Will Case, 48 Wis. 294, a medical witness testified that in his opinion there was no such thing as partial insanity, that a man was either sane or insane. The court held that this might be true in the light of medical science, but was not true in the law. This decision is fully borne out by the authorities. In Jenkins

v. Morris, L. R., 14 Ch. D. 674, a lessor, at the time he made the lease of a farm, labored under the delusion that it was impregnated with sulphur. On an issue directed as to the capacity of the lessor to make the lease, rational letters by the lessor relating to the lease were put in evidence. The trial judge directed the jury that it was a practical question whether the lessor was so insane as to be incompetent to dispose of his property, though he believed it to be full of sulphur. The jury found that the lease was valid. In refusing a motion for a new trial BAGGALLY, L. J., said: "Assuming that Price [the lessor] was subject to certain insane delusions, as to which I think there can be no doubt, having regard to the admitted evidence in this case, that is not a sufficient reason, in my opinion, why he should be held to have been incompetent to execute the lease in question, if the jury were satisfied that the delusions to which he was subject had not so far affected the general faculties of his mind as to render him incompetent to deal with the property which was the subject of the lease." Citing Smee v. Smee, L. R., 5 P. D. 84. See also Banks v. Goodfellow, L. R., 5 Q. B. 549; State v. Spencer, 1 Zab. (N. J.) 196; Forman's Will, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 274; Dew v. Clark, 3 Add. Eccl. 79.

3. Mannin v. Ball, Smith & Batty, 183; Wright v. Jackson, 59 Wis. 569; Hovey v. Chase, 52 Me. 304.

Although the mind of a person may be to some extent impaired by age or disease, still, if he be capable of transacting his ordinary business—if he understands the nature of the business in which he is engaged and the effect of what he is doing, and can exercise his will with reference thereto—his acts will be valid and binding. English v. Porter, 109 Ill. 285.

(g) Lucid Interval.—A lucid interval is such a restoration to reason as will enable a subject to comprehend and do an act with such reason, memory and judgment, as to make it a legal act.¹

(h) Moral Insanity is a morbid perversion of the moral feelings without illusion or erroneous conviction.²

2. Confinement of Persons Alleged to be Insane.—Where a person is insane to such a degree that it would be dangerous both to himself and others to permit him to remain at liberty, he may be confined by anyone, but only so long as it may be necessary to institute proper proceedings to determine his insanity.³

1. Frazer v. Frazer, 2 Del. Chan. Rep. 260. The party must be in a condition of mind, freely and voluntarily, and without any design of pretending sanity, to confess his delusion. Waring v. Waring, 6 Moo. P. C. C. 341.

Lunacy being once established, the burden is on the party claiming through some act of the lunatic, to show that it was done in a lucid interval, and, a return to sanity being proved, the burden is upon the party claiming a relapse into insanity. Wright v. Jackson, 59 Wis. 569.

An act done in a lucid interval by one who has been found to be a lunatic is binding on him, but the proof of the lucid interval in which it was done must be clear. Gangwere's Estate, 14 Pa. St. 417; Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. 605; Towart v. Sellers, 5 Dow. 231.

Temporary Insanity.—In Overall v. State, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 672, where the proof showed that the defendant was subject to occasional or temporary attacks of insanity, and was visited by one of such attacks shortly before the commission of the offence, and was not shown to have recovered, it was held that the law presumed the insane condition to remain as last shown.

In Physio-Medical College v. Wilkinson, 108 Ind. 314, it was held that where it appears that a person was, at any given time, of unsound mind, unless from some temporary or transient cause, the legal presumption is that the state of mind continues, until the contrary is made to appear. This rule does not apply to cases of occasional or intermittent insanity, but it does to all cases of apparently confirmed insanity, of whatever nature. It was consequently decided that a woman eighty years old, who was so physically and mentally prostrated as to be of unsound mind, and incapable of comprehending the nature of a contract, would not be presumed from lapse of time to have recovered her reason.

2. The weight of modern authority is, that moral insanity is of itself insufficient to invalidate a civil act or excuse a criminal act. Boardman v. Woodman, 47 N. H. 120; Frere v. Peacock, 1 Rob. Ecc. 442. Moral insanity, not proceeding from or accompanied with insane delusion, is insufficient to set aside a will. Forman's Will, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 274; Boyd v. Eby, 8 Watts (Pa.) 66. Moral debasement is not necessarily insanity. Mayo v. Jones, 78 N. Car. 402. In State v. Spencer, 1 Zab. (N. J.) 197, the court said: "I cannot yield to the doctrine which has been suggested, founded upon what is called moral insanity. Every man, however learned and intellectual, who, regardless of the laws of God and man, is guilty of murder, or other high and disgraceful crimes, is most emphatically insane. Such doctrine would lead to the most pernicious consequences, and it would very soon come to be a question for the jury, whether the enormity of the act was not in itself sufficient evidence of such insanity, and then the more horrible the act, the greater would be the evidence of such insanity. See also Com. v. Mosler, 4 Pa. St. 266; Boswell v. State, 63 Ala. 307.

3. In Colby v. Jackson, 12 N. H. 526, Colby being insane, and it being dangerous to permit him to be at liberty, Jackson, one of the selectmen of the town, confined him. He then, with the other selectmen, applied to the judge of probate for an inquisition upon Colby. A warrant was issued and the selectmen made an inquisition, and declared their opinion to be that Colby was insane, but made no return of the inquisition to the judge of probate, and no further proceedings were had. Colby subsequently brought an action against Jackson for false imprisonment. The evidence was clear that Colby was insane at the time of his arrest. The court instructed the jury that the burden was upon the defendant to prove that the plaintiff was insane and that it was dangerous to suffer him to be at large; that if the plaintiff were so insane that it was dangerous to himself and others to permit him to be at liberty, the defendant might confine him until application could be made to the proper authority and a guardian appointed; that such an application must be made in a reasonable time; that the defendant had no right to confine him for an indefinite time, as long as he should think proper, without making any application for and procuring the appointment of a guardian, even if he were dangerous. A verdict was rendered for the plaintiff. The supreme court sustained the judgment, saying: "As soon as the defendant, by abandoning the legal proceedings which had been commenced, and still continuing the imprisonment, asserted the right of a confinement of indefinite duration, he abused his authority and became a trespasser ab initio." Under the Revised Statutes of New Hampshire, ch. 9, § 16, selectmen are protected where they act in good faith and at the request of the friends of the lunatic. Davis v. Merrill, 47 N. H. 208.

Where, however, neither the welfare of the insane person nor the safety of others requires that he shall be confined, the person who arrests and detains him becomes liable in damages to the person arrested.¹

Where a person actually sane is arrested and detained, the per-

Arrest of Insane Persons.—In Lott v. Sweet, 33 Mich. 308, the court said: "It is just as competent for a magistrate, as conservator of the peace, to order into custody an insane man who is committing a breach of the peace in his presence, as to order the arrest of a sane person under like circumstances; though an insane person may not be guilty of crime, he may lawfully be prevented from doing harm." See also Anderdon v. Burrows, 4 C. & P. 210; People v. Turner, 55 Ill. 280; Look v. Dean, 108 Mass. 116; Underwood v. People, 32 Mich. 1; Paetz v. Dain, 1 Wilson (Ind.) 149; In re Oakes, 8 Law Rep. (Mass.) 122; Re Ross, 38 La. An. 523.

1. "No man can be deprived of his liberty without the judgment of his peers, and it matters not to the law whether the alleged cause of detention is insanity or crime. Unless there is danger to the public or to the patient or to his estate, he should not be in duress pending the investigation, nor indeed after its conclusion, though adverse to him." Commonwealth v. Kirkbride, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 419. The danger of a contrary rule is shown by JUDGE BREWSTER in Commonwealth v. Kirkbride, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 400, where he says: "A man is sent to an insane asylum by his relatives and family physician. He is there for many months. They institute no proceeding in lunacy, but deprive him of his liberty and property without any direct sanction of the law. Even correspondence itself is under surveillance. At last he is able to sue out a writ of habeas corpus, and comes before a judge, who cannot be expected to be an expert upon such a question, and who, looking at the evidence, concludes that the man is insane and remands him. It is then res adjudicata, and it might be that no other judge would review the decision. Thus, without a finding of lunacy, without the right of traverse to a jury, and an appeal to the supreme court to correct errors in the proceeding, a man may be detained for life. It is surely no answer to all this to say that he is no longer put in a dungeon, or chained, or waist-coated and tortured, as of old. . . . Imprisonment is none the less a wrong because the place of confinement is a palace." In Look v. Dean and Look v. Choate, 108 Mass. 116, actions for false imprisonment were brought by Look against Dean, a constable, and Choate, the keeper of an insane asylum. Look was arrested without warrant at a camp meeting while addressing a crowd. It did not appear that he was violent or dangerous. The court held that the mere fact that a man is insane does not authorize his arrest and confinement without a warrant, if he is not dangerous to himself and others, and that in this case Look was entitled to recover. See also Hall v. Semple, 3 F. & F. 337; Anderson v. Burrows, 4 C. & P. 210; sons arresting and detaining him will be responsible in damages.¹

Where a person is arrested or confined as a lunatic, whether he is sane or insane, he is entitled to a writ of habeas corpus that the legality of his confinement may be inquired into.²

3. Jurisdiction Over Insane Persons.—In England, a lunatic is regarded as a ward of chancery, not of its own general jurisdiction, but by virtue of a royal commission issued to the chancellor. The king, as parens patriæ, is considered to be intrusted with the care and custody of his insane subjects, but to avoid applications to him in person, the royal authority is delegated to the chancellor.³

In the absence of legislation, it has been held that the American courts of equity derive a similar right from the commonwealth.⁴

Force v. Probasco, 43 N. J. 539; Abbot v. Fremont, 34 N. H. 432; Keleher v. Putnam, 60 N. H. 30.

1. In Van Deusen v. Newcomer, 40 Mich. 90, JUDGE COOLEY said: "But I understand the defence to go further and insist that even if Mrs. Newcomer was really sane, Dr. Van Deusen, if he has acted in good faith, is not responsible in damages for her confinement. What in that case is the alternative is not very clearly pointed out by the defence. It cannot be that no one is responsible. The law of no free country can tolerate a condition of things under which a person innocent of crime, and threatening no injury to himself or to others, can be restrained of his liberty, and no person be responsible for the injury he suffers. To admit the possibility would be to concede that arbitrary imprisonment under some circumstances is lawful; and that would be to concede that regulated and protected freedom does not exist. But if the superintendent is not responsible, we look in vain for adequate responsibility anywhere."

If the supposed insane person makes no objection at the time of his imprisonment, he cannot complain of it afterwards. Van Deusen v. Newcomer, 40 Mich. 90.

2. Commonwealth v. Kirkbride, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 419; Norris v. Seed, 3 Exch. 782; Com. v. West Penn. Hosp., 3 Pitts. (Pa.) 299; Underwood v. People, 32 Mich. 1; Territory v. Gallatin Co., 6 Mont. 297; Red v. Turlington, 2 Burr. 1115; ex parte Greenwood, 24 L. J., Q. B. 148.

Right to Jury Trial.—In England a person alleged to be insane is entitled to have the question of his insanity tried by a jury. Lunacy Regulation Acts, 16 & 17 Vict., ch. 70, § 40; In re Crompe, L. R., 4 Ch. App. 653. The same right has been recognized in the United States. See In re Dey, 1 Stockt. (N. J.) 181; Smith v. People, 65 Ill. 375; State v. Baird, 47 Mo. 301; Black Hawk Co. v. Springer, 58 Iowa 417.

3. Before the statute de prerogation regis (17 Ed. II, ch. 9), the custody of persons and lands of such idiots as were possessed of lands was in the lord of the fee. By this statute such custody was taken from the lord and entrusted to the king. The statute (17 Ed. II, ch. 10) prescribed the duties of the king as to lunatics, and constituted him a trustee.

Origin of Chancellor's Jurisdiction Over Lunatics.—In Meurer's Appeal, 119 Pa. St. 115, the court explained the manner in which the chancellor's jurisdiction in lunacy was exercised: "In early times, commissioners to enquire into the fact of lunacy were issued directly by the crown to the sheriff, coroner, escheator, or to any private citizen by whom the inquest was made, assisted as in other cases by a jury of the county." Subsequently they were issued to the chancellor, who acted not virtute officii, but by virtue of the special commission from the crown." See 3 Blackstone's Com. 427; Eyre v. Shaftesbury, 2 P. Wms. 118; Burford v. Lenthall, 2 Atk. 553.

4. Jurisdiction in the United States.—In Nailor v. Nailor, 4 Dana (Ky.) 339, the court said: "So far as the powers exercised by him [the chancellor] were for the benefit, security and safety of that unfortunate class of individuals, as subjects of England, they

4. The Inquisition—(a) The Petition and Commission.—It is the ordinary practice, both in England and the United States, to issue commissions out of chancery in the nature of writs de lunatico inquirendo, to enquire into cases of alleged insanity. The commission is issued on petition, which must be made by a person related by blood or marriage to the alleged lunatic, or interested in his estate, and must be accompanied by an affidavit of the truth of the facts therein stated. The issuing of the commission is discretionary with the court.¹

(b) Notice.—The party alleged to be insane is usually entitled to notice of the execution of the commission, and, except in cases of dangerous madness, is entitled to be present at the proceedings.²

are equally necessary for the protection, security and safety of the same class of individuals as citizens of the colonies, and as citizens of this commonwealth; and the laws in force there are applicable here as to the rights of individuals; and remedy should be afforded by some tribunal. And, although those powers were exercised by the chancellor there, as a prerogative power of the king, and as his ministerial agent, acting under his special grant, the powers have been assumed and exercised by our courts of equity, and their assumption of the power sanctioned by legislative enactment, and it is now too late to question the jurisdiction of the court over the subject." In Corrie's Case, 2 Bland's Ch. (Md.) 467, the court said: "Here it has always been admitted that . . . the chancellor of Maryland was invested with all the powers with which the chancellor of England had been clothed, as founded on an obvious necessity that the law should place somewhere the care of individuals who could not take care of themselves." The same doctrine has been upheld in Latham v. Wiswell, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 294; Dodge v. Cole, 97 Ill. 338; McCord v. Ochiltree, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 15. But it was doubted in Oakley v. Long, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 254. In many of the states of the Union the care of persons non compos mentis is confided to special tribunals, as to the probate courts in Massachusetts, and is not made a part of equitable jurisdiction.

1. Who may sue Out Commission.—The commission cannot be sued out by a mere stranger. Covenhoven's Case, Saxt. ch. 19. A petition for a commission against a husband cannot be made by his wife in her own name, but must be made by her next friend. Campbell v. Campbell, 39 Ala. 312.

Affidavit in Support of Petition.—In Lincoln's Case, 1 Brewst. (Pa.) 392, the objection was raised that the petition was not supported by an affidavit. The court, however, refused to sustain the objection, because the defendant waived the defect by going into a hearing on the merits. It has also been held that the proceedings upon a commission will not be void because the petition was unsupported by an affidavit. Bethea v. McLennon, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 523; Plank's Case, 10 Penn. L. J. 519.

Where it appears that the lunatic does not need protection for himself or his property, the court may refuse a commission. In re Clare, 2 J. & La. T. 571; Owing's Case, 1 Bland's Ch. (Md.) 290; Colvin's Case, 3 Md. Ch. 206.

Under the Michigan statutes, on the petition for the appointment of a guardian on the ground of extreme old age and incapacity of managing property, mental incapacity must be alleged and proved in order to give the court jurisdiction. Re Storick, (Mich.) 7 West. Rep. 882.

2. When Notice May be Dispensed with.—In Tracy's Case, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 580, the chancellor said that it was the privilege of a party against whom a commission of lunacy is issued to have notice and to be present at its execution. If there are any circumstances in the case which render it improper or unsafe to give notice to the party, as in some cases of furious madness, the facts should be stated in the application to the court, so that a provision might be inserted in the commission dispensing with the necessity of notice. See also Hutts v. Hutts, 62 Ind. 214; Vanauken's Case, 2 Stock (N. J.) 186; Whitenack's Case, 2 Green Ch. (N. J.) 252.

Notice must be made upon the party in person.¹ Want of notice has in some cases been held to render the proceedings void.² It is largely within the discretion of the court as to what parties other than the alleged lunatic shall have notice of the commission and be entitled to be present at its execution.³

(c) Execution of the Commission.—The commissioners address a precept to the sheriff requiring him to summon a jury of good and lawful men of his county to appear before them and inquire into the question of the alleged lunacy of the person mentioned in the petition.⁴ The commissioners have the power to issue

Presence of the Party.—In Lincoln's Case, 1 Brewst. (Pa.) 392, it was held that the party should be present and have all the rights of a defendant, but that the commissioner and jury were not required to examine him. See also Child's Case, 1 C. E. Green (N. J.) 498; Medlock v. Cogburn, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 477; Commonwealth v. Kirkbride, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 419. In Nyce v. Hamilton, 90 Ind. 417, it was held that where the subject was produced in court and was present during the trial, the proceedings being in all respects according to the statute, the court had jurisdiction, no other notice to him being necessary. See also McAfee v. Commonwealth, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 305; In re Demeet, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 480. But in Morton v. Sims, 64 Ga. 298, it was held that a commission issued without the requisite notice, and neither preceded nor followed by the appointment of a guardian ad litem, is not aided by the presence of the imbecile and his representation by counsel, even where the counsel gives his consent to the judgment appointing the guardian, it appearing that the commission was executed on the next day after it was issued, and that the judgment followed immediately. The object of the notice is that there may be due warning to make objection for legal cause to the commission or any of the commissioners, as well as to prepare for adducing evidence on the main question.

1. Morton v. Sims, 64 Ga. 298; Chase v. Hathaway, 14 Mass. 222; Segur v. Pellerin, 16 La. 63; Ex parte Dozeir, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 81. Notice must be given even to a nonresident. In re Petit, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 174.

2. Effect of Want of Notice.—Eslava v. Lepreler, 21 Ala. 504; Molton v. Henderson, 62 Ala. 426.

In Kimball v. Fisk, 39 N. H. 110, it was held that want of notice rendered the proceedings voidable and not void. An inquisition of lunacy cannot be avoided collaterally for want of notice of the holding of the inquest. Rogers v. Walker, 6 Pa. St. 371; Willis v. Willis, 12 Pa. St. 159; Arrington v. Short, 3 Hawks (N. Car.) 71. Want of notice is cured by a traverse. Rogers v. Walker, 6 Pa. St. 371.

3. Notice to Relatives.—In re Nesbitt, 2 Phillips 245.

In Ex parte Hinchman, 4 Clark (Pa.) 184, it was held that such relations and friends as counsel a finding against the alleged lunatic are excluded from the list of persons competent to receive notice of the execution of the commission. In Rogers' Case, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 141, it was held that failure to give notice of an application for a commission to one of the heirs of the lunatic is, at most, only an irregularity, as he has no absolute right to notice. See also In re Scarlett, L. R., 8 Ch. App. 739; In re Brown, 1 Mac. & G. 201; In re Clements, 2 Cooper 166.

In Morton v. Sims, 64 Ga. 298, it was held that if the nearest adult relatives of the alleged imbecile are themselves the petitioners for the appointment of a guardian, the ten days' notice provided for in section 1855 of the Georgia Code, should be given to three of the next nearest, or if there be no adult relatives within this state except the petitioners, then, in order that the spirit of the section as well as of the general law may be observed, the ordinary should either require ten days' notice to be given to the alleged imbecile himself, or else designate by order a guardian ad litem to receive the notice for him.

4. Jury of Inquisition.—In Pennsylvania the number of jurors must not be more than twelve nor less than six. Act of June 13th, 1836, § 7. In England the number of jurors is not limited to subpœnas, and to compel the attendance of witnesses.¹ They also have the power to compel the production of the alleged lunatic by those having charge of him.² The return should be made in a reasonable time.³

(d) Finding of the Inquisition.—The inquisition must find that the party is of unsound mind, and is mentally incapable of governing himself, or of managing his affairs.⁴ The court may, in its discretion, set aside the finding and order the issue of a new commission.⁵ A writ of error does not lie to the inquisi-twelve, but the concurrence of twelve out of a greater number summoned is sufficient. Ex parte Wragge, 5 Vesey 450. It is the duty of the sheriff to summon the jurors without the interference of the commissioners. Ex parte Wager, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 11.

Inquisition in Forma Pauperis.—In Pennsylvania, under the act of June 13th, 1836, if the estate of the alleged lunatic is so small that the costs of an inquisition will be an undue burden upon it, the court may direct an inquest to be empanelled from the jurors attending the court, and that the inquest be held by one of the judges thereof, at such convenient time and place as shall be ordered. This was allowed In re Cusick, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 469, where the lunatic's estate amounted to $1,300.

1. Ex parte Lund, 6 Vesey 781. In Ex parte Plank, 5 Clark (Pa.) 35, it was held that it was the duty of the commissioners to subpœna witnesses on the application of the alleged lunatic and that a refusal to do so would invalidate the proceedings.

2. Ex parte Child, 1 C. E. Green (N. J.) 498; In re Wenman, 1 P. Wms. 701.

3. Return Day of Commission.—Anon, 2 Atk. 52. In Lincoln's Case, 1 Brewst. (Pa.) 392, the court held that the commission should have a return day named therein. See also In re Plank, 5 Clark (Pa.) 35. In England the commission must be returned within a month. Shelf. Lun. 106.

4. In re Morgan, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 236; In re Rogers, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 141. What is a sufficient finding has been discussed under the heading DEFINITION, supra.

5. Ex parte Atk., Jac. Ch. 333; In re Lasher, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 97. Contra, Carter Hinchman's Case, Bright. (Pa.) 181.

On a hearing upon the return to a writ of habeas corpus for the discharge of a person adjudged insane, it appeared that the jury who examined the relator failed to certify upon oath that the charge was correct, and that only two jurors qualified to do so signed the verdict. The relator was accordingly discharged from custody. Territory v. Gallatin Co., 6 Mont. 297.

In Weaver's Appeal, 116 Pa. St. 225, the Common Pleas set aside an inquisition finding the fact of lunacy, upon the ground that the evidence was insufficient to sustain the finding. The Supreme Court, in reversing the decree, said: "It cannot be doubted that if there are objections to the regularity or validity of the proceedings, such as the appointment of improper persons as commissioners or jurors upon the inquest, or misbehavior in office by those functionaries; or if the formalities required by law have been disregarded; or if the alleged lunatic is not within the jurisdiction of the court, for these and other like causes doubtless the court may interfere, and if necessary set aside the inquest. But that is a very different kind of authority from the power to review the facts found by the inquest and determine them upon the merits, as those merits appear to the court. That kind of authority is not conferred by any law, and therefore we cannot hold it to exist. . . . To allow the court to review the testimony taken before the inquest and decide upon its merits, is practically to supersede the traverse which is the remedy provided by law. Nor do we understand how the court can have access to the testimony in order to review it. It is no part of the record and there is no provision for its return by the inquest or by the commissioner. The inquisition must be returned because the commission so directs, but not so as to the testimony. There is no provision for its reduction to writing, nor for bills of exception to bring it on the record. Moreover, if the court has power to examine and decide upon it finally, this court necessarily has power to review

tion,¹ but the proceedings are reviewable by certiorari.²

(e) Traverse of the Inquisition.—In England, and in those of the United States in which no right to notice of the execution of the commission is recognized in the alleged lunatic, a right to traverse the inquisition is accorded.³ In States where notice of the time and place of holding the commission is allowed to the alleged lunatic as a matter of right, a traverse is only allowed within the discretion of the court.⁴ A party in interest with the alleged lunatic may be permitted to traverse the inquisition.⁵

Upon the trial of a traverse, the inquisition is prima facie evidence, and casts upon the traverser the burden of proof.⁶ The the action of the court below, but has no means of exercising that power, because the testimony cannot be brought before us for want of a bill of exceptions. Upon every view of the subject we are of opinion that the learned court below was in error in making absolute the rule to set aside the inquisition."

1. Ex parte Gest, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 317.

2. Commonwealth v. Beaumont, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 367.

3. In re Cummings, 1 De G. Mac. & G. 537; Walker v. Russell, 10 S. Car.; 82; Covenhoven's Case, Sax. (N. J.) 19.

4. In New York a traverse is not allowed as a matter of right, but is within the discretion of the court. In Christie's Case, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 242, the court said: "In this case, as it appears that the alleged lunatic, in consequence of his age and other infirmities, cannot be brought before the court to be examined personally, I should not grant the traverse upon his application, without first having him examined privately by one of the masters of this court." See also Ex parte Tracy, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 580; Clapp's Case, 20 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 385; In re Russell, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 38. In Pennsylvania the act of June 13th, 1836, § 12, provides that every person aggrieved by the inquisition, may traverse the same upon or after return thereof, and have the like remedy and advantage as in other cases of traverse upon untrue inquisitions, or office found. But the traverse must be taken and filed in the prothonotary's office within three months after the return of the inquisition, unless the court, on special cause shown, shall extend the time for so doing. Act of May 8th, 1874. See Commonwealth v. Haskell, 2 Brew. (Pa.) 491; McGinnis v. Commonwealth, 74 Pa. St. 245; In re Mary S. Perrine, 41 N. J. Eq. 409; Eckstein's Case, 1 Pars. (Pa.) 59; Commonwealth v. Beaumont, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 366.

5. Who may Traverse an Inquisition.—A grantee whose conveyance is invalidated by the inquisition will be permitted to traverse it, on stipulating to be bound by the final decision therein. Yanger v. Skinner, 1 McCart. (N. J.) 389; Ex parte Christie, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 242; Medlock v. Cogburn, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 477. And where such a person has joined in a traverse, and consented to be bound by its results, the other parties cannot abandon it without his consent. Ex parte Giles, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 243.

The petitioner may traverse an inquisition in favor of sanity. In re Dickinson, 1 W. N. C. (Pa.) 96.

In Fust's Case, 1 Cox 418, the court refused leave to a husband to traverse an inquisition where there were circumstances which raised a question as to the validity of the marriage.

Mere strangers will not be permitted to traverse an inquisition. Rorback v. Van Blarcom, 5 C. E. Green (N. J.) 461.

6. Effect of the Finding as Evidence.

—In McGinnis v. Commonwealth, 74 Pa. St. 245, the traverser gave evidence to disprove the finding. The commonwealth then offered to rebut by evidence in support of the finding, to which it was objected that such evidence was in chief, and ought to have been given before the traverser began his evidence. The supreme court held that the evidence was properly admitted, saying: "The finding of the inquisition stands until it is set aside or disproved, and it may be unnecessary for the commonwealth to give any evidence. This effect of the finding is prima facie, according to many decisions, throwing the burden of disproof upon the lunatic.

trial is conducted and bills of exception taken to the evidence as in other trials before a jury, according to the course of the common law, and a writ of error lies to the rulings and charge of the court.¹

(f) Supersedeas.—The court to which an inquisition has been returned may, on petition of the lunatic setting forth that he has recovered, grant a supersedeas of the commission.² The usual practice in the United States is to refer the petition to a master to take proofs as to the state of mind of the petitioner, and to report the proofs and his opinion thereon.³ In England, the chancellor hears the petition in person, without a reference.⁴

or habitual drunkard." In Rogers v. Walker, 6 Pa. St. 371, it was contended that after defendant's proofs were given in rebuttal, the finding was to be laid out of the case; but GIBSON, C. J., denied this, saying: "Like legal presumption, an inquisition continues to operate till overpowered; and standing as full proof till then, it necessarily remains before the jury till the question of sanity has been decided by them. It consequently stands as a particular in the proofs." See also Ludwick v. Commonwealth, 18 Pa. St. 175; Lecky v. Cunningham, 56 Pa. St. 373; Hill v. Day, 34 N. J. Eq. 150.

1. McGinnis v. Commonwealth, 74 Pa. St. 245. In Iowa a person found by the commissioners of insanity to be insane may appeal to the circuit court within ten days after the finding is filed; but the statute does not provide for a rehearing before the commissioners; and from a refusal by them to grant a rehearing an appeal will not lie. Wilson v. State, 66 Iowa 487. In Illinois there is no right of appeal in a proceeding to enquire into the insanity of a person, under Rev. Stat. 1874, ch. 85; People v. Gilbert, 115 Ill. 59.

2. Ex parte Rogers, 1 Halst. Ch. (N. J.) 46; Ex parte Bampton, Moseley 78; Ex parte Harks, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 567.

The court will not supersede a commission where the testimony shows that the petitioner is liable at any moment to become excitable beyond control. Ex parte Helmbold, 35 Leg. Intelligencer (Pa.) 291. In Ex parte Ferrars, Moseley 332, the court suspended the commission for several months to see if the petitioner was perfectly recovered. The chancellor may order the petitioner to be brought before him for examination. In re Rogers, 1 Halst. Ch. (N. J.) 46; In re Dyce Sombre, 1 Phillips 436; and he may discharge the committee at his discretion, or order an issue to try the question. In re Weis, 1 C. E. Green (N. J.) 318.

In Dyce Sombre's Case, 1 Mac. & Gor. 116, LORD CHANCELLOR COTTENHAM said: "There is often great difficulty in ascertaining whether there exists unsoundness of mind of a character to subject the party to the operation of a commission; but, when the jury have affirmed that proposition by a verdict unquestioned, the Great Seal has been most cautious in superseding it. Cases continually arise in which it is done; but although delusions and even general insanity may exist, and yet the Great Seal may withhold a commission if not required for the protection of person or property, upon application for a supersedeas very different conditions regulate the discretion of the court. There may be no proof of the disease at the time, but it may be likely to recur; it may still exist, but the patient may have the power to conceal it; the permanence of the restoration may be doubtful; and time is then taken for the proof of experience. . . . I have not in my recollection any case in which a commission has been superseded when any declared illusion continued." In this case, as it did not appear that the lunatic was competent to manage his estate, and as no application had been made to discharge the committee, the supersedeas was refused.

3. Ex parte Rogers, 1 Halst. Ch. (N. J.) 46; Weaver's Appeal, 116 Pa. St. 225.

4. In re Weis, 1 C. E. Green (N. J.) 318.

Costs.—In Hassenplug's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 527, upon petition of A alleging that B was non compos mentis, the court awarded a commission in the

(g) Costs.—As a general rule, the whole subject of costs in lunacy proceedings is within the discretion of the court. Where the proceedings are undertaken upon probable cause and in good faith, the costs are regarded as necessary expenses incurred for the benefit of the party, and are payable out of his estate.¹

5. Committees and Guardians—(a) Who May be Appointed.—On the return of an inquisition finding a person a lunatic, the court may, in its discretion, commit the custody of the lunatic's per-nature of a writ de lunatico inquirendo, and the return found B to be a lunatic. B traversed the return, and obtained a verdict and judgment that he was sane. Subsequently the court, being of opinion that the original application of A was not without probable cause, imposed all the costs of the proceedings upon B, who appealed. The supreme court affirmed the decree. See also In re Beckwith, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 443; In re Root, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 625; In re Arnhout, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 497; In re E. S., L. R., 4 Ch. D. 301; In re White, 2 C. E. Green (N. J.) 274.

When Paid Out of Lunatic's Estate.

—Costs may be ordered to be paid out of the alleged lunatic's estate before final decree, where there is no certificate of the absence of probable cause. Clark's Case, 22 Pa. St. 466. But costs are not payable out of the proceeds of the sale of a lunatic's real estate until the costs of the sale and the debts of creditors having a prior lien are satisfied. Malone's App., 79 Pa. St. 481.

In Weaver's Case, 116 Pa. St. 225, it was decided that where the common pleas had set aside an inquisition finding the fact of lunacy upon the ground that the evidence was insufficient to sustain such finding, it was error to impose the costs of the proceedings upon the petitioner.

In Dyce Sombre's Case, 1 Mac. & G. 116, where a petition for a supersedeas was presented in the name of a lunatic and was dismissed, the court refused to make any order as to costs; although it was apparent that the petition originated with third parties, the court considering that it had no power to make those parties pay the costs.

In Folger's Case, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 169, where on petition of a relative of a lunatic who had received from him a deed of a farm a few days before the finding of the inquisition of lunacy, an issue was awarded to try the fact of lunacy, and the party on trial was found to have been a lunatic for several years preceding, the party traversing the inquisition was ordered to pay the costs. See also In re Crosbie, 11 Ir. Ch. 432; In re Clapp, 20 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 385; In re Lytle, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 251.

In Indiana it was held, that where a proceeding to set aside a guardianship of an insane person is unsuccessful, the costs should be taxed on the plaintiff, and not upon the guardian or estate of the insane person. Cochran v. Amsden, 104 Ind. 282.

The costs of an inquisition should be taxed by the court having jurisdiction over the proceedings. Gulick v. Conover, 3 Green (N. J.) 420.

1. Counsel Fee.—The estate of the lunatic is liable in the hands of the committee for the professional services of the attorney who conducted the lunacy proceedings. Weir v. Myers, 34 Pa. St. 377; Brownlee v. Switzer, 49 Ind. 221. In New York it was held that where an inquisition was found in favor of the alleged lunatic, the court could not grant an allowance for counsel fees, witnesses, etc., to him, and charge the same upon the petitioner. In re McAdams, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 292.

In Indiana in a proceeding to have a person adjudged to be of unsound mind and to secure the appointment of a guardian for such person, it is the duty of the guardian, under section 5, 2 R. S. 1876, p. 600, to pay, out of the assets or property of the ward, reasonable attorney's fees to the attorney employed to conduct the inquest; but it was held that no specific contract in relation thereto, made before the determination of the inquest, could bind the estate of the ward beyond the reasonable value of the services thus rendered; and, in an action therefor by the attorney against the guardian, where the complaint was so framed as to permit a recovery of what such services were worth, it was held that it was not necessary to prove an alleged agreement to pay a particular sum. State v. Newlin, 69 Ind. 108.

son or estate, or both, to some suitable person or persons.¹ The lunatic's next of kin or heir-at-law are preferred in the appointment of the committee;² but, as a general rule, such person will be appointed as will be most likely to protect the property from loss, without regard to the question of relationship.³

(b) Management of the Estate.—A committee appointed by a court of equity in the exercise of ordinary equity powers, is a mere officer of the court, responsible to the court, and acts only under its order and authority.⁴ He is entitled to the control and

1. An order making appointment of committee after inquisition, is not subject to appeal. Willis v. Lewis, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 14. Except in states where the care of insane persons and their estates is given to the probate court. McDonald v. Martin, 1 Mass. 543.

2. Ex parte Livingston, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 436; In re Colvin, 3 Md. Ch. 278; Ex parte Le Heup, 18 Ves. 221; Ex parte Cockayne, 7 Ves. 591.

3. In Taylor's Case, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 610, there was a contest over the validity of a marriage between the lunatic and a woman with whom he had lived for many years. The marriage having been established, a question arose as to whether a committee named by the children of a former marriage or one named by the children of the second marriage should be appointed. On this question the court decided as follows: "Although it is not a matter of course to commit the guardianship of the property of a lunatic to those who would be entitled to it at his death, as his heirs or next of kin, there are in this case several reasons why the committee named by those who have supported and established the validity of the second marriage should be preferred to the committee proposed by the adverse parties. Timpson, one of the committee thus named, having married a daughter of the first wife, has a common interest with the other three children of that marriage in protecting the property against any unreasonable charges thereon for the maintenance of the second wife or her children. And he having also been well acquainted with the situation of the lunatic's property and affairs for the last twenty-five years, and his wife having a contingent interest in the estate, he will be more likely to protect the property from loss than a mere stranger. The other person named to act with him is the son of the lunatic by the last wife. He is therefore interested in protecting the property from loss. And being a lawyer, he will be able to save considerable expense to the estate in the way of legal advice in the management of the property." See also Ex parte Colab, 3 Daly (N. Y.) 529; In re Owens, 5 Daly (N. Y.) 288.

In Coleman v. Commissioners, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 239, the father of the lunatic was appointed as the committee. In Owen's Case, 5 Daly (N. Y.) 288, the clerk of the court was appointed. In Gibson's Case, 1 Bland's Ch. (Md.) 138, the wife was appointed; and in Drew's Appeal, 57 N. H. 181, the husband was appointed.

In New York it has been held that a stranger cannot be appointed committee without the consent of the next of kin, except after a reference, of which they are entitled to notice. Ex parte Lamoree, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 122; s. c., 11 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 274; Ex parte Owens, 47 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 150. In Owen's Case, 5 Daly (N. Y.) 288, a mother made application to have a committee of the person and estate of an idiot appointed, and upon her consent the clerk of the court was appointed. A sister of the idiot thereupon applied to have the order of appointment vacated, on the ground that no notice of the proceedings had been served upon her. The court held that the proceedings were regular without the consent of the sister, and refused to vacate the order. See also In re Lord Bangor, 2 Molloy 518.

A nonresident will not be appointed. Boarman's Case, 2 Bland's Ch. (Md.) 89; Morgan's Case, 3 Bland's Ch. (Md.) 332. Nor a person who has acted as solicitor under the commission of lunacy. Ex parte Pincke, 2 Mer. 452.

4. The Committee Is the Bailiff of the Court.—"The committee is the mere bailiff or servant of the court, and as such is subject to its direction in every-management of the estate of the lunatic, and, under the direction of the court, applies the income to the support and maintenance of the lunatic.¹ The paramount consideration in regard to all expenditures is the comfort and ease of the lunatic himself, and this is always superior to the rights of those who are entitled to the estate after the lunatic's death.²

Where the estate is sufficient to maintain him and his household in the manner he had chosen for himself before his lunacy, and such maintenance is best adapted for his comfort and ease after his lunacy, the court will authorize the committee to expend a sufficient amount of the estate for that purpose.³

thing that pertains to the management of the lunatic's estate, and the maintenance of himself and family." Shaffer v. List, 114 Pa. St. 486; see also Bolling v. Turner, 6 Rand. (Va.) 584; In re Fitzgerald, 2 Sch. & Lef. 432.

In states where the probate courts have jurisdiction over lunatics, the duties of committees are the same as those of guardians of minors. Anderson v. Anderson, 42 Vt. 350.

In New York it was held that a lunatic is not divested of his property by the appointment of a committee, the committee not holding the title as trustee. People v. Comrs. of Taxes, 99 N. Y. 154.

Where a committee of a lunatic expends money of the corpus of the lunatic's estate in the repair of real estate, without obtaining an order of court authorizing him to do so, he runs the risk of having his action disapproved, and of being surcharged. But where the court subsequently approves such expenditure as reasonable and necessary, the ratification is equivalent to a previous order. Frankenfeld's Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 589; see also Patton v. Thompson, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 411; Kennedy v. Johnson, 65 Pa. St. 451.

1. Conflict Between a Trustee and the Committee.—Where, however, the legal title in the lunatic's estate is already vested in another as trustee, such a trust will not be superseded by the appointment of a committee. In Rudy's Appeal, 20 W. N. C. (Pa.) 241, where a testamentary trustee had active duties to perform, it was held that he would not be required to pay over either the principal or income of the lunatic's estate to the committee. But in Royer v. Meixel, 19 Pa. St. 240, where real estate was devised to a lunatic, and the executors were merely to take charge of it in order to prevent its alienation, it was held that the committee had the right to receive the income. See also Earp's Estate, 2 Pars. (Pa.) 178; Canada v. Hopkins, 7 Bush. (Ky.) 108; Wagner's Estate, 18 W. N. C. (Pa.) 430; Wilson's Estate, 2 Pa. St. 325.

2. Comfort of the Lunatic Only to be Considered.—In Oxenden v. Complin, 2 Ves. Jr. 69, LORD LOUGHBOROUGH said that in the management of the estate "the benefit of the lunatic only is to be considered, not that of the representatives." See Ex parte Baker, 6 Ves. 8; Dormer's Case, 2 P. W. 262; Ex parte Whitbread, 2 Meriv. 99; Kendall v. May, 10 Allen (Mass.) 59. In May v. May, 109 Mass. 256, the court said: "The guardian is appointed for the welfare, comfort and security of the ward; and not for the increase of the estate in his hands by accumulations from the income, in order to enlarge the wealth of remote or collateral relatives, who may ultimately succeed to the inheritance. It is no part of his duty to diminish the reasonable comforts of his ward, or to prevent him from enjoying such luxuries, or indulging such tastes, as would be allowable and proper in the case of a man similarly situated in other respects, but in full possession of his faculties." In this case the guardian of the lunatic, whose estate was worth $200,000, spent four hours three times a week in visiting and driving with his ward, and superintending the management of his house and grounds, and the ward's spirits and condition was much improved by these visits, it was held that a monthly charge of $100 for personal services should be allowed to the guardian in addition to his commissions.

3. Maintenance of the Lunatic's Household.—Thus in Hambleton's Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 50, an old man, a widower and without children, having a large estate,

The personal estate is primarily liable for the lunatic's support, and the real estate cannot be sold until the personal estate is exhausted.¹ The real estate may be sold to pay debts, but an order for sale will not be made where the effect of the sale would took a nephew and his family to live with and take care of him and his estate, paying the nephew a salary, and supporting the nephew and his family as part of his household. Subsequently he became afflicted with senile dementia, though retaining sound physical health, and he was adjudged a lunatic. A committee of his estate was appointed by the court, and the nephew was appointed committee of the person. The latter fulfilled his duties satisfactorily, and, by order of court, received from the committee of the estate a sufficient monthly allowance to continue the household in the same manner as before the lunacy, and also to pay his salary as before. Upon the audit of his account, the auditor and the lower court surcharged him with one-half the cost of food for the household and the wages of one servant. On appeal the supreme court held that the committee had done what it might reasonably be supposed the lunatic would have continued to do if he had retained his sanity; and what was apparently best adapted for the peace and comfort of the lunatic; and that it was, therefore, error to surcharge the committee with any cost of so maintaining the lunatic's household, including the committee and his family. In Frost's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. App. 699, allowances were made out of a lunatic's estate to needy collateral relatives for whom the lunatic, while sane, had expressed an intention to make provision. In Haycock's Case, 5 Russ. Ch. 154, an allowance was made to illegitimate children of the lunatic. In Whitbread's Case, 2 Mer. 99, to brother and sisters. In Caryfort's Case, Craig & Phil. 76, to an old personal servant as a retaining pension. In Willoughby's Case, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 257, to adult children of the lunatic.

Contributions to Charity by Lunatic.—The lunatic, if sufficiently competent to make a proper judgment, may be allowed to make reasonable contributions to charitable objects. In re Strickland, L. R., 6 Ch. App. 226; In re Heeney, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 326. He may also, under proper circumstances, make gifts. In re Gilbert, 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 222.

Travelling Expenses.—Reasonable travelling expenses will be allowed. In re Hackett, 3 Ir. Ch. 375. In Ex parte Colah, 15 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 209, where a native of Bombay, temporarily resident in New York, became insane and a committee of his person and estate was appointed, it was held that the court had power, on it being made to appear that the mental and physical condition of the lunatic would be improved, by placing him in the custody of his family in his native land, to send him home in charge of his committee, and to direct the payment of the expenses thereof, out of the estate of the lunatic. See also In re Jones, 1 Phillips 461, where leave was granted the lunatic to reside in Scotland.

Where a lunatic, before he became insane, provided a home for his wife and children, his committee cannot maintain ejectment against the wife for possession of the house. Shaffer v. List, 114 Pa. St. 486.

1. Ex parte Taylor, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 611; In re Pettit, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 596; In re Hoag, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 312.

Payment of Lunatic's Debts.—In Pennsylvania the act of June 13th, 1836, provides that if the lunatic's personal estate is insufficient to pay his debts, the court may make an order for the sale or mortgage of the real estate. Eckstein's estate, 1 Pars. (Pa.) 59.

In Illinois the court of chancery may order the sale of the lunatic's lands to provide for his support. Dodge v. Cole, 97 Ill. 338. In this case it appeared that at the time of the entering of a decree for the sale of the land of a lunatic, by her conservator, there was no statute which in terms authorized courts of chancery to entertain applications for the sale of real estate belonging to idiots or insane persons, yet it was held that the court of chancery, under its general powers over the estates of infants and lunatics or distracted persons, had jurisdiction to order the sale of a lunatic's land for her support and maintenance, on a proper application by her conservator, or to pay the conservator for moneys expended by him in supporting such ward; he having no remedy at law.

be to reduce the lunatic to a condition of want.¹ A sale of a lunatic's real estate does not ordinarily convert it into personalty;² but this rule is not uniformly applied by the courts, and is subject to numerous exceptions.³

(c) Suits by Lunatics or Their Committees.—As a general rule, the rights of a person who has been adjudged insane must be enforced by his committee or guardian. In most of the States, if the insane person is of full age, suits at law must be brought in

The supreme court of the District of Columbia, sitting in equity, has jurisdiction to direct a sale of a lunatic's real estate for his support and maintenance. In re Brent, (D. C.) 5 Cent. Rep. 449.

Sale of Lunatic's Real Estate for Payment of Debts.—In Dorney's Estate, 59 Md. 67, the trustee of the estate of a lunatic died, and a new trustee was appointed in her place, who filed his petition verified by affidavit, asking that a part of the real property of the lunatic might be sold for the payment of taxes in arrear or his property, and of a debt incurred for his support. The petition set forth the facts showing the necessity for a sale, and designated the property which the trustee deemed it most advisable for the lunatic to sell. Held, (1st) That taxes were a necessary incident attaching to the property of the lunatic, and were a part of the necessary expenses which his trustee was bound to pay. (2nd) That this petition presented a case that warranted the court below in ordering a sale, without the formalities prescribed by section 83 of article 16.

In Agricultural Ins. Co. v. Barnard, 96 N. Y. 525, it was held that the filing of a petition showing the existence of a valid outstanding debt against the insane person, which requires the disposition of his real estate to enable his committee to pay, vests the court with jurisdiction of the subject matter under the New York act, and such jurisdiction is not divested by subsequent irregularities unless steps are taken in violation of some express provision of the act. It was accordingly held, in an action to foreclose a mortgage executed by the committee of a lunatic, to raise money to pay the claim of an asylum for his support and maintenance, that, in the absence of a finding to support it, the court might not, for the purpose of subverting the order authorizing the execution of the mortgage, presume that there were other debts of the lunatic outstanding which were not provided for, or, as the order recited the necessary jurisdictional facts, that the petition presented to the court failed to show any of the facts necessary to give jurisdiction.

In the above case it was stated that notice of the petition for sale was not required to be given to the lunatic.

1. Ex parte Dikes, 8 Ves. 79; Adams v. Thomas, 81 N. Car. 296; In re Latham, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 231.

2. Sale of Lunatic's Real Estate Under Proceedings in Partition.—The sale of a lunatic's real estate under proceedings in partition does not convert it into personalty; nor does a taking it for public use on compensation made. Cutting v. Lincoln, 9 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 436. In Barker's Case, L. R., 17 Ch. D. 241, by an order made in a partition suit, a share of real estate belonging to a lunatic was sold, and the proceeds paid into court to the credit of the matter of the lunacy, but they were not carried to a real estate account. The lunatic died intestate and his administrator claimed the money as part of the personal estate. It was held that the money retained the character of real estate and passed to the lunatic's heir at law. See also In re Wharton, 5 DeG. Mac. & G. 33; Audley v. Audley, 2 Vern. 192; In re Pares, L. R., 2 Ch. D. 61.

3. Conversion.—A conversion of personalty into realty or realty into personalty will take place where it is for the benefit of the lunatic himself. Thus, if it is for the interest of the lunatic timber may be cut and sold. In re Salisbury, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 347. Unproductive real estate may be improved out of the personal estate. In re Livingston, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 440. And real estate may be repaired out of the personal estate. In re Badcock, 4 Myl. & C. 441. See also In re Colvin, 4 Md. Ch. 90; Clarke v. Ruttan, 11 Grant's Ch. (Canada) 416; In re Gist, L. R., 5 Ch. D. 881; Smith v. Bagwright, 7 Stewart Eq. (N. J.) 424.

his name;¹ if not of full age, it must be brought in the name of his committee.² Equity suits must be brought in the name of both committee and lunatic.³

1. In Petrie v. Shoemaker, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 85, ejectment was brought by the committee of a lunatic in their own name. The court in granting a new trial said: "This action is wholly misconceived. It should have been brought in the name of the non compos. The committee have no estate in his lands. They are regarded as mere bailiffs acting under the direction of the court of chancery, which has the care and custody of idiots and lunatics and of their real and personal estate." In North Carolina suit cannot be brought by the committee in his own name. Brooks v. Brooks, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 389. See also Reed v. Wilson, 13 Mo. 28; Jelly v. Elliott, 1 Ind. 119; Green v. Cornegay, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 66; Cathcart v. Sugenhimer, 18 S. Car. 123; Holden v. Scanlin, 30 Vt. 177. In Virginia suit must be brought in the name of the committee. Bird v. Bird, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 712. So also in Illinois. See Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Munger, 78 Ill. 300. And the same rule applies in Alabama. Dearman v. Dearman, 5 Ala. 202. In Pennsylvania an action of ejectment may be brought in the name of the committee. Warden v. Eichbaum, 14 Pa. St. 121. But a personal action, it seems, must be brought in the name of both committee and lunatic. The reason of this is stated by the court in Beale v. Coon, 2 Watts (Pa.) 184, as follows: "All actions by or on behalf of a lunatic placed by law in the care of a committee must be in the name of the lunatic and the committee. The latter must join to manage the interests of one who is disabled to protect himself; and the lunatic must be joined, because he may recover his understanding, and then is to have the management and disposal of his estate." It was held in Klohs v. Reifsnyder, 61 Pa. St. 243, that since the act of Feb. 20th, 1867 (P. L. 30), there is no doubt but that the committee of a lunatic may maintain an action of partition.

In Hayes v. Miller, 81 Mo. 424, it was held that an insane husband who is under guardianship cannot be joined in a suit with his wife. It is the duty of the guardian of an insane person to prosecute and defend all actions instituted in behalf of or against his ward.

A person under guardianship, as of unsound mind, cannot sue to impeach sales of his property made by his guardian. Robeson v. Martin, 93 Ind. 420. A committee cannot be appointed to bring suit for a sane man because at one time he was a lunatic. He must bring suit himself to recover his rights, and he may prove insanity to avoid a deed set up against him on the same terms as if he were defendant in the action, and the plaintiff were supporting his case with the same deed. Crawford v. Scovell, 94 Pa. St. 48. So also one who has executed a mortgage when insane may maintain a suit in equity to annul it. Kerwin v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 692.

2. McCreight v. Aiken, Rice (S. Car.) 56.

3. Equity Suits Must be Brought in the Name of the Lunatic.—In Cathcart v. Sugenhimer, 18 S. Car. 123, it was held that where equitable relief is sought in the court of chancery, the committee may sue alone and without using the name of the lunatic as a party plaintiff, and that the judgment will be as binding upon the lunatic's estate as if he were personally present. This subject was fully considered in Gorham v. Gorham, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 31. CHANCELLOR WALWORTH there said: "In some of the earlier decisions in the court of chancery in England, it was settled that where a bill or information was filed to set aside an act done by a lunatic, upon the ground of his incompetency, it was not necessary that the lunatic himself should be a party. The case of Attorney General v. Parkhurst (1 Ch. Cas. 112), which is one of the cases alluded to, was settled upon great consideration . . . The decision was probably based upon the principle that the lunatic should not be compelled to stultify himself, and I am not aware that it has ever been overruled. It was, therefore, properly followed by CHANCELLOR KENT in the case of Otley & Baker v. Messere, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 139, where a bill was filed by the committee of the lunatic to set aside acts done by the lunatic when he was incompetent. It was not intended, however, in the case of Attorney General v. Parkhurst (1 Ch. Cas. 112), to decide that the attorney general or the committee could file an information or a bill for the benefit of a lunatic in all cases, without joining the lunatic himself as a party. For in the case of Palmer, Attorney General, v. Woolrich (1 Ch. Cas. 153), which was decided the next year by the same lord keeper. SIR ORLANDO BRIDGMAN, he allowed a demurrer to a bill filed by the attorney general for the benefit of a lunatic, upon the ground that the lunatic was not a party; the bill in that case not being brought for the purpose of avoiding any act done by the lunatic after the loss of his reason. And this decision was in conformity with the note at the end of the report of the case of Fuller v. Lance (1 Ch. Cas. 19), which was decided six years previous to that time. In accordance with this decision the bills in the cases of Clark v. Clark, 2 Vern. 412, and Addison v. Dawson (2 Vern. 678) . . . appear to have been filed in the name of the lunatic by his committee, in the same manner that an infant files a bill by his next friend. In 1729 the question came before LORD CHANCELLOR KING in the case of Ridder v. Ridder, 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 279, whether the lunatic was at liberty to join with his committee in a bill filed to set aside a deed of settlement obtained from him after he became a lunatic; the defendant having objected by demurrer that it was against the maxim of law to permit a party to stultify himself; and his lordship decided that the lunatic might be a party to the bill, for that purpose, with the committee. The result of these several decisions was, that where the object of the bill was to set aside the act or deed of the lunatic upon the ground of his mental incapacity at the time the act was done, or the deed was executed, the bill might be filed by the committee, or the attorney general alone, or by joining the lunatic with the committee.

Where a person is insane, but has not been judicially adjudged so, suits both at law and in equity should be brought by some person as the next friend of the lunatic.¹

And the practice in England ever since that time appears to have been either to join the committee with the lunatic in bringing suits for his benefit, or to file a bill in the name of the lunatic by his committee." The chancellor further remarked: "When it is said by these writers that idiots and lunatics must sue by their committees, it is not meant that the suit is to be brought by the committee in his own name, merely describing himself as the committee of the lunatic, as has erroneously been supposed by the court of one of our sister states; but they mean that the suit should be brought in the name of the lunatic, stating that he sues by the committee of his estate, naming them, as in the case of an infant suing by his next friend, or that the suit should be prosecuted in the names of the lunatic and of his committee." In this case a bill brought by the committee of a lunatic in their own names as committee, without joining the lunatic, and praying for a partition of lands of which the lunatic was a part owner, was held to be defective in form. See also Norcom v. Rogers, 1 C. E. Green (N. J.) 484; Dorsheimer v. Roorback, 2 C. E. Green (N. J.) 438; Burnet v. Bookstaver, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 481; Fields v. Fowler, 2 Hun (N. Y.) 400; Owing's Case, 1 Bland's Ch. (Md.) 290; McKillip v. McKillips, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 552; Person v. Warren, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 488.

1. When Suits May be Brought by the Next Friend.—In Whetstone v. Whetstone, 75 Ala. 495, it was held that a person non compos mentis may sue by next friend, before and without an inquisition of lunacy; but a mere volunteer who institutes a suit as next friend of a non compos before there has been an inquisition of lunacy, always proceeds at his peril that the alleged non compos may not in fact be so, or may recover and repudiate his interference; or that the chancery court may not consider him a suitable person, and may disallow his intermeddling.

In Dorsheimer v. Roorback, 3 C. E. Green (N. J.) 438, a bill was dismissed which had been filed by one styling himself the next friend of the lunatic, but who had not been appointed guardian nor authorized by the court to file the bill.

In Illinois it is provided by statute that the conservator of a lunatic shall "sue for and receive in his own name, as conservator, all personal property of and demands due his ward." But until the conservator is appointed, suit may be brought in the name of the lunatic. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Munger, 78 Ill. 300.

See also Light v. Light, 25 Beav. 248; Nelson v. Duncombe, 9 Beav. 211; Jetton v. Smead, 29 Ark. 372. A wife

(d) Suits Against Lunatics or Their Committees.—At common law, an insane person could be sued and a valid judgment rendered against him, even after inquisition found. Service of summons was made upon him personally, and execution issued against his person or property.¹

In those of the United States in which courts of chancery have entire jurisdiction over insane persons, suits at law against such persons will be restrained by the chancellor, and debtors will be satisfied by proceedings in equity.²

In Pennsylvania, suits at law will not be restrained, but the court will restrain a levy upon the lunatic's property.³

may sue as next friend of her husband. Rock v. Slade, 7 Dowl. Pr. Cas. 22.

1. Shelf. Lun. 395; Henry v. Brothers, 48 Pa. St. 70; Ingersoll v. Harrison, 48 Mich. 234; McAlister v. Lancaster Co. Bank, 15 Neb. 295; Stigers v. Brent, 50 Md. 214; Walker v. Clay, 21 Ala. 797; Weber v. Weitling, 3 C. E. Green (N. J.) 441; Johnson v. Pomeroy, 31 Ohio 247. In Henry v. Brothers, 48 Pa. St. 70, on a scire facias to revive a judgment, the defendant pleaded his own lunacy, and offered in evidence the record of the lunacy proceedings by which he was found to be insane at the time the original judgment was entered. The offer was rejected, and on a writ of error the supreme court held that "the fact that the defendant was a lunatic when the debt was contracted would not make the judgment against him void," for "a judgment may be given against one who is non compos mentis." See Nutt v. Verney, 4 T. R. 121; Kevnott v. Norman, 2 T. R. 390; Anon, 13 Vesey 589; Ex parte Hastings, 14 Vesey 182; Ex parte Lighton, 14 Mass. 207.

2. In New York it is a contempt of court to begin a suit, without permission, against one who has been judicially declared a lunatic. Ex parte Heller, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 199; Ex parte Hopper, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 489; Soverhill v. Dickson, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 109; Williams v. Cameron, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 172. Where a creditor seeks to obtain payment out of a lunatic's estate, he should first cite the committee to file an inventory, and then petition the court for payment. Brasher's Executors v. Van Cortlandt, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 242. In the leading case of L'Amoureux v. Crosby, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 422, the New York practice as to the recovery of debts against lunatics is stated as follows: "If any person has a legal or equitable claim against him, or his estate, the proper course is to apply to this court by petition for the payment thereof; and if the claim is disputed or doubtful, it may be referred to a master to ascertain the facts. It is not proper even to subject the estate to the expense of a proceeding by bill, except by the direction of the court. The statute having given to this court exclusive jurisdiction in such cases, and charged it with the duty of providing for the support of the lunatic and his family, and for the payment of his debts out of the estate, the chancellor will see that the legal and equitable rights of the creditors are protected and enforced. But this must be done according to the usual forms of proceeding in this court, or by suits instituted under its direction. None of the creditors will be permitted to take the law into their own hands and mete out justice to themselves according to their own ideas of their equitable rights." See also Swartwout v. Burr, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 495; Soverhill v. Dickson, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 109; Crippen v. Culver, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 424. The courts will grant permission to sue a lunatic where the person applying shows such a cause as would justify a court of equity in granting relief if the facts alleged were established on the trial. In re Wing, 2 Hun (N. Y.) 671.

In Miller v. Potter, 54 Vt. 267, a writ was issued, and judgment rendered, by a justice of the peace, against the plaintiff while he was insane and under guardianship. Held, that audita querela will lie to set aside such judgment; that, by force of the statute, the justice had no power to issue a writ against the ward; that all the proceedings were coram non iudice; and that consent cannot confer jurisdiction in such a case.

3. Executions Against Lunatic's Es-

In Illinois, suits must be prosecuted against the conservator of the insane person.¹

In England, and in those of the United States where lunatics may be sued at law, service of the summons may be made upon the insane defendant, but if a committee has been appointed for him, the committee should also be served.² After service of summons, the insane defendant, if of full age, may appear and defend by attorney.³ In some States it is provided by statute tate Restrained in Pennsylvania.—In Eckstein's Case, 1 Pars. (Pa.) 59, a creditor who had obtained judgment against a lunatic prior to the inquisition was not permitted to levy an execution upon the lunatic's property in the hands of the committee. In this case JUDGE KING said: "By recognizing the right of such creditor to issue execution on a judgment after inquisition found, and of levying such execution not only on the real estate of a lunatic, on which it may be a specific or general lien before such finding, but on the general personal estate of the lunatic, we produce results so disastrous, that no equitable tribunal should permit them to happen, unless the necessary consequents of positive law. To declare the whole estate, real and personal, of a lunatic, liable to the execution of the first creditor who can obtain judgment against him is to invoke a race for priority among the creditors of one whose sufferings, under the most afflicting of the visitations of God's providence, entitle him to the most kindly consideration of his fellow men. It leaves the more humane creditor no alternative between entering into the struggle or losing his debt, where the estate of the lunatic is not fully adequate to meet the execution of each successive creditor who brings suit. It would multiply litigation, by turning every demand against a lunatic's estate into an action at law; where the doubts or fears of creditors should induce them to make the effort for priority, the costs and expenses of which must of course be borne by the estate of the lunatic, and so far depreciate the fund left for his support and that of his afflicted family, if any he has. It would render the guardian care of this court over the estates of lunatics almost valueless, and would neutralize that grand element of equity, equality. If, on the contrary, should we adopt that construction of the 45th section of the act relative to lunatics, which gives any person claiming to be the creditor of a lunatic the absolute right of having his claim ascertained by a trial by jury, and then leaves him as to the means of obtaining payment in the same position as all other creditors equally meritorious, perfect justice is done to all, and unjust preference is given to none." In Ash v. Conyers, 2 Miles (Pa.) 94, the court opened a judgment obtained pending a proceeding in lunacy; and in Alexander v. Ticknor, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 120, the court refused to enter judgment against a lunatic, a committee not having been appointed. In Harmstead v. Kingsley, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 64, it was held that an attachment execution could not issue against a lunatic defendant.

1. Morgan v. Hoyt, 69 Ill. 489.

In Mississippi the guardian must be joined as a party defendant to the suit. Potts v. Hines, 57 Miss. 735.

2. In Michigan an insane person continues liable to suit and to the personal service of summons.

In California if the insane person has no guardian, he may be served personally. Sacramento Savings Bank v. Spencer, 53 Cal. 737.

In Pennsylvania a writ against a lunatic must be served upon his committee, and there must be a suggestion of record of the inquisition and of the name of the committee. Hulings v. Laird, 21 Pa. St. 265. A summons in partition may be served upon the committee of a lunatic. Snowden v. Dunlavy, 11 Pa. St. 522.

Where a personal service has not been made, but service has been made upon a member of the defendant's household or upon his attorney, and afterwards an appearance is entered for the defendant, the service is sufficient: Stigers v. Bent, 50 Md. 214; Doe dem. Gibbard v. Roe, 3 Mac. & G. 87. See also Sturges v. Longworth, 1 Ohio St. 544.

3. Beverley's Case, 4 Coke 124 b; Royston's Appeal, 53 Wis. 612; In re Northington, 37 Ala. 496.

that a guardian ad litem may be appointed.¹ In equity, the general practice is to appoint a guardian ad litem. If the lunatic has a guardian, the guardian should be made a party to the suit.² Insanity is a good plea to an action against an insane person. The ancient rule that such a plea was in violation of the maxim that no one should be admitted to stultify himself is rejected by the modern authorities.³

1. Guardian ad Litem.—McNees v. Thompson, 5 Bush. (Ky.) 686; Yount v. Turnpaugh, 33 Ind. 46; Speak v. Ransom, 2 Tenn. Ch. 210. See also Stirges v. Longworth, 1 Ohio St 544; Walker v. Clay, 21 Ala. 797. In Mansfield v. Mansfield, 13 Mass. 412, on a libel for divorce, it was suggested to the court that since the commission of the crime of adultery by the husband, who was the respondent, he had become insane. The court ordered the libel to be continued, observing that the libellant, if so advised, might procure the appearance of a guardian, and upon the appearance of such guardian in the suit, further proceedings might be had. See also Van Horn v. Haven, 10 Vroom (N. J.) 207; Pub. Sts. Mass., ch. 146, § 14; Little v. Little, 13 Gray (Mass.) 264.

2. Search v. Search, 11 C. E. Green (N. J.) 110; Attorney General v. Waddington, 1 Mad. 321; Wilson v. Grace, 14 Ves. 172; New v. New, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 237; Stirges v. Longworth, 1 Ohio St. 544. Where a defendant has been found a lunatic by a regular commission, and is in custody, and it is so stated, it is a matter of course for him to answer a bill by his committee, without any special order for that purpose; but where it appears that the lunatic's committee is interested in the subject in controversy, it is necessary to appoint a disinterested person as his guardian to answer for him. Hewitt's Case, 3 Bland's Ch. (Md.) 184.

Notice of Appointment of Guardian ad Litem.—Notice of the appointment of a guardian ad litem should be served upon the alleged lunatic. Howlett v. Welbraham, 5 Madd. 423.

A court, by the service of its summons, acquires jurisdiction of the person of an insane defendant; and the failure to appoint a guardian ad litem when the general guardian fails to appear and defend, does not render the judgment either void or voidable. It is at most only erroneous, for which the appropriate remedy is by proceedings in error, and not by an original action to vacate the judgment. McAlister v. Lancaster Co. Bank, 15 Neb. 295.

In Hollingsworth v. Chapman, 50 Ala. 23, it was held that where a defendant has been insane, the court may continue a case until an inquisition may be had.

3. Insanity Is a Good Plea.—In Mitchell v. Kingman, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 431, the defendant offered to prove he was non compos mentis at the time the note was signed on which suit was brought. The lower court refused to admit the evidence, but on writ of error the case was reversed. WILDE, J., said: "It is said to be a maxim of the common law that no man of full age shall be allowed by plea to stultify himself, and thereby to avoid his own deed or contract. This is affirmed by LORD COKE in Beverley's Case, 4 Coke 123, and also in his commentary on Littleton (Co. Lit. 147), and since his time seems to have been generally admitted as a settled principle, but without much consideration. On the other hand, Fitzherbert denies that this was ever a maxim of the common law; and Britton and Bracton maintain the same opinion. . . . But few decided cases on this point are to be found since the case of Beverley. But it was decided as late as the year 1737, in the case of Yates v. Boen, 2 Str. 1104, that lunacy might be given in evidence to avoid a contract. This was a case of debt on articles, and upon non est factum pleaded, the defendant offered to give lunacy in evidence. The chief justice (Lee) at first thought it ought not to be admitted, upon the rule in Beverley's case; but on the authority of Smith v. Carr, in which it was admitted by CHIEF BARON PERGELLEY, and the case of Thompson v. Leach, 2 Ventr. 108, he suffered it to be given in evidence. This case is cited with approbation by Buller (Buller's N. P. 172), and also in the case of Webster v. Woodford, 3 Day (Conn.) 90; in which it was decided, after a full examination of the question, that a person non compos mentis might be permitted to plead his own disability in avoidance of his contract.

(e) Accounts.—In England, committees are required to render an account from time to time of their receipts and expenditures on account of the lunatic's estate. In the United States, where lunatics are under the control of a court of equity, their committees must account as trustees or receivers. Where they are under the jurisdiction of the probate courts, the committees account as guardians.¹ A committee is not permitted to make a profit for himself out of his trust; but, on the other hand, he will not be liable for any loss, unless he has been guilty of negligence or fraud.²

"It appears, therefore, on examination, that the supposed maxim of the common law relied on by the plaintiffs, is of doubtful origin and authority. Nor should we feel ourselves bound to adopt it, although it were supported by less questionable English authorities, because the property and interests of idiots and lunatics are not protected here, as they are in England, by the royal prerogative. There, if an idiot alien his lands, the King, after office found, may, upon scire facias against the alienee, recover the lands to the use of the idiot, and thereupon they will revert in him. And so if the idiot be sued in any action upon a bond or other contract, the king by his writ shall send a supersedeas to the justices where the suit is commenced. And the law is the same where the person becomes non compos. Beverley's Case, 4 Coke 126. But even in England there seems to be neither reason nor necessity for adopting the rule in question; a rule which Fonblanque says was adopted 'in defiance of natural justice and the universal practice of all civilized nations in the world.' 1 Fonbl. Eq. 46. That it is against natural justice is manifest, because a man in a fit of insanity may make a contract which, after the recovery of his reason, might be enforced against him under the rule, although made without consideration, provided it be under seal. For neither in England nor here can a committee or guardian be appointed to a lunatic or insane person after the recovery of his reason. If, therefore, in such a case the defendant could not avoid the deed by pleading his insanity at the time of the contract, he would be without defence; and thus by the visitation of providence, followed up by a rule of law, a man, without fault, might be despoiled of his property and utterly ruined." The authority of Mitchell v. Kingman, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 431, has been followed in all the later cases. Thornton v. Appleton, 29 Me. 298; Crawford v. Scovell, 94 Pa. St. 48; Lang v. Whidden, 2 N. H. 435; Seaver v. Phelps, 11 Pick. Mass. 304; Rice v. Peel, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 503; Tolson v. Garner, 15 Mo. 494; McCormick v. Littler, 85 Ill. 62.

1. General Orders in Lunacy, 1853, 15; Bispham's Equity, §§ 148, 239, 479. In New York it is held that if a committee neglect to file an inventory and to render periodical accounts, every presumption will be made against him. Ex parte Carter, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 146.

2. Spack v. Long, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 426; Buswell on Insanity, 109.

Liability of Committee.—An order of a court of equity appointing a committee for a lunatic and authorizing the committee to retain the entire annual interest of the lunatic's estate for his support and maintenance, is no bar to an action to require the committee to account for profit subsequently made to himself by the labor of his ward. Ashley v. Holman, 15 S. Car. 97.

In Missouri, it was held that the guardian of a lunatic has no power, as such, to engage in business for, or by transactions pertaining to such business, bind the estate of the lunatic; nor can the probate court confer such power. Western Cement Co. v. Jones, 8 Mo. App. 373. See Blakeley v. Bennecke, 59 Mo. 193; Wright v. Baldwin, 51 Mo. 269; Presbyterian Church v. McElhinney, 61 Mo. 540. See also Thatcher v. Dinsmore, 5 Mass. 299.

A committee is liable for loss of rents sustained by a lease of lands without security, to one who was insolvent at the time the lease was executed. De

(f) Compensation.—In England, the committee of a lunatic, like other trustees, does not ordinarily receive a compensation for his services.¹ In the United States, committees receive such compensation as would be allowed to trustees or guardians of minors under similar circumstances.²

(g) Discharge of Committee.—The court which has appointed a committee may, at its discretion, remove him and appoint another in his place,³ and it seems that such removal is not the Treville v. Ellis, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 40.

In Cole v. Cole, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 365, a committee of a lunatic, on application to court, obtained leave to invest certain funds in bonds of the Confederate States. He thereupon deposited the funds with the proper officer and took a certificate for a bond. It did not appear that the bond was ever issued, and the deposit was lost. The committee was held accountable for the money.

The guardian of an insane person, who had been engaged in a manufacturing business, continued to carry on the business, either at the request or with the concurrence of all parties interested in the ward's estate, the result of which was advantageous to the estate. The business required storage room, and the guardian erected a building for such purposes on land of the ward's wife, and charged the cost of the building to the ward's estate; but this charge was disallowed by the probate court, and he was required to account to the estate, in money, for the amount so charged. Held, on appeal, that the guardian was entitled to charge the estate a reasonable rent for the building. Murphy v. Walker, 131 Mass. 341. See Foster v. Merchant, 1 Vern. 262.

Reasonable expenses incurred by a guardian in resisting the ward's application for a revocation of the guardianship, when the expenses were incurred in good faith, and there was a reasonable doubt of the ward's condition, will be allowed to the guardian in the settlement of his account. Palmer v. Palmer, 38 N. H. 418.

In Massachusetts it was held that the guardian of a lunatic cannot be allowed, in his probate account, the amount of damages occasioned to his own property by his ward's want of care. Brown v. Howe, 9 Gray (Mass.) 84.

Where suits have been instituted in good faith on behalf of the lunatic, the guardian or committee will not be chargeable with costs. Alexander v. Alexander, 5 Ala. 517; Sanford v. Phillips, 68 Me. 431.

1. In re Annesley, Ambl. 78. Where no one can be found willing to act as a committee the court may appoint a receiver of the estate with a salary. Ex parte Warren, 10 Ves. 622.

2. In May v. May, 109 Mass. 252, a guardian was allowed a monthly charge of $100 for personal services in visiting his ward three times a week and personally superintending the management of the lunatic's house and grounds, and also a commission of five per cent. on the amount collected. An additional charge of $100 for attending court was disallowed, as was also a charge of $200 for attending the ward on two journeys of a fortnight each, which were undertaken partly on account of the guardian's own business. It was also held in this case that a guardian who made up his accounts monthly might charge his ward's estate each month with his commissions on the amounts collected in that month, and with a month's interest on a balance from the preceding month in his own favor, and might carry the balance to the next month. It was also held that an additional compensation, if any, allowed to a guardian for changing investments of his ward's property or making repairs thereon, should not be by way of commissions on the amount invested or expended.

In Ex parte Lyde, Rich. C. C. (S. Car.) 3, a commission of five per cent. upon funds received and disbursed was allowed to the committee. This was the compensation allowed trustees under the South Carolina statute.

3. Causes for Removal of Committee.—Where a committee has permanently removed from the jurisdiction of the court he may be removed. Ord's Case, Jac. 94. Fixed habits of intemperance constitute a sufficient cause for the removal of a committee. Kettletas v. Gardner, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 488. So also is subject of appeal.¹ The death or recovery of the lunatic also terminates the office of the committee.²

6. Contracts of Insane Persons.—As a general rule, insane persons are incapable of entering into valid contracts, and any agreements which they may make are either void or voidable.³

In order, however, to invalidate such an agreement, it must be shown that it was the direct result of the insanity alleged. The mere fact of delusion or insanity, if unconnected with the act under judicial consideration, is not sufficient to relieve the person who attempts to set it up as a ground of disability.⁴

a neglect to properly care for the lunatic. Ex parte Proctor, 1 Swanst. 531. In Ex parte Jones, 13 Vesey, 237, a committee was removed for contempt in publishing a pamphlet defaming the proceedings of the court. In Lloyd v. —, 2 Dickens 460, one of the defendants was a lunatic. The committee of his estate was also a defendant. On the committee refusing to put in an answer for the lunatic, it was moved by the plaintiff that the committee be ordered to answer within a certain time, or that a guardian should be appointed ad litem. The master of the rolls said the proper course was to proceed against the lunatic; and if the committee refused to answer, to apply to the Great Seal to appoint a new committee. In Ex parte Mildmay, 3 Ves. 2, bankruptcy was considered a cause for removal. See also Ex parte Proctor, 1 Swanst. 531. Contra, In re Chew, 4 Md. Ch. 6.

In Lytle's Case, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 251, it was held that the committee of a lunatic who has voluntarily accepted the appointment cannot be discharged without showing some valid excuse for resigning the trust; and the fact that his situation was rendered unpleasant, in consequence of controversies existing between different members of the lunatic's family, was not sufficient for that purpose. But see Morgan's Case, 3 Bland's Ch. (Md.) 332. In Lytle's Case, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 251, the wife of a lunatic petitioned for the removal of the committee upon the ground of fraud and mismanagement in the execution of his trust, and upon the hearing it appeared that the committee had faithfully discharged his duty, and no probable cause for the application was shown. The wife was accordingly denied costs out of the estate; but the costs of the committee were allowed.

1. In Black's Case, 18 Pa. St. 434, it was decided that the committee of a lunatic was removable by the court of common pleas at their discretion, and their order of removal was not the subject of review in the supreme court.

In Dean's Appeal, 90 Pa. St. 106, the supreme court refused to decide that the refusal of the lower court to order the removal of the committee of a lunatic was the subject of review. They, however, held that nothing but a very clear case could justify such intervention.

In Griffin's Case, 5 Abb. N. S. (N. Y.) 96, it was held that an order of removal was not the subject of appeal.

2. In Dean's Appeal, 90 Pa. St. 106, it was said that "the functions and powers of the committee ceased with the life of the lunatic, leaving him liable to account to her administrator." See also In re Barry, 1 Molloy 414; Ex parte Gilbert, 1 Ball & Beatt. 297; Ex parte Latham, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 406; Cain v. Warford, 3 Md. 454; s. c., 7 Md. 282; Stumph v. Pfeiffer, 58 Ind. 472; Butler v. Jarvis (N. Y.), 2 Cent. Rep. 377.

3. Seaver v. Phelps, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 304; George v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 34 Ark. 613; Curtis v. Brownell, 42 Mich. 165; L'Amoureux v. Crosby, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 422; Beverley's Case, 4 Co. 123b; Ingraham v. Baldwin, 9 N. Y. 45; Ex parte Beckwith, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 443; Van Deusen v. Sweet, 51 N. Y. 378; Fitzhugh v. Wilcox, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 235; Bensell v. Chancellor, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 371.

4. Thus a partial unsoundness, not affecting the general faculties, and not operating on the mind of a testator in regard to testamentary disposition, is not sufficient to render a person incapable of disposing of his property by will. Banks v. Goodfellow, L. R., 5 Q. B. 54; Pidcock v. Potter, 68 Pa. St. 348; Benioist v. Murrin, 58 Mo. 307; Cole's Will, 49 Wis. 179; Wetter v. Habersham, 60 Ga. 194; Smee v. Smee, L. R.,

With the exception of certain cases hereafter mentioned, on agreement of an insane person immediately connected with and growing out of his insanity, is voidable and not void.¹

5 Prob. Div. 84; Emery v. Hoyt, 46 Ill. 258; Odell v. Buck, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 142.

In Jenkins v. Morris, L. R., 14 Ch. D. 674, a lessor, at the time when he made a lease of a farm, labored under the delusion that it was impregnated with sulphur. On an issue directed as to the capacity of the lessor to make the lease, rational letters by the lessor relating to the lease were put in evidence. The trial judge did not tell the jury that the letters did not displace the effect of the delusion, but directed them that it was a practical question whether the lessor was so insane as to be incompetent to dispose of his property though believed to be full of sulphur. The jury found that the lease was valid. Held, on a motion for a new trial, that there was no misdirection in the charge.

In Ekin v. McCracken, 32 Leg. Intel. (Pa.) 405, where a deed was sought to be avoided, it was held that a man may be a monomaniac on a particular subject; but if the deed has no connection with his morbid condition it will be sustained.

Where a person admitted to be insane on certain subjects committed suicide, understanding the nature of the act and intending to take his own life, his representatives were not allowed to recover from a life insurance company on a policy which provided that the policy should become void if the assured should die by his own hand. Burgess v. Pollock, 53 Iowa 273.

But a mortgage made by a man who had been insane some time before and had periodical recurrences of insanity, and was insane at the time he gave the mortgage, though he had all along managed his own affairs with average correctness and had been treated by his neighbors as competent to do business even while they considered him of unsound mind, was set aside as being made while non compos mentis, though not so manifestly insane as to make the conduct of the mortgagee fraudulent in making the bargain which it was meant to secure, even though he had been given sufficient warning to put him on his guard. Curtis v. Brownell, 42 Mich. 165. See also Alexander's Will, 12 C. E. Green (N. J.) 463; Pela- mourges v. Clark, 9 Iowa 1; Cook v. Parker, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 265.

Where an act is sought to be avoided on the ground of mental disability, the proof lies with him who alleges it, but after a general derangement is shown, the burden of proof is cast upon the one who insists that the act was valid. Jackson v. King, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 207; Rogers v. Walker, 6 Pa. St. 371; Gangwere's Est., 14 Pa. St. 417.

1. Transactions that are neither void nor necessarily binding must stand until they are regularly assailed by some one whose position or interests warrant him in assailing them. Campbell v. Kuhn, 45 Mich. 513.

Cases in Which Restitution Has Been Held Not Necessary.—A grantor in a deed may avoid his conveyance by proof that he was non compos mentis at the time of its execution, where there is no evidence of ratification after restoration to reason; and to avoid such a deed it is not necessary that the insane person should put the grantee in statu quo, for one of the obvious grounds on which the deed of an insane man is held voidable is not merely the incapacity to make a valid sale, but the incapacity prudently to manage and dispose of the proceeds. Hence to avoid his conveyance no previous offer of restitution is necessary. Crawford v. Scovell, 94 Pa. St. 48.

Restitution of the consideration received by the insane person is not a condition precedent to the rescission of such contract or conveyance, if it has been wasted or has passed beyond his control. Ricketts v. Jolliff, 62 Miss. 440.

An exchange of property made by a person of mind so unsound that the want of mental capacity is apparent to any one of ordinary prudence and observation conversing with him, is of no validity. A guardian subsequently appointed may recover the property of the insane person without tendering back that received by him in the exchange. Halley v. Troester, 72 Mo. 73.

A person of full age who has been insane may, after he has sufficiently recovered his reason to understand the character of his act, file a bill in equity to annul a deed or contract to his

In States where it is provided by statute that after a finding of an inquisition of insanity the insane person shall be incapable of making a contract or performing any civil act, an agreement entered into by such a person is absolutely void.¹

An exception to the general rule that the contracts of insane persons are either void or voidable, is found in the case of contracts for necessities supplied in good faith to an insane person, and suitable to his rank in life.²

prejudice made by him when he was of unsound mind and incapable of contracting. Turner v. Rusk, 53 Md. 65.

To an action of ejectment against a widow, she answered that her husband held the land in his life under an executory contract for a conveyance upon payment of the purchase price; that he had paid a part, and afterwards, while non compos, the plaintiff, who was his son, had fraudulently procured him to assign the contract to him, and he (the plaintiff) paid the residue out of the rents and personality of her husband's estate, and obtained a deed from the vendor; and she prayed for a transfer of the cause to the equity docket, that the plaintiff be declared a trustee, holding the title for the use of the decedent's estate, to be administered upon as part of his estate, and for other relief. Held, upon demurrer, that the answer showed no right of dower or homestead in the widow, and no right to enforce the alleged trust; that the deed of a lunatic was not void, but voidable only by his heirs, or personal representatives, or a subsequent purchaser from him. Langley v. Langley, 45 Ark. 392.

1. In Missouri the deed of an insane person, after being placed in guardianship, is absolutely void; and guardianship is conclusive respecting the disability of the ward, whether he be insane or not. It is immaterial from what cause the insanity resulted, whether from old age, sickness, habitual drunkenness or other causes whatever; and the assent of the guardian to the insane person's deed confers upon that instrument no vitality. Rennells v. Gerner, 80 Mo. 474.

In an equitable proceeding it may be immaterial that a mortgagee was not sane at the date of the execution of a mortgage executed in strict pursuance of a specific written agreement entered into by the mortgagee when sane. Bevin v. Powell, 11 Mo. App. 216.

In Indiana every contract, sale or conveyance of a person judicially declared to be insane is void. Thus, in an action to foreclose a mortgage, where the mental unsoundness of the mortgagor and his incapacity to contract, resulting from habitual drunkenness, are relied upon as a defence to the action, if it is shown that, at the time of his execution of the mortgage, his insanity had been judicially ascertained, and that he was under guardianship as an insane person, the mortgage will be absolutely void; otherwise the mortgage will be voidable merely, and it may be shown to have been ratified or disaffirmed by the mortgagor, after the removal of his disability. Where, in such an action, the answer sets up the mental unsoundness of the mortgagor at the time he executed the mortgage, and does not show that he was then under guardianship as an insane person, a reply to such answer, stating merely the legal conclusion that after the removal of his disability he ratified the mortgage without setting forth the acts done by him amounting to such ratification, is bad on a demurrer thereto for the want of sufficient facts. Copenrath v. Kienby, 83 Ind. 18. See also Fay v. Burditt, 81 Ind. 433; Northwestern Mut. Life Insurance Co. v. Blankenship, 94 Ind. 535. The Indiana statute is applicable only to persons found non compos mentis in the manner prescribed by law. Crouse v. Holman, 19 Ind. 30; Hardenbrook v. Sherwood, 72 Ind. 403. In Illinois the contracts of persons judicially declared insane are void, but the statute does not apply to contracts for necessities, or to those made during lucid intervals. Lilly v. Wagoner, 27 Ill. 395; McCormick v. Littler, 85 Ill. 62; Burnham v. Kidwell, 113 Ill. 425.

2. Contracts for Necessaries.—An executed contract of a non compos mentis for necessities, bona fide supplied, stands on the footing of an infant's contracts for necessities. LaRue v. Gilkyson, 4 Pa. St. 375.

The word necessities is not to be restricted to articles of the first necessity, but it includes everything proper for the person's condition. Baxter v. Earl of Portsmouth, 2 Car. & P. 178. In Ex parte Persse, 3 Molloy 94, the LORD CHANCELLOR said: "The maintenance of a lunatic is not limited, as an infant's is, within the bounds of income. It is not limited except by the fullest comforts of the lunatic. Fancied enjoyments, and even harmless caprice, are to be indulged up to the limits of income, and for solid enjoyments and substantial comforts the court will, if necessary, go beyond the limits of income." In Kendall v. May, 10 Allen (Mass.) 59, a person who, at the request of a wealthy lunatic, accompanied him upon a journey, was held entitled to recover from the estate of the lunatic the expenses of the journey.

An insane person is, of course, liable for board, nursing and necessary attendance. Sawyer v. Lufkin, 56 Me. 308; LaRue v. Gilkyson, 4 Pa. St. 375; Blaisdell v. Holmes, 48 Vt. 492; Reando v. Mosplay, 90 Mo. 251.

A town which has been made chargeable, and has paid, for the commitment and support of an insane person at the insane hospital, may recover the amount paid of the insane person if able. In such an action, upon a hearing in damages, evidence of the ability of the defendant is inadmissible to reduce the amount to be recovered below the amount actually paid. If he is not able to pay the whole amount, he is not liable to pay any portion of it. Cape Elizabeth v. Lombard, 72 Me. 492; Bangor v. Wescasset, 71 Me. 535.

In Massachusetts, in an action by a city, under the Gen. Sts. ch. 73, § 25, against a woman, to recover $479 paid for her support at a lunatic hospital, there was evidence that the defendant, when out of the hospital, lived with an intemperate husband and a lame daughter, neither of whom rendered her much assistance, and that the defendant's mental condition was such as to incapacitate her for any labor; that she owned a lot of land worth $375, which, after part of the money sued for had been paid by the plaintiff, she had conveyed to her daughter without consideration; that, after this conveyance, she effected insurance on the house in her own name, and the attorney of her guardian had received $775 from the insurance company for the destruction of the same by fire, which sum was claimed by the daughter. Held, that this evidence would warrant a finding that the defendant was not "of sufficient ability" to pay the sums expended by the plaintiff. Newton v. Ferley, 130 Mass. 12.

But if an insane person is received into an asylum at the request of another, and on an express contract in writing by third persons to pay his board and other expenses there, no promise can be implied on the part of such insane person to pay anything; evidence that credit was given to him by the officers of the asylum is inadmissible, and an action against him by the asylum cannot be maintained. Mass. General Hospital v. Fairbanks, 129 Mass. 78.

Necessaries Furnished to the Wife of a Lunatic.—A person who in good faith furnishes necessities to the wife of a lunatic may recover against the lunatic's estate. Read v. Legard, 6 Exch. 636; Stuckey v. Mathes, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 461; Bangor v. Wescasset, 71 Me. 535; Drew v. Munn, L. R., 4 Q. B. D. 661. Where a wife had been appointed custodian of her insane husband for a compensation fixed upon by the commissioners of insanity, it was held by a divided court that the contract was void for want of consideration, the wife owing the duty independently of the contract. Grant v. Green, 41 Iowa 88.

Money Borrowed to Satisfy Liens.—Money borrowed by a lunatic to satisfy liens upon his estate may be recovered as a necessary. In Kneedler's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 428, the defendant, acting under the advice of counsel, borrowed money from plaintiff, and gave therefor his bond and warrant of attorney, secured by a mortgage on his real estate. The money thus borrowed he prudently applied to the payment of liens on his estate. In subsequent proceedings it was found that he was a lunatic at the time of the execution of these papers. Held, that this was no defence in an action for the recovery of the loan.

Costs and Counsel Fees Are Necessaries.—Costs and counsel fees reasonably incurred in proceedings to establish the lunacy are necessary expenses and payable out of the lunatic's estate. Clark's Case, 22 Pa. St. 466; Wier v. Myers, 34 Pa. St. 377; Breaux v. Francke, 30 La. Ann. 336; Williams v. Wentworth, 5 Beav. 325.

The necessary expenses of a guardian incurred in resisting an application for removal were allowed in Palmer v. Palmer, 38 N. H. 418.

The commissions of the committee

Another exception to the general rule is found in those cases where a person in good faith enters into a contract with another apparently sane, and the contract is executed, and an adequate consideration paid, where consideration cannot be restored by the lunatic or those who represent him, so as to put the parties in statu quo. In such a case the contract cannot be set aside by the lunatic or his committee.¹

are regarded as necessary expenses. In re Colah, 3 Daly (N. Y.) 529.

1. Contracts Made Without Notice of Lunacy.—"Where a person fairly and in good faith sells property or loans money to a lunatic who appears to be sane, and is not known by the vendor or lender to be insane, and who has not been found to be a lunatic by judicial proceedings, and the lunatic receives and uses the same, whereby the contract becomes so far executed that the parties cannot be placed in statu quo, such a contract cannot afterwards be set aside or payment refused by the lunatic or his representatives. In Elliot v. Ince, 7 De G. M. & G. 475, 487, it is remarked that 'the result of the authorities seems to be that dealings of sale and purchase by a person apparently sane, though subsequently found to be insane, will not be set aside against those who have dealt with him on the faith of his being a person of competent understanding. CHIEF JUSTICE GIBSON based the lunatic's liability in such cases on the principle that where a loss must be borne by one of two innocent persons, it shall be borne by him who occasioned it; he is liable to bear the consequences of his infirmity, as he is liable to bear his misfortunes.'" Wirebach v. First National Bank, 97 Pa. St. 549.

In Gribben v. Maxwell, 34 Kan. 8, it was held that where a purchase of real estate from an insane person is made, and a conveyance is obtained in perfect good faith, before an inquisition and finding of lunacy, for a fair and reasonable consideration, without knowledge of the insanity, and no advantage is taken by the purchaser, the conveyance cannot be avoided by the insane person, or one representing him, if the consideration has not been returned to the purchaser, and no offer has been made to return the same.

In Burnham v. Kidwell, 113 Ill. 425, it was held that where land is bought of a person before he is adjudged an idiot, in good faith, by the purchaser, or money is loaned to him in good faith, and he secures its payment by mortgage, and the proceeds of the sale or loan are expended in and about his care and support, the deed or mortgage cannot be avoided until the money so received by the idiot is returned, or offered to be returned.

Where, in a suit to foreclose a mortgage, the answer set up the mortgagor's unsoundness of mind and incapacity to contract, at the time he executed the mortgage, in bar of the action, the mortgagee's reply to such answer, showing that the mortgage was given to secure the repayment of money borrowed by the mortgagor to enable him to pay his bona fide debt to a third person, that, when the mortgage was executed, the mortgagee had no knowledge whatever of any disability of the mortgagor to contract, but believed him to be sober, in his right mind, and capable of entering into a contract, that the transaction between them was bona fide, and that the mortgagor had not, nor had any one in his behalf, repaid or offered to repay the money so borrowed by him, states facts sufficient to constitute a good reply to such answer, on a demurrer thereto for the want of facts. Copenrath v. Kienby, 83 Ind. 18.

A chattel mortgage executed by an insane person, whose mental unsoundness has not been judicially determined, will vest the title, and, after default in the condition, the right of possession of the chattel in the mortgagee; and actual possession obtained under it cannot be made wrongful without a disaffirmance. In such case, there must be, therefore, a disaffirmance before an action can be maintained to recover the chattel from the mortgagee. Fay v. Burditt, 81 Ind. 433. See Northwestern Mutual Fire Insurance Co. v. Blankenship, 94 Ind. 535, where on a suit to foreclose a mortgage executed by husband and wife, on his lands, both being then dead, the wife having survived the husband, the heirs of the wife answered that she was insane when the mortgage was executed and so continued during life, and that the mortgage was given to secure a debt of the husband. Reply: 1. That when the mortgage was executed the wife was apparently sane, and was never judicially declared insane, and never disaffirmed the mortgage: that the plaintiff had no notice of her insanity, and took the mortgage in good faith to secure a loan to the husband, and it had not been disavowed by the wife or her heirs; 2. Alleging the same facts, and, also, that after the date of the mortgage she was treated by her family as a sane person in all respects; that the loan, $6,000, was expended by the husband in the purchase of other lands; that the loan is wholly unpaid; that the husband died insolvent, and sale of the whole of the mortgaged lands will be required to repay the loan. Held, that the answer was good, and both paragraphs of the reply were bad.

7. Insanity as Affecting the Contract of Insurance.—Where a policy of life insurance provides that the contract shall be void if the assured "die by his own hand," or "by suicide," such a policy is not necessarily rendered void by the assured committing suicide while insane. If the act of killing is the result of an insane impulse which deprived the assured of all ability to form a rational judgment as to the act he was committing, the contract of insurance will not be avoided. In many cases, however, it is held that if the person insured was conscious of the act he was committing, intended to take his own life, and was capable of understanding the nature and consequences of the act, the insurers will not be liable.¹

See also Young v. Stevens, 48 N. H. 133; Beals v. See, 10 Pa. St. 56; Wilder v. Weakley, 34 Ind. 181; Person v. Warren, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 488; Beavan v. McDonnell, 9 Exch. 309; Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Hunt, 79 N. Y. 541; Physio-Medical College v. Wilkinson, 108 Ind. 314; Hull v. Louth, 109 Ind. 315; Lincoln v. Buckmaster, 32 Vt. 652; Mattherson v. McMahon, 38 N. J. Law 536; Lancaster Co. Bank v. Moore, 78 Pa. St. 407.

A conveyance of land will be set aside where the defendants had knowledge of plaintiff's mental condition, and it is not shown that an adequate consideration was paid or agreed upon, and defendants have enjoyed the rents and profits long enough to compensate them for all they appear to have paid. Alexander v. Haskins, 68 Iowa 73.

An obligation entered into by an insane person to repay money loaned, of which he had the benefit, is valid where the lender acted in good faith, and without knowledge of the insanity, or notice or information calling for inquiry, and an action is maintainable thereon. Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. Hunt, 79 N. Y. 541.

1. In Gay v. Union Mutual etc. Ins. Co., 9 Blatch. (U. S.) 142, WOODRUFF, J., charged the jury that if the assured, "at the time he fired the pistol, was conscious of the act he was committing, intended to take his own life, and was capable of understanding the nature and consequences of the act, the defendants are not liable; and that, if the act was thus committed, it is immaterial whether he was capable of understanding its moral aspects, or of distinguishing between right and wrong. And . . . if, on the other hand, he was not thus conscious or had no such capacity, but acted under an insane delusion, overpowering his understanding and will, or was impelled by an uncontrollable impulse, which neither understanding nor will could resist, then the defendants are liable."

"Die by His Own Hand." In DeGororza v. Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co., 65 N. Y. 232, REYNOLDS, J., said: "It is now to be regarded as the settled law of this country and of England that a clause in a policy of life insurance exempting the insurer from liability if the assured 'die by his own hand,' has reference to an intelligent or voluntary act, and not to a suicide committed by a party in a state of mental derangement so great that the act of self-destruction is to be regarded as wholly involuntary." See Van Zandt v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co., 55 N. Y. 169; Borra-dale v. Hunter, 5 M. & G. 639; Cleft

v. Schwabe, 3 C. B. 437; Esterbrooke v. Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 54 Me. 224; Dean v. Am. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 96; Life Insurance Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 580.

In Van Zandt v. Mut. Benefit Life Ins. Co., 55 N. Y. 169, the assured shot himself. On a suit on the policy the defendant requested the court to charge that if the act of self-destruction was the voluntary and wilful act of the deceased, he having at the time sufficient power of mind and reason to understand the physical nature and consequences of such act, and having at the time a purpose and intention to cause his own death by the act, it avoided the policy. The request was refused and on a writ of error the judgment was reversed. See also Newton v. Mut. etc. Ins. Co., 76 N. Y. 426; Ins. Co. v. Rodel, 5 Otto (U. S.) 232; Ins. Co. v. Peters, 42 Md. 414; Phillips v. Ins. Co., 26 La. Ann. 404; Keels v. Mut. Reserve Fund Ass'n, 29 Fed. Rep. 198. In an action upon a policy containing a clause declaring the policy void in case the insured died by his own hand or committed suicide, it appeared that the deceased committed suicide; that he had a severe attack of congestion of the brain some seven years prior to his death, and for several years before, and up to the time of his death, periodical attacks of severe nervous headache, arising from indigestion or some functional derangement, and slight evidence was given that at times he was incoherent in answer to questions. Up to the time of his death he was engaged in and transacted large business operations. It did not appear that he was imprudent or indiscreet in business matters, or that he was at any time suspected of being incompetent. His physician, who visited him a few hours before his death, saw no symptoms of insanity, and never discovered or suspected any impairment of mental faculties. Held, that the evidence did not authorize the submission to the jury of the question as to the insanity of the insured, and that the plaintiff was properly nonsuited. Weed v. Mutual etc. Ins. Co., 70 N. Y. 561.

Where a policy was declared to be void "if the assured should die by his own hand," and it appeared that he drowned himself in the Thames; and the jury found that he did it voluntarily, but that he was not capable of judgment between right and wrong, it was held the proviso was not limited to acts of felonious suicide, and that the policy was void. Borradaile v. Hunter, 5 M. & G. 639.

In Eastabrooke v. Union Ins. Co., 54 Me. 224, the words of the policy were, "shall die by his own hand." The jury found that the self destruction was the result of a blind and irresistible impulse over which the will had no control, and was not an act of volition. It was held that this did not avoid the policy.

In Cooper v. Mass. Ins. Co., 102 Mass. 227, the court held that there was no substantial difference of signification between the phrases "shall die by his own hand," "shall commit suicide," and "shall die by suicide;" and that they include self destruction under the influence of insanity, within the limitations stated above. In that case there was no offer to prove madness of delirium, or that the self destruction was not the result of the will and intention of the insured, adapting the means to the end, and contemplating the physical nature and effects of the act; the insanity was therefore held not such as to take the case out of the proviso of the policy that it should be void if the assured "shall die by suicide."

In Pennsylvania a contrary rule is established, and it is there held that a policy of insurance which provides that it shall be void if the insured "shall die by suicide" is not forfeited by the insured destroying himself, he being insane at the time, but intending to take his life and knowing that death would result from his act. Connecticut Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Groom, 86 Pa. St. 92; American Life Ins. Co. v. Isett, 74 Pa. St. 176; Nimick v. Ins. Co., 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 502.

In the Supreme Court of the United States it has been repeatedly and uniformly held that such a provision, not containing the words "sane or insane," does not include a self killing by an insane person, whether his unsoundness of mind is such as to prevent him from understanding the physical nature and consequences of his act, or only such as to prevent him, while foreseeing and premeditating its physical consequences, from understanding its moral nature and aspect. Life Ins. Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 580; Bigelow v. Berkshire Ins. Co., 93 U. S. 284; Ins. Co. v. Rodel, 95 U. S. 232; Manhattan Ins. Co. v. Broughton, 109 U. S. 121; Accident Ins. Co. v. Crandal, 120 U. S. 527.

In Ohio it was held that a proviso

Where a policy provides that the contract shall be void if the assured "shall die by his own hand or act, sane or insane," an involuntary act of suicide by one incapable of exercising his will avoids the policy.¹

Where a policy of life insurance contains a clause declaring that the contract shall be void in case the insured dies by his own hand, or commits suicide, the burden of proof is upon the party seeking to enforce the policy to show that the self-destruction was not the conscious and voluntary act of one responsible for his actions, but the involuntary act of an insane person.²

It has become the custom in recent years for insurance companies to omit from their policies the restrictive clauses discussed in this article.

Where a policy of life insurance contains a clause forfeiting it that an insurance policy should be void in case the insured "shall, under any circumstances, die by his own hand," did not include death by suicide when the party was insane, although he understood the act and intended the result. Shultz v. Ins. Co., 40 Ohio St. 217.

1. In Pierce v. Travellers' Ins. Co. (3 Ins. L. J. 422, June, 1874), the condition of the policy was, that if the assured should "die by suicide, felonious or otherwise, sane or insane," it should be void. On the trial of the cause the jury were charged that if the assured "took his own life while in an insane condition of mind, still the defendants are liable, notwithstanding the attempt to avoid the policy under such circumstances." On an appeal the Supreme Court of Wisconsin held the charge erroneous, Dixon, C. J., saying: "The intention here manifest is so plain as to seem incapable of further explanation, and unless there is something in the policy of the law which forbids such stipulation, we have nothing to do but to give effect to it; for however the word 'suicide,' which is held by the authorities to mean the same thing as 'death by his own hand' or 'take his own life' might, if standing alone, be construed to imply a felonious self destruction, or self destruction by a sane man, or one capable of understanding the nature and consequences of his own act, and of judging between right and wrong, it is obvious that it cannot be so received or applied here. Such construction is forbidden by the express words of the condition, which declares that it shall make no difference whether the suicide was felonious or otherwise, or whether the party committing it was sane or insane at the time. The parties here, therefore, by the very language of the condition, defined the sense in which they use the word, and by that definition the courts must be bound, unless there be something in the condition contrary to public policy or sound morals, which is not pretended." See also De Gorgorza v. Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co., 65 N. Y. 232.

In an action on a life insurance certificate conditioned to be void if the insured "die by reason of any act of self destruction whatever, whether at the time of committing the same he be sane or insane, whether felonious or otherwise," the plea set up violation of this condition. Held, that a replication that at the time of the act he was of unsound mind and entirely unconscious of the physical and moral consequences of the act, and was the subject of an insane impulse which he had no power to resist, was demurrable for not denying the allegation of the plea that the act was intentional. Suppiger v. Covenant etc. Ass'n, 20 Ill. App. 595.

Where owing to uncontrollable physical and mental weakness, the assured takes an overdose of whisky, which kills him, this is not dying by his own hand, sane or insane. Northwestern Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Hazelett, 105 Ind. 212; see also Riley v. Hartford Life etc. Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 315.

2. Weed v. Mutual etc. Ins. Co., 70 N. Y. 561.

Where a policy provides that it shall be void if the insured shall "die by his own hand," the court should not take from the jury, as insufficient to sustain a recovery, evidence tending to show in case of nonpayment of any premium when due, the insanity of the insured is not an excuse for nonpayment.¹

8. Insanity as Affecting the Contract of Marriage.—A person who is so insane as to be incapable of entering into a valid contract concerning property, cannot enter into a valid contract of marriage.² Mere weakness of understanding will not invalidate a marriage;³ nor will insanity which does not affect the subject matter of the contract.⁴

The authorities are in conflict as to whether the marriage of an insane person is void ab initio, so that it may be impeached collaterally.⁵

that he was insane when he committed the act which caused his death. The weight of the evidence is for the jury to pass upon, although the court may, in its discretion, express its opinion thereon. Charter Oak etc. Co. v. Rodel, 95 U. S. 232.

In Shank v. United Brethren Mutual Aid Society, 84 Pa. St. 385, it was held that suicide was a question of intention, and where no direct evidence exists, the question of intention was to be inferred from the circumstances and should be submitted to the jury.

1. Wheeler v. Conn. etc. Ins. Co., 82 N. Y. 543.

2. "It is but reasonable that these unhappy persons who are prohibited by law from making any binding contract for the merest pecuniary trifle, should be protected from the effects of a covenant of so high a nature, which never could be entered into by the other party without some base or sinister design. If it would be hard that the issue of such marriages should be deemed bastards, it would be as much so that human beings without reason, or their families, should be the victims of the artifice of desperate persons who might be willing to speculate on their misfortunes." Middleborough v. Rochester, 12 Mass. 363.

3. In Massachusetts, upon a libel for divorce for insanity of the wife at the time of the marriage, the testimony proved only dejection of mind and singularities of conduct on the part of the libellee. The court said that they felt bound to require such evidence of insanity as in a civil action would justify a jury in finding the party incapable of making a contract; that anything short of this would open a door to great abuses; and that the fact of a party's being able to go through the marriage ceremony with propriety was prima facie evidence of sufficient understanding to make the contract. Anonymous, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 32. See also Cole v. Cole, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 57; Turner v. Meyers, 1 Hagg. Cons. 414; Browning v. Reane, 2 Phill. 69; Atkinson v. Medford, 46 Me. 510; Harrod v. Harrod, 1 Kay & J. 4.

4. Concord v. Rumney, 45 N. H. 423; Hancock v. Peaty, L. R., 1 P. & D. 335; Browning v. Reane, 2 Phill. 69; St. George v. Biddeford, 76 Me. 593.

5. In Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 343, CHANCELLOR KENT held that the marriage of an insane person was absolutely void, and no decree of nullity was necessary to set it aside. See also Crumph v. Morgan, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 91.

In Georgia it was held that the question of whether a man was of unsound mind and so incapable of contracting a marriage, might be raised twelve years afterwards in a proceeding by a woman, after his death, to obtain the year's support given by statute. Bell v. Bennett, 73 Ga. 784. But in Rawdon v. Rawdon, 28 Ala. 565, a lapse of twenty-two years after the discovery of the alleged insanity was a bar to relief in a suit for nullity. In North Carolina it was held that the question whether a party to a marriage was an idiot, and so incapable of marrying, could not be raised in a collateral proceeding, as in an action to which the children of such marriage, claiming as heirs or next of kin, are parties. State v. Setzer, 97 N. Car. 252. To the same effect is Wiser v. Lockwood, 42 Vt. 720. Where a party while insane married, and died insane, the court held that the parties were husband and wife, and that the survivor was entitled to a share in the estate of the insane party. In Kentucky however, it was held in a case similar to Wiser v. Lockwood, 42 Vt. 720, that the survivor could not claim dower or curtesy in the lunatic's estate. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 2 Dana (Ky.) 102. See also Waymire v. Jetmore, 22 Ohio St. 271; Powell v. Powell, 18 Kan. 371. In Maine a statute makes the marriage of an insane person solemnized in that State absolutely void. It, therefore, may be impeached collaterally. Unity v. Belgrade, 76 Me. 419. In Massachusetts there is a statute similar to the one in Maine. Pub. Sts. Mass., ch. 145, § 7. In New York the marriage of a lunatic is valid until duly annulled. It cannot be impeached collaterally, as in an action for the price of necessities furnished to an insane wife. Stuckey v. Mathes, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 461.

A violation of the marriage contract by an insane husband or wife does not furnish a ground for the dissolution of the marriage. Thus, extreme cruelty, if caused by insanity, is not cause for divorce,¹ and the same rule applies to acts of sexual intercourse between an insane husband or wife and a stranger.²

Where Insanity Is Fraudulently Concealed.—Where one of the parties to a marriage is insane, and this fact is fraudulently concealed from the other, the marriage will be declared invalid by reason of fraud vitiating the contract. Keyes v. Keyes, 22 N. H. 553. In Hancock v. Peaty, L. R., 1 P. & D. 535, where the husband was unaware of his wife's insanity when the marriage took place, a decree of nullity was entered on the petition of the wife's relatives. See Smith v. Smith, 47 Miss. 211; Hamaker v. Hamaker, 18 Ill. 137.

Insanity Subsequent to Marriage.—Insanity coming upon a person after marriage is no ground for divorce. Smith v. Smith, 47 Miss. 211.

A verdict in an action to set aside a marriage, that the person was sane, is not inconsistent with the finding of an inquisition that he was a lunatic two days later and for six months prior. Viets v. Troy Nat. Bank, 101 N. Y. 563.

1. Powell v. Powell, 18 Kan. 371.

2. Insanity as a Defence to a Charge of Adultery.—In Nichols v. Nichols, 31 Vt. 328, the libel was by the husband for a divorce a vinculo, for the adultery of the wife, who was insane. REDFIELD, C. J., in delivering the opinion, said: "The court held that general insanity is a full defence for all acts which, by the statute, are grounds of granting divorce. In regard to severity and desertion, there could be no question.

There is wanting the consenting will which is indispensable to give the acts the quality either of severity or desertion. The case is the same in regard to acts of sexual intercourse with one not the husband. If done by force or fraud no one could pretend that it formed any ground of dissolving the bonds of matrimony. And insanity is even more an excuse, if possible, than either force or fraud. It not only is not the act of a responsible agent, but in some sense it might fairly be regarded as superinduced by the consent or connivance of the husband, since he has the right and is bound in duty to restrain the wife, when bereft of reason and the power of self control, from the commission of all unlawful acts, both to herself and others. . . . And if the case were shown of those to whose care the husband had prudently entrusted his wife for care or for cure (as he might lawfully do), having betrayed or abused this confidence to purposes of crime on their part, as might possibly occur without his fault, he surely could not blame his insane wife for the treachery of his own agents, or their assistants. In insanity it is well known that the subject is liable to such illusions as to mistake utter strangers for the nearest relatives. If, too, they retain only the ordinary stimulus of propensity, at such a time, with no power of self control, they are, of course, at the mercy of every base man. But in many cases sexual propensity is more or less excited during insanity, and the liability to such contingencies proportionally increased. In such cases, for the husband to seek for a dissolution of the marriage relation must argue great weakness or great depravity.

"We have read the case of Matchin v. Matchin, 6 Pa. St. 332, and the opinion of the late CHIEF JUSTICE GIBSON, where he attempts to maintain that the adultery of the wife, although insane, is sufficient ground of divorce, for the reason that it tends to impose a spurious offspring upon the husband. The reason is one which will have no application to similar acts committed by the husband, and, as applied to the wife,

9. Insanity as Affecting Partnership.—In England, the insanity of a partner will not of itself work a dissolution of the partnership. It is a ground for dissolution only, and if the continuing partner does not avail himself of it, it will be presumed that he is willing to wait to see whether the incapacity of his partner may not prove merely temporary.¹

seems truly revolting to all just sense of propriety and decency. We are surprised that such an opinion should ever have found admission into the reports, and should be shocked at the prospect that it could ever gain general countenance in the American Republic." See also Broadstreet v. Broadstreet, 7 Mass. 474; Wray v. Wray, 19 Ala. 522.

In Matchin v. Matchin, 6 Pa. St. 332, CHIEF JUSTICE GIBSON said: "A wife's insanity, though so absolute as to have effaced from her mind the first lines of conjugal duty, would not be a defence to a libel for adultery, though it would be a defence to an indictment for it. The offence is a social as well as a moral one, and it is agreed by the civilians to be less grievous to the sufferer, though not less immoral, when it is committed by the husband, whose transgression cannot impose a supposititious offspring on the wife, than it is when committed by the wife, whose transgression may impose such an offspring on the husband; and hence it probably was—though the kindred fault of barrenness was also cause of divorce—that the right of repudiation was confined, in the primitive ages, to the husband; for there is no instance of an exercise of it by a wife till the time of Cicero; or shortly before it. Cooper's notes to Justinian, lib. 1, tit. 9, § 1, p. 435. A libel for divorce is said to partake of the nature of a criminal proceeding; but the primary intent of it is undoubtedly to keep the sources of generation pure, and when they have been corrupted the preventive remedy is to be applied without regard to the moral responsibility of the subject of it. It is true that neither the canon law nor our own statute makes any distinction as to sex; but that the legislation of England, to which the dissolution of marriage in that country exclusively belongs, is guided by an opposite principle, is proved by its readiness to divorce for the adultery of the wife, and its reluctance to divorce for the adultery of the husband. There have been but two instances of the latter, and in each of them the offence was marked with such circumstances of brutality that a continuance of the nuptial relation would have reflected the disgrace of the husband on the wife. The distinction is said to be preserved in the laws of many other countries; and though it is not expressly preserved in the application of the remedy under our own, we are nevertheless at liberty to conclude that insanity might be a bar to divorce at the suit of the wife when it would not, in similar circumstances, be a bar to divorce at the suit of the husband.

"To say the least, adultery committed under the irresistible impulse of that morbid activity of the sexual propensity which is called nymphomania, or more recently erotic mania, would certainly be ground of divorce, though not of indictment. The great end of matrimony is not the comfort and convenience of the immediate parties, though these are necessarily embarked in it; but the procreation of a progeny having a legal title to maintenance by the father; and the reciprocal taking for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and cherish till death, are important, but only modal conditions of the contract, and no more than ancillary to the principal purpose of it. The civil rights created by them may be forfeited by the misconduct of either party; but though the forfeiture can be incurred, so far as the parties themselves are concerned, only by a responsible agent, it follows not that those rights must not give way without it to public policy, and the paramount purposes of the marriage—the procreation and protection of legitimate children, the institution of families, and the creation of natural relations among mankind; from which proceed all the civilization, virtue and happiness to be found in the world."

1. In Jones v. Noy, 2 Mynle v. Keen 125, one of two partners having continued the partnership business for some time after the lunacy of the other, and having then sold the business, the representative of the deceased lunatic

In some of the United States it has been decided that the insanity of a partner works the dissolution of a partnership.¹

10. Insane Persons as Makers or Endorsers of Promissory Notes.—The insanity of the maker or endorser of a promissory note may be set up as a defence to an action on the note.² But where one in good faith takes a note signed by a person of whose incompetency to do business he has no notice, and in a transaction which is not likely to call his attention to it, he can recover on the note.³ Where, however, a promissory note, payable in bank, is given upon an unexecuted consideration to one who knew of the maker's dis partner was held to be entitled to his share of the partnership profits up to the period of sale. In this case the Master of the Rolls said: "It is clear upon principle that the complete incapacity of a party to an agreement to perform that which was a condition of the agreement is a ground for determining the contract; the insanity of a partner is a ground for the dissolution of the partnership, because it is an immediate incapacity; but it may not in the result prove to be a ground of dissolution, for the partner may recover from his malady. When a partner, therefore, is affected with insanity, the continuing partner may, if he think fit, make it a ground of dissolution; but in that case . . . in order to make it a ground of dissolution, he must obtain a decree of the court. If he does not apply to the court for a decree of dissolution, it is to be considered that he is willing to wait to see whether the incapacity of his partner may not prove merely temporary. If he carry on the partnership business in the expectation that his partner may recover from his insanity, so long as he continues the business with that expectation or hope there can be no dissolution." See also Sadler v. Lee, 6 Beav. 324; Sayers v. Bennet, 1 Cox 107; Besch v. Frolich, 1 Phillips 172.

The English rule has been followed in Pennsylvania, Uberoth v. Union Bank, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 83; and in New Jersey, Doughty v. Doughty, 3 Halst. Ch. (N. J.) 227. See also Raymond v. Vaughan, 17 Ill. App. 144; Reynolds v. Austin, 4 Del. Ch. 24; Re Wilkie, 3 Australian J. R. 12; Re Anderson, 4 Victorian L. R., Eq. 103.

1. In New York it has been held that death, insanity and bankruptcy work a dissolution of a partnership. Griswold v. Waddington, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 57.

In Tennessee, a finding of an inquisition of lunacy against a partner works an immediate dissolution. Isler v. Baker, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 85.

In New Hampshire the English rule has been doubted. Davis v. Lane, 10 N. H. 156.

2. McClain v. Davis, 77 Ind. 419; Hannahs v. Sheldon, 20 Mich. 278; Rice v. Peet, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 503; Davis v. Tarver, 65 Ala. 98; Seaver v. Phelps, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 304.

3. Shoulders v. Allen, 51 Mich. 529.

In Lancaster Co. Bank v. Moore, 78 Pa. St. 407, Moore, desiring to borrow money from one Stauffer, gave his note to him. It was discounted in good faith at a bank for Stauffer, and he gave Moore his check for the amount. An inquest afterwards begun found Moore a lunatic for a time anterior to the discount of the note. The finding was traversed. The bank had no notice of Moore's lunacy. On a suit by the bank on the note against Moore, held that the contract being executed and without fraud, the insanity of Moore was not a defence.

Moore v. Hershey, 90 Pa. St. 543, was an action by an endorsee against the maker of a promissory note, and evidence was offered to prove that the maker had received no consideration for the note, which fact the plaintiff had admitted in conversation, proof having been made that the maker was insane; the offer was rejected, the court below ruling that as the note in suit was commercial paper and the plaintiff a holder for value, the consideration could not be inquired into. This was held to be error. PAXSON, J., said: "We place our ruling upon the broad ground that the principle of commercial law above referred to does not apply to commercial paper made by mad men. . . . The true rule applicable to such cases is, that while the purchaser of a promissory note is not bound to enquire into ability, though it has passed into the hands of an innocent purchaser, it may be disaffirmed. In such a case the purchaser of the note takes it with constructive notice of the maker's disability.¹

11. Torts of Insane Persons.—An insane person is liable in damages for any torts that he may commit.² The damages are limited to an amount sufficient to compensate the injured party for the actual injuries suffered, and punitive damages cannot be recovered in such cases.³

12. Insane Persons as Witnesses.—An insane person is competent to be a witness if he understands the nature of an oath, and has sufficient mental power to give a correct account of what he has seen or heard.⁴

its consideration, he is affected by the status of the maker, as in the case of a married woman or a minor. In neither of these cases can he recover against the maker. In the case of a lunatic, however, he may recover, provided he had no knowledge of the lunacy, and the note was obtained without fraud, and upon a proper consideration."

But an accommodation endorser of a promissory note who receives no benefit therefrom either to himself or his estate, may defend against a bona fide holder on the ground that he was non compos mentis at the time of the endorsement; and this though the holder had at the time of the transfer to him no knowledge of the endorser's insanity. Wirebach v. First Nat'l Bank, 97 Pa. St. 543. See also Sentance v. Poole, 3 C. & P. 1; Burke v. Allen, 29 N. H. 106.

1. McClain v. Davis, 77 Ind. 419; Wirebach v. First National Bank, 97 Pa. St. 543.

2. By the common law, as generally stated in the books, a lunatic is civilly liable to make compensation in damages to persons injured by his acts, although being incapable of criminal intent, he is not liable to indictment and punishment." CHIEF JUSTICE GRAY, in Morain v. Devlin, 132 Mass. 87; citing Bac. Max. reg. 7; Weaver v. Ward, Hob. 134; 2 Rol. Ab. 547; 1 Hale, P. C. 15, 16; 1 Hawk., ch. 1 § 5; Bac. Ab., Idiots and Lunatics, E.; Haycraft v. Creasy, 2 East. 92, 104; 1 Chat. Pl. (2d Am. ed.) 65; Morse v. Crawford, 17 Vt. 409; Cross v. Kent, 32 Md. 581; Ward v. Conatser, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 64; Bullock v. Babcock, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 391; Behrens v. McKenzie, 23 Iowa 333; Lancaster Co. Bank v. Moore, 78 Pa. St. 407, 412; Dickinson v. Barber, 9 Mass. 225; Brown v. Howe, 9 Gray (Mass.) 84.

In Morain v. Devlin, 132 Mass. 87, it was held that a lunatic was civilly liable for an injury caused by the defective condition of a place, not in the exclusive occupancy and control of a tenant, upon real estate of which he was the owner, and of which his guardian had the care and management.

Slander.—If actual injury is sustained, damages may be recovered for slanderous words spoken by a lunatic. In Dickinson v. Barber, 9 Mass. 225, the court said that where derangement was great and notorious, so that the speaking the words could produce no effect on the hearers, it was manifest no damage would be incurred. But where the degree of insanity was slight, or not uniform, the slander might have its effect, and it would be for the jury to judge upon the evidence before them and measure the damages accordingly. In Bryant v. Jackson, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 199, however, insanity was held a good plea in defence to an action for slander. See also Homer v. Marshall, 5 Munf. (Va.) 446; Ycates v. Reed, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 463.

3. Krom v. Schoonmaker, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 647; Cross v. Kent, 32 Md. 581; Ward v. Conatser, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 64.

4. District of Columbia v. Armes, 107 U. S. 519; People v. New York Hospital, 3 Abb N. C. (N. Y.) 229; Sarbach v. Jones, 20 Kan. 497.

In the leading case of Hartford v. Palmer, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 143, the rule is laid down "that all persons who are examined as witnesses must be fully possessed of their understanding; that is such understanding as enables them to retain in memory the events of which they have been witnesses, and gives them a knowledge of right and wrong; that, therefore, idiots and lunatics, whilst under the influence of their malady, not possessing their share of understanding, are excluded."

In accordance with the general rules of evidence, the competency of an insane witness is to be decided by the court upon examination of the witness himself, and of other witnesses competent to testify as to the nature of his insanity; the credibility of the insane witness is for the determination of the jury.¹

It is no objection, either to the competency or credibility of a witness that he is subject to fits of mental derangement, if it appears that he is sane at the time he is offered. Campbell v. State, 23 Ala. 44. Thus, on a trial for forgery M was introduced as a witness for the commonwealth, and gave important testimony against the prisoner. He was examined and cross examined for two days, and neither the counsel nor the court suspected that he was deranged, though they thought he was drinking deeply. After the conclusion and sentence of the prisoner a new trial was moved for on the ground that M was deranged when he gave his evidence; and it was proved that he had been deranged a few days before the trial and within a few days after it, and so continued. But the judge who tried the prisoner overruled the motion and certified that at the time of M's examination he was a competent and proper witness, and not laboring under any mental disability whatever. On an appeal it was held that, as the proofs did not show derangement at the time of M's examination, he was a competent witness. Coleman v. Commonwealth, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 865. See also Queen v. Hill, 20 L. J., N. S. 22; Evans v. Hettich, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 453, 470. In Kendall v. May, 10 Allen (Mass.) 59, it was held, under a statute permitting the parties to a civil action to testify therein, except that when one party "is shown to the court to be insane, the other party shall not be admitted to testify in his own favor," that a party might be permitted to testify in his own favor, although the adverse party was insane, if it appeared that the insane party was in fact competent to testify.

1. The Competency of an Insane Witness a Question for the Court. The question whether a person who is offered as a witness is insane at the time goes to the competency of the witness, and is a preliminary question to be decided by the court.

The question whether a witness, sane at the time he testifies, was insane at the time of the transaction with regard to which he testifies, goes to the credibility of his testimony, and not to his competency, and is therefore a subject for evidence to the jury, to be adduced by the offering party with his other evidence. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 28 Conn. 177; Grant v. Thompson, 4 Conn. 203; Coleman v. Commonwealth, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 865.

In Cannady v. Lynch, 27 Minn. 435, the plaintiff alleged in her complaint that by reason of certain acts committed by the defendant she became insane, and was so adjudged, and was confined in an asylum, and that she would always be weak in mind and body. She was sworn as a witness, but the defendant objected to her testifying, because it appeared from her complaint that she came within the provision of a statute excluding persons of unsound mind from being witnesses. The objection was overruled. On appeal the lower court was sustained, the supreme court saying: "It [the statute] intends to affirm the common law rule on the subject, and admit persons as witnesses when, at the time they are offered to be sworn, they are possessed of 'such an understanding as enables them to retain in memory the events of which they have been witnesses, and gives them a knowledge of right and wrong,' sufficient to appreciate the sanctity and binding force and obligation of an oath. If a person offered as a witness must be tested by this rule, it is evident the test must be applied by the trial court at the time of offering him. His condition at that time must determine his competency. This cannot be established by the allegations of the pleadings. It is not the purpose or office of pleadings to ascertain or make or present any issue on the competency of witnesses to be sworn on the trial. The trial court may take into account the allegations and admissions in the pleadings bearing on the mental condition of any person offered as a witness, as it may resort to any other evidence to ascertain the fact, but they are not to be taken as conclusively de-

13. Deeds of Insane Grantors—(a) When Void or Voidable.—The deed of an insane person is only voidable, and not void. This is the rule in England and in those of the United States in which the committee is held not to have an estate in the lands of the insane ward.¹ In those States, however, in which conveytermining such condition. The court below did not err in overruling defendant's objection to plaintiff as a witness, based on the allegation in her complaint that she at one time became insane. It was not the duty of the trial court to examine plaintiff as to her mental soundness, merely because defendant alleged her to be unsound, unless it saw in her some indication of unfitness to testify. It must be presumed that the court declined to examine her because it saw no such indication."

In Lewis v. Eagle Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 508, the court held that the testimony of a witness who declares himself unable to answer questions put to him on cross-examination, on the ground that his memory, at times, failed him in consequence of mental injury resulting from a sunstroke, and that such was his present condition, is not to be stricken out, but should be submitted to the jury.

At the trial of an action, a witness, seventy-eight years old, with little knowledge of passing events, and but a feeble memory of past transactions, who did not know, while upon the stand, where he stayed the night before, or where he came from to the court room, and seemed to have absolutely no memory in reference to the recent events in his life, was permitted to testify as to the circumstances attending a conveyance executed to him some six years previously. Held, that his testimony was worthless. Woodhull v. Whittle, 30 N. W. Rep. (Mich.) 368.

1. Conveyance by Matter of Record.—At common law the conveyance of an insane person by matter of record was neither void nor voidable. In Mansfield's Case, 12 Rep. 123, a monstrous and deformed cripple, who had been an idiot from his birth, and who had been borne away from his guardian by stealth, was held concealed till he had acknowledged a fine of his land; and though his idiocy was visible at a glance, and LORD DYER said that the judge who took the acknowledgment was unworthy to take another, the fine was allowed to stand. Applying this principle C. J. GIBSON, in Snowden v. Dunlavy, 11 Pa. St. 522, held that the estate of a lunatic might be transferred to another by means of proceedings in partition.

Feoffment.—At common law the feoffment of a madman was only voidable, but his deed was absolutely void. In De Silver's Estate, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 111, C. J. GIBSON said: "The authorities distinctly show that the feoffment and livery of a lunatic or madman are not void but voidable, and that as they work a divestiture of his seisin, they preclude the possibility of an escheat by his death, because seisin must be found by the inquest, as well as a failure of heirs, devisees, or known kindred. His feoffee holds discharged, because an avoidance of the act would not restore the seisin of the lunatic at the time of his death, which is essential to an escheat of his estate to the immediate lord of the fee." It was accordingly held that though escheats take effect in Pennsylvania, not on principles of tenure, but by force of the statutes, yet these statutes require the decedent to have been seized at the time of his death. See also Thompson v. Leach, 12 Mod. 173.

Where Deed Is Equivalent to Feoffment.—Where a deed is equivalent to a feoffment, with livery of seisin, it is voidable merely and not void. Thus in Maryland it was held that where an estate was devised to one in tail, and if he died without heirs of his body, then to another in tail, and the first tenant in tail conveyed the land in fee by deed of bargain and sale, which in Maryland was equivalent to livery of seisin, and then died, that the remainderman could not impeach the deed on the ground that at the time of its execution the bargainor was non compos mentis. Key v. Davis, 1 Md. 32. The modern authorities generally hold that a deed of an insane person, in whatever form it may be, is voidable only and not void. Arnold v. Richmond Iron Works, 1 Gray (Mass.) 434; Crawford v. Scovell, 94 Pa. St. 48; Gribben v. Maxwell, 34 Kan. 8; Burnham v. Kidwell, 113 Ill. 425; Copenrath v. Kienby, 83 Ind.

ances by insane persons are declared void by statute, and in those in which the committee is vested with the legal estate of his ward, conveyances by an insane person after the finding of an inquisition, and the appointment of a committee, are absolutely void.¹

In order to invalidate a deed executed by an insane grantor, it must appear that the grantor was subject to insane delusion at 18; Fay v. Burditt, 81 Ind. 433; Physio-Medical College v. Wilkinson, 108 Ind. 314; Lincoln v. Buckmaster, 32 Vt. 52; Beverly's Case, 4 Coke 123 b; Allis v. Billings, 6 Met. (Mass.) 415; Seaver v. Phelps, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 304; Jackson v. Burchin, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 124; Somers v. Pumphrey, 24 Ind. 231; Musselman v. Craven, 47 Ind. 1; Freed v. Brown, 55 Ind. 310; Riggan v. Green, 80 N. C. 236; Eaton v. Eaton, 8 Vroom (N. J.) 108; Yauger v. Skinner, 1 McCart. (N. J.) 389; Breckinridge v. Ormsly, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 236; Thomas v. Hatch, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 170; Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 58; Wait v. Maxwell, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 217.

1. In England the finding of insanity by an inquisition is not conclusive evidence of such insanity in collateral proceedings. A deed overreached by a finding of insanity is therefore not necessarily void. Niell v. Morley, 9 Ves. 478; Selby v. Jackson, 6 Beav. 192; Jacobs v. Richards, 18 Beav. 300. In Indiana a statute providing that the deed of one duly found insane should be absolutely void, was held not to apply to deeds made before the grantor had been found insane by inquisition. Musselman v. Craven, 47 Ind. 1; Freed v. Brown, 55 Ind. 310. In Massachusetts, after the appointment of a guardian, a deed by an insane ward is absolutely void. Wait v. Maxwell, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 217. In Maine the same rule prevails. Hovey v. Hobson, 53 Me. 451. In Missouri the deed of an insane person under guardianship is void. Rannells v. Garner, 80 Mo. 474. In New York it has been held that an inquisition under a writ de lunatico inquirendo, stating that at the time of the execution of a deed the grantor was non compos mentis, is presumptive but not conclusive evidence of the grantor's incapacity in an action wherein a party claims under a deed. Van Deusen v. Sweet, 51 N. Y. 378; L'Amoreux v. Crosby, 2 Paige (N. Y.) Ch. 422; Osterhout v. Shoemaker, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 513; Griswold v. Miller, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 520; Jackson v. Burchin, 14 Johns.

(N. Y.) 124; Jackson v. Gumaer, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 552; Fitzhugh v. Wilcox, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 235; In re Christie, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 242.

Where a statute provided that the deed of a married woman, in which her husband does not join, shall not be valid, and it appeared that a husband while insane joined in a deed with his wife, such deed was held absolutely void. The court said: "We think that the learned judge who presided at the trial correctly ruled that if the defendant's husband was at the time he signed the deed insane, he could give no such assent as would satisfy the statute. The deed was void to the same extent as if there had been no assent by the husband, and no subsequent action or failure to act on his part could give it validity. The cases cited by the tenant to the point, that the deed or other contract of an insane person is voidable only, and may be ratified by him after he becomes sane, do not apply to this case. No subsequent assent or ratification by the husband could fulfil the requirements of the statute, or give validity to the deed as the deed of the wife."

Insane Settler.—Leggate v. Clark, 111 Mass. 308. Conveyances made by an insane settler without consideration, are absolutely void. Elliott v. Ince, 7 De G., Mac. & G. 475; Clark v. Clark, 2 Vern. 412; Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jones & La. T. 1.

In Miskey's Appeal, 107 Pa. St. 611, a man of intemperate habits, by which he had become enfeebled in mind and body, made a voluntary conveyance of all his estate to his father, in trust for his (the grantor's) father, mother and sister. The deed made no provision for the grantor's wife and but an inadequate provision was made for the only son. The parties benefiting by the deed were in affluent circumstances, and the consideration expressed in it was but nominal. The deed contained no power of revocation, and there was no proof that the grantor was conscious of that fact or that his attention was called the time of the execution of the deed, and that the insane delusion influenced him to do the act, or that he had lost all power of intelligently reasoning on any subject.¹

(b) Ratification.—Where the deed of an insane person is sought to be established on the ground that the grantor, after his restoration to sanity, had ratified it by receiving and accepting the consideration, it must appear that the ratification was the intelligent act of the grantor, knowing that he was acting under the contract contained in the deed, and intelligently availing himself of the provisions of the contract in his favor.² Ratification may be inferred if the grantor, after his restoration to reason, takes advantage of the beneficial considerations contained in the contract of conveyance.³

to it. The transaction was under the professional advice of the father's attorney, and the son's private attorney was not cognizant of the proceedings. Held, in a suit in equity brought by the widow, and administratrix of the grantor, to set aside the deed, that the deed should be set aside in favor of the grantor's widow, and the property be transferred to her as the administratrix of her husband's estate. But where an insane father deeded lands to a son to the exclusion of three other children, it was held, in the absence of any persuasion or fraud on the part of the son, that the deed should not be annulled. Nailor v. Nailor, 5 Mackey (D. C.) 93.

1. Deeds by Monomaniacs.—In Eken v. McCracken, 32 Leg. Intel. (Pa.) 405, where a deed was sought to be avoided, it was held that a man may be a monomaniac on a particular subject, but if the deed has no connection with his morbid condition, it will be sustained. See also Jenkins v. Morris, L. R., 14 Ch. D. 674; Dennett v. Dennett, 44 N. H. 531; Hovey v. Hobson, 55 Me. 256.

Deed Made in Lucid Interval.—A deed is good if made in a lucid interval. Towart v. Sellers, 5 Dow 231.

Mere weakness of mind, not amounting to insanity, will not avoid a deed. Odell v. Buck, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 142; Corbit v. Smith, 7 Iowa 60; Darby v. Hayford, 56 Me. 246. In Curtis v. Brownell, 42 Mich. 165, however, a mortgage made by a man who had been insane some time before and had periodical recurrences of insanity, and was insane at the time he gave the mortgage, though he had all along managed his own affairs with average correctness, and had been treated by his neighbors as competent to do business, even while they considered him of unsound mind, was set aside as being made while non compos mentis. See also Kennedy v. Murrast, 46 Ala. 161; Titcomb v. Vantyle, 84 Ill. 371.

2. Bond v. Bond, 7 Allen (Mass.) 1. In this case the ratification of a deed executed during insanity was held not to make it effectual as against the grantor's prior deed executed while he was sane, and recorded after the formal execution, but before the ratification of the second deed.

3. Thus, if one who, while of unsound mind, has executed a deed conveying land, after being restored to his right mind, and knowing that his grantee is in possession of the land under the deed, does not enter upon the land, nor give notice of his intention to disaffirm the conveyance, but receives payment of the notes for the price given to him while insane, his intention to ratify and confirm the deed may be inferred; although at the time of receiving such payment he does not know that he has the power of avoiding the deed, and that by receiving such payment he will relinquish that power. Arnold v. Richman Iron Works, 1 Gray (Mass. 434). In this case the court said: "It was argued that the plaintiff should not be bound in such case of the ratification of a contract made whilst of unsound mind, without affirmative proof that he knew that he had the power of avoiding his deed, and that, by demanding and receiving payment of his notes, he would relinquish that power. This is not tenable, unless a man of sane mind may set up his ignorance of the law to excuse himself from liability on his contracts. Could a man who should give a promise in writing to pay a debt of more than six years' standing, avoid his acknowledgment and promise by averring that he did not know that in point of law he had a good bar to the note, on the statute of limitations? It seems to us not. We think the law presumes that every man of competent capacity to make contracts, either by his knowledge or by the aid of legal counsel or such other aid and advice as he may avail himself of, knows enough of the law to make valid contracts; and, at all events, the law will not allow such an excuse to exempt him from the obligation of his contracts." See also Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 64; Eaton v. Eaton, 8 Vroom (N. J.) 108; Seaver v. Phelps, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 304.

(c) Power of a Court of Equity to Set Aside Deed of an Insane Grantor.—A court of equity, on good cause shown, may set aside a voidable conveyance of lands by an insane person, and this may be done at the instance of the grantor himself when restored to reason, or by his committee or guardian, or by his executor, administrator or heirs.¹

In Howe v. Howe, 99 Mass. 98, it was held that "the evidence that the grantor in a deed remembered what he had done and afterwards spoke of it and gave his reasons for it, and did not express any regret or dissent, was properly admitted as tending to prove that he understood his act at the time and ratified it. 'The deed of an insane person is not void, but voidable. The maker of it, or his legal representatives, may avoid it; or, when in possession of his full powers of mind, if he recovers his reason, he may affirm and ratify it. The contract is not a nullity, but, until disaffirmed, is binding; and the sane party cannot repudiate it. Any distinct and decisive act of recognition as a valid and subsisting contract is competent evidence of ratification. A new delivery of the deed is not requisite, as it would be if the deed of an insane person were void. See also Allis v. Billings, 6 Met. (Mass.) 415; Gibson v. Soper, 6 Gray (Mass.) 279; Campbell v. Kuhn, 45 Mich. 513; Jones v. Evans, 7 Dana. (Ky.) 96.

In Schuff v. Ransom, 79 Ind. 458, it was held that the deed of an insane grantor before office found is voidable only and that the grantor has the right to avoid or ratify it on becoming sane, and that his heirs have the same right; but that an action by the heirs to set aside such deed could not be maintained unless some act disaffirming the deed had been done before commencing the suit; and that if the complaint failed to show this, it was bad on demurrer.

But in Valpey v. Rea, 130 Mass. 384, on the trial of a writ of entry by a judgment creditor, claiming under the levy of an execution, of a person to whom the demanded premises were devised by his father, who, some time after the will was executed, conveyed the premises by deed to the tenant, it was held that the defendant might show that the grantor was insane at the time he made the deed, and that he died without being restored to reason, although no entry had been made, or any other act had been done to avoid the deed. See also Rogers v. Blackwell, 49 Mich. 192.

1. Kerwin v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 692; Gribben v. Maxwell, 34 Kan. 8; Burnham v. Kidwell, 113 Ill. 425; Key v. Davis, 1 Md. 32; Judge of Probate v. Stone, 44 N. H. 593; Campbell v. Kuhn, 45 Mich. 513; Hunt v. Weir, 4 Dana (Ky.) 347; Carew v. Johnston, 2 Sch. & Lef. 280; Fecel v. Gumault, 32 La. Ann. 91; Miskey's Appeal, 107 Pa. St. 611. The right to avoid the deed does not exist in behalf of strangers. Thus where a person in good faith purchased land at a sale under proceedings to foreclose a mortgage, and brought an action for possession against the tenant of the premises who was not the mortgagor, it was held that it was incompetent for the defendant to show that the mortgagor was of unsound mind when the mortgage was executed. Ingraham v. Baldwin, 9 N. Y. 45. In Kilbee v. Myrick, 12 Fla. 419, the court refused to set aside the conveyance of an insane husband, at the instance of the wife, the husband being still alive.

But in Valpey v. Rea, 130 Mass. 384, a different rule prevailed. On the trial of a writ of entry the defendant claimed title as the judgment creditor of Rea under the levy of an execution. The land demanded was devised to Rea by his father, who, some time after the will was executed, conveyed the premises by deed to the tenant. At the trial

In England and in most of the United States it is established that an executed contract for the sale of lands, in good faith, for a fair consideration, by an insane person to one who has no notice of the grantor's insanity, will not be set aside, except the purchase money be restored, and the grantee placed in statu quo.¹

the demandant offered to prove that Rea's father was insane when he executed the deed and that he died without being restored to sanity. It did not appear that any entry had been made or any other act done to avoid the deed. The trial judge ruled that the creditor could not avoid the deed by showing the insanity of the grantor. The supreme court held, on appeal, that when the will was proved Rea, under his title as devisee, acquired title to and the right to entry upon the land, and that this right being, under the statutes of Massachusetts, subject to be taken upon execution by a creditor, such creditor would acquire the right to recover the land and to avoid the deed to Rea, by showing the insanity of Rea's grantor.

1. Thus where an idiot mortgaged his land for a loan which was expended in his care and support, and the mortgagee acted in good faith and without notice, the idiot was not permitted to recover the land mortgaged without returning the amount of the loan. Burnham v. Kidwell, 113 Ill. 425.

Where Deed Is Accepted Without Notice of Grantor's Insanity.—In Gribben v. Maxwell, 34 Kan. 8, it was held that one who in good faith buys land of an insane person, for a fair price, without knowledge of his insanity, there having been no inquisition, can hold the land as against an attempt to avoid the sale without offering to restore the price. See also Copenrath v. Kienby, 83 Ind. 18; Addison v. Dawson, 2 Vern. 678; Price v. Berrington, 3 Mac. & G. 486; Scanlan v. Cobb, 85 Ill. 296; Sewing Machine Co. v. Barnard, 43 Mich. 379; Riggan v. Green, 80 N. Car. 236; Eaton v. Eaton, 8 Vroom (N. J.) 108; Ashcraft v. De Armond, 44 Iowa 229; Behrens v. McKenzie, 23 Iowa 333; Rusk v. Fenton, 14 Bush (Ky.) 490; Yauger v. Skinner, 1 McCart. (N. J.) 389; Arnold v. Richmond Iron Works, 1 Gray (Mass.) 434.

A conveyance of land, however, will be set aside where the defendants had knowledge of plaintiff's mental condition, and it is not shown that an adequate consideration was paid or agreed upon, and defendants have enjoyed the rents and profits long enough to compensate them for all they appear to have paid. Alexander v. Haskins, 68 Iowa 73.

Prior Restitution of Purchase Money.—Some of the American cases hold that a suit may be maintained by a lunatic or his representatives for the avoidance of a deed without first restoring the consideration money to the grantee. In Gibson v. Soper, 6 Gray (Mass.) 279, THOMAS, J., said: "To say that an insane man before he can avoid a voidable deed must put the grantee in statu quo, would be to say, in effect, that in a large majority of cases his deed shall not be avoided at all."

In Hull v. Louth, 109 Ind. 315, A procured a deed from an insane person, who received no consideration and did not comprehend the nature of the consideration. Then A mortgaged the land to B, who acted in good faith, relying on the record title. The insane person received no benefit from the money advanced by B. Held, that as against B the insane person was entitled to have the title quieted, and this, without a disaffirmance or an offer to make restitution.

In Ricketts v. Jolliff, 62 Miss. 440, it appeared that the consideration of a contract made by an insane person had been wasted, and it was held that restitution was not a condition precedent to the rescission of the contract.

In Pennsylvania, a lunatic, by his committee, may recover land conveyed by him when insane without restoring the purchase money or compensating the defendant for improvements. Rogers v. Walker, 6 Pa. St. 371. In Crawford v. Scovell, 94 Pa. St. 48, TRUNKY, J., said: "To say that an insane man, before he can avoid a voidable deed, must put the grantee in statu quo would oftentimes be to say his deed shall not be avoided at all. The more insane the grantor was when the deed was made, the less likely will he be to retain the fruits of his bargain so as to be able to make restitution. One of the obvious grounds on which the deed of an insane man is held voidable is not merely the incapacity to make a valid sale, but the incapacity prudently to manage and dispose of the proceeds of the sale. And the same incapacity which made the deed void may have wasted the price and made the restoration of the consideration impossible." The same rule seems to prevail in Maine. Hovey v. Hobson, 53 Me. 451. In Indiana, Somers v. Pumphrey, 24 Ind. 231; and in New Hampshire, Flanders v. Davis, 19 N. H. 139.

(d) Specific Performance.—When a person, while sane, enters into an agreement to convey real estate, and afterwards becomes insane, equity will enforce the specific performance of the contract. But if the agreement is made while the person is insane, specific performance will not be decreed.¹

14. Testamentary Capacity—(a) Definition.—In order to make a valid will, a testator must have sufficient capacity to comprehend the nature of the act he is performing; he must understand the extent of the property of which he is disposing; he must comprehend the relation which he holds to those who have claims upon him, and be capable of making a rational selection among them.²

In the recent case of Brigham v. Fayerweather, 144 Mass. 48, the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts decided that the deed of an insane person may be disaffirmed without returning the consideration money or placing the other party in statu quo. See also Chandler v. Simmons, 97 Mass. 508.

In Physio-Medical College v. Wilkinson, 108 Ind. 314, to a complaint to set aside a deed on the ground that the grantor therein at the time of its execution was of unsound mind, an answer was filed which alleged that the grantor had not, prior to the execution of the deed, been declared a person of unsound mind; that she did not exhibit any appearance of mental unsoundness; that the defendant without knowledge of her alleged infirmity accepted the deed in good faith, and in pursuance of a stipulation contained in the deed, the grantee, a medical college corporation, had afforded a medical education to the nephew and niece of the grantor, free of charge, the cost and value of which was $500, which sum had never been repaid or tendered. The court held that the answer was bad, inasmuch as it did not aver that the grantor received anything which was either beneficial or necessary to herself. A reply to the answer was filed which alleged that soon after the death of the grantor the defendant took possession of the land described, which had upon it a saw mill and a number of dwelling houses, and that from rents received and timber sold it had realized the sum of $3,000, and that from waste committed on the land while in its possession, by carrying off valuable timber, the value of the land had been lessened in the sum of $5,000. This reply was held to be good, even admitting the sufficiency of the answer.

1. Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. 605; Pegge v. Skynner, 4 Cox Eq. 23; Owen v. Davies, 1 Ves. Sen. 82; Yauger v. Skinner, 1 McCart. (N. J.) 389.

2. LORD COCKBURN, in Banks v. Goodfellow, L. R., 5 Q. B. 549, states the rule as follows: That the "testator shall understand the nature of the act and its effect; shall understand the extent of the property of which he is disposing; shall be able to comprehend and appreciate the claims to which he ought to give effect; and, with a view to the latter object, that no disorder of the mind shall poison the affections, pervert his sense of right, or prevent the exercise of his natural faculties; that no insane delusion shall influence his will in disposing of his property, and bring about a disposal of it which, if the mind had been sound, would not have been made."

An amusing, but accurate, definition of testamentary capacity is laid down in Swinbourne on Wills, p. 2, § 4, as follows: "If a man be of mean understanding, neither wise nor foolish, but indifferent as it were between a wise man and a fool; yea, though he rather incline to the foolish sort, so that for his dull capacity he may be termed grossum caput, a dunce, such a one is not prohibited to make a testament, unless he be yet more foolish, and so very simple and sottish that he may easily be made to believe things incredible or impossible, as that an ass can fly, or that trees did walk, beasts and birds could speak, as it is in Æsop's Fables."

In Whitney v. Twombly, 136 Mass. 145, the following instructions to the jury were sustained by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. "Soundness of mind, such as will enable a person under the statute to make a will, has relation to the business to be transacted; namely, the disposition of her property by will. Her mind must have been sound with reference to whatever is involved in this transaction; that is to say, she must have been able to understand and carry in her mind in a general way the nature and situation of her property, and her relations to those persons who are about her; to those who would naturally have some claim to her remembrance; to those persons in whom and those things in which she has been mostly interested. She must have been capable of understanding these things, and the nature of the act she was doing, and the relation in which she stood to the object of her bounty, and to those who ought to be in her mind on such an occasion, and free from any delusion which was the effect of disease, and which would or might lead her to dispose of her property otherwise than she would have done if she had known and understood correctly what she was doing. All the testimony covering the whole later portion of her life—as to her relations and degree of intimacy with her brothers and sisters and nephews and nieces; as to what she said and what she did; as to her peculiarities, if you find that she had any; as to her disposition and temperament, her griefs and bereavements, her attacks of sickness, whatever you may find them to have been, her habits and manners; as to what you may find that she was not able to do, and what she was able to do,—may be considered so far as they will aid you in determining her condition of mind on January 2nd, 1877. Age is not of itself a disqualification, but it incites vigilance to see if it is accompanied with incapacity. Disease is not itself a disqualification, but all infirmities awaken caution to see if mental capacity is impaired or gone."

Instructions that a testator had sufficient capacity if he understood his business, could recollect and keep it in mind, could understand the extent and value of his property, and how he wanted it disposed of, knew who were the natural objects of his bounty, and could keep these matters in mind long enough to dictate his will without prompting, were held unobjectionable in Cline v. Lindsey, 110 Ind. 337. See also in General Benoist v. Murrin, 58 Mo. 307; Young v. Ridenbaugh, 67 Mo. 574; Bates v. Bates, 27 Iowa 110; Brown v. Riggin, 94 Ill. 560; Lowder v. Lowder, 58 Ind. 538.

Unnatural Disposition of Property.—

An unnatural disposition of property is a circumstance tending to prove a lack of testamentary capacity. Lamb v. Lamb, 105 Ind. 456; Caldwell v. Anderson, 104 Pa. St. 199; Sherley v. Sherley, 81 Ky. 240; Fountain v. Brown, 38 Ala. 72; Young v. Barner, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 96; Evans v. Arnold, 52 Ga. 169; Kevil v. Kevil, 2 Bush (Ky.) 614. But the giving of property to a stranger rather than to relatives is not without more evidence of a want of testamentary capacity. Collins v. Brazill, 63 Iowa 432; Trumbull v. Gibbons, 2 Zab. (N. J.) 117; Van Pelt v. Van Pelt, 30 Barb. (N. J.) 134; Mosser v. Mosser, 32 Ala. 551; Austen v. Graham, 8 Moo. P. C. C. 493.

Old Age.—Extreme old age, even when accompanied with disease, is not in itself sufficient evidence of testamentary incapacity. CHANCELLOR KENT, in Van Alst v. Hunter, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 160, said: "It is one of the painful consequences of extreme old age that it ceases to excite interest, and is apt to be left solitary and neglected. The control which the law still gives to a man over the disposal of his property, is one of the most efficient means which he has in protracted life to command the attentions due to his infirmities. The will of such an aged man ought to be regarded with great tenderness, when it appears not to have been procured by fraudulent arts, but contains those very dispositions which the circumstances of his situation and the course of the natural affections dictated." See Collins v. Townley, 6 C. E. Green (N. J.) 353; Humphrey's Will, 12 C. E. Green (N. J.) 567; Taylor v. Kelly, 31 Ala. 59; Wintermute's Will, 12 C. E. Green (N. J.) 447; Reynolds v. Root, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 250; Thompson v. Kyner, 65 Pa. St. 368; Tarr's Est., 3 Pa. County Court Rep. 319; Rutherford v. Morris, 77 Ill. 397; Thomas v. Stump, 62 Mo. 275; Lowder v. Lowder, 58 Ind. 538; Wilson v. Mitchell, 101 Pa. St. 495.

The law seems to require less mental

The highest degree of mental soundness is not required in order to constitute capacity to make a testamentary disposition of property. A person's mind may be impaired by grief, disease, melancholy or old age, yet if he has sufficient ability to weigh and consider intelligently the act of making the will, and its surrounding circumstances, the will will be valid.¹

The definition of testamentary capacity is a matter of law for the court. The sufficiency of the evidence must be passed upon before submission to the jury, and it is error to submit the question to the jury if there is no evidence that the incapacity existed.²

power for the execution of a will than for the making of a contract. In Harison v. Rowen, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 585, the court said that a testator's capacity may be perfect to dispose of his property by will, yet very inadequate to the management of other business, as, for instance, to make contracts for the purchase or sale of property. For most men, at different periods of their lives, have meditated upon the subject of the disposition of their property by will, and when called upon to have their intentions committed to writing, they find much less difficulty in declaring their intentions than they could in comprehending business in some measure new. See also Brinkman v. Rueggiesick, 71 Mo. 553. But see contra McElroy v. McElroy, 5 Ala. 81; Barnes v. Barnes, 66 Me. 286; Potts v. House, 6 Ga. 324; Kinne v. Kinne, 9 Conn. 102; Converse v. Converse, 21 Vt. 168. The same degree of mental capacity is not required in making a will of a small and simple property as of a large and complicated estate. Sheldon v. Dow, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 503.

An inquisition of lunacy overreaching the date when the will was made does not invalidate the will. Thus, in New Jersey a woman 82 years old made a will, and it appeared that at the time of its execution she had sufficient testamentary capacity. Two years afterwards an inquisition found that she had been of unsound mind for the past three years. It was held that the finding of the inquisition was immaterial as to her testamentary capacity. Brady v. McBride, 39 N. J. Eq. 495.

1. A person may not have been of sound mind, yet have been of disposing mind. It is accordingly error to instruct a jury that they must find against a will if they find the testator to have been so diseased mentally as not to have been of sound mind. Freeman v. Easley, 117 Ill. 317. It is also error to charge that if testatrix, when she made the will, "had a diseased brain, and from this cause, or from disease, her mind was so unsound as not to remember the names of her relations, and to judge soundly of the acts she was about to do, or to know and understand the business she had in view, and to think soundly on that business, then she did not have capacity to make a will." Kramer v. Weinert, 81 Ala. 414. One may be competent to make a will, although an invalid, nervous, reserved, and disinclined to read and write. Hoban v. Piquette, 52 Mich. 346.

See also Jackson v. Hardin, 83 Mo. 175; Delaney v. Salina, 34 Kan. 532; Burley v. McGough, 115 Ill. 11; Cockeram v. Cockeram, 17 Ill. App. 604; Re Potter, 3 Demarest (N. Y.) 108; Lyons v. Van Riper, 11 C. E. Green (N. J.) 337; Boyd v. Eby, 8 Watts (Pa.) 66; Thompson v. Kyner, 65 Pa. St. 368; Wilson v. Mitchell, 101 Pa. St. 495; Combs' App., 105 Pa. St. 155; Stancell v. Kenan, 33 Ga. 56; Ragan v. Ragan, 33 Ga. Supp. 106; Runkle v. Gates, 11 Ind. 95; Yoe v. McCord, 74 Ill. 33; Kingsbury v. Whittaker, 32 La. An. 1055; Harvey v. Sallens, 56 Mo. 372.

2. On the trial of an issue devisavit vel non, the trial judge is justified in directing a verdict in favor of the proponent, not when he may feel that if he were sitting as a juror he would regard the evidence as insufficient to induce him to find a verdict against the alleged will, but when, after a careful review of all the testimony, he would feel that if a verdict were rendered against the proponents after a fair and impartial trial, he would be constrained to set it aside as contrary to the manifest weight of evidence. Herster v. Herster, 116 Pa. St. 612; Knauss's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 10; Thompson v. Kyner, 65 Pa. St. 368, 375; Smith v. First National Bank, 99 Mass. 611; Cuffman v. Long, 82 Pa. St. 72; Kinne v. Kinne, 9 Conn.

(b) Delusions.—Whenever a testator's mind is so deranged that he makes his will under the influence of an insane delusion, the will is void.¹

102; Brown v. Torrey, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 583.

The Issue.—The issue must be framed so that the jury may find the facts from which the conclusion of law may be drawn, and not the conclusion of law itself. Thus a request was made that an issue might be framed as follows: "At the time said T signed said will did she have mind and memory sufficient to understand the ordinary affairs of life and to act with discretion therein? Did she know her children and grandchildren and have a general knowledge of the estate of which she was possessed?" The court below refused the request and framed this issue: "Was the said T of sound mind at the date of the execution of the paper writing in contest?" Upon appeal it was held that the issue as framed by the court was erroneous, inasmuch as it presented a question of law, whereas the issue as framed by the defendant called for the decision of facts alone, from which the conclusion of law could be drawn by the court. Todd v. Fenton, 66 Ind. 25.

1. Chaney v. Bryan, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 63; Ballantine v. Proudfoot, 62 Wis. 216; Morse v. Scott, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 507; Edge v. Edge, 38 N. J. Eq. 211; Brinton's Est. 13 Phila. (Pa.) 234; Seamen's Friend Soc. v. Hopper, 33 N. Y. 619; Tawney v. Long, 76 Pa. St. 106.

Strange Beliefs.—The existence of mental delusions, however, is not necessarily incompatible with mental intelligence sufficient to make a will. Rice v. Rice, 53 Mich. 432. Thus it has been held that a testator's mental delusion as to his physical condition, or the cause thereof, does not constitute testamentary incapacity. Hollinger v. Syms, 37 N. J. Eq. 221. See also Otto v. Doty, 61 Iowa 23, and Smith's Will, 52 Wis. 543, where it was held that the fact that the testator was a spiritualist was not sufficient ground for setting aside his will. See Sheldon v. Dow, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 503; Thompson v. Thompson, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 107. A belief that the souls of men after death passed into animals is not inconsistent with testamentary capacity. Bonard's Will, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) N. S. 128. Extreme religious anxiety is not a ground for setting aside a will. Chafin

Will Case, 32 Wis. 557; Gass v. Gass 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 278; Weir's Will 9 Dana (Ky.) 434.

Prejudice Against Relatives.—Unreasonable prejudice against relatives is not ordinarily a ground for invalidating a will. Hall v. Hall, 38 Ala. 131; Barnes v. Barnes, 66 Me. 286; Cole's Will, 49 Wis. 179. But where the testator's aversion is the result of a morbid delusion, and the testator's conduct cannot be explained on any other ground, the will will not be sustained. Dew v. Clark, 3 Add. Ecc. 79. In Boughton v. Knight, L. R., 3 P. & D. 64, it was held that a man, moved by capricious, frivolous, mean, or even bad motives, may disinherit wholly or partially his children and leave his property to strangers. He may take an unduly harsh view of the character and conduct of his children, but there is a limit beyond which it will cease to be a question of harsh, unreasonable judgment, and then the repulsion which a parent exhibits to his child must be held to proceed from some mental defect. If such repulsion, amounting to a delusion as to character, is shown to have existed previous to the execution of his will, it will be for the party setting up that document to establish that it was inoperative when the will was made, and the jury in determining whether or not the delusion was operative, will have regard to the contents of the will and the circumstances surrounding the execution of it.

In Bitner v. Bitner, 65 Pa. St. 347, it was held that a testator "might have been perfectly conscious of the nature of his testamentary provision, and aware that its effect was to disinherit three sons, and yet be laboring under a delusion of fact as to their conduct, which led him to consider and do the thing contemplated, consciously and with intelligence." See Tawney v. Long, 76 Pa. St. 106.

Where an aged testator was led, by a declaration of his wife, made in the delirium of disease, to believe that one of his daughters was illegitimate, this suspicion on his part was held not to amount to an insane delusion, so as to invalidate the will. Clapp v. Fullerton, 34 N. Y. 190. In general an error in fact, or a prejudice or suspicion, will not amount to an insane delusion. Trumbull v. Gibbons, 2 Zab. (N. J.) 117; Hall v. Hall, 38 Ala. 131; Boardman v. Woodman, 47 N. H. 120; Taylor v. Kelly, 31 Ala. 59; Kelly v. Miller, 39 Miss. 17; Gleespin's Will, 11 C. E. Green (N. J.) 523; Barnes v. Barnes, 66 Me. 286; Lee v. Lee, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 183; Frower's Est., 2 W. N. C. (Pa.) 588; Cole's Will, 49 Wis. 179.

(c) Presumption of Sanity.—The law presumes that a testator is sane until the contrary is proved;¹ but where insanity is estab-

It is always a question of law for the court whether a particular delusion is in its nature sane or insane. Robinson v. Adams, 62 Me. 369.

1. Presumption of Sanity.—"That every man is presumed to be sane is abundantly proved by the authorities. We think that although the subscribing witnesses, if they can be produced, must be examined in relation to the soundness of the testator's mind, yet the party propounding a will for probate is under no general duty to offer any evidence of the testator's sanity, but may safely rely upon the presumption of the law, that all men are sane until some evidence to the contrary is offered." Perkins v. Perkins, 39 N. H. 163.

In Taff v. Hosmer, 14 Mich. 309, COOLEY, J., said: "The party assuming the burden of establishing a will has not supposed himself bound in his opening to go further than to give evidence by the subscribing witnesses of these facts which would make out, prima facie, a valid testamentary instrument, and has left all further evidence on the subject of mental capacity to be brought in by way of answer to that adduced by the contestant. The evidence at the opening has usually been of a formal character, and the proponent has confined himself to enquiries of a general nature respecting the signing and attestation, and whether, at the time, the party appeared to understand the business in which he was engaged. . . . To prove that the decedent was not insane is to prove that an exceptional state of facts did not exist; in other words, it is to prove a negative, and on general principles very slight evidence only should be demanded of the party called upon to take the burden of proving such a state of facts." See also Banker v. Banker, 63 N. Y. 409; Dean v. Dean, 27 Vt. 746; Turner v. Cook, 36 Ind. 129; Mayo v. Jones, 78 N. Car. 402; Brooks v. Barrett, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 94;

Hawkins v. Grimes, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 257; Trish v. Newell, 62 Ill. 196; Carpenter v. Calvert, 83 Ill. 62.

Even in States where affirmative proof of the testator's insanity is required by statute for the probate of a will, the presumption of sanity still continues, and if the evidence is doubtful the presumption will prevail. Hawkins v. Grimes, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 257; Trish v. Newell, 62 Ill. 196; Carpenter v. Calvert, 83 Ill. 62; Delafield v. Parish, 25 N. Y. 9; Kingsley v. Blanchard, 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 317.

The custom of examining subscription witnesses as to the testator's sanity does not affect the presumption of sanity, for if the witnesses cannot be produced the proponent may safely rely upon the presumption. Perkins v. Perkins, 39 N. H. 163.

In most of the States it is held that on formal proof the burden is on the party alleging the testator's incapacity. Thompson v. Kyner, 65 Pa. St. 368; Egbert v. Egbert, 78 Pa. St. 326; Trumbull v. Gibbons, 2 Zab. (N. J.) 117; Sloan v. Maxwell, 2 Green Ch. (N. J.) 563; Hawkins v. Grimes, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 257; Cox v. Cox, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 87; Yoe v. McCord, 74 Ill. 33; Rich v. Bowker, 25 Kan. 7; Jenkins v. Tobin, 31 Ark. 306; Mayo v. Jones, 78 N. Car. 402; Cole's Will, 49 Wis. 179; Stubbs v. Houston, 33 Ala. 555; Jamison v. Jamison, 3 Houst. (Del.) 108; Herbert v. Berrier, 81 Ind. 1; Kinloch v. Palmer, 1 Mill (S. Car.) 216.

In some States it is held that on the question whether a will shall be established, there is no presumption of the testator's sanity. See Barnes v. Barnes, 66 Me. 286; Beazley v. Denson, 40 Tex. 416. In Michigan a statute requires affirmative proof of sanity on the part of the proponent. McGinnis v. Kempsey, 27 Mich. 363; see Hubbard v. Hubbard, 7 Oreg. 42.

In Missouri it is held that the burden of proof that an alleged testator was of sound and disposing mind rests upon those endeavoring to establish the will, and if there is a general presumption that men are sane, this may make out a prima facie case, but not change the burden of proof. Elliott v. Welby, 13 Mo. App. 19.

If West Virginia the burden of proof of the sanity of a testator is on the pro-lished by proof, it is presumed to continue until the contrary be made to appear.¹

(d) Declarations of Testator.—The declarations of a testator are admissible to prove the condition of his mind at the time the will is made.²

ponent. McMechen v. McMechen, 17 W. Va. 683.

In Perkins v. Perkins, 39 N. H. 163, it is held that the burden of proof is upon the party who asserts the validity of the will, and this burden remains upon him until the close of the trial, though he need introduce no proof upon this point until something appears to the contrary.

In England it has been held that "in all cases the onus is imposed on the party propounding a will. It is in general discharged by proof of capacity and the fact of execution, from which the testator's knowledge of and assent to the contents of the instrument are assumed. Barry v. Butlin, 2 Moo. P. C. 480; Dew v. Clark, 3 Add. Ecc. 78; Smee v. Smee, L. R., 5 P. D. 84.

1. Grabill v. Barr, 5 Pa. St. 441; Smee v. Smee, L. R., 5 P. D. 84; Taylor v. Cresswell, 45 Md. 422; Wade v. State, 37 Ind. 180; Mullins v. Cottrell, 41 Miss. 291; Emery v. Hoyt, 46 Ill. 258; Corbit v. Smith, 7 Iowa 60; Weston v. Higgins, 40 Me. 102; Cartwright v. Cartwright, 1 Phill. 90. The rule does not apply to insanity which may have arisen from a violent disease. Hix v. Whittemore, 4 Met. (Mass.) 545. Or is due to some special or temporary cause. Brown v. Riffin, 94 Ill. 560; McMasters v. Blair, 29 Pa. 298; Trish v. Newell, 62 Ill. 106.

2. Declarations of Testator.—The declarations of testator are admissible when the condition of his mind is the point of contention. They are then received as external manifestations of his mental condition, and not as evidence of the truth of the facts he states. Rule v. Maupin, 84 Mo. 587; Cawthorn v. Haynes, 24 Mo. 237; Tingley v. Cowgill, 48 Mo. 291; Spoonmore v. Cables, 66 Mo. 579; Gibson v. Gibson, 24 Mo. 227; Muller v. St. Louis etc., 73 Mo. 243; Thompson v. Stump, 62 Mo. 275; Shaller v. Bunstead, 99 Mass. 112; In re Clark, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 233; Waterman v. Whitney, 11 N. Y. 157; Cudney v. Cudney, 68 N. Y. 148; Marx v. McGlynn, 88 N. Y. 357; Sanford v. Ellithorp, 95 N. Y. 48; Bush v. Bush, 87 Mo. 480; Reynolds v. Adams, 90 Ill.

134; Robinson v. Hutchinson, 26 Vt. 38; Potter v. Baldwin, 133 Mass. 427; Griffith v. Diffenderfer, 50 Md. 466; Cockram v. Cockram, 17 Ill. App. 604; Whitman v. Morey, 63 N. H. 448; Stevens v. Vancleve, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 262; Comstock v. Hadlyne, 8 Conn. 254; Provis v. Reed, 5 Bing. 435; Moritz v. Brough, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 403; May v. Bradlee, 127 Mass. 414; Vanvalkenberg v. Vanvalkenberg, 90 Ind. 433; Smith v. Fenner, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 170; Ross v. McQuiston, 45 Iowa 145; Thompson v. Kynn, 65 Pa. St. 368; Rambler v. Lyon, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 94; Chess v. Chess, 1 Pa. St. 16; McTaggart v. Thompson, 14 Pa. St. 149; Bates v. Bates, 27 Iowa 110; Reel v. Reel, 1 Hawks. (N. Car.) 248; Dennis v. Weekes, 51 Ga. 24; Hayes v. West, 37 Ind. 21; Bundy v. McKnight, 48 Ind. 502; Boylan v. Meeker, 4 Dutch. (N. J.) 274; Johnson v. Brown, 51 Tex. 65; Lamb v. Lamb, 105 Ind. 456; American Bible Society v. Price, 115 Ill. 623.

The declarations ought to have some direct connection with and tend to show the condition of the mind at the time the will was made. The period of time over which such declarations may extend depends much upon the character of the unsoundness of the mind alleged or attempted to be proved. Rule v. Maupin, 84 Mo. 587; Irish v. Smith, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 573; Wilkinson v. Pearson, 23 Pa. St. 117; Moore v. Spier, 80 Ala. 129; Waterman v. Whitney, 11 N. Y. 157. The fact that a testator, many years before making his will, expressed an intention to leave his property to his children equally, affords no evidence of undue influence or mental incapacity, where a different disposition of his property is made and such testimony should not be admitted in a proceeding to contest the validity of the will. Rutherford v. Morris, 77 Ill. 397; Landis v. Landis, 1 Grant (Pa.) 248.

The declarations of a testatrix, made subsequently to the execution of a will, and at a time when she was of sound mind, are not admissible for the purpose of showing her mental condition when the will was executed. There is no logical relation between such declarations and the facts sought to be proved, although it is otherwise when mental unsoundness exists at the time the declarations are made. Crocker v. Chase, 57 Vt. 413; Jackson v. Kniffen, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 31; Flintham v. Bradford, 10 Pa. St. 82; Moritz v. Brough, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 403; Comstock v. Hadlyme, 8 Conn. 254; Shailer v. Bumstead, 99 Mass. 112; Smith v. Fenner, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 170; Boylan v. Meeker, 4 Dutch. (N. J.) 274; Provis v. Reed, 5 Bing. 435; Stevens v. Vancleve, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 266; Gibson v. Gibson, 24 Mo. 227; Waterman v. Whitney, 11 N. Y. 157; Johnson v. Brown, 51 Tex. 65.

(e) Declarations of Legatees and Devisees.—The declarations of persons interested under a will, affirming the competency of the testator, are generally admitted when they make against the interest of the person uttering them. Where, however, the declaration is made by one of several devisees or legatees, it seems from the weight of authority that it should not be admitted to prejudice the rights of the others.¹

Declarations of a testator at other times than at the time when he executed his will are admissible to the same extent as though then made. Jones v. McLellan, 76 Me. 49; Bates v. Bates, 27 Iowa 110.

Declarations by a testator, while insane, that he was insane and under undue influence at the time of executing the will, have no weight. In Re Lang, 65 Cal. 19. But declarations by testatrix, when sane, that she was crazy when she executed a will, are evidence that she had not testamentary capacity when that will was executed. Colvin v. Warford, 20 Med. 357.

A change of intention is of no importance if there be a sound mind, unconstrained, but if the question is whether there be such mind, testator's declarations of his intention may be given in evidence. Titlow v. Titlow, 54 Pa. St. 216; Norris v. Sheppard, 20 Pa. St. 475; Kachline v. Clark, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 316; Potter v. Baldwin, 133 Mass. 427; May v. Bradlee, 127 Mass. 414; Canada's App., 47 Conn. 450; Fuller v. Fuller, 83 Ky. 345; Shaw v. Shaw, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 21.

Contents of former will may tend to show that the testator was of unsound mind. Lowder v. Lowder, 58 Ind. 538; Dietz's Case, 41 N. J. Eq. 284; Vance v. Upson, 66 Tex. 476.

Where a will is disputed on the ground of fraud, duress or imposition neither his prior or subsequent declarations are evidence. Only those can be admitted which are part of the res gesta. Waterman v. Whitney, 11 N. Y. 157; Bibb v. Thomas, 2 W. Black, 1044; Doe v. Perkes, 3 Barn. & Ald. 489; Doe v. Brown, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 483; see also Jackson v. Betts, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 377; Shaw v. Shaw, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 21; see contra, Durant v. Ashmore, 2 Rich. (S. C.) 184; Reel v. Reel, 1 Hawks. (N. Car.) 248; Howell v. Barden, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 442.

1. The interests of legatees and devisees under a will are not joint but several, and hence the declarations of one cannot be given in evidence to affect or prejudice the others. Shaver v. McCarthy, 110 Pa. St. 339; Irwin v. West, 81 Pa. St. 157; Clark v. Morrison, 25 Pa. St. 453; Bovard v. Wallace, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 499; Nussear v. Arnold, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 328; Hauberger v. Root, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 434; Boyd v. Eby, 8 Watts (Pa.) 66. The decisions in Massachusetts have not been uniform on this subject. Atkins v. Sanger, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 192, holding the contrary doctrine, but this case has not been followed. Shailer v. Bumstead, 99 Mass. 112; Phelps v. Hartwell, 1 Mass. 71; Matter of Baird, 7 N. Y. 758; Carpenter v. Hatch, (N. H.) 15 Atl. Rep. 219; Parsons v. Parsons, 66 Iowa 754; Dye v. Young, 55 Iowa 433; In re Ames' Will, 51 Iowa 596; Walker v. Jones, 23 Ala. 448; Bunyard v. McElroy, 21 Ala. 311; Taylor v. Kelly, 31 Ala. 59; Blakey v. Blakey, 33 Ala. 611; Burton v. Scott, 3 Rand. (Va.) 399; Thompson v. Thompson, 13 Ohio St. 356; Forney v. Ferrell, 4 W. Va. 729. The contrary doctrine, however, is held in some states. Dennis v. Weekes, 51 Ga. 24; Dennis v. Weekes, 46 Ga. 514; Brown v. Moore, 6 Yerg. (Tenn.) 272; Rogers v. Rogers, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 324; Beal v. Cunningham, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 399; Milton v. Hunter, 13 Bush. (Ky.) 163; Peebles v. Stevens, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 198; see also Dillard v. Dillard, 2 Strobb. (S. Car.) 89; McCraine v. Clark,

15. Evidence—(a.) Province of Judge and Jury.—Where a judge and jury are called upon to decide the question whether a party is insane or not, it is the province of the judge to determine whether sufficient evidence of the alleged insanity appears to warrant a submission of the issue to the jury. Where a judge submits a case to a jury upon clearly insufficient evidence, such action is ground for reversal.¹

2. Murph. (N. Car.) 317; Armstrong v. Farrar, 8 Mo. 627.

Declarations by an executor of and contingent devisee under a will against the sanity of a testator are admissible in an issue to contest the validity of the will. Davis v. Calvert, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 269.

Declarations made before the execution of a will by parties who afterward take under the will are not admissible to affect its validity. Ames's Will, 51 Iowa 596; Thompson v. Thompson, 13 Ohio St. 356; Burton v. Scott, 3 Rand. (Va.) 399; Hunt v. Hunt, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 575.

Nor are declarations made after the execution of the will admissible when such declarations were made in ignorance of the execution of the will. In re Ames's Will, 51 Iowa 596. See contra, Dennis v. Weekes, 51 Ga. 24; Dennis v. Weekes, 46 Ga. 514; Peoples v. Stevens, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 198; Chapman v. Allen, (Conn.) 14 Atl. Rep. 780.

The declarations of husband against wife, or wife against husband, are not admissible when they are both interested adversely to each other. Walker v. Walker, 34 Ala. 469; Coryelle v. Stone, 62 Ind. 307.

In Brewer v. Ferguson, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 565, a wife, who had no interest in the issue, was held to be incompetent to establish his insanity. But see Irish v. Smith, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 573.

Declarations by an attorney in fact that his constituent was non compos at the time of the making of the power, are inadmissible in an action of ejectment by the devisees of the constituent against the grantees under a deed executed by the attorney. Bensell v. Chancellor, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 371.

Declarations as to the incapacity of a testator by a party sustaining the will are properly rejected when the offer is made without limitation as to time, place and circumstance of making them. Thompson v. Kyner, 65 Pa. St. 368.

Declarations of legatees against their interest are not admissible in a proceeding to set aside the will to which proceeding they are not parties. Carpenter v. Hatch, 64 N. H. 573; Dotts v. Fetzer, 9 Pa. St. 88.

The declarations of one of three executors may be admitted as to facts which took place at the time of making the will. Atkins v. Sanger, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 192.

It seems that declarations made by a sole legatee or devisee would be admissible. Blakey v. Blakey, 33 Ala. 611; Boyd v. Eby, 8 Watts. (Pa.) 66; Nussear v. Arnold, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 323; Burton v. Scott, 3 Rand. (Va.) 399.

Where, upon the probate of a will, the question is upon the sanity of a testator, the opinions of the opposing party upon that question, in favor of his sanity, expressed out of court, may be given in evidence by the executor, in support of the will. Ware v. Ware, 8 Me. 42.

1. In Cauffman v. Long, 82 Pa. St. 72, the question of the sufficiency of the evidence was considered. The court said: "There was serious error in submitting the question of testamentary capacity to the jury at all. The learned judge should have withdrawn it altogether. at most there was but a scintilla of proof. The evidence of the defendant upon this point amounts to nothing. One witness swears that he thought the testator was a weak minded man, because when he came to the store with his wife he allowed the latter to do the bargaining and never interfered. Sheriff Rhinehart thought he was a monomaniac, because he told his pastor, with whom he appeared to have had some difficulty, that 'we want one to preach Christ and Him crucified, and not for money, money, all the time, as you do.' Also that at a church meeting there was a dispute about the control of the church property. During the controversy Shimp, the minister, said: 'This was God's house.' Cauff-man replied, 'It is not your house nor God Almighty's house. It is my house. I built it.' This was not perhaps exactly orthodox, but when it is remembered that the testator, as was alleged, gave the lot and materially aided in building the church, it hardly shows testamentary incapacity. Upon another occasion he expressed to the witness, Rinehart, his aversion to going to law, and thought he could not get justice. Abraham Long, another witness, says he thought his mind was wavering from the fact that when the witness made some remark about the time of day, he merely said 'Hunck?' and that when he asked him where the women were, he said 'Was sagt?' and looked queerly. Isaac Wright thought he was not sound in his mind because he would not decide upon selling the witness his crop of grain. These are all the witnesses upon this point whose testimony is worth noting. I have not, of course, given all they said. What I have quoted is a fair specimen. We look in vain through the evidence for anything like insanity or delusion. A court has a higher duty to perform than merely to answer points of law. It is its duty to see that the law is faithfully administered. Such administration requires that a man's will, the most solemn instrument he can execute, shall not be set aside without any sufficient evidence to impeach it. There is no redress here for an erroneous or improper verdict. But where a case is submitted to a jury upon clearly insufficient evidence, such as no court ought to sustain a verdict upon, it is our plain duty to reverse.

(b.) Presumptions.—It is a presumption of law that all men are sane, and the burden of proof is upon the person alleging insanity.¹

"It may be stated as a general rule that the question of the legal effect of insanity proved to exist in any case, as qualifying the nature of the act which is the subject of enquiry, is for the court, as being a question of law; and it follows that it is the duty of the court to embody the law, as applied to the evidence of insanity produced, in suitable instructions to the jury; and that it is the duty of the jury to receive the law as given by the court, and to decide, as matter of fact, upon the evidence submitted, not merely whether insanity exists, but whether if it exists, it is of that character which, in law, invalidates the civil act or excuses the alleged crime of its subject. In other words, capacity to do an act is always a question of law, the condition from which such capacity may be deduced is a question of fact." Buswell on Insanity 174, citing Kempsey v. McGinnis, 21 Mich. 123; Gass v. Gass, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 278; Townshend v. Townshend, 7 Gill (Md.) 10; Walker v. Walker, 34 Ala. 469; Gardner v. Lamback, 47 Ga. 133; Young v. Stevens, 48 N. H. 133; Boardman v. Woodman, 47 N. H. 120.

In Ins. Co. v. Rodel, 95 U. S. 238, JUSTICE BRADLEY said: "The weight of the evidence is for them [the jury] and not for the judge to pass upon. The judge may express his opinion on the subject, and in cases where the jury are likely to be influenced by their prejudices, it is well for him to do so, but it is entirely in his discretion." See also John Hancock Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Moore, 34 Mich. 41; Townshend v. Townshend, 7 Gill (Md.) 10; Hill v. Nash, 41 Me. 585; Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 60; Erwin v. State, 10 Tex. App. 706; Van Zandt v. Mut. Ben. Life Ins. Co., 55 N. Y. 169; Walker v. Walker, 34 Ala. 469; White v. Bailey, 10 Mich. 155; Guettig v. State, 63 Ind. 278; Baldwin's App., 44 Conn. 37; Negroes Jerry v. Townsend, 9 Md. 145; Atwood v. Smith, 11 Ala. 894; Jenkins v. Tobin, 31 Ark. 306.

1. Perkins v. Perkins, 39 N. H. 163; Long v. Long, 4 Ir. Ch. 106; Sutton v. Sadler, 3 C. B. 87; State v. Pike, 49 N. H. 399; U. S. v. Lawrence, 4 Cranch (C. C.) 518; U. S. v. McGlue, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 1; O'Brien v. People, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 274; Lilly v. Waggoner, 27 Ill. 395; State v. Brown, 12 Minn. 538; Symes v. Green, 1 S. & T. 401; Dyce Sombre v. Tunp, 1 Deane Ecc. Rep. 38; Hoge v. Fisher, Pet. (C. C.) 163; Stevens v. Vanclue, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 262; Yardley v. Cuthbertson, 108 Pa. St. 395; Commonwealth v. Kirkbride, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 427; Commonwealth v. Rogers, 7 Met. (Mass.) 500; Boswell v. State, 63 Ala. 307.

In New Hampshire it has been held that when the attesting witnesses to a deed are dead there is no presumption that, if living, they would testify that the grantor was of sane mind at the time of the delivery of the deed. Flanders v. Davis, 19 N. H. 139.

Where, however, a person has been proven to be insane, the presumption is that the insanity continues, and the burden of proof shifts to the party alleging sanity.¹

In an action of ejectment the question being whether the defendant's grantor had the requisite mental capacity to make a deed, the court instructed the jury: "Whether she had native business capacity enough to understand it, or whether she learned from competent sources what would be for her interest, if she got the capacity by education at the time . . . that would be enough." "If she had competent advice from others, so that by their explanation she was made to understand," etc. Held, no error. Doty v. Hubbard, 55 Vt. 278.

The presumption that every man is sane until the contrary is proved is not a presumption of law, but a presumption of fact, or, at the most, a mixed presumption of law and fact. Sutton v. Sadler, 3 C. B. 87; Smith v. Tebbitt, L. R., 1 P. & D. 434; Thornton v. Appleton, 29 Me. 298; Anderson v. Gill, 3 Macqueen S. C. Cas. 197.

The presumption is that one whose life is destroyed by his own act was sane at the time, and therefore that his act was suicide. Moore v. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co., 3 Ins. L. J. 444; 1 Filippin, 363; Jarvis v. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co., 5 Ins. L. J. 507; Wolff v. Conn. etc. Ins. Co., 5 Mo. App. 236. See also Terry v. Ins. Co., 1 Dill. (U. S.) 408; Sadler v. Sadler, 3 C. B. (N. S.) 87.

1. Anderson v. Cranmer, 11 W. Va. 562; Jarrett v. Jarrett, 11 W. Va. 584; Stevens v. Vancleve, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 262; Hoge v. Fisher, Pet. (C. C.) 163; Goodell v. Harrington, 3 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 345; Elkinton v. Brick (N. Y.), 15 Atl. Rep. 391. Chronic insanity is presumed to continue. State v. Brinyea, 5 Ala. 244; Saxon v. Whitaker, 30 Ala. 237; State v. Reddick, 7 Kan. 143; Carpenter v. Carpenter, 8 Bush (Ky.) 283; Ballew v. Clark, 2 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 23; Hoge v. Fisher, Pet. (C. C.) 163; Hix v. Whittemore, 4 Met. (Mass.) 545; Breed v. Pratt, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 115; Sprague v. Duel, 1 Clarke (N. Y.) 90; State v. Spencer, 1 Zab. (N. J.) 197; Ripley v. Babcock, 13 Wis. 425; Prin- cep v. Dyce Sombre, 10 Moo. P. C. 232; White v. Wilson, 13 Ves. 88; Smith v. Tebbitt, L. R., 1 P. & D. 398; Nichols v. Binns, 1 Sw. & Tr. 243; Reg. v. Layton, 4 Cox C. C. 149; Reg. v. Stokes, 3 C. & K. 188; Gen. v. Parnther, 3 Bev. C. C. 441; Cartwright v. Cartwright, 1 Phillimore, 100; Titlow v. Titlow, 54 Pa. St. 216; State v. Wilner, 40 Wis. 304; Crouse v. Holman, 19 Ind. 30; Kennworthy v. Williams, 5 Ind. 375; Townshend v. Townshend, 7 Gill (Md.) 10; Musselman v. Cravens, 47 Ind. 1; Wade v. State, 37 Ind. 180.

The burden of proof, when the issue is on a contract, rests upon the party disputing sanity. Saxon v. Whitaker, 30 Ala. 237; Cotton v. Ulmer, 45 Ala. 378; First Nat'l Bank v. Wirelach, 106 Pa. St. 37; Egbert v. Egbert, 78 Pa. St. 326; Thompson v. Kyner, 65 Pa. St. 368; Werstler v. Custer, 46 Pa. St. 502; Rees v. Stille, 38 Pa. St. 138; Farrell v. Brennan, 32 Mo. 328; State v. Smith, 53 Mo. 267; Trumbull v. Gibbons, 2 Zab. (N. J.) 117; Turner v. Cheesman, 15 N. J. Ch. 243; Jackson v. King, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 207; Bogardus v. Clark, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 623; Jackson v. Van Dusen, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 158; Stevens v. Vancleve, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 262; Dyce Sombre v. Thorpe, 1 Deane Ec. R. 38; Harris v. Ingledees, 3 P. Wms. 91; Phelps v. Hartwell, 1 Mass. 71; Howe v. Howe, 99 Mass. 88; Myatt v. Walker, 44 Ill. 485; Burton v. Scott, 3 Rand. (Va.) 399; Wright v. Jackson, 59 Wis. 569.

The burden of proof is upon the one alleging a lucid interval, where by common report the vendor was supposed to be insane. Rogers v. Walker, 6 Pa. St. 371; Gangwere's Est., 14 Pa. St. 417.

The finding of an inquisition, whether of lunacy or habitual drunkenness, is only prima facie evidence of mental infirmity during the period found, and the burden is on the party asserting capacity. Miskey's App., 107 Pa. St. 611; Willis v. Willis, 12 Pa. St. 159; Noel v. Kerper, 53 Pa. St. 97; Klohs v. Klohs, 61 Pa. St. 245; Hutchinson v. Sautt, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 234; McGinnis v. Commonwealth, 74 Pa. St. 245; Lancaster Co. Bank v. Moore, 78 Pa. 407; Hicks v. Marshall, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 327;

(c.) Opinions of Witnesses.—The opinions of witnesses as to a party's sanity or insanity may be admitted in evidence, but only

Hamilton v. Hamilton, 10 R. I. 358; Hart v. Deaner, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 497; Hoyt v. Adee, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 173; Prinsep & E. India Co. v. Dyce Sombre, 16 Moo. P. C. R. 232; Faulder v. Silk, 3 Camp. 126; Dane v. Kirkwell, 8 C. & P. 683; Frank v. Frank, 2 M. & Rob. 315; Bannatyne v. Bannatyne, 2 Rob. 475; Hume v. Burton, 1 Ridg. P. C. 204; Sayeson v. Sealy, 2 Atk. 412; Hill v. Day, 34 N. J. Eq. 150. But see Redden v. Baker, 86 Ind. 191. Where insanity is relied on as a defence in a criminal trial it cannot be presumed that, if the defendant was insane a short time before he did the act, he was insane when he committed it. People v. Smith, 57 Cal. 130; Overall v. State, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 672.

A deed was executed on the second day of January, the application to the probate court was made on the same day for the appointment of a guardian, and he was appointed on the thirtieth of the same month. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a charge that the presumption in favor of business capacity was changed. Doty v. Hubbard, 55 Vt. 278.

The presumption that insanity, once shown, continues, is a presumption of fact rather than of law. Leache v. State, 22 Tex. App. 279; Smith v. State, 22 Tex. App. 316; Physio-Medical College v. Wilkinson, 108 Ind. 314.

The maxim of the law, "once insane presumed to be always insane," is not an unqualified one. Neither observation nor experience shows us that persons who are insane from the effects of some violent disease do not usually recover the right use of their mental faculties. Such cases are not unusual, and the return of a sound mind may be anticipated from the subsiding or removal of the disease which has prostrated their minds. If, therefore, the proof in a proceeding to annul a deed made by a person to his prejudice, when he is alleged to have been insane, only shows a case of insanity directly connected with some violent disease, the party alleging the insanity must bring his proof of continued insanity to that point of time which bears directly upon the contract impeached, and not content himself with proof of insanity at an earlier period. Turner v. Rush, 53 Md. 65.

The presumption that insanity continues does not apply to cases of occasional or intermittent insanity. Physio-Medical College v. Wilkinson, 108 Ind. 314; State v. Wilner, 40 Wis. 304; Townshend v. Townshend, 7 Gill (Md.) 10; State v. Reddick, 7 Kan. 143; People v. Francis, 38 Cal. 183; Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. 605; White v. Wilson, 13 Ves. 87; Lewis v. Baird, 3 McLean (U. S.) 56; Staples v. Wellington, 58 Me. 453.

It is impossible to fix the amount of mental weakness which will impose the duty of explanation upon a party drawing a will in his own favor. Yardley v. Cuthbertson, 108 Pa. St. 395; Wilson v. Mitchell, 101 Pa. St. 505.

The mere fact that a man commits suicide raises no presumption of his insanity. But it is, nevertheless, very pertinent evidence, especially where the suicide is immediately preceded by the murder of members of his family. Karow v. Continental Life Ins. Co., 57 Wis. 56; Terry v. Ins. Co., 3 Dill. (U. S.) 408.

The burden of proving capacity to make a will rests upon those who propound the will, and, a fortiori, when it appears that the testator was subject to delusions. Smee v. Smee, 5 L. R., P. Div. 84; Comstock v. Hadlyme, 8 Conn. 261; Delafield v. Parish, 25 N. Y. 10; Ean v. Snyder, 46 Bart. (N. Y.) 230; Taff v. Hosmer, 14 Mich. 309; Crowninshield v. Crowninshield, 2 Gray (Mass.) 524; McMechen v. McMecher, 17 W. Va. 683; Hall v. Unger, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 507; Yardley v. Cuthbertson, 108 Pa. St. 395; Davis v. Rogers, 1 Houst. (Del.) 44; Chrisman v. Chrisman (Oreg.), 18 Pac. Rep. 6.

On a feigned issue from chancery, based on a prima facie case of insanity, the burden is on the actor in the suit. Frank v. Frank, 2 M. & Rob. 314.

Where a prisoner sets up insanity as a ground of defence, the burden of proving his innocence on that ground, rests on the party accused. The question in such a case for the jury is not whether the prisoner was of sound mind, but whether he has made out to their satisfaction that he was not of sound mind. Reg. v. Layton, 4 Cox C. C. 149; Weed v. Mut. & C. Ins. Co., 70 N. Y. 561.

The presumption of law that a person found dead has not committed suicide in connection with the facts upon which such opinions are based.¹

does not apply to an insane person. Germain v. Brooklyn Life Ins. Co., 26 Hun (N. Y.) 604.

1. Opinions of Non-expert Witnesses.—

A non-expert can testify to the mental condition of the defendant only after detailing the facts on which he bases his opinion. Shaver v. McCarthy, 110 Pa. St. 339; State v. Pennyman, 68 Ia. 216; American Bible Society v. Price, 115 Ill. 623; Carpenter v. Calvert, 83 Ill. 69; Clapp v. Fullerton, 34 N. Y. 190; Stackhouse v. Horton, 15 N. J. Ch. 205; Harrison v. Rowan, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 585; Dunham's App., 27 Conn. 192; Beaubien v. Cicotte, 12 Mich. 459; Townshend v. Townshend, 7 Gill (Md.) 10; Lucas v. Parsons, 27 Ga. 593; Harris v. Betson, 28 N. J. Eq. 219; Rice v. Rice, 50 Mich. 454; Roe v. Taylor, 45 Ill. 485; Upstone v. People, 109 Ill. 175; Clark v. State, 12 Ohio 483; Turner v. Kansas City etc. R. Co., 23 Mo. App. 12; State v. Hockett, 70 Ia. 442; McRae v. Malloy, 93 N. Car. 154; Eloi v. Eloi, 36 La. An. 563; Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Lathrop, 111 U. S. 612; Parkhurst v. Hosford, 21 Fed. Rep. 827; Commonwealth v. Brayman, 136 Mass. 438; Sage v. State, 91 Ind. 141; Pittard v. Foster, 12 Ill. App. 132; People v. Wreden, 59 Cal. 392; Smith v. Hickenbottom, 57 Ia. 733; Kilgore v. Cross, 1 McCrary (U. S.) 144; Wood v. State, 58 Miss. 741; State v. Newlin, 69 Ind. 108; Yanke v. State, 51 Wis. 464; Webb v. State, 5 Tex. App. 596; McClackey v. State, 5 Tex. App. 320; Insurance Co. v. Rodel, 95 U. S. 232; Wilkinson v. Pearson, 23 Pa. St. 117; Dickinson v. Dickinson, 61 Pa. St. 401; Rambler v. Tryon, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 90; Wogan v. Small, 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 141; Titlow v. Titlow, 54 Pa. St. 216; Pidcock v. Potter, 68 Pa. St. 342; Grant v. Thompson, 4 Conn. 203; Clay v. Clay, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 78, 83; Hardy v. Merrill, 56 N. H. 227 (overruling Boardman v. Woodman, 47 N. H. 120); State v. Archer, 54 N. H. 465; State v. Pike, 49 N. H. 399; Lester v. Pittsford, 7 Vt. 161; DeWitt v. Bailey, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 550; Culver v. Haslam, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 314; Morse v. Crawford, 17 Vt. 499; Forbes v. Caruthers, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 527.

Having stated the appearance, conduct, conversation or other particular facts, from which the state of the testator's mind may be inferred, non-expert witnesses are then at liberty to express their belief or opinion, as the result of those facts. Potts v. House, 6 Ga. 324; Vanauken's Case, 2 Stock. Ch. (N. J.) 186; Hewlett v. Wood, 55 N. Y. 634; Duffield v. Morris, 2 Harr. (Del.) 375; Doe v. Reagan, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 217; Doe v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 348; People v. Sanford, 43 Cal. 29; State v. Klinger, 46 Mo. 224; Holcombe v. State, 41 Tex. 125; Norton v. Moore, 3 Head (Tenn.) 480; Baughman v. Baughman, 32 Kan. 538.

The reason for admitting the testimony of non-experts as to the sanity of a testator seems to arise from the difficulty on the part of the witnesses to describe the appearance and conduct of a person to the jury. Florey v. Florey, 24 Ala. 247; Dennis v. Weekes, 51 Ga. 24; Walker v. Walker, 14 Ga. 242; Fielder v. Collier, 13 Ga. 496; Choice v. State, 31 Ga. 424; Berry v. State, 10 Ga. 511; Dicken v. Johnson, 7 Ga. 484; Foster v. Brooks, 6 Ga. 290; People v. Sanford, 43 Cal. 29; Estate of Brooks, 54 Cal. 471; Kelly v. McGuire, 15 Ark. 555; Beller v. Jones, 22 Ark. 92; Roe v. Taylor, 45 Ill. 486; Sutherland v. Hawkins, 56 Ind. 343; State v. Newlin, 69 Ind. 108; Rush v. Megee, 36 Ind. 69; Waters v. Waters, 35 Md. 531; Williams v. Lee, 47 Md. 321; Stewart v. Redditt, 3 Md. 67; Dorsey v. Warfield, 7 Md. 65; People v. Finley, 38 Mich. 482; Hunt v. Hunt, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 577; Crowe v. Peters, 63 Mo. 429; Pinnney's Will, 27 Minn. 280; Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 65; Holcombe v. State, 41 Tex. 125; Burnham v. Mitchell, 34 Wis. 117; State v. Hayden, 51 Vt. 296; Cram v. Cram, 33 Vt. 15; McDougald v. McLean, 1 Winst. (N. Car.) 120; State v. Pike, 49 N. H. 408; See Reg. v. Oxford, 9 C. & P. 525; Carew v. Johnston, 2 Sch. & Lef. 280; Reg. v. Neville, Craw. & Dix Cas. 96.

The opinion of a witness not an expert as to the mental condition of another is not competent, save in the case of a subscribing witness to a will, although based on what the witness himself saw and heard. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 95 N. Y. 316; DeWitt v. Bailey, 9 N. Y. 371; State v. Geddis, 42 Ia. 268; Van Horn v. Keenan, 28 Ill. 445; Wyman v. Gould, 47 Me. 159; Commonwealth v. Fairbanks, 2 Allen

(d) Expert Witnesses.—Persons who are competent as experts on the subject of insanity may give opinions based on facts observed by themselves, or on hypothetical questions founded upon the evidence appearing in the case.¹

(Mass.) 511; Townsend v. Pepperell, 99 Mass. 40; Commonwealth v. Wil-son, 1 Gray (Mass.) 337; Hastings v. Rider, 99 Mass. 624; State v. Archer, 54 N. H. 465; State v. Pike, 49 N. H. 399; Boardman v. Woodman, 47 N. H. 120; Hickman v. State, 38 Tex. 191; Gibson v. Gibson, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 329; Pidcock v. Potter, 68 Pa. St. 342; Logan v. McGinnis, 12 Pa. St. 27; Dickinson v. Dickinson, 61 Pa. St. 401; Poole v. Richardson, 3 Mass. 330; Chase v. Lincoln, 3 Mass. 237; Needham v. Ide, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 510; Hardy v. Merrill, 56 N. H. 227; Grant v. Thompson, 4 Conn. 203; Robinson v. Adams, 62 Me. 369.

Subscribing witnesses to a will need not state the facts upon which they base their opinion of testator's sanity. Van Huss v. Rainbolt, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 139; Williams v. Lee, 47 Md. 321.

In a suit upon a life policy, where the issue is as to the insanity of the insured at the time he took his life, the opinion of a nonprofessional witness as to his mental condition in connection with a statement of the facts and circumstances within the personal knowledge of the witness upon which his opinion is based, is competent evidence. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Lathrop, 111 U. S. 612; Insurance Co. v. Rodel, 95 U. S. 232; Hathaway v. Nat. Life Ins. Co., 48 Vt. 335; Butler v. St. Louis Life Ins. Co., 45 Iowa 93; Higba v. Guardian etc. Ins. Co., 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 462; Koenig v. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Co., 10 Hun (N. Y.) 558.

A witness should be asked his opinion at the time of the trial. It is no objection to his testimony that his opinion was not formed at the time he obtained the facts. Runyan v. Price, 15 Ohio St. 14; Hathaway v. National Life Ins. Co., 48 Vt. 335.

A non-expert may not testify as to what he thought of a person's condition of mind, but is allowed to characterize as rational or irrational the acts and declarations to which he has testified. Real v. People, 42 N. Y. 282; Sisson v. Conger, 1 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 569; O'Brien v. People, 36 N. Y. 276; Clapp v. Fullerton, 34 N. Y. 190; Hewlett v. Wood, 55 N. Y. 635; Howell v. Taylor, 18 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 214; People v. Lake, 12 N. Y. 358.

1. Opinions of Experts.—Insanity is a defence on the sole ground that it disables the accused from knowing that his act is wrong. If, therefore, a witness is competent to give his opinion as to the mental capacity of the accused, he is competent to give his opinion as to the degree of capacity or incapacity, and whether the incapacity was such as to deprive him of the knowledge of right and wrong. U. S. v. Guiteau, 1 Mackey (U. S.) 498; Chapin on Experts and Expert Testimony, 5.

The law attaches peculiar importance to the opinion of medical men who have the opportunity of observation upon the question of mental capacity. Reeves v. Davis, 80 N. Car. 209; Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 65; Pannell v. Commonwealth, 86 Pa. St. 260; Jarrett v. Jarrett, 11 W. Va. 584.

Upon the question whether a disease had reached such a stage at a given time before it had developed itself, that the subject of it was incapable of making a will or contract, or was irresponsible for his acts, the opinion of his neighbors, men of good common sense, is of more value than that of medical experts. Rutherford v. Morris, 77 Ill. 397; Fairchild v. Bascomb, 35 Vt. 398; Reg. v. Oxford, 9 C. & P. 525; Choice v. State, 31 Ga. 424; Slais v. Slais, 9 Mo. App. 96; Evans v. Knight, 1 Add. 239; Clark v. State, 12 Ohio 483; Carpenter v. Calvert, 83 Ill. 62; Prinsep v. Dyce Sombre, 10 Moo. P. C. 232.

In a case involving the question of the sanity of a testator, his medical adviser, who has never had charge of insane persons, except to advise that certain patients of his were insane and should be taken to an asylum, is competent to express an opinion as to the sanity of the testator. Baxter v. Abbott, 7 Gray (Mass.) 71; Hastings v. Rider, 99 Mass. 625; Van Deusen v. Newcomer, 40 Mich. 90; In re Carmichael, 36 Ala. 514.

See contra, Com. v. Rich, 14 Gray (Mass.) 335; Russell v. State, 53 Miss. 367.

The opinion of a physician who had nad frequent conversations with the decedent for a long time, is admissible on the question of sanity, although witness was not the attending physician. Bitner v. Bitner, 65 Pa. St. 347; Pidcock v. Potter, 68 Pa. St. 342; Davis v. State, 35 Ind. 496; State v. Reddick, 7 Kan. 143.

A Catholic priest, who in his preparation for the priesthood, had studied physiology and psychology that he might be competent to pass upon the mental condition of communicants in his church, is competent to testify as an expert as to the sanity of a testator. Estate of Toomes, 54 Cal. 510.

The disclosure of confidential information acquired in a professional capacity, is not involved in questioning a physician who attended testator and who stated that all his knowledge was derived from what he observed while attending him, as to the mental capacity of testator. Grattan v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.) 43; Staunton v. Parker, 26 N. Y. 56; People v. Stout, 3 Parker Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 670; Fraser v. Jennison, 42 Mich. 206; Briggs v. Briggs, 20 Mich. 34.

Hypothetical Questions.—An expert witness testifying as to a person's mental condition, about whose condition of mind he has no personal knowledge, can only testify with regard to the case as submitted in a hypothetical form, assuming matters embodied in the question to be facts, for the purpose of obtaining the witness' opinion thereon. Yardley v. Cuthbertson, 108 Pa. St. 395; Aiman v. Stout, 42 Pa. St. 114; State v. Coleman, 20 S. Car. 441; Dilleber v. Home Life Ins. Co., 87 N. Y. 79; McMechen v. McMechen, 17 W. Va. 683; Fraser v. Jennison, 42 Mich. 206; Keating's App., Pa. S. Ct. Dig. 1889; Pigg v. State, 43 Tex. 110; Cooper v. State, 23 Tex. 336; Hoge v. Fisher, Pet. (C. C.) 163; Guetig v. State, 66 Ind. 94; McNaghten's Case, 10 C. & T. 200.

It is not the province of an expert to draw inferences of fact from the evidence, but simply to declare his opinion upon a known or hypothetical state of facts, and, therefore, counsel on each side may put to the physicians such states of fact as they deem warranted by the evidence, and have taken their opinions thereon. U. S. v. McGlue, 1 Cart. (U. S.) 1; Negroes, Jerry et al. v. Townshend, 9 Md. 145; People v. Lake, 2 Kern. (N. Y.) 358; People v. Thurston, 2 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 49; People v. McCann, 3 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 272; Coyle v. Commonwealth, 104 Pa. St.

117; Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 9; McClacky v. State, 5 Tex. App. 320; Barker v. Comins, 110 Mass. 477; May v. Bradlee, 127 Mass. 414.

Hypothetical questions submitted to experts must be based upon an assumed state of facts included in the question. In the following cases the form of question has been approved. Dilleber v. Home Life Ins. Co., 87 N. Y. 79; Melendy v. Spaulding, 54 Vt. 517; Dejarretie v. Commonwealth, 75 Va. 867; McMechen v. McMechen, 17 W. Va. 683; State v. Windsor, 5 Harr. (Del.) 512; People v. Sutton, 73 Cal. 243.

"The proper question to be put to the professional witnesses is this: If the symptoms and indications testified to by other witnesses are proved, and if the jury are satisfied of the truth of them, whether, in their opinion, the party was insane, and what was the nature and character of that insanity; what state of mind did they indicate; and what they would expect would be the conduct of such a person in any supposed circumstances." Commonwealth v. Rogers, 7 Met. (Mass.) 500.

In the case of Yardley v. Cuthbertson, 108 Pa. St. 395, the following questions were approved by the supreme court: "Q. Assume that you were called upon the 2nd of December, 1876, to test Mr. John L. Neill's mental capacity prior to a proposed change in a former will, and that the whole of the plaintiff's testimony, as presented in evidence in this issue, was produced before you, I wish to know your opinion of the sufficiency of that evidence to your mind in determining the question of his mental capacity or not?"

"Q. Now, sir, assuming that the testimony of the defendants in this issue, that is of the contestants of the codicil, to be true, and taking that testimony as a whole, will you please state what that testimony indicates as to John L. Neill's mental capacity on the 2nd of December, 1876?"

A witness may be questioned as to a person's mental capacity both before and after the particular time in question. But such testimony is admitted only to show that the special acts testified to are connected either directly or inferentially with the particular time. State v. Felter, 25 Iowa 67; Freeman v. People, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 9; Lake v. People, 1 Park. Cr. Cas. (N. Y.) 495; Kinne v. Kinne, 9 Conn. 102; Grant v. Thompson, 4 Conn. 203; Norwood v. Morrow, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 442; McAllister

v. State, 17 Ala. 434; McLean v. State, 16 Ala. 672; Commonwealth v. Pomeroy, 117 Mass. 148; White v. Graves, 107 Mass. 325.

The hypothetical questions submitted in the following cases were held to be bad. Reed v. State, 62 Miss. 405; State v. Felter, 25 Iowa 67; State v. Coleman, 20 S. Car. 441, Hagadorn v. Conn. etc. Ins. Co., 22 Hun (N. Y.) 249; Fraser v. Jennison, 42 Mich. 206; Yauke v. State, 51 Wis. 464; In re Ames's Will, 51 Iowa 596; May v. Bradlee, 127 Mass. 414; Storer's Will, 28 Minn. 9. A question in the following form, "Suppose all the facts stated by the witnesses to be true, was the testator laboring under an insane delusion, or was he of an unsound mind?" cannot be admitted. The facts upon which his opinion is asked should be put to him hypothetically. Woodbury v. Obear, 7 Gray (Mass.) 467; Van Zandt v. Mut. etc. Ins. Co., 55 N. Y. 169.

Where the facts on one side conflict with the facts on the other, they ought not to be incorporated in one question. Woodbury v. Obear, 7 Gray (Mass.) 467; Fairchild v. Bascomb, 35 Vt. 398; Coye v. Commonwealth, 104 Pa. St. 117; Dexter v. Hall, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 9.

Even where the medical witnesses have attended the whole trial and heard the testimony of the other witnesses as to the facts and circumstances of the case, they are not to judge of the credit of the witnesses or of the truth of the facts testified to by others. Commonwealth v. Rogers, 7 Met. (Mass.) 500. See Yardley v. Cuthbertson, 108 Pa. St. 395.

While the evidence of medical experts is entitled to great weight, yet it is for the jury to determine the value of such evidence. Watson v. Anderson, 13 Ala. 202; McAllister v. State, 17 Ala. 434; Stackhouse v. Horton, 15 N. J. Ch. 205; Prinsep v. Dyce Sombre, 10 Moo. P. C. 232; Pannell v. Commonwealth, 86 Pa. St. 260; Slais v. Slais, 9 Mo. App. 96; Francke v. His Wife, 29 La. Ann. 302; People v. Finley, 38 Mich. 482; Doughty v. Doughty, 3 Halst. Ch. (N. J.) 227.

An expert's opinion based upon representations out of court, can be no more competent testimony than the representations. Wetherbee v. Wetherbee, 38 Vt. 454; Heald v. Thing, 45 Me. 392.

An expert's doubt as to a person's sanity is not competent evidence. Sanchez v. People, 22 N. Y. 147.

The opinion of experts of insanity of other members of the family may be received as tending to show insanity in person whose mental capacity is in issue. Baxter v. Abbott, 7 Gray (Mass.) 71; Fraser v. Jennison, 42 Mich. 206; Coughlin v. Poulson, 2 McArthur (U. S.) 30; Lord v. Beard, 79 N. Car. 5; People v. Montgomery, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 207; State v. Windsor, 5 Harr. (Del.) 512.

A physician, not an expert on the subject of insanity, may testify as to the mental condition of a patient when he has had adequate opportunity to form an opinion, but cannot qualify himself to testify by a single examination. Fayette v. Chesterville, 77 Me. 28. But see State v. Felter, 25 Iowa 67.

The opinion of a distinguished alienist on the probable mental condition of a patient, years before he had come under his observation, though entitled to respect, should be carefully scrutinized before acceptance, in a case where the opinion is avowedly contingent on the correctness of hypotheses which have not been established by the evidence. Bristed v. Weeks, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 529. See Townsend v. Pepperell, 99 Mass. 40.

Opinions of expert medical witnesses as to mental capacity of a testator, expressed in response to a hypothetical question based upon the physical condition of testator, as testified to by a preceding medical witness, are entitled to but little weight as against proof of facts showing mental capacity. Burley v. McGough, 115 Ill. 11.

Positive evidence of the phenomena of insanity is unaffected by a dispute as to causes. Landis v. Landis, 1 Grant (Pa.) 248.

Contestants in a will case cannot read to the jury a passage from a work on mental diseases, enumerating certain causes of insanity. Fraser v. Jennison, 42 Mich. 206; People v. Wheeler, 65 Cal. 77.

In cases where the professional witness has made a personal examination, he must describe the symptoms, and state the circumstances from which he has drawn his conclusions. Gibson v. Gibson, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 329; Dickinson v. Barber, 9 Mass. 225; Hathorn v. King, 8 Mass. 371; Puryear v. Reese, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 21; White v. Bailey, 10 Mich. 155; Pierson v. People, 79 N. Y. 424.

"The expert testimony is introduced at successive stages of a trial, and if

16. Power of Insane Persons to Choose Settlement in a Poor District.

Where a person is so deficient in mental capacity that he is not able to choose a domicile intelligently, and has no estate, he cannot, by mere residence, acquire a settlement in a poor district.¹ The settlement of such a person follows that of the father or guardian.²

the question is so framed as to include generally what has been produced in evidence to a certain period of the trial, it necessarily embraces but a portion of the whole case. The consequence is that at one stage of the trial a hypothesis will admit of one answer by an expert and at a subsequent stage another hypothesis, framed from additional evidence, warrants another, and exactly opposite answer. There is presented an apparent conflict of professional opinion between 'two trained bands of witnesses in battle array against each other,' with the possible and probable result of lowering, in the estimation of the court and jury, the value of the whole expert testimony. We know of no remedy for this except it may be found by changing the rule and permitting experts to express an opinion on a hypothetical question which embraces, in the judgment of the medical expert, all the points bearing on the question of insanity, where this is involved. A medical opinion formed after hearing one side of a case, is deserving of no more respect and has no more value than a verdict of a jury formed in a similar manner, or the opinion of a high court of appeal, the judges of which are, in a sense, experts in law, rendered after argument on one side only." Chapin on Experts and Expert Testimony, 18.

1. A pauper can obtain a settlement if he has a mind capable of having a choice and desire as to his place of abode, and in exercise of that choice goes to and resides in a town voluntarily for the requisite time. In Westmore v. Sheffield, 56 Vt. 239, the following instructions were held erroneous: if the pauper had a mental infirmity, not that he was an idiot, but that from mental infirmity his mind was so far weakened that he was in a state of helplessness and dependence upon the care of his parents, that it was rendered proper and necessary that he should live with his parents, he could not acquire a legal settlement. The correct rule was laid down in Townsend v. Pepperell, 99 Mass. 40, when the court charged that the jury were to consider whether the pauper's mind was diseased "to such an extent as to deprive her of her volition, free will and power of choice, so as to take away from her her self-control over her mind and herself in these particulars, so that she had no power to make choice of a settlement." See also Fayette v. Chesterville, 77 Me. 28; Holyoke v. Haskins, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 20; Upton v. Northbridge, 15 Mass. 237; Concord v. Rumney, 45 N. H. 423.

2. Thus an insane person who lived in his father's family until the age of forty-eight years, and was then sent to an insane hospital, was held to follow the residence of his father acquired while he was an inmate of the hospital. Strong v. Farmington, 74 Me. 46; Islesborough v. Lincolnville, 76 Me. 572.

A father made application to the overseers of the poor of the town in which he lived for aid in taking care of his daughter, who was non compos mentis, and, though more than twenty-one years of age, not emancipated. Such aid was furnished during ten years, until he removed to another town, and, after an interval of a year, similar relief was furnished by that town for a longer period. Held, that the latter town was entitled to recover for the money so paid from the former town; that the daughter could not acquire an independent settlement by residence even for more than five successive years; and that the settlement of the father was not changed from the former town to the latter. Winterport v. Newburgh, 78 Me. 136. See also Sharpe v. Crispin, L. R., 1 P. & D. 611.

The general rule is stated by LORD TENTERDEN, in Rex v. Much Cowarne, 2 B. & Ad. 861, as follows: "A child unemancipated follows the settlement of his father; and the general rule is that until he reaches twenty-one the child is not emancipated unless he becomes the head of another family, or does some act to gain a settlement: but if after twenty-one he separates himself from his father's family, he is emancipated.

17. Insanity as a Defence to Crime.—This subject has been fully treated in the article on CRIMINAL LAW.¹

INSOLVENCY—(See ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS; BANKRUPTCY; COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS; DEBTOR AND CREDITOR; FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES, ETC.).

1. Definition, 168.
2. What Constitutes Generally, 171.
 - a. How Proven, 172.
 - b. How Construed, 173.
3. Power of Congress to Pass, 173.
4. Constitutionality of State Insolvent Laws, 173.
5. Effect of U. S. Bankrupt Laws Upon State Insolvent Laws, 176.
6. Extra Territorial Effect of State Insolvent Laws, 176.
7. Assignment, 177.
 - a. What Passes, 177.
 - b. Foreign, 179.
 - c. When It Takes Effect, 180.
8. Existing Attachments, 180.
 - a. Local, 180.
 - b. Foreign, 182.
9. Petition for, 183.
10. Assignee, 184.
 - a. Who May be, 184.
 - b. Duties and Powers, 186.
 - c. Sale Made by, 188.
 - d. Compensation of, 190.
 - e. Liability of, 191.
 - f. Removal of, 193.
 - g. Continuing Assignor's Business, 193.
11. Rights of Creditors, 196.
 - a. Generally, 196.
 - b. Notice, 198.
 - c. Non-Resident, 200. [200.
 - d. Composition with Creditors, Insolvent or Assignor, 200.
12. Partnership, 202.
13. Corporations, 204. [205.
14. What Claims May be Proved, 205.
15. Fraudulent Conveyance, 208.
 - a. Construction of the Statute of Frauds, 208.
 - b. Void Assignments, 209.
 - c. Void Conveyances and Sales, 211.
 - d. Who Can Set Aside, 211.
16. Preferences, 212.
 - a. At Common Law, 212. [214.
 - b. Statutes and State Decisions, 214.
17. Distribution of Assets, 218.
 - a. To Whom Payable, 218.
 - b. How Paid, 219.
 - c. Notice of Payment, 219.
 - d. Order of Payment, 219. [219.
 - (1) Claims of the United States.
 - (2) Taxes, etc., 220.

Why is twenty-one the period thus fixed by law? Because at that age the party is presumed in law to be competent to take the management of his own affairs. Here the pauper never was, and never will be, competent to do so. The reason, therefore, for which that period is fixed upon in other cases wholly fails in this."

The domicile of one who has removed to a county with intent to reside there is not affected by his becoming insane. Washington Co. v. Mahaska Co., 47 Iowa 57.

In Iowa, residence by a poor or insane person for more than a year in a county is prima facie evidence of a settlement there. Scott Co. v. Polk Co., 61 Iowa 616.

In Pennsylvania it has been held that the settlement of a child upon his arrival at the age of twenty-one is the settlement of his father, but that this is not the rule where the child is of unsound mind upon his arrival at his majority. Montoursville v. Fairfield, 112 Pa. St. 99.

Where an insane pauper was charged upon the township in which his father lived, the removal of the father to another township does not affect her status as a pauper, or make her chargeable on the township to which he removed. Overseers v. Overseers, 3 Pennypacker (Pa.) 107.

Where notice has been served upon a poor district from the quarter sessions to appear and show cause why it should not be certified as the place of settlement of an insane pauper, the order of court, unappealed from, is final and conclusive of the place of settlement, and cannot be tried again in a collateral proceeding. Overseers v. County, 3 Pennypacker 259.

In Maine it has been held that the authorities of a municipality in deciding the question of a party's insanity act judicially, and the copy of their record is the legal evidence of their record. Eastport v. Belfast, 40 Me. 262; Eastport v. East Machias, 35 Me. 402.

1. See Criminal Law, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 715.

- (3) Rent, 221.
- (4) Labor, 221.
- (5) Secured Creditors, 221.
- 19. Discharge, 224.
 - a. Definition, 224. j224.
 - b. To Whom and When Granted,
 - c. When a Valid and Good Defence, 226.

- d. When Invalid, 226.
- e. Effect on Rights of Insolvent, 229.
- f. How Proven, 229.
- g. Must be Pledged, 230.
- h. Extra-Territorial Effect, 230.
- i. New Promise, 230.
- 20. Exemptions, 233.

1. Definition.—Insolvency is the state of a person who from any cause is unable to pay his debts in the ordinary or usual course of trade.¹

1. Levans' Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 294. It is said in Dodge v. Mastin, 17 Fed. Rep. 660, that a bank is solvent when it possesses sufficient assets to pay within a reasonable time all its liabilities through its own agencies; and is insolvent when from the uncertainty of being able to realize on its assets in a reasonable time a sufficient amount to meet its liabilities it makes an assignment, by which the control of its affairs and property passes out of its hands.

A person who has contracted debts to a large amount, of which a large part is already mature, and is without money and confessedly unable to meet his obligations in the usual course of business, is insolvent within the meaning of the Minnesota insolvent law (Laws Minn. 1881, ch. 41); Corliss v. Jewett, 36 Minn. 364.

Insolvency is the inadequacy of a man's funds to the payment of his debts. Herrick v. Borst, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 652.

Insolvency means, that the party whose business affairs are in question is unable to pay his debts as they become due in the ordinary course of his daily transactions.

Insolvency means, when applied to traders, an inability to pay debts as they mature and become due and payable in the ordinary course of business, as persons carrying on trade usually do, in that which is made, by the law of the United States, lawful money and a legal tender, to be used in the payment of debts, without reference to the amount of the debtor's property and without reference to the possibility or probability, or even certainty, that at a future time, on the settlement and winding up of all his affairs, his debts will be paid in full out of his property. Buchanan v. Smith, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 277, 308.

Insolvency means a general inability to answer in the course of business the liability existing and capable of being enforced. In re Bininger, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 264; Brouwer v. Harbeck, 9 N. Y. 594.

Remarks.—The subjects of insolvency, bankruptcy and assignment for the benefit of creditors at the present time bear so close a relation to each other that the distinction between them is not clear. The abolishment of imprisonment for debt has perhaps given aid to this confusion. Acts of insolvency and bankruptcy had their origin in the purpose of aiding an honest but unfortunate trader in escaping imprisonment. In more recent years their object has not been to save from imprisonment, but to encourage the honest and equal distribution of the debtor's assets among his creditors, and to permit the debtor to commence anew, free and unencumbered with debt.

It may, however, be said that at present the term bankruptcy in this country is commonly applied to the condition of a person's effects under a United States law. Insolvency means nothing more or less than bankruptcy under State laws. Bankruptcy and insolvency with us describe a similar condition of affairs, except that the former exists under and by virtue of an act of congress, and the latter by an act of the State legislature.

Assignment for the benefit of creditors differs from bankruptcy and insolvency in that it does not discharge the debtor from his debts, nor from imprisonment for debt, where that is still permitted. Almost every State in the Union has laws providing for assignment for benefit of creditors. Not more than fifteen have laws of insolvency. One thing, however, can be observed, and that is where imprisonment for debt still exists there will be found a law of insolvency. The States of Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, Oregon, South Carolina, Vermont and Washington Territory have full and complete insolvent laws. The states of Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Georgia, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island and some others the laws providing for the assignment for the benefit of creditors bear some resemblance to laws for insolvency. The other States and territories merely provide for assignments for the benefit of creditors.

Distinction—History and Description.—The distinction between bankruptcy and insolvency which is taken by jurists and accurate law writers seems to be little regarded in common use, or even by the court, in many of the United States. In its primary sense, insolvency has a much more extensive signification than bankruptcy. The latter, which is one species or phase of the former, denotes the condition of a trader or merchant who is unable to pay his debts in the course of business. 2 Bell Com. 162; 1 Maul & S. 338; 5 Dowl. & R. 218; Park v. Moore, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 592; Cook v. Hinsdale, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 134. (Hence its derivation from bancus, signifying the broken bench or counter, per Story, 3 Stor. 453, art. Banke, Encyc. [1860], or forme banqueroute, a word of disputed etymology.) The bankrupt, says Blackstone, "is a trader who secretes himself, or does certain other acts tending to defraud his creditors." (Fraud is also implied in France by the use of banqueroutier as distinguished from the simple failli.) And the preamble to the statutes 34 & 35 Hen. 8, ch. 6, (A. D. 1542) is as follows: "Whereas divers and sundry persons, craftily obtaining into their own hands great substances of other men's goods, do suddenly flee to parts unknown, or keep their house, not minding to pay or restore to any of their creditors their debts and duties, but, at their own wills and pleasures, consume the substance obtained by credit of other men for their own pleasure and delicate living, against all reason, equity and good conscience." From these passages it appears that originally the word bankrupt could only be applied to a dishonest merchant or trader. The meaning, however, is now so far changed that no dishonesty is implied from the statutes of bankruptcy; but it is still properly applied only to traders or merchants. Therefore the parliamentary commissioners of 1840 report, "The immediate objection of the bankrupt law is the equal distribution of the debtor's property among his creditors, and the discharge of the honest trade. The object of the law for the relief of insolvent debtors in the personal discharge of honest debtors, prolonged imprisonment for the dishonest and fraudulent and a fair distribution of their present and future acquired property among their creditors." Insolvency, then, as distinguished from strict bankruptcy, is the condition or status of one who is unable to pay his debts. Insolvent laws are distinguished from strict bankruptcy laws by the following characteristics:

Distinguishing Features.—Bankruptcy laws apply only to traders or merchants; insolvent laws, to those who are not traders or merchants. Bankrupt laws discharge absolutely the debt of the honest debtor. Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 230; Williams v. Norris, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; Ward v. Crane, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 394; Van Hook v. Whitlock, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 43; 1 East 11. 4 B, and Ald. 654; Baldw. 296. Insolvency laws discharge the person of the debtors from arrest and imprisonment, but leave the future acquisition of the debtors still liable to the creditor. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; 3 H. & J. 61. Both laws contemplate an equal, fair and honest division of the debtor's present effects among his creditors pro rata. A bankrupt law may contain these regulations, which are generally found in insolvent laws, and an insolvent law may contain those which are common to a bankrupt law, per MARSHALL, C. J., Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; 1 W. & M. 115. And insolvent laws quite coextensive with the English bankrupt system, have not been unfrequent in our colonial and State legislation, and no distinction was ever attempted to be made in the same between bankruptcies and insolvencies. 3 Story, Com. on Const. 11. By art. 1, 8, of the constitution of the United States, "congress shall have power to establish a uniform rule on the subject of . . . bankruptcies through the United States." From a desire of avoiding what seems to be an infringement upon an exclusive right of congress, the laws passed by the various states, with the exception of Texas, upon the subject, whether properly insolvent or bankrupt laws, have been termed insolvent laws. And when congress exercised its constitutional right to pass a bankruptcy law, by the act "to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States, August 19th, 1841, all persons were included within its operation, and were allowed, upon petition, to be discharged from their debts. The law of congress rendered inoperative the State insolvent laws; and, under certain circumstances, traders could be proceeded against upon petition of their creditors. The provision in the bankrupt act rendering it properly an insolvent act, being exclusively in operation, gave rise to serious doubts whether the act was within the purview of the constitution. Kunzler v. Kohaus, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 317, BRONSON, J., dissenting; Thompson v. Alger, 12 Met. (Mass.) 428; Halsted v. Little, 25 Me. 232; Lalor v. Wattles, 3 Gilm. (Ill.) 225, hold the act constitutional, and finally led to its repeal, March 3rd, 1843. Encyc. Brit., Bankruptcy; 2 Kent (12th ed.), 391 n. a. Therefore, in the United States, both the legislation of congress and of the separate States, has tended to obliterate the true distinction between bankruptcy and insolvency. The first bankrupt law, passed by congress in 1800, limited to five years, and expiring with its limitation, was modelled upon the English bankruptcy acts then in operation, and, like them, was only applicable to merchants. See act March 3rd, 1791, 1 Story, Laws 465; act March 2nd, 1799, 1 Story, Laws 630; act March 3rd, 1841, 4 Sharsw. Cont. Sto. L. 2263; act January 7th, 1834, 4 Sharsw. Cont. Sto. L. 2258; act March 2nd, 1837, 4 Sharsw. Cont. Sto. L. 2536.

Besides the power vested in congress on making uniform laws for the regulation of bankruptcies, Const. of U. S., art. 1, 8, it is provided, art. 1, 10, Const. of U. S., that "no State shall pass any . . . law impairing the obligation of contracts" (q. v.). By these clauses it was generally understood that congress possessed the exclusive regulation of both bankruptcy and insolvency. But the question how far the States may legislate upon these subjects came to be fully discussed in the celebrated case of Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 218. The decision of that case recognized much larger powers in the State than had previously been supposed to exist. It was held that the power of making a bankrupt law, which shall be applicable and binding upon creditors and all descriptions of debts, resides in congress. When congress exercises its power it is exclusive, and by its exercise the States' insolvent laws (so called) are rendered inoperative. Griswold v. Pratt, 9 Met. (Mass.) 16; contra, Ziegenfuss's Case, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 463. But that a State insolvent law, whereby it is provided that a debtor, on giving up his property to his creditors, is absolutely discharged from further liability, will, as long as there is no act of congress on bankruptcy, be valid in respect to creditors residing in such State and to contracts made in the State subsequently to the passage of such insolvent law. Cook v. Moffat, 5 How. 295; Brigham v. Henderson, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 430-434. n; Savoie v. Marsh, 10 Met. (Mass.) 594; Bills v. Comstock, 12 Met. (Mass.) 470; Stone v. Tibbetts, 26 Me. 110; Baynard v. Norris, 5 Gill (Md.) 473; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 229. See Cooley, Const. Lim. 360.

Insolvency may be simple or notorious. Simple insolvency is attended by no badge of notoriety. Notorious or legal insolvency, with which the law has to do, is designated by some public act or legal proceeding. This is the situation of a person who has done some notorious act to divest himself of all the property; as, making an assignment, applying for relief, or, having been proceeded against in invitum under bankrupt or insolvency laws. Comegys v. Vasse, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 195; 7 Toullie, n. 45; Domat, liv. 4, tit. 5, nn. 1, 2; 2 Bell Com. 165.

It is with regard to the latter that the insolvent laws (so called) are operative. They are generally statutory provision by which the property of the debtor is surrendered for his debts; and upon this condition, and the asset of a certain proportion of his creditors, he is discharged from all further liabilities. Bartlett v. Prince, 9 Mass. 431; 2 Kent (12th ed.) 321; Ingr. Insolv. 9. This legal insolvency may exist without actual inability to pay one's debts when the debtor's estate is finally settled and wound up. Lee v. Kilburn, 3 Gray (Mass.) 600. Insolvency, according to some of the State statutes, may be of two kinds, voluntary and involuntary. The latter is called the proceeding against the creditors in invitum. Voluntary insolvency, which is the more common, is the case in which the debtor institutes the proceedings, and is desirous of availing himself of the

2. What Constitutes Generally.—A trader is not necessarily insolvent, although his assets may not at a given time satisfy all the demands against him due or to become due.¹ A party whose insolvent laws, and petitions for that purpose.

Description of Proceedings.—Involuntary insolvency is where the proceedings are instituted by the creditors in invitum, and so the debtor is forced into insolvency. The circumstances entitling either debtor or creditor to invoke the aid of insolvent laws are in a measure peculiar to each State. But their general characteristics are as follows: In case of voluntary insolvency, the debtor must owe a certain amount, which amount, with his inability to pay the same, must be set forth in his petition. The creditors are usually entitled to proceed in invitum to petition to have the debtor declared insolvent and his effects taken possession of and distributed upon the following grounds: That the creditor has fraudulently concealed his property, or has conveyed it away, or has allowed it to be attached and to remain so for a certain length of time without dissolving the attachment. The officers before whom insolvency proceedings may be had are, in the different States, judges (who are frequently judges of probate also), commissioner in insolvency, master in chancery, etc. They are appointed for the purpose and proceedings are commenced by petition, which sets forth the facts upon which the claim for relief is founded. Upon a petition of a debtor the facts are commonly taken to be true as set forth in the petition. A messenger or officer of the court is immediately sent to take possession of the property of the debtor, and a call is issued to the various creditors to attend a meeting. In a proceeding in invitum by the creditors the facts alleged must be proved before the warrant can be issued. And the debtor is usually entitled to notice of the proceedings instituted against him, and may appear and show cause, if any he has, why a commission should not issue against him. The first step taken by the magistrate in a case properly before him is to take possession, by means of his officers, of the debtor's effects, which, in some cases, the messenger may be directed to sell for the benefit of all concerned (as in the case of perishable articles, etc.). Then, a meeting of creditors being called, an assignee is chosen in a way provided by statutes. In his choice the creditors are considered both with regard to their number and amount due them. To the assignee all the property is transferred, or ordered to be transferred by the magistrate by virtue of the power by law vested in him. This assignee becomes to all intents and purposes the owner of the property of the debtor, and, as agent for his creditors, has power to sell, dispose of, collect and reduce to money all the property of the debtor. He calls meetings of the creditors, when directed so to do by the magistrate, transacts all the other business and performs all the duties by law imposed upon him. The right of a debtor to a discharge is very different in the various States of America. In some the honest debtor may obtain a discharge, however small a percentage of his debts he may pay. In others he is entitled to discharge upon the payment of a certain percentage, or upon obtaining the assent of a majority of the creditors. It is also provided by the statutes of some of the States that the second or third discharge shall not be obtained at all, or as easily as in the first instance of insolvency.

The refusing to discharge a debtor upon the ground that he has been guilty of fraudulent conduct is also subject to State legislation. Certain acts are made presumptive evidence of fraud; as, the securing of debts within a certain time before the application for the discharge. Such times are regulated by the statutes, and, commonly, the times limited are six months or one year. In some States if a pre-existing debt has been paid or secured within a year prior to being declared insolvent the debtor having reasonable cause at the time to suppose himself insolvent, his discharge will not be granted. Bouv. Law Dict.

1. Bell v. Ellis, 33 Cal. 620.

Who Is Trader.—A livery stable keeper who buys hay and grain and sells, by keeping horses to bait and board, is a trader within the meaning of the insolvent law. Stat. 1878, ch. 74, § 42; Groves v. Kilgore, 72 Me. 489.

A person who, in the course of a few months, is engaged with another in purchasing one hundred cattle, and sells them to the proprietor of an establish-assets are 40 per cent. above his liabilities is not to be considered insolvent.¹

The question of a debtor's solvency depends, not upon the nominal value of his property, but upon whether enough can be realized from a sale of it to discharge his liabilities.²

The rule that a trader who is unable to pay all his debts in the usual ordinary course of business, as persons carrying on a trade usually do, is to be regarded as insolvent, is approved as a general rule.³

To constitute an assignment within the insolvent laws, there must be a trust for some one besides the assignee.⁴

a. How Proven.—Reputation is not admissible to prove insolvency, but facts may be shown from which insolvency may be inferred,⁵ and the mere suing out of an attachment is no evidence of the defendant's insolvency.⁶

ment for "canning" beef, in pursuance of a previous contract with such proprietor, is a trader within the meaning of that term in the insolvency laws of this State. Sylvester v. Edgecomb, 76 Me. 499.

Taking the amendment in connection with the original bill, and construing it most strongly against the pleader, it does not appear that the person sought to be held as a trader was in fact such at the time of the bringing of the bill. So read, the allegations seem to show that he was merely engaged in winding up his business after having sold out, and the case is controlled by the former adjudication on this point. Coates v. Allen, 71 Ga. 787.

The fact that a debtor is under protest and does not pay his debts, does not establish his insolvency. It must be shown that he has not the means of paying his debts, by showing that all his property and credits are not equal in amount to the debts due by him. Kork v. Bringier, 19 La. Ann. 183; Lea v. Bringier, 19 La. Ann. 183; Lea v. Bringier, 19 La. Ann. 197.

Insolvency does not mean an absolute inability of the debtor to pay his debts at some future time, upon a settlement and winding up of all his affairs, but a present inability to pay in the ordinary course of business. Thompson v. Thompson, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 127; Lee v. Kilburn, 3 Gray (Mass.) 594.

A nonpayment of a business check upon presentation is evidence of the insolvency of the drawer. Brown v. Montgomery, 20 N. Y. 287.

Where judgment had been recovered against insolvent debtors, and the judgment creditor had caused money belonging to such debtors to be attached in the hands of a third person, the failure of the debtors to take any proceedings to set aside or "vacate the garnishment," or secure a release therefrom, or to make any assignment within ten days after the levy, under Laws Minn. 1881, ch. 148, § 2, authorized their creditors, on such default, to institute the insolvency proceedings therein provided for. Maxfield v. Wilkins, 38 Minn. 539.

1. Hunt v. His Creditors, 9 Cal. 45.

2. Churchill v. Wells, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 364.

3. Driggs v. Moore, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 440.

But failure to pay a single debt is not evidence of insolvency. Driggs v. Moore, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 440.

4. Wellington v. Sedgwick, 12 Cal. 469.

5. The insolvency of a person at a particular time cannot be proved by general reputation; as, that "he was generally reputed to be insolvent." Stewart v. McMurray (Ala. 1887), 3 So. Rep. 47; Lawson v. Orear, 7 Ala. 785; Branch Bank v. Parker, 5 Ala. 731.

6. Return by the sheriff of another county that he knows of no property in his county on which to levy, is no evidence of insolvency, where it is not shown that the defendant ever resided or had property in that county. Knox v. Bates (Ga.), 5 S. E. Rep. 61; Gustine v. Phillips, 38 Mich. 674.

Reasonable Cause to Believe.—In an action by an assignee to recover money claimed to have been paid in fraud of

b. How Insolvent Laws Construed.—The acts for the relief of insolvent debtors are to be liberally construed.¹

3. Power of Congress to Pass.—(See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND BANKRUPTCY).—The constitution of the United States provides that “congress shall have power to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States.”²

4. Constitutionality of State Insolvent Laws.—A State has authority to pass insolvency laws, provided they do not impair the obligation of contracts or conflict with any existing laws of congress.³

the insolvent law, the question being whether the defendant had reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent. Held, that it was immaterial whether the defendant believed him to be insolvent. But the defendant, having testified to the value of the insolvent's property, he could state what he understood was his indebtedness.

It was in the discretion of the court below to allow the defendant to prove the financial reputation of the insolvent, although he, defendant, did not reside in the same town that the debtor did, but was often there on business. Larkin v. Batchelder, 56 Vt. 416.

It is presumed that all the members of a community must know more or less of a matter which is one of common knowledge in such community. Larkin v. Hapgood, 56 Vt. 597.

On the issue whether a mortgagee had reasonable cause to believe the mortgagor to be insolvent or in contemplation of insolvency, within the Gen. Sts. Ch. 118, §§ 89, 91, evidence that the mortgagee, before he took the mortgage, was himself indebted to other persons, who were pressing him for payment of their debts, and that he exhibited the mortgage to them and offered it as collateral security for those debts, is inadmissible. Purinton v. Chamberlin, 131 Mass. 589.

In replevin against an assignee for benefit of creditors, for goods purchased on fraudulent representations by the assignor as to his solvency, judgments recovered after the assignment are not evidence of insolvency at the time of the purchase, but their admission is harmless when it appears from the schedule and other evidence that the debts upon which they were recovered existed at that time, and the judge charges, without objection, that defendant does not allege that the assignor was then solvent. Underhill v. Ramsey, 2 N. Y. Sup. Rep. 451.

1. Mines v. Lockett, 20 Ga. 474.

2. Const. U. S., art. 1, § 8. See BANKRUPTCY, 2 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law 67.

3. Bank of Tenn. v. Horn, 17 How. (U. S.) 157; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223.

Distinctions and Power to Pass Discussed.—In considering this question it must be recollected that previous to the formation of the new constitution we were divided into independent States, united for some purposes, but in most respects sovereign. These States could exercise almost every legislative power, and among others, that of passing bankrupt laws. When the American people created the national legislature, with certain powers enumerated, it was neither necessary nor proper to define the powers retained by the States. These powers proceed not from the people of the United States, but from the people of the several States, and remain after the adoption of the constitution what they were before, except so far as they may be abridged by that instrument. In some instances, as in the making of treaties, we find an express prohibition; and this goes to show the sense of the convention to have been that the mere grant of a power of congress did not imply a prohibition on the State to exercise the same power. But it has been supposed that the concurrent power of legislation extended to every possible case in which its exercise by the States has not been expressly prohibited. The confusion resulting from such a practice would be endless . . . Whenever the terms in which a power is granted to congress or the nature of the power required that it should be exercised exclusively by congress, the subject is as completely taken from the State legislatures as if they had been expressly forbidden to act on it.

The peculiar terms of the grant certainly deserves notice. Congress is not merely authorized to pass laws, the op-

The power of congress to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcy throughout the United States does not exclude eration of which shall be uniform, but to establish uniform laws on the subject throughout the United States. This establishment of uniformity is, perhaps, incompatible with State legislation on that part of the subject to which the acts of congress may extend. But the subject is divisible in its nature into bankrupt and insolvent laws, though the line of partition between them is not so distinctly marked as to enable any person to say with positive precision what belongs exclusively to the one and not to the other class of laws. It is said, for example, that laws which merely liberate the person are insolvent laws, and those which discharge the contract are bankrupt laws. But if an act of congress should discharge the person of the bankrupt, and leave his future acquisitions liable to creditors, we should feel much hesitation in saying that this was an insolvent, not a bankrupt act; and, therefore, unconstitutional. Another distinction has been stated, and has been uniformly observed. Insolvent laws operate at the instance of the imprisoned debtor; bankrupt laws, at the instance of a creditor. But should an act of congress authorize a commission of bankruptcy to issue on the application of the debtor, a court would hardly be warranted in saying that the law was unconstitutional, and the commission a nullity. When laws of each description may be passed by the same legislature, it is unnecessary to draw a precise line between them. The difficulty can only arise in our complex system, where the legislation of the Union possesses the power of enacting bankrupt laws, and those of the States the power of enacting insolvent laws. If it be determined that they are not laws of the same character, but are as distinct as bankrupt laws and laws which regulate the course of descents, a distinct line of separation must be drawn and the power of each government marked with precision. But all perceive that this line must be in a great degree arbitrary. Although the two systems have existed apart from each other, there is such a connection between them as to render it difficult to say how far they may be blended together. The bankrupt law is said to grow out of the exigences of commerce, and is applicable solely to traders; but it is not easy to say who must be excluded from or who may be included within this description. It is, like every other part of the subject, one in which the legislature may exercise an extensive discretion.

This difficulty of discriminating with any accuracy between insolvent and bankrupt laws, would lead to the opinion that a bankrupt law may contain those regulations which are generally found in insolvent laws, and that an insolvent law may contain those which are common to a bankrupt law. If this be correct, it is obvious that much inconvenience would result from that construction of the constitution which should deny to the State legislature the power of acting upon this subject, in consequence of the grant to congress. It may be thought more convenient that much of it should be regulated by State legislation, and congress may purposely omit to provide for many cases to which their power extends. It does not appear to be a violent construction of the constitution, and is certainly a convenient one, to consider the power of the States as existing over such cases as the laws of the Union may not reach. But be this as it may, the power granted to congress may be exercised or declined, as the wisdom of that body shall decide. If, in the opinion of congress, uniform laws concerning bankruptcies should and ought to be established, it does not follow that partial laws may not exist or that State legislation on the subject must cease. It is not the mere existence of the power, but its exercise, which is incompatible with the exercise of the same power by the States. It is not the right to establish these uniform laws, but their actual establishment, which is inconsistent with the partial acts of the States. It has been said that congress has exercised the power, and by so doing has extinguished the power of the States, which cannot be revived by repealing the law of congress.

We do not think so. If the right of the States to pass bankrupt laws is not taken away by the mere grant of power to congress, it cannot be extinguished. It can only be suspended by the enactment of a general bankrupt law. The repeal of the law cannot, it the right of the State to legislate upon the subject, except where the power is actually exercised by congress, and the State laws conflict with those of congress.¹

A State insolvent law is valid, even though it was enacted while the national bankrupt law is in force, but it cannot be enforced until the national act is repealed.²

Where a State has an insolvent law in force, and congress passes a bankrupt act, the State law is suspended during the continuance of the bankrupt law.³ On the question of the constitutionality of State insolvent laws, the decisions of the supreme court of the United States are final and conclusive.⁴ But no State insolvent law can be valid if it impairs the obligation of a contract.⁵

is true, confer the power on the States, but it removes the disability to its exercise which was created by act of congress. C. J. MARSHALL, in Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122.

1. Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213; Boyle v. Zacharie, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 348; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122.

Act. Minn. March 7th, 1881, providing that when the property of a debtor is seized by attachment or execution, he may assign all his property for the equal benefit of all his creditors who shall file releases of their claims, and that thereupon his property shall be equitably distributed, does not violate the constitution of the United States by impairing the obligation of contracts, when applied to debts incurred after its passage. HARLAN, J., dissenting. Denny v. Bennett, 9 Supreme Ct. Rep. (1889) 134.

The statute is not invalid as to an attaching creditor who is a citizen of another State, as each State may regulate remedies as to property within its jurisdiction, though it could not discharge the debt itself to such a creditor who does not appear and participate in the assignment. HARLAN, J., dissenting. Id.

2. Tua v. Carrierre, 117 U. S. 201.

If those laws (insolvent laws) had been enacted then for the first time they would have been so far as inconsistent with the bankrupt act, inoperative while the act remained in force, but upon its repeal would have come into operation. The enactment of the insolvent law during the life of the bankrupt act would have been merely tantamount to a provision that the former should take effect on the repeal of the latter. WOOD, J., in Tua v. Carrierre, 117 U. S. 201.

3. Ward v. Procter, 7 Met. (Mass.) 318; Lothrop v. Foundry Co., 128 Mass. 120; Orr v. Lisso, 33 La. Ann. 476.

4. Boyle v. Zacharie, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 635.

5. Validity of a State insolvent law which discharges a debtor from all his liability from any debt contracted before such law was passed, on his surrendering all his property in the manner it prescribes, is void, as it impairs the obligation of the contract. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; Boardman v. De Forest, 5 Conn. 1; Farmers' etc. Bank v. Smith, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 131; Roosevelt v. Cebra, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 108; Kimberly v. Ely, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 451; Betts v. Bagley, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 572; Smith v. Mead, 3 Conn. 253; Hammett v. Anderson, 3 Conn. 304; Hemstead v. Reed, 6 Conn. 480.

Under the Illinois voluntary assignment act (1 Starr & C. St. 1303), which declares (section 13) that all preferences "in any assignment hereafter made" shall be void, when an insolvent debtor, realizing that he can no longer continue business, determines to yield the dominion of his entire estate, and, in execution of that purpose, executes in favor of certain of his creditors, who understand his purpose, confessions of judgment, conveyances, bills of sale, etc., at short intervals, and as parts of one transaction, such instruments constitute an assignment, within the meaning of the statute, and the preferences are void. White v. Cotzhausen, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1889, 309.

But where the insolvent law is only to effect debts contracted after its enactment, it is valid. Jaques v. Marquand, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 497; Northern Bank v. Squires, 8 La. Ann. 318; Wilson v. Matthews, 32 Ala. 332; Smith v.

5. Effect of the United States Bankrupt Laws Upon State Insolvent Laws—(See BANKRUPTCY; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; CONFLICT OF LAWS).—The passage of a national bankrupt law suspends the action and effect of all State insolvent laws so far as they may conflict with such national bankrupt law,¹ and upon the repeal of the act of congress the State insolvent laws enacted before and during the existence of the act of congress, become of full effect and power.²

Proceedings in insolvency commenced under State insolvent laws before the United States bankrupt law was enacted, are unaffected by it.³

6. Extra Territorial Effect of State Insolvent Laws—(See CONFLICT OF LAWS).—Insolvent laws of a State have no extra territorial operation; they can act only upon the person and property within the State,⁴ but the United States courts in their adjudications

Parsons, 1 Ohio 236; Baker v. Wheaton, 5 Mass. 509; Mather v. Bush, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 233; Hicks v. Hotckiss, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 297; Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 16; Shaw v. Robbins, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 369; Ogden v. Saunders, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 213.

But State laws which abolish imprisonment for debt, or discharge debtors from debt, or discharge debtors from imprisonment, act merely upon the remedy and do not impair the obligation of contract. The right of imprisonment is no part of the contract. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122-199; Mason v. Haile, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 370; Beers v. Haughton, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 329; Woodhull v. Wagner, Baldw. (U. S.) 296; Lee v. Gamble, 3 Cranch (C. C.) 374.

An insolvent law passed by a State legislature, discharging a person from his debts, is valid as to contracts made after its passage between citizens of the same State, but has no force as to contracts made out of the State, and to which a citizen of another State is a party. Donnelly v. Corbett, 7 N. Y. 500.

1. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; Bank of Tenn. v. Horn, 17 How. (U. S.) 157; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223; Griswold v. Pratt, 9 Met. (Mass.) 16.

A person arrested on a State process gave bond to apply for the benefit of the State insolvent law, and was released. He applied for the benefit of the bankrupt law, and was declared a bankrupt. Before discharge he applied for an injunction to stay proceedings in the State courts, which was refused.

Held, that this release was no satisfaction of the execution. Ex parte Rank, Crabbe 493.

2. Tua v. Carriers, 117 U. S. 201; Atkins v. Spear, 8 Met. (Mass.) 490; Winch v. James, 68 Pa. St.; Re Damon, 70 Me. 153.

In Boedefeld v. Reed et al., 55 Cal. 299, it was held that the operation of the insolvent law was suspended by the bankrupt act, in the sense that no proceeding could be commenced for a discharge under it while a general bankrupt law existed; but, upon the repeal of the bankrupt act the insolvent law revived, and came again into operation, as if it had never been suspended; and its provisions apply as well to indebtedness contracted while it was suspended as to indebtedness contracted after it again came into operation.

3. Longis v. His Creditors, 20 La. Ann. 15; Minot v. Thacher, 7 Met. (Mass.) 348; Judd v. Ives, 4 Met. (Mass.) 401.

Whether the New Jersey bankrupt law was suspended was a query in Steelman v. Mattux, 36 N. J. L. 344.

The insolvent law of 1878 was a valid law when enacted, though its operation was suspended by the United States bankrupt law then existing. When the repeal of the bankrupt law took effect the insolvent law went into operation, and took cognizance of all acts within its provisions done while it was so suspended, and applied to contracts made during that time. Palmer v. Hixon, 74 Me. 447.

4. Kennedy v. Bank of Georgia, 8 How. (U. S.) 586; Springer v. Foster, 2 Story (U. S.) 383; Poe v. Duck, 5 will enforce them in actions arising in States where they exist.¹

State insolvent laws cannot discharge the contracts of citizens of other States.² The circumstance that the contract was to be performed in the State does not take it out of the operation of the rule.³ A non-resident, by voluntarily making himself a party to proceedings under insolvent laws, abandons his extra territorial immunity from the operation of such laws, and is bound by them the same as citizens of the State.⁴ But when he does not so make himself a party he is not affected.⁵

7. Assignment—a. What Passes.—Under an assignment, all the property passes to the assignee, to which the assignor had the legal or equitable title;⁶ but property held in trust does not pass by the assignment;⁷ and it will not pass any interest in a chose in action which was before voluntarily assigned by the in-

Md. 1; Fisher v. Wheeler, 5 La. Ann. 271.

Rights of Assignee.—An insolvent debtor, having an office in Vermont, where he resided, and one in New York, transferred, through his agent in New York, property situated there, to defendant, a Vermont creditor, in fraud of the Vermont insolvency laws. Held, that his assignee could maintain trover for the value of the property, though the transfer was valid in New York. Crampton v. Valido Marble Co. (Vt.), 15 Atl. Rep. 153.

1. Davidson v. Smith, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 346.

2. Clark v. Van Reimsdyk, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 153; Suydam v. Broadnax, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 67; Cook v. Moffat, 5 How. (U. S.) 295; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 223; Baldwin v. Bank, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 534.

State legislatures may pass insolvent laws provided there be no act of congress establishing a uniform system of bankruptcy conflicting with their provisions, and provided that the law itself be so framed that it does not impair the obligations of contracts. Certificates of discharge, however, granted under such a law cannot be pleaded in bar of an action brought by a citizen of another State in the courts of the United States, or of any other State than that where the discharge was obtained, unless it appears that the plaintiff proved his debt against the defendant's estate in insolvency, or in some manner became a party to the proceedings. Insolvent laws of one State cannot discharge the contracts of citizens of other States, because such laws have no extra territorial operation, and consequently the tribunal sitting under them, unless in case where a citizen of such other State voluntarily becomes a party to the proceedings, has no jurisdiction of the case. CLIFFORD, J., in Gilman v. Lockwood, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 411.

3. Baldwin v. Bank of Neubery, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 234.

4. Clay v. Smith, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 411.

Voluntary Appearance.—If a foreign creditor, either by himself or his attorney, voluntarily unites in the recommendation of a person as trustee for the insolvent, it is such an acquiescence in the insolvent laws of the State as will place him on the same footing with the domestic creditors and compel him to take the dividend of the assets as they do. Jones v. Horsey, 4 Md. 306; Judd v. Porter, 7 Greenl. (Me.) 337; Felsh v. Bugbee, 48 Me. 9; Springer v. Foster, 2 Story (U. S.) 387; Pratt v. Chasse, 44 N. Y. 597; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 718; Hanley v. Hunt, 27 Iowa 303; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 273.

5. Beer v. Hooper, 32 Miss. 246.

6. Bank of Tennessee v. Horn, 17 How. (U. S.) 157; Kip v. Bank of New York, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 63.

An assignment by a debtor of "all his estate, real and personal," pursuant to an insolvent act, passes the title to all the lands which he owns without further description and whether mentioned in the inventory or not. Roseboom v. Mosher, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 61; Marsh v. Wendover, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 69; Cohen v. Gibbes, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 206; Hunt v. Danforth, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 592.

7. Kennedy v. Strong, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 289.

Land to which an insolvent holds the legal title upon an implied trust in favor of another, does not pass to the solvent.¹ In some instances it has been held that the property passed, whether the assignee acted or not.²

The future earnings of a public officer do not pass by the assignment.³

The assignee takes the property assigned subject to all the equities which affected the debtor.⁴

A contingent claim is an assignable interest.⁵ Also a vessel at sea can be assigned by the law of the place where it is registered.⁶ A trade mark usually does not pass by assignment.⁷ Neither will a claim against a railroad corporation for injury to the person pass by an assignment under the insolvent laws.⁸ It assignee as "property of the debtor which might have been taken on execution," within the meaning of the Pub. Sts., ch. 157, § 46, although no declaration of trust has been recorded. Low v. Welch, 139 Mass. 33.

1. Hopkins v. Banks, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 650.

2. Lore v. Hill, 3 Harr. (Del.) 530; Golden's Appeal, 110 Pa. St. 581.

3. Grow v. His Creditors, 31 Cal. 328. See Milnor v. Metz, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 221.

4. Palmer v. Thayer, 28 Conn. 237.

The assignee takes no better title than the debtor to land held by the latter under a conveyance fraudulent against the creditors of the grantor. Pratt v. Wheeler, 6 Gray (Mass.) 520.

Goods bought by a retail dealer upon a condition that the property shall not vest in him until they are paid for, but with an understanding between him and the vendor that they are to go into his store and to be sold by him in the regular course of trade, will not pass to his assignee in insolvency or for the benefit of creditors. Rodgers v. Whitehouse, 71 Me. 222.

5. Hunter v. U. S., 5 Pet. (U. S.) 173.

6. Crapo v. Kelley, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 610.

7. Bradley v. Norton, 33 Conn. 157.

The right to use trade marks, in connection with a manufacturing business, which are not personal in their character, but designate merely the place or establishment at which the goods are manufactured, passes to the assignee in insolvency of the owner, under the Gen. Sts., ch. 118, § 44. Warren v. Warren Thread Co., 134 Mass. 247.

8. Right of Action for a Tort Does Not Pass.—The decision of this question depends upon the construction of the original insolvent law. St. 1838, ch.

163, § 5. One or two phrases in that section might seem to imply that anything which could be assigned by the debtor would pass by an assignment under that section. Such assignment does "vest in the assignees all the property of the debtor, both real and personal," incorporeal as well as corporeal, "all debts due to the debtor or to any person for his use and all liens and securities therefor, and all his rights of action for any goods or estates, real or personal." But an action for damages is not property, nor a right of property, nor a debt until it is reduced to judgment, and then it passes because it has assumed the form of a debt. The reason is, a claim for damages, when liquidated, must be liquidated in money, and a judgment for the money is, to all intents and purposes, a debt or specialty. The "right of action" which passes to the assignee by the statute are qualified by the addition "for any goods or estates." A similar qualification is embraced in the further provision of the same section, allowing the assignees to be admitted to prosecute actions in the name of the debtor at the time of the assignment. These provisions show the intention of the statute, in accordance with the reason of the thing and with some cases under the English bankrupt laws that everything should pass which forms part of the assets of the debtor, but not any right of action for personal damages.

Then what was the condition of the claim when the assignment was made?

The verdict being against the plaintiff was clearly no liquidation of his claim, and we are of the opinion that even if the verdict had been in his favor, if there had been no judgment on it, and especially if the exceptions had been allowed, which might occasion it to be set aside, it would not have has been held that a patent right passes to the assignee.¹ Property sold conditionally and delivered without a legal record of the lien, passes to the assignee.² A claim against the United States belongs to the assignee. Property acquired by an insolvent debtor subsequently to his petition, by gift, descent or devise, or in the course of distribution, does not pass to the assignee.³

A claim of the debtor against another as surety passes to the assignee.⁴

b. Foreign—(See FOREIGN ASSIGNMENT).—Assignments preferring creditors do not pass property in any state except in the state where made;⁵ likewise the assignment of property under the insolvent laws of one State has no extra territorial force as against the bona fide purchaser of such property in another.⁶

passed to the assignee. In order to pass by the assignment it must be a definite judgment, a judgment upon which a suit might have been brought.

Stone v. Boston etc. R. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 539.

1. Ex parte Keach, 14 R. I. 571.

Under an assignment of the estate of an insolvent debtor under Pub. St. Massachusetts, ch. 157, § 44, letters patent owned by the debtor pass to the assignee, notwithstanding they are, under the laws of that State, exempt from attachment; and a bill in equity can be maintained to compel an assignment of the same to the assignee in insolvency. Barton v. White, 144 Mass. 281.

2. Collender Co. v. Marshall, 57 Vt. 232.

3. Hall v. Gill, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 325.

4. Hunter v. United States, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 173.

Insolvent act California, 1880, § 17, provides that "the clerk of court shall . . . assign and convey to the assignee all the estate, real and personal, of the debtor." The clerk in an assignment, after styling himself "party of the first part," proceeded to convey "all the property, etc., of the said party of the first part." The instrument, which is entitled "In the matter of A. B., an insolvent debtor," recites the insolvency proceedings, and that it is made by the assignor as clerk of the court, and that it is in obedience to the insolvent act. Held, that it is a valid assignment of the insolvent's property, and that the words "party of the first part" mean the clerk acting under the statute as assignor. Mogk v. Peterson, (Cal.) 17 Pac. Rep. 446.

5. King v. Johnson, 5 Harr. (Del.) 31.

The assignee of an insolvent debtor, appointed under the laws of one State does not so far represent creditors as to be able to avoid a conveyance of personal property in another State good as against the insolvent but invalid as against creditors, by the laws of such other State. Betton v. Valentine, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 168.

6. Hoyt v. Thompson, 19 N. Y. 207.

Lex Loci Applies. The rule that a voluntary conveyance of personal property, valid under the laws of the State where made, will operate to transfer the property wherever it may be situated, does not extend to statutory transfers in invitum, in proceedings under State bankrupt or insolvent laws. Such a transfer affects only property situated within the territory of the State under whose laws it is made; and a title acquired under foreign bankruptcy or insolvent proceedings will not prevail against the rights of attaching creditors, under the laws of the State where the property is situated.

Kelly v. Crapo, 45 N. Y. 86.

Kelly v. Crapo, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 610.

Proceedings by a Canadian court under a Canadian insolvent act had against a person while he was in the State of Michigan, cannot, by mere force or operation of the orders and decrees therein made and in the absence of any transfer by the insolvent himself, vest the Canadian assignee with title to promissory notes in Michigan which have never been within the territorial jurisdiction of the Canadian court or subject by any process to its control, and the fact that the insolvent afterwards went to Canada and submitted himself to the jurisdiction of that court would not help the matter.

Wood v. Parsons, 27 Mich. 159.

c. When It Takes Effect.—The title in the property vests in the assignee—where a trial is required, from the time of the adjudication;¹ when it is made by deed, it vests from the time of the deed.² It has no retroactive effect.³ It sometimes takes effect at the time the assignee takes the oath required by statute.⁴

8. Existing Attachments—a. Local.—Where there is no statute to the contrary, an attachment is not affected by an assignment for the benefit of creditors, or by proceedings in insolvency. Attached property will be first applied to the payment of the creditor's claim for which it is procured, and the surplus will pass into the hands of the assignee.⁵

Some States have passed statutes making attachments made within a certain length of time prior to assignment or insolvency proceedings void.⁶

An insolvent debtor, resident of Illinois, made a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The assignment included real estate owned in Kansas. The assignee, with the approval of the county court of the county, in Illinois, in which the assignment was made, sold the land in Kansas. Held, the purchaser at such a sale got no title, the land not having been sold in accordance with the provisions or the act to regulate voluntary assignments for the benefit of creditors, in force in Kansas, nor by the order or judgment of any court of that state. Thompkins v. Adams, (Kan.) 20 Pac. Rep. (1889) 530.

1. Goss v. Cardell, 53 Vt. 447.

Sometimes it dates from the date of the petition. Adams v. Lewis, 31 Conn. 501.

2. Ennis v. Hulse, Wright (Ohio) 259.

3. Ennis v. Hulse, Wright (Ohio) 259.

4. Hoag v. Hoag, 35 N. Y. 469.

5. See ATTACHMENTS, vol. 1, p. 93.

Fees of Attaching Officer.—An officer attaching an animal has a right to charge for its keeping while in his custody in his bill of fees. The expense thus incurred is a part of the costs, which become a preferred claim against the estate of the debtor if the attachment is vacated by his going into insolvency.

The officer looks to the attaching creditor for his fees, and the creditor presents the claim for the costs in his own name against the assigned estate.

Neither the officer nor the attaching creditor has any lien upon the property, as against the trustee in insolvency, which authorizes them to hold possession of it till the costs are paid. Boughton v. Crosby, 47 Conn. 577.

An attachment creditor, who presents his claim to his debtor's assignee for settlement, waives all objections to the regularity of the assignment, no actual fraud being charged. Littlejohn v. Turner (Wis.), 40 N. W. Rep. 621.

6. See statutes of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Minnesota, etc.

Property of the defendant in an action was attached more than four months before the institution by him of insolvency proceedings. He was defaulted pending such proceedings. The plaintiff thereupon suggested these proceedings, and, before the St. of 1885, ch. 59, took effect, obtained a special judgment against the property attached. Execution issued, reciting the judgment for the plaintiff for the amount of the debt and costs, to be levied only on the property attached. The execution was returned satisfied in part only. Held, that the judgment was a final judgment; and that the plaintiff was not entitled to have a further judgment entered, or process issued, for the unsatisfied balance of his debt. Gay v. Raymond, 140 Mass. 69.

Subsequent Attachment.—Where proceedings by garnishment had been instituted by service of process upon a garnishee who was in fact a debtor to the defendant in the principal action, and such debtor, being insolvent, within 10 days thereafter, and before disclosure by the garnishee, in good faith made an assignment under Laws 1881, ch. 148, § 1, and his property was thereupon duly turned over to the assignee, held, that the assigned property thereby passed under the control of the district court of the proper county, and the assignment was not to be deemed void, so as to subject the property to attachment, because it is made to appear in the suit between the attaching creditor and the assignee, involving the title of the latter to the assigned property, that the garnishee would have disclosed that the amount due from him to the insolvent was within the statutory limit. North Star Boot & Shoe Co. v. Lovejoy, 33 Minn. 229.

The act of March 31st, 1876, dissolves attachments levied within two months before the filing of a petition in insolvency, and in such case it is competent for the court, upon the motion of the assignee, to direct its officer to release the property from its process. Baum et al. v. Raphael, 57 Cal. 361.

Trustee in Insolvency and of Attaching Creditors.—Under art. 48, § 7, of the Code, property conveyed by deed from a debtor to a trustee, professedly for the benefit of his creditors (which deed, in proceedings instituted by an attaching creditor, was found to be fraudulent), does not vest in the grantee, but in the insolvent trustee, the debtor having some time after the execution of the deed applied for the benefit of the insolvent law; and if any of the property conveyed by the deed has been disposed of by the grantee, and put beyond the control of the insolvent trustee, the proceeds must take its place, and rightfully belong to the insolvent trustee for distribution, according to law and the principles of equity under order of court. The credits or proceeds of the property so conveyed, which have been condemned by judgments in attachments on original process, laid in the grantee's hands, entered after the execution of the deed, but before the appointment of the insolvent trustee, or to condemn which any proceedings in attachment are pending, of right belonging to the insolvent trustee, injunction was properly granted, restraining further proceedings upon the judgments of condemnation or pending attachments, in order that all questions of priority and lien might be determined according to the principles established by art. 48, § 10, of the Code; and whatever rights attaching creditors might have acquired, the court would protect in the distribution of the estate. Lynch v. Roberts, Trustee, 57 Md. 150.

The State legislature, while the National Bankrupt act was in force, passed an act providing for the equal distribution of the estates of insolvent debtors. Held, that the State act, although in a degree dormant during the existence of the national act, took such vitality as was not inconsistent with that act, and was not void.

After the repeal of the national act, creditors of an insolvent debtor brought actions against him to recover debts incurred while that act was in force and before the State act was passed, and procured his property to be attached therein. Within sixty days after such attachments were made, the debtor was adjudged insolvent, and afterwards an assignee was appointed, and the debtor's property was conveyed to the assignee, who demanded it of the attaching officer. Held, that as the right to attach was not a part of the contract, but a right to a remedy for the breach of it, the legislature might provide that in case a debtor had not sufficient property to pay all his debts it should be equitably distributed among all his creditors, without violating that provision of the constitution that forbids the passing of a law "impairing the obligation of contracts"; and that therefore the assignee was entitled to possession of the property.

Held, also, that at the time the State act was passed the creditors had no absolute priority that they could assert by attachment; for that under the National Bankrupt act, which was in force when the debts were incurred, they would have been bound, in case of bankruptcy of the debtor, to release their attachments and surrender the property for distribution. Baldwin v. Buswell, 52 Vt. 57.

The St. of 1875, ch. 68, § 1, providing that, when any defendant in a civil action, who has dissolved an attachment made therein, is adjudged a bankrupt, the court may enter a special judgment, to enable the plaintiff to proceed against the sureties on the bond given to dissolve the attachment, does not apply to a defendant against whose estate a warrant in insolvency has been issued; and the St. of 1880, ch. 246, § 8, amending § 1 of the St. of 1875, by inserting after the word "bankrupt" the words "or against whose estate a warrant in insolvency has already been or

b. Foreign.—(CONFLICT OF LAWS, AM. & ENG. ENCY. OF LAW, vol. 3, p. 618).—The rule in the United States seems to be that a foreign bankrupt assignment is ineffective as against attaching creditors, whether it is movable or immovable property,¹ and some courts have held that this rule applies to subsequent as well as existing attachments;² but the general rule seems to be that it applies only to existing attachment.³

9. Petition for.—A petition in insolvency must allege the facts upon which the application is grounded. The facts must be specifically set forth, not broadly and vaguely stated.⁴ It should show the date of each debt set out as those contracted before the law was passed.⁵

afterwards is issued," does not apply to a bond given before the statute took effect, the condition of which is to pay the amount recovered "after any special judgment entered in accordance with" the St. of 1875, ch. 68, § 1. Lincoln v. Leshure, 132 Mass. 40.

Under the Gen. Sts., ch. 118, § 45, providing that the judge, before whom proceedings in insolvency are pending, may order the lien created by an attachment of the property of an insolvent debtor to continue, upon application made by any person interested "on or before the day of the third meeting of creditors," taken in connection with the provision of § 75, that the third meeting of the creditors is "to be held within six months from the time of the appointment of the assignee," the application must be made on or before the day provided by law for the holding of the third meeting, and cannot be made at an adjournment of that meeting. Nelson v. Winchester, 133 Mass. 435.

Proceedings under § 59 of the insolvent act of 1878 (in the cases of persons whose debts do not exceed $300) do not dissolve attachments. Such assignments only as are provided for in § 30 will have that effect. Collins v. Chase, 71 Me. 434.

An assignment in insolvency, made since the St. of 1880, ch. 246, § 7, took effect, does not dissolve an attachment of the debtor's property made more than four months before the first publication of notice of the issuing of the warrant, although such notice was published before the enactment of the statute. O'Neil v. Harrington, 129 Mass. 591.

The bringing of a bill in equity and the issuing of an injunction, under the power a court of equity has to compel or restrain conveyances of property, or to reach and apply in payment of a debt the property, legal or equitable, of a debtor, do not constitute an attachment of property, within the Pub. Sts., ch. 157, § 47, authorizing, in certain cases, the lien created by the attachment to continue where the attachment would otherwise be dissolved by proceedings in insolvency. Squire v. Lincoln, 137 Mass. 399.

1. See cases cited in note in 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 618-620 note.

2. Dunlap v. Rogers, 47 N. H. 281; The Watchman, Ware (U. S.) 232; Felch v. Bugbee, 48 Me. 9; Beer v. Hooper, 32 Miss. 246.

3. 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 620 note, and cases there cited.

An assignment made in another State, conveying lands in Texas, executed with words sufficient to convey, and the solemnities required by the laws of Texas, passes title, as between the parties thereto, and those claiming under them, and is evidence in trespass to try title. Hervey v. Edens (Tex.), 6 S. W. Rep. 306.

A voluntary assignee of a non-resident under the laws of another State cannot hold assets found in Illinois against attaching creditors in that State. Sheldon v. Wheeler, 32 Fed. Rep. 773.

4. Schiff v. Solomon, 57 Md. 572; Bennett v. His Creditors, 22 Cal. 38; Gross v. Potter, 15 Gray (Mass.) 556. It need not appear on the face of a petition by a debtor that the debtor had delivered an inventory of his property to the officer etc. Stagg v. Austin, 18 N. J. L. 82.

5. Goodell v. His Creditors, 1 Idaho 215. The requirement that the insolvent shall state the names of his creditors, if known, requires him to state the names of the present holder of a note,

The fact that the petitioner is not actually insolvent does not oust the jurisdiction of the court.¹

A petition will not be dismissed for want of a recognizance for costs, the statute not requiring such recognizance.² Where a party files his petition, his property is in the custody of the law, and cannot be distrained for rent due from the petitioner at the time of the filing.³

It must show a surrender of all the petitioner's property;⁴ and be addressed to the court.⁵

In the hearing of a petition, an attaching creditor has a right to be heard.⁶ The want of an authorized signature to the petition is ground for setting it aside.⁷

The petitioner must generally set forth the property passed by the assignment.⁸

or else describe the note with an averment that the holder is unknown. McAllister v. Strode, 7 Cal. 428; Slidell v. McCrea, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 156; McNair v. Gilbert, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 344. 1. Weaver v. Leiman, 52 Md. 708. But the making of a petition to the court or judge of a wrong county does not go to the jurisdiction of either over the subject matter or the debtor. When the petition is made to the wrong court or judge, the debtor, at the time appointed for the hearing of the petition, may apply to the court or judge before which or whom the proceeding is pending in a wrong county, to have it transferred to a proper county; and the application, if sustained by the facts appearing, must be granted as a matter of right. Re Barnard, 30 Minn. 512.

2. Ripley v. Griggs, 52 Vt. 460. A citation not conformable to law issued upon a petition in insolvency. This being ascertained by the judge, a new petition issued, its service being preceded by notice from the officer of the discontinuance of the first petition. Held, a sufficient discontinuance. Ripley v. Griggs, 52 Vt. 460.

If the judge of the court of insolvency declines to entertain an application of the petitioning creditor to vacate proceedings in insolvency, because not presented at a regular meeting, and the application is withdrawn, without asking for an order of notice thereon, or giving opportunity to other creditors to come in and prosecute the proceedings, the refusal of the judge affords no ground for this court to vacate the proceedings, under the Gen. Sts., ch. 118, § 16.

A judge of the court of insolvency should not be joined as a defendant in a bill in equity, under the Gen. Sts., ch. 118, § 16, to vacate proceedings in insolvency. Winchester v. Thayer, 129 Mass. 129.

3. Buckey v. Snouffer, 10 Md. 149.

4. Meyer v. Kohlman, 8 Cal. 44.

5. Brewster v. Ludekins, 19 Cal. 162.

6. Brewster v. Shelton, 24 Conn. 140.

7. Merriam v. Sewall, 8 Gray (Mass.) 316.

8. Case of Woodward, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 107; Case of Oliver, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 112.

Proceedings to Declare. Creditors who have filed their claims with a trustee under a general assignment are not estopped to petition to declare the debtor insolvent. Castleberg v. Wheeler (Md.), 12 Atl. Rep. 3.

Even if an issue made on a prayer to declare a defendant insolvent be improperly submitted to a jury, and the findings, therefore, erroneous, yet if on other prayers the jury arrive at the same result, and defendant be properly declared insolvent, the judgment will not be reversed.

A prayer to declare a person insolvent specifying the persons to whom defendant had "assigned, given, sold and transferred" his property with intent to hinder, delay and defraud petitioners and his other creditors while he was insolvent and in contemplation of insolvency states facts sufficient and proper to be submitted to a jury, under Code Md., art. 48, § 13, as re-enacted in acts 1886, ch. 298.

A prayer by defendant that the jury be instructed that to find for petitioners under the preceding charge they must

10. Assignees, Commissioners, Trustees, etc.—Who May be.—It is an essential qualification of an assignee not only that he should be capable, from age, health and education, of performing the duties of the office, but also that he should be of sufficient character and pecuniary ability to afford assurance to creditors that the fund will be safe in his hands, and that the trust will be properly administered.¹

find that defendant, within the time mentioned and while insolvent, made a deed, or created a lien, or otherwise gave an unlawful preference in favor of N., named in the petition, is properly refused when N. is not the only person allowed to have been so favored. Castleberg v. Wheeler (Md., 1888), 12 Atl. Rep. 3.

On appeal in insolvency proceedings, where the questions raised and decided in the court below have not been certified by such court as provided by Rev. Code Md., art. 71, § 6, will be dismissed. Waters v. Momeny, (Md.) 11 Atl. Rep. 763.

Dismissal of petition without notice to creditors. Smith v. N. Y. Life Ins. Co. (Minn.), 16 N. W. Rep. 452.

Variouly Designated.—In various States the person designated by the statute or by the debtor to settle up the affairs of an insolvent is known by different names, as assignee, trustee, commissioner, etc. In Louisiana he is designated by the name of syndic.

They are all, however, the holders of a trust, and the same general principles are applicable to them.

1. Burrill on assignments, (3d ed.) 118. Wilt v. Franklin, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 516; Guerin v. Hunt, 6 Minn. 375.

Thus where the debtor selected for assignees three relatives, one of whom was incapacitated by residence, one by blindness, and the third by want of education, it was held that it was evidence of an intent on the part of the assignor to keep the control of the property in his own hands . . . the assignment was void. Cram v. Mitchell, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 251.

Assignor May Generally Select Assignee.—The right of an embarrassed debtor to make an assignment, and to select his own assignee, without and against the consent of his creditors, has been finally admitted in most of the States of the Union, though the propriety of recognizing such a right has often been questioned, and if the question were a new one, might well be doubted. But to prevent the abuse of the right, and to avoid its being made a convenient engine of fraud, the utmost good faith must be required of the debtor in the selection of the assignee. That selection must be made with reference to the interest of creditors rather than that of the debtor. Hence, if the assignee be so deficient in age, health, business capacity or character for integrity, that a prudent man honestly looking to the interest of his creditors alone, would not be likely to select him as a proper person for the performance of the trust, then his selection will furnish an inference more or less strong, according to the circumstances, that the assignor, in making the selection, was actuated by some other motive than the desire to promote the interest of creditors; in other words, an inference of the intent to hinder, delay or defraud his creditors. And this inference will be strengthened if the assignee be a clerk or near relative, or a person likely to be easily influenced by the assignor, as this would tend to raise a presumption that the assignment was intended to be made use of for the assignor's, or that there was some secret trust in his behalf. Anything, therefore, which tends to show the assignee, in any respect, is not such a person as an honest and prudent man would be likely to select for the position, with reference to the interest of creditors, must, upon principle, be admissible to impeach the good faith of the assignment. (The weight of the evidence would, of course, depend upon the degree of unfitness shown.) In this view it is well settled that the selection by the assignor of a person known to him to be insolvent is very strong evidence of a fraudulent intent. This is upon the principle that, as the assignee is not by law compelled to give security for the assets, or the faithful performance of the trust, the assignor, in placing the property beyond his own control and that of his creditors, ought to place it in the hands

But the relationship of parties, though calculated to awaken suspicion, is of itself no evidence of fraud in a conveyance of property;¹ and where the creditors are consulted and consent to the assignment to a particular individual, no fraud will be presumed.² Indeed, they may agree that the assignor himself shall of such persons as will be able to respond to creditors for the waste, or wrongful disposition of the assets, or the maladministration of the trust. The principle, therefore, is not confined to actual insolvency, but extends to any case where the property or pecuniary means of the assignee are clearly inadequate to this end, or any state of pecuniary embarrassment likely to deprive the creditors of this security. Not that this consideration, of itself, is always a controlling one, or decisive of the question of fraud, as the high character of the assignee for integrity and business capacity may sometimes compensate, in a great measure, if not entirely, for his want of pecuniary means, and afford nearly, if not quite, as strong assurance to creditors that the funds will be safe in his hands, and that the trust will be faithfully executed.

The enquiry, therefore, is not so much whether the assignee is strictly, in a legal sense, insolvent, but what is the state of his property and his pecuniary standing. And upon principle, as well as upon authority, we think this may be proved by reputation. See Hard v. Brown, 18 Vt. 87; also Heywood v. Reed, 4 Gray (Mass.) 574.

But second, I think reputation of insolvency is admissible in cases like the present, independent of its tendency to prove insolvency or a less degree of pecuniary embarrassment in fact. It is well settled that an assignment made by a debtor for the purpose of inducing a compromise on more favorable terms than he could otherwise obtain, is fraudulent. Now, whatever may be the condition of an assignee as to solvency, as known to himself, creditors have not his means of knowledge, and they judge of the fact as it appears to the public—in other words, mainly by reputation. It is upon this they must generally form their judgment and decide upon their course, whether it is best to run the risk of a suit or to assent to such compromise as the debtor may choose to offer. And if the assignee has a confirmed reputation for insolvency, we cannot fail to see that all prudent creditors would be much more likely, in ordinary cases, to consent to a compromise on the debtor's own terms than if the assignee were reputed to be solvent, and able to respond for malversation or breach of trust. In this view we cannot resist the conclusion that, if the assignor has knowingly assigned to a person having the reputation of insolvency, this fact would have a tendency to show that the assignment was made for the purpose of inducing a compromise, even though the assignor believed him solvent in fact (and there was certainly enough in the case to authorize the jury to infer a knowledge on the part of Wilbur of this reputation of Rosenbury); and this tendency would be greater or less according to the character or fitness of the assignee in other respects, and the other circumstances of the case. But its tendency to prove that such was the purpose of the assignment would be very strong when, as in this case, the assignees are shown to have acted together in their endeavors to procure a compromise after the assignment was made. We think, therefore, the court erred in excluding the deposition referred to. Angell v. Rosenbury, 12 Mich. 241.

It is doubtless if the above remarks would be applicable in their full sense when by statute, as in most of the states is the case, the assignee is required to give bond before assuming his duties.

So, where the debtor selected his brother, who was at the time unfit to attend to business by reason of a lingering disease which the assignor himself believed was incurable, and of which he died, it was held void. Currie v. Hart, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 353.

1. Bumpas v. Dotson, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 310; Nesbitt v. Digby, 13 Ill. 387; Baldwin v. Buckland, 11 Mich. 389; Montgomery v. Kirksey, 26 Ala. 172; Dunlap v. Bournonville, 26 Pa. St. 72.

Especially is this so, however, when they are placed as preferred creditors. Cram v. Mitchell, 1 Sankf. Ch. (N. Y.) 255; Currie v. Hart, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 353.

2. Reed v. Emery, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 417.

act as trustee or agent in certain cases.¹

The fact that the assignee is an attorney at law,² or is not a freeholder,³ will not disqualify him, unless so required by statute.⁴ Creditors are sometimes excluded.⁵

b. Duties and Powers of.—The assignee is clothed with all the necessary powers to obtain possession of the property assigned, and to collect the debts by process of law.⁶ He may attack the validity of a judgment entered upon the confession of the assignor;⁷ he may contest for the benefit of creditors the claims of a mortgagee under a defective mortgage, to a preference in the distribution of the proceeds;⁸ he may bring an action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance;⁹ he may restrain by injunction attaching creditors from interfering with property fraudulently conveyed by the assignor;¹⁰ he may contest the validity of any claim against the estate;¹¹ he has power to appoint and employ all necessary clerks and agents to assist him in the performance of his duties, and to allow and pay them suitable compensation for their services.¹² He should proceed with promptness in the

1. Tomkins v. Wheeler, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 106.

2. Tucker v. Parks, 7 Colo. 62.

3. Simon v. Mann, 33 Minn. 412.

4. Rev. Stat. Wis. 1878. Rev. Stat. Minn. 1878.

5. Barker v. Wales, 1 Root (Conn.) 265; Lyon v. Lyon, 2 Root (Conn.) 203; Fairbanks' Case, 2 Root (Conn.) 386.

6. Van Heusen v. Radcliffe, 17 N. Y. 580; Burrill on Assign. 394 (3rd ed.).

The assignee in insolvency represents the creditors as well as the insolvent. A bill in equity may be maintained by an assignee in insolvency against one holding money or property of the insolvent under a contract fraudulent and void as to creditors, when the bill seeks to have the contract annulled and the consideration restored. This court has by force of the statute full equity jurisdiction in cases of fraud, limited only by the usage and practice of chancery courts, concurrent with courts of law or exclusive of them. Taylor v. Taylor, 74 Me. 582.

Smith v. Sullivan, 71 Me. 155, distinguished and confirmed.

7. Nichols v. Kribs, 10 Wis. 79.

8. Sixth Ward Building Association v. Willson, 41 Md. 506.

9. Tams v. Bullitt, 35 Pa. St. 308; Englebert v. Blanlot, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 240; Huntsecker v. Heing, 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 250.

May Sell Property Fraudulently Conveyed.—An assignee, upon clearly manifesting his election to treat as void a conveyance of land made by the debtor in fraud of creditors, may sell and convey his whole interest in an land without himself first bringing an action to set aside the deed. Freeland v. Freeland, 102 Mass. 475.

Where a debtor has made a fraudulent conveyance of his property, and afterwards makes an assignment in insolvency, the right to institute a suit against the fraudulent grantee to recover the property vests in the trustee in insolvency. But where in such a case a trustee, after consulting the creditors, concluded that it was not expedient to expend the money of the estate in the attempt to recover the property, and intentionally abandoned the claim as an asset of the estate, it was held that the property was open to the attachment or levy of a creditor of the fraudulent grantor in the same way as if there had been no assignment in insolvency. The assignee may set the conveyance aside even where the assignor could not. And it did not affect the case that the levying creditor had proved his claim against the assigned estate and taken a dividend with the other creditors. Filley v. King, 49 Conn. 211; Moore v. Williamson (N. J. 1889), 15 Atl. Rep. 587.

10. Lynch v. Roberts, 57 Md. 150. The title in such case vests in the assignee.

11. Byrne v. Creditors, 33 La. Ann. 198.

12. Vernon v. Morton, 8 Dana (Ky.) 247; Hennessey v. Western Bank, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 300; Mann v. Whitbeck, 17 collection of all debts, or he may be liable for all loss occasioned by delay;¹ he may bring an action even against the assignor, where he wrongfully withholds property;² he may compromise or compound such debts as cannot be wholly collected, provided it is done in good faith for the best interest of the creditors.³

Barb. (N. Y.) 388; Van Dine v. Willett, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 319; Casey v. Janes, 37 N. Y. 608; Nye v. Van Husan, 6 Mich. 329; Maennel v. Murdock, 13 Md. 164.

And where the deed of assignment designated certain persons to be employed as attorneys in the settlement of the estate it was looked upon as a badge of fraud. Carlton v. Baldwin, 22 Tex. 724.

1. Winn v. Crosby, Daily Reg. Dec. 14, 1876.

It is the duty of the trustee to use all necessary means, by action or otherwise, to realize the debts; if a debt is lost by his neglect of duty, where the debtor had property sufficient to pay, he is presumably responsible for the loss, although he may have acted without any improper motive. Royall v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363.

2. Pike v. Bacon, 21 Me. 280.

In Ohio an examination of the debtor may be had on application of the assignee or any creditor, and the court may, upon or after such examination, make and enforce any order upon proper parties which it may deem necessary to prevent any fraudulent transfer or change in the property or effects of the assigner, or the allowance or payment of any unjust or fraudulent claims out of his estate. Rev. Sts., §6341.

3. Anon v. Gelpeke, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 245.

This power is sometimes conferred in the deed of assignment.

Powers Conferred in the Deed.—A clause in an assignment of real property, authorizing the assignees to lease the property for the benefit of the creditors, has been held to be inoperative. Rogers v. DeForest, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 272; Darling v. Rogers, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 483; Plank v. Schermerhorn, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 644.

A power given to assignees to declare future preferences, or change the order of preferences already given will render the assignment void. Barnum v. Hempstead, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 568; Green v. Trieber, 3 Md. 11; Strong v. Skinner, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 546; Sheldon v. Dodge, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 217; Stimpson v. Fries, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 156.

Even a power to compound debts has been very severely criticized. Grover v. Wakeman, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 187; Wakeman v. Grover, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 24.

Likewise a provision empowering an assignee "generally to adopt such measures in relation to the settlement of the estate as will, in his judgment, promote the true interests thereof" has been held to render an assignment void. Hennessy v. Western Bank, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 300.

In Illinois a clause in a general assignment, authorizing the trustee to compound with the creditors, renders it void. Hudson v. Maze, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 578.

In Maryland, however, an assignment reserving to the trustee the power to mortgage the assigned property, has been sustained. Beatty v. Davis, 9 Gill (Md.) 211.

Whether an express power to sell on credit will avoid the assignment or not is a mooted question.

The following States have held the affirmative:

New York, Griffin v. Barney, 2 N. Y. 371; Nicholson v. Leavitt, 6 N. Y. 510; Burdick v. Post, 6 N. Y. 522; Porter v. Williams, 9 N. Y. 142; Kellogg v. Slauson, 11 N. Y. 302.

Vermont, Mussey v. Noyes, 26 Vt. 470; Page v. Olcott, 28 Vt. 469.

Wisconsin, Hutchinson v. Lord, 1 Wis. 286; Keep v. Sanderson, 2 Wis. 42; Keep v. Sanderson, 12 Wis. 352; Haines v. Campbell, 8 Wis. 187.

Minnesota, Truitt v. Caldwell, 3 Minn. 364; Greenleaf v. Edes, 2 Minn. 264; Mower v. Hanford, 6 Minn. 535.

Michigan, Sutton v. Hanford, 11 Mich. 513.

Illinois, Bowen v. Parkhurst, 24 Ill. 257; Pierce v. Brewster, 32 Ill. 268.

While in the following States the contrary is held:

Alabama, Abercrombie v. Bradford, 16 Ala. 560; Evans v. Lamar, 21 Ala. 333; England v. Reynolds, 38 Ala. 370.

Virginia, Dance v. Seaman, 11 Gratt. 778, 781.

Tennessee, Gimell v. Adams, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 285.

An assignee cannot maintain a bill in equity to restrain certain creditors from proving their claim against the estate.¹

He is the agent of the creditors of the insolvent as well as of the law. He is the instrument by which, instead of by attachment, the property of the insolvent is secured for the benefit of the creditors.²

c. Sale Made by.—The power to sell is very often given by the deed of assignment, and sometimes by statute; but it is always necessarily implied by every conveyance for the payment of debts.³ The assignee must use not only good faith, but Maryland, Farquharson v. Eichelberger, 15 Md. 63; Berry v. Matthews, 13 Md. 537.

Missouri, Johnson v. McAlister, 30 Mo. 327; Gates v. Labeaume, 19 Mo. 17.

Texas, Carlton v. Baldwin, 22 Tex. 724.

Ohio, Conkling v. Coonrad, 6 Ohio, St. 611.

California, Billings v. Billings, 2 Cal. 107.

1. Fellows v. Spaulding, 141 Mass. 89.

2. Shipman v. Aetna Ins. Co., 29 Conn. 245.

3. Williams v. Otey, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 563; Wood v. White, 4 M. & C. 481; Perry on Trusts 147, 398.

Where, however, the statute of a State requires that the assignee must procure an order of sale before he can sell, as sale without such order would be invalid. Gable v. Scott, 56 Md. 176.

Can Sell Without Order of Court. In the present case, it is very manifest that the trustee took an estate in fee; it was to him, his heirs and assigns, and whether the limitation to successors to be appointed by this court, to take effect only after such appointment, was of any avail nor not, the estate to the first grantee, Levi Goodridge, was an estate in fee. Having an estate in himself, a right of property, by the general law applicable to real property, he had a right, prima facie, to pass that title to another, and his grantee would take a legal title. The difference between such trustee and an executor, administrator or guardian, as to the necessity of obtaining a licence to sell according to law, is, that the latter execute a mere naked power, and to give validity to his act it must appear not only that he had such power, but that his deed or act was in strict conformity with it, otherwise the property does not pass. It was argued on the part of the demandant, that unless a licence or decree was obtained by the trustee the estate could not pass by his deed. We think that was a mistake arising from not observing the distinction between one who has a fee and transfers his own estate, and one who can only act as empowered, in transferring the property of another. Undoubtedly it is a frequent practice for a trustee to apply to a court having jurisdiction over a trust estate, for permission to sell on particular occasion and for particular purpose, of which such court has power to judge; and in the new and somewhat imperfect understanding and practice of the law upon this subject, it is wise and expedient, and often necessary, to do so; and the statutes have provided for granting such licence upon summary application. Sts. 1845, c. 1846, ch. 242. But often this is done ex majori cautela, in order that a trustee, in the exercise of his powers and duties, may be assured of protection both in courts of equity and courts of law. But it leaves the question open whether an estate will not pass by deed of the trustee without a licence. In the present case, the estate was conveyed to the trustee in fee, charged with the payment of one half of the grantor's debts, not specified, nor could they be specified, because they were the debts which might be due at the time of decease. And though this charge is expressed in the form of a condition, it is, in legal effect, rather a charge than a technical condition; it binds the land to such payment, and the trustee takes it subject to this charge. In order to execute his trust and save the estate from forfeiture, for the benefit of his cestui que trust, he must raise the money for the payment of such debt, and this can only be done by sale; therefore he must sell. It is part of his duty as trustee, and of course within the scope of his fiduciary authority. Take the familiar case of every degree of diligence and prudence in conducting the sale.¹ He should be present to conduct and superintend it.² He will be held liable to account for the highest value which might have been obtained.³ The sale should be made at as early a date as it profitably can be,⁴ and the assignee can use his discretion as to the time.⁵

Generally he has discretion to sell either at public or private sale.⁶ If, however, he cannot get a fair price at an early date at private sale, he should sell at public auction.⁷ It is a general rule, perhaps without exception, that he cannot be a purchaser, either directly or indirectly, of any of the effects of the assignor's,⁸ either at public or private sale. It is said that he can convey by an attorney in fact.⁹

But no covenant can be required of an assignee in a conveyance

a conveyance of real and personal property to trustees for the payment of the settler's debts; of necessity, the estate must be sold to raise money for such payment; the estate is vested in the trustees by the deed of an owner; it is within the scope of the fiduciary authority to sell; therefore they have no occasion to obtain licence to sell their own deed transfers a good title to purchaser. Purdie v. Whitney, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 25; Gould v. Lamb, 11 Met. (Mass.) 84; Goodrich v. Proctor, 1 Gray (Mass.) 567.

1. Chesley v. Chesley, 49 Mo. 540; Osgood v. Franklin, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 27; Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 H. & G. (Md.) 11; Quackenbush v. Leonard, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 334; Johnston v. Eason, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 330.

2. Burrill on Assign. 561 (3rd ed.); Harvey's Admr. v. Steptoe, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 289.

3. Melick v. Voorhies, 24 N. J. Eq. 395.

4. Inloes v. Am. Ex. Bank, 11 Md. 173.

5. Hawkins v. Alston, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 137; Haynes v. Crutchfield, 7 Ala. 180.

6. Perry on Trusts 412, 415, 422; Ex parte Dunman, 2 Rose 66; Ex parte Hurley, 1 D. & C. 631; Huger v. Huger, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 217.

7. Hart v. Crane, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 37; Burrill on Assign. 562.

8. Van Horne v. Fonda, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 388; Hawley v. Cramer, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 718; Giddings v. Eastman, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 561; Campbell v. Johnston, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 148; Slade v. Van Vechten, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 21; Abbott v. American etc. Co., 33

Barb. (N. Y.) 578; Burrill on Assign. 568, etc.

Assignee Cannot be Purchaser.—It may be here observed, as a general rule applicable to sales, that when a trustee of any description, or any person acting as agent for others, sells a trust estate, and becomes himself interested, either directly or indirectly, in the purchase, the cestui que trust is entitled as of course in his election, to acquiesce in the sale, or to have the property re-exposed to sale, under the direction of the court, and to be put up at the price bid by the trustee; and it makes no difference in the application of the rule that the sale was public auction bona fide, and for a fair price. A person cannot act as agent for another and become himself the buyer. He cannot be both buyer and seller at the same time, or connect his own interest in his dealings as an agent or trustee for another. It is incompatible with the fiduciary relation Emptor emit, quam minimo potest; venditor vendit, quam maximo potest. The rule is founded on the danger of imposition and the presumption of the existence of a fraud, inaccessible to the eye of the court. The policy of the rule is to shut the door against temptation, and which, in the case in which such a relationship exists, is deemed to be of itself sufficient to create the disqualification. This principle, like most others, may be subject to some qualification in its applications to particular cases, but as a general rule it appears to be well settled in the English and in our American jurisprudence. 2 Kent's Com. 438 (12th ed.)

9. Blight v. Schenck, 10 Pa. St. 285;

by him, except against his own encumbrances.¹ Doubtful claims may be disposed of for less than their face value.²

d. Compensation of.—A stipulation that salaries shall be paid the assignees out of the trust property has been held to be proper,³ and even large salaries so stipulated to be paid do not make the deed fraudulent on its face.⁴

Where there is no express stipulation or agreement for compensation beyond the assignee's expenses, the rule in some States is that he is entitled to none,⁵ and such seems to be the general rule in England.⁶

It is now generally provided by statute that assignees shall either receive a percentage or a reasonable compensation in all the States,⁷ and where no provision is thus made, it is held that by the common law they are entitled to a fair compensation.⁸

The compensation is to be ascertained and awarded by the proper court upon the rendering of the assignee's account.⁹

If he is guilty of gross carelessness¹⁰ or misconduct,¹¹ or violates the trust,¹² no compensation will be allowed. If he maladministers and refuse to account, both compensation and expenses may be refused.¹³

It has generally been held that he cannot charge the estate with a counsel fee paid to himself.¹⁴

Burrill on Assign., 571. See Cranston v. Crane, 97 Mass. 459; Gillispie v. Smith, 29 Ill. 473.

1. Burrill on Assign. 572 (3rd ed.); Ennis v. Leach, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 416; Perry on Trusts, 421; Barnard v. Duncan, 38 Mo. 170.

An assignment giving the assignee power to sell the real estate "at such time and in such manner and upon such terms as he may deem prudent" does not give him power to bind the estate by express covenant of warranty, nor does such power exist by implication of law. Welsh v. Davis, 3 S. Car. 110.

2. Shaeffer v. Child, 7 Watts (Pa.) 84; McHenry v. McVeigh et al., 56 Md. 578.

3. Ingraham v. Grigg, 13 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 22; Burrill on Assign. 175 (3rd ed.); Vernon v. Morton, 8 Dana (Ky.) 247.

Where an assignee, after the assignment, agreed with one who had a lien on the goods, for advances made, to sell the goods and pay over the money when received without expense to the lienor, he cannot recover for his services. Moors v. Wyman (Mass.), 15 N. E. Rep. 104.

An assignee who had no agency in collecting or disbursing the funds to pay the debts, is not entitled to commissions on lands not converted into money, though he refrained from selling them at the request of the assignor, who promised that he should not be prejudiced thereby. Appeal of Hower (Pa. 1889), 15 Atl. Rep. 687; Ingraham v. Grigg, 13 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 22.

4. But where the trustees were each to receive eight thousand dollars per annum, the assignment was for this and other reasons held invalid as against creditors not parties. Bodley v. Goodrich, 7 How. (U. S.) 276.

5. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 577.

6. Lewin on Trusts (8th Eng. ed.) 438; See Manning v. Manning, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 527; Hill on Trusts (ed.)? 857; Perry on Trusts 535.

7. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 582; Perry on Trusts, 918, where the rules governing the various States are collected.

8. Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 535.

9. Geisse v. Beal, 3 Wis. 367; Heckert's Appeal, 24 Pa. St. 482; Gilbert v. Sutliff, 3 Ohio St. 129.

10. Stehman's Appeal, 5 Pa. St. 413.

11. Jenkins v. Eldredge, 3 Story (U. S.) 332.

12. Flagg v. Mann, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 486.

13. Gilbert v. Sutliff, 3 Ohio St. 129; Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 535.

14. Mayer v. Galluchat, 6 Rich. (S

c. Liability of.—The liability of an assignee is for the most part commensurate with the duty which the assignment imposes on him.¹ This duty may, in its most general terms, be stated to be to observe good faith in all his transactions, and to exercise all reasonable diligence and care in the management of the trust.²

For gross misconduct or violation or abuse of the trust he is not only personally responsible,³ but may be dismissed from office.⁴ He is answerable for property or money lost by his gross negligence,⁵ and it need not always be gross negligence to make him liable.⁶ He is liable for every loss occasioned by his negligence, want of caution or mistake,⁷ as for neglecting to collect Car.) Eq. 1; Nichols v. McEwen, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 65; Nichols v. McEwen, 17 N. Y. 22; Heacock v. Durand, 42 Ill. 230; Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 315, 585.

In Mississippi it has been held counsel fee can be allowed the assignee. Shirley v. Shattuck, 28 Miss. 13.

1. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 627. See Hext v. Porcher, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 170.

2. Freeman v. Cook, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 373.

The schedule of debts showed a debt to the assignor's brother for $29,586.76, on notes secured by insurance policies. These policies had been transferred to the brother before the assignment, and the adjusted amount due on them was collected by him soon after the assignment. There was no entry on the books of the firm to show this debt except an entry in the back part of a bill book of four notes, amounting to about $6,000, given on a settlement between the brothers three years before the assignment, and the rest of the debt was fraudulent. Held, that as the schedule was properly verified, and the entry in the bill book, even if brought to the knowledge of the assignee, would not have disclosed the fraud, he had the right to assume that the schedule was correct, and was not negligent in permitting the brother to collect the amount of the policies. In re Cornell, 110 N. Y. 351.

Where an assignment was made in April, and the assignee commenced proceedings to sell in June, which were completed in August, he was not negligent in not renting the land assigned. Creager v. Creager (Ky.) 9. S. W. Rep. 380.

An assignee is not liable for the appropriation by the assignor of crops grown on the land assigned, but excepted from the assignment.

An assignee is liable for interest on moneys remaining uninvested in his hands. Appeal of Hower (Pa.), 15 Atl. Rep. 687.

3. Williams v. Otey, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 563.

4. 2 Story Eq. Jur. 1287; Geisse v. Beall, 3 Wis. 367; Pinneo v. Hart, 30 Mo. 561; Mandel v. Peay, 20 Ark. 325; Perry on Trusts 817.

5. Hurt v. Fisher, 1 Han. & G. (Md.) 88; Meacham v. Sternes, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 405.

6. Litchfield v. White, 7 N. Y. 438.

7. Wills on Trustees, (ed.) 173; 2 Kent's Com. (12th ed.) 230.

How Property Should be Managed.—

The assignment in question contained a clause by which it was mutually agreed between the parties thereto that the assignee should not be liable or accountable for any loss that might be sustained by the trust property, or the proceeds thereof, unless the same should happen by reason of the gross negligence or wilful misfeasance of the assignee.

The creditors of Mr. White were the beneficiaries in the trust by the assignment; they became owners in equity of the assigned property. They were entitled to the whole of it, until their debt should be satisfied; and to all the rights and remedies which the law would have given them if they had created the trust. A failing debtor, by an assignment, puts his property where it cannot be reached by ordinary legal process; he puts it into the hands of a trustee of his own selection; often, his particular friend sometimes, a man to whom the creditors would not have been willing to confide such a trust. The debtor has an interest in the applidebts assigned,¹ omitting to recover property from the debtor,² for permitting the debtor to retain possession of assigned property,³ and for failure to take proper security for property sold.⁴ Loss through an honest mistake will not generally be charged to him,⁵ although it is not easy to say when he will not be held cation of the trust funds to the payment of his debts; but the creditors have usually a far greater interest therein; and that interest depends, in many cases, on the competency and diligence of the assignee. The debtor cannot be permitted, by creating a trust of his creditors, to place his property where it cannot be reached by ordinary legal remedy, and at the same time, exempt the trustee from his proper responsibility to his creditors.

What degree of diligence, then, would the assignee have been bound in the business of his trust, if the clause in question had been omitted? This question is answered by one elementary writer in these words: "A trustee is bound to manage the trust property for the benefit of his cestui que trust, with the care and diligence of a provident owner." (Willis on Trustees 125); and by another, as follows: "A trustee is called upon to exert precisely the same care and solicitude in behalf of his cestui que trust as he would do for himself, but greater measure than this a court of equity will not exact." (Lewin on Trusts 152.) And in Story's Equity it is said, that where a trustee has acted in good faith, in the exercise of a fair discretion, and in the same manner as he would ordinarily do in regard to his own property, he ought not to be held responsible for any losses accruing in the management of the trust property. The first of these writers measures the liability of the trustee by the diligence of a provident owner; the two last mentioned, by the diligence of the trustee in his own concerns; but there is no substantial difference between them. The degree of diligence which a trustee uses in his own affairs cannot properly be the subject of judicial enquiry; every trustee must be presumed by the court before whom his account is taken to use in his own concerns such diligence as is commonly used by all prudent men. (Jones on Bailments 30.) The diligence of a provident man, therefore, is the measure of a trustee's duty. If it were otherwise, there would be one rule for a careless and a different rule for a vigilant trustee; and the careless trustee would be exonerated in the same case in which the vigilant would be held liable. This was never intended, either by the elementary writers or by the authorities from which they deduce these conclusions.

In § 1268 of Story's Equity, it is suggested, that inasmuch as a trustee is not entitled to a compensation for his services, he would seem, upon analogous principles applicable to bailments, to be liable only, like a gratuitous bailee, for gross negligence. But he adds, however, that it would be difficult to affirm that courts of equity do, in fact, always limit the responsibility of trustees, or measure their acts, by such a rule. In some of the English decisions, the liability of a trustee seems to have been determined upon the analogy between a trust and a gratuitous bailment, but such a rule cannot be applicable to trustees within this State, because they are in fact entitled to compensation by way of commission on moneys received and paid (Meacham v. Sternes, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 403); and although the smallness of their compensation may be a good reason for judging them with indulgence and liberality, they cannot be placed on the footing of gratuitous bailees. Litchfield v. White, 7 N. Y. 438.

1. Royall's Admr. v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363.

2. Pingree v. Comstock, 18. Pick. (Mass.) 46.

And where the assignee had paid a dividend to all the creditors excepting one, to whom he paid nothing, and had through motives of charity permitted one claim to remain uncollected until it was barred by the statute of limitations, it was held, that the assignee was personally liable to the unpaid creditor to the amount of the uncollected claim. Simpson v. Gowdy, 19 Ind. 292; Blackburne's Appeal, 39 Pa. St. 160.

3. Harrison v. Mock, 16 Ala. 616.

4. Miller v. Holcombe, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 665.

5. In re Durfee, 4 R. I. 401; Perry on Trusts, § 562; Hext v. Porcher, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 170.

liable for even an honest mistake.¹ The only safe way where he is in doubt is to apply to the court for instruction.²

The legal presumption always is that the assignee has faithfully executed his trusts, unless the contrary is fully shown.³ And where the assignees act in good faith, and with due diligence, they receive the favor and protection of the court, and their acts are regarded with the most indulgent consideration,⁴ but where they betray their trust they will be rigorously dealt with.⁵

f. Removal of.—If an assignee misconducts himself in his office by wasting, neglecting or mismanaging the estate, or refusing or neglecting to comply with some requirement of the law, he may be removed;⁶ or if he is or becomes insolvent,⁷ or fails to give new bonds when required,⁸ or if he becomes incapacitated from lunacy,⁹ or habitual drunkenness,¹⁰ he will be removed. If he moves out of the State, the court may remove him.¹¹ A refusal to allow the creditors access to his books of account will be good ground for his removal.¹²

But an assignee will not be removed without proof of fraud or of injury to the estate.¹³

g. Continuing Assignor's Business.—It has been held by leading courts that the assignor may direct in general terms a sale of property and collection of dues assigned, and may also direct upon what debts and in what order the proceeds shall be applied,

1. Ward v. Lewis, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 518; Pinkston v. Brewster, 14 Ala. 315; Chittenden v. Brewster, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 191.

Must Exercise Good Judgment.—A trustee may not be accountable for an honest mistake, but where his duty is so plain that no man of ordinary intelligence could mistake it, he is responsible if he has that intelligence. He cannot shield himself from responsibility by doubts that he takes no measures to either verify or dispel. Gilbert v. Sutliff, 3 Ohio St. 130.

2. Freeman v. Cook, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 373.

Chancery, it is said, will assist and protect trustees in the performance of trusts committed to them whenever they seek the aid and direction of the court, as to the establishment, management or execution of them. Trotter v. Blocker, 6 Port. (Ala.) 269; Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 631.

3. Maccubbin v. Cromwell, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 157; Goodwin v. Mix, 38 Ill. 115.

4. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 633.

5. Diffenderfer v. Winder, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 311; Paige v. Olcott, 28 Vt. 469; Miller v. Holcombe, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 665.

6. 2 Story Eq. Jur. 1287; Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 645.

In the case of People v. Norton, 9 N. Y. 176, it was held that the chancery court had power by its general authority independent of any statute, to displace a trustee on good cause shown.

7. Most of the States have laws now requiring the assignee to give bond. Where this is the case the solvency of the assignee would have nothing to do with removing or retaining him. Keyes v. Brush, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 311; Reed v. Emery, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 417.

8. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 648.

9. Purdon Dig. (Penn.) 10th ed. 1418.

10. Bayles v. Steatts, 1 Hals. Ch. (N. J.) 513; Suarez v. Pumpelly, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 336.

11. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 641.

12. Creditors Should Have Access to Books.—It is of the very first importance that the trustee of an insolvent should be open and candid with the creditors whose claims are provided for in the instrument, and afford them every reasonable means and opportunity of examining into the affairs of the assignor. Manning v. Stern, 1 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 409.

13. Rogers v. Jackman, 12 Gray (Mass.) 144.

but beyond this can prescribe no conditions whatever as to the management or disposition of the assigned property.¹

The general rule seems to be that where such stipulations are intended chiefly to benefit the assignor, they will be held invalid;² if to benefit the creditors, valid.³

Independently, however, of any provision in the deed of assignment, the assignee may continue the assignor's business during such a length of time as is manifestly for the interest of the estate.⁴

He should, however, continue the business no longer than is required to work up the material on hand.⁵

When a stock of goods in a retail business is assigned, the assignee cannot continue the business and retail the goods as before with the view of obtaining higher prices,⁶ without an order of the court authorizing him to do so.

1. Dunham v. Waterman, 17 N. Y. 9; Schlüssel v. Willett, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 615; Renton v. Kelley, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 536.

2. King v. Kenan, 38 Ala. 63; Inloes v. Am. Ex. Bank, 11 Md. 173; Marks v. Hill, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 400; Berry v. Riley, 2 Barb. S. C. (N. Y.) 307; Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 284.

3. Hitchcock v. Cadmus, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 381; Foster v. Saco etc. Co., 12 Pick. (Mass.) 451; Woodward v. Marshall, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 468; Ravisles v. Alston, 5 Ala. 297.

In Connecticut an assignment of the contents of a country store, and raw materials of a factory, empowering the assignees to dispose of the property and apply the avails as directed, also to carry on the business of the factory, and to purchase such additional articles as should be necessary until all the raw materials on hand should be worked up, was held valid. De Forest v. Bacon, 2 Conn. 633; Kendell v. N. Eng. Carpet Co., 13 Conn. 393.

4. Patten's Appeal, 45 Pa. St. 151; Patten's Estate, 2 Pars. (Penn.) Select Cases 108; Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 546.

Where the estates of insolvent men are liable to be transferred, and that too generally, without much discretion in the selection of a propitious opportunity, it will necessarily happen that property of all kinds and in every stage of preparation will come into the hands of the assignees; and unless they exercise the power of preparing it for the market it will often perish or be sacrificed. Of the propriety and expediency of the measures to be adopted they must judge in the first instance. Whether they (assignees) abuse their trust or not may be inquired into in a proper form of action. Woodward v. Marshall, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 468.

5. Patton's Appeal, 45 Pa. St. 151; Patten's Estate, 2 Pars. (Penn.) Select Eq. C. 108; Doyle v. Smith, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 15.

The assignee of the insolvent estate of a corporation has power to work up the stock on hand, if authorized to do so by the court. Harding v. Mill River etc. Co., 34 Conn. 458.

6. Hart v. Crane, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 38; Whallon v. Scott, 10 Watts (Pa.) 237; Am. Ex. Bank v. Inloes, 7 Md. 380.

And even where he is allowed to retail the goods for a limited time as a more beneficial course to creditors than an immediate sale at auction, the sales must uniformly be for cash. Meacham v. Sternes, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 398.

And there must be no new purchases with the proceeds, nor any act done or permitted which can prevent the business from being at any time, brought to a close. Connah v. Sedgwick, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 210.

Must Close the Business Soon.—The idea that a general assignee can, in the exercise of any proper discretion imposed upon him by virtue of the assignment, proceed to conduct the previous business of the assignor so long as he pleases to do so, or to do any act in respect thereto, except such as tends to the most speedy conversion of the assigned estate into cash, is wholly untenable, and the acts of the assignee tending to any other result are (equally as if committed by the debtor) in fraud

h. Rights in Mortgaged Property.—As a general rule an assignee is not to be considered as a bona fide purchaser of the assignor's property.¹ While this rule seems now well settled, it was formerly much doubted,² and seems, occasionally, yet to be somewhat entrenched upon.³

of the creditor, in hindering and delaying him in the realization of what is justly due him either from his debtor or from the assigned estate. Levy's Accounting, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 186.

1. Haggarty v. Palmer, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 437; Knowles v. Lord, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 500; Walker v. Miller, 11 Ala. 1067; Maas v. Goodman, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 275; Griffin v. Marquardt, 17 N. Y. 28; Reed v. Sands, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 185; Willis v. Henderson, 5 Ill. 13; Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 539.

2. Dey v. Dunham, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 188; Gates v. Labeaume, 19 Mo. 17; Hardcastle v. Fisher, 24 Mo. 70; Wickham v. Martin, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 427; Exchange Bank v. Knox, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 739.

3. In Ohio Lindemann v. Ingham, 36 Ohio St. 1, it is held that the assignee can sell the mortgaged property and turn over the proceeds to the mortgagee, and that the mortgagee has no right to foreclose his lien.

An inferior court (Snyder v. Betz, 2 Circuit Ct. (Ohio) 485) has decided that a mortgage of the assignor unrecorded is void as to the assignee, and that the assignee takes the property. See Gilbert v. Vail, 14 Atl. Rep. (Vt.) 542; Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731.

A mortgage of personal property executed and delivered before the issuing of the warrant, and not recorded until after the property is taken possession of by the assignee, is valid. Briggs v. Parkman, 2 Met. (Mass.) 258.

As a general rule, where a mortgagor goes into insolvency, and a trustee is appointed for him, such trustee will supersede a conventional trustee named in a mortgage of the insolvent debtor to make sale of the property mortgaged, in case of default, and is the proper person, as representing all creditors, to sell to the exclusion of the conventional trustee. It is the equity of redemption that passes to the trustee in insolvency; but where he does not apparently take the equity of redemption, and may or may not succeed in a suit asserting title to it, he ought not to supersede the conventional trustee who can proceed without delay, and who must proceed to sell in the end, if the trustee in insolvency fail in his suit. Ensor v. Keech et al., 64 Md. 378.

R., the agent of T., the owner of a lot of land, made an arrangement with N. to buy the land, but at no definitely fixed price. N. entered into a contract with a builder to erect a block of houses, for which he was to be paid in instalments, partly in cash and partly in promissory notes guaranteed by R. After the houses were partially completed, to enable T. to get the benefit of the improvements placed upon the land, T., with knowledge that N. was insolvent, executed a deed of the land to N. at a price more than twice its real value without the improvements, and N. made a mortgage of the same back to T., to secure his promissory note for a sum of money much greater than the value of the land without the improvements. The note was payable at a fixed time. It was also under seal, and referred to the mortgage. The mortgage gave N. the right to pay the debt in instalments from time to time. T. subsequently, and before the maturity of the note, assigned the mortgage and note to trustees, in trust to pay certain unsecured creditors, and to pay over the surplus to him. Subsequently these creditors, by an instrument to which T. was not a party, agreed with the trustees to extend the time of payment of their claims. Held, on a bill in equity by the assignees in insolvency of N. against T. and his trustees, that the assignees were entitled to redeem the land from the mortgage on payment of its value without the improvements; and that the trustees did not stand in the position of bona fide purchasers for a valuable consideration. Held, also, that the creditors were not necessary parties to the bill. Held, also, that the court would not act on a suggestion, made for the first time in this court, that R. should be made a party, it not appearing that the rights of the plaintiffs as against the defendants could not otherwise be determined. Jewett et al. v. Tucker et al., 139 Mass. 566.

11. Rights of Creditors—a. Generally.—A creditor is entitled to prove his whole claim against the estate notwithstanding any security he may have from third persons.¹ A creditor who becomes a party to an assignment under an insolvent act passed subsequent to the time when his claim accrued, waives all objection to the constitutionality of the act.² A payment by an insolvent debtor to a pre-existing creditor is valid, except as against proceedings in insolvency.³ In matters of insolvency, the law does not contemplate that a majority of the creditors shall deprive the minority of the right to have their claims paid within a reasonable time.⁴ The creditor possesses no greater right than the debtor himself had in the property passed to the assignee.⁵ A creditor may require the production of the as-

1. Wilder v. Keeler, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 167. The holder of a promissory note, by an arrangement with a solvent surety thereon, proved the note against the insolvent estate of another surety and then assigned the note with his claim against the estate to the solvent surety, who paid the holder in full. Held, on a bill in equity, that this amounted to payment of the note, and that the court of insolvency rightly ordered the proof to be expunged, and the surety to prove only one half of the claim, although he would not receive more than half of what he had paid for the note, if allowed to prove to the full amount. New Bedford Inst. v. Hathaway, 134 Mass. 69; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 289.

2. Van Hook v. Whitlock, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 373. Where a creditor commences a suit for the purpose of setting aside an assignment by his debtor as fraudulent, he does not debar himself from coming under the assignment upon the failure or discontinuance of the suit. Jewett v. Woodward, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 195.

Where a person becomes a creditor of one whom he knows to be insolvent, by buying a demand against him for less than the nominal amount thereof, he cannot, by prosecuting the demand to judgment, and recovering the whole amount, entitle himself to be considered a creditor to the whole amount. Emerson's Case, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 457.

3. Burt v. Perkins, 9 Gray (Mass.) 317. If facts are known to a creditor, which give him reasonable cause to believe his debtor to be insolvent, and he also knows that the debtor knows the same facts, he has reasonable cause to believe that the debtor believes himself to be insolvent, and that a payment of the debt by him is made in fraud of the laws relating to insolvency. Cozzens v. Holt, 136 Mass. 237.

An insolvent debtor's conveyance of all his property to one creditor solely to secure his debt, although both knew at the time that the effect would be to deprive the other creditors of the power of securing their claim by legal process, is not a fraud at common law. Giddings v. Sears, 115 Mass. 505.

4. Laforest v. His Creditors, 18 La Ann. 292.

5. Campbell v. Slidell, 5 La Ann. 274. The act of 1878 provides that a judgment creditor may place a lien for his judgment on real estate of the debtor by causing to be recorded in the town clerk's office a certificate setting forth the judgment and describing the real estate, which lien may be foreclosed or redeemed like a mortgage. Held that the lien thus acquired is not dissolved by proceedings in insolvency on the part of the debtor, under the provision of the insolvent law that such proceedings shall dissolve all attachments and all levies of executions not perfected, made on the debtor's property within sixty days next preceding. Such a lien is a statutory mortgage rather than an attachment. And where the lien is placed upon land that had been attached in the suit in which the judgment was rendered, it is not to be regarded as a mere continuance of the attachment. Beardsley v. Beecher, 47 Conn. 408.

An assignment made by an archbishop of the Roman Catholic church in his individual capacity, for the payment of his individual debts, passes to the assignee no better or different title to the assigned property than the assignee's books to ascertain the condition of the estate.¹ The court may adjudge a party insolvent in an involuntary proceeding upon the return day of the order to show cause why he should not be adjudged insolvent, without waiting for a meeting of creditors.²

Where security is given by the principal on a note to the endorser or surety to indemnify him, such security enures to the benefit of the creditor.³

A creditor who has proved his own claim has no right in his own name to contest the claims of other creditors.⁴ There is signor held, and cestuis que trustent may assert, as against the assignee and the creditors of the assignor, the same rights that they could against the latter if no assignment had been made. Manix v. Purcell (Ohio), 19 N. E. Rep. 572.

1. McAuley v. His Creditors, 4 La Ann. 52. A creditor of an insolvent debtor, against whom involuntary proceedings in insolvency have been instituted, cannot maintain a bill in equity to restrain the further prosecution of the proceedings, on account of the failure of the debtor to furnish to the messenger a schedule of his creditors before the choice of an assignee, and the consequent absence of notice to such creditors of the first meeting. Shepard et al. v. Abbott, 137 Mass. 224.

2. Lyon v. Crosby, 64 Cal. 34.

3. In re Fickett, 72 Me. 266.

Amount to be Proved.—A, owning land subject to a mortgage, conveyed his equity to B, who agreed with A to assume and pay the mortgage. On the mortgage becoming due, neither A nor B paid the same. The mortgagee subsequently endorsed the note secured by the mortgage in blank, without recourse, and delivered it to the wife of A, who paid for it out of her separate estate, and the mortgagee at the same time assigned the mortgage to her. B afterwards became insolvent. Held, that A could not prove, against B's estate in insolvency, a claim for the amount remaining unpaid on the mortgage. Wilson v. Bryant, 134 Mass. 291.

The owner of a parcel of land mortgaged it, subsequently conveyed his equity of redemption, and several years afterwards went into insolvency. The mortgagee sold the land under a power of sale contained in his mortgage, without obtaining any order of the insolvency court, and applied the proceeds in part satisfaction of his debt. Held, that he was entitled to prove the balance of his claim against the estate of the insolvent; and that the Gen. Sts., ch. 118, § 27, did not apply. Wilson v. Bryant, 134 Mass. 291.

A creditor, who levies an execution, issued upon a judgment obtained by him against his debtor, on land of the debtor, which is set off to him, and seisin and possession thereof are received by him in full satisfaction of his judgment, is not entitled afterwards, if the debtor becomes insolvent, to tender a deed of release of the land to the assignee in insolvency, and be admitted as a creditor for the amount of the judgment, under the Gen. Sts., ch. 118, § 27, although the land, at the time of the levy, stood in the name of a third person. Wareham Savings Bank v. Vaughan, 133 Mass. 534.

Where sureties are preferred by a mortgage from the principal debtor, made in contemplation of insolvency, they should be regarded as creditor, within the meaning of the Kentucky act, 1856, as the mortgage enures to the benefit of the creditors, to whom the sureties are bound. Thompson v. Heffner, 11 Bush. (Ky.) 353.

4. Freeland v. Mechanics' Bank, 82 Mass. (16 Gray) 137. Creditors who have voluntarily presented their claims before an assignee, without questioning the validity of the assignment, are thereafter estopped from disputing its validity, though it was made at the instance or in behalf of one of the creditors. Frelinghuysen v. Nugent, 36 Fed. Rep. 229.

A creditor who, as soon as the debtor asserts a homestead right, denies it by proper pleadings, is not estopped to contest the right by accepting a pro rata share of the proceeds of an assignment in which the homestead was reserved. Creager v. Creager (Ky.), 9 S. W. Rep. 380.

nothing to prevent a creditor, after having bought his debtor's property at public auction, from giving it to a member of the debtor's family.¹

The creditor acquires no vested right in the estate by means of the assignment.² Where a debtor sells his property in contemplation of insolvency, and a creditor becomes the bona fide purchaser, he is entitled to stand as a preferred creditor to the extent of his actual payment therefor beyond his demand against the debtor.³

b. Notice of Insolvency.—The statutes of insolvency generally require that notice be given of the insolvency;⁴ and where such notice is required, an affidavit that it was so published is sufficient proof.⁵

1. Winch v. James, 68 Pa. St. 297.

2. Mechanics & Bank Appeal, 31 Conn. 63.

Composition with Creditors.—Some of the creditors of an insolvent signed an agreement of composition to release the debtor, on his turning over all of his property, etc., using the term "We, the subscribers, creditors," etc. Held, that such agreement was binding on a creditor who had signed it, although all of the creditors had not signed. Lambert v. Shetler, 71 Iowa 763.

When an insolvent debtor produces at a meeting of his creditors the affidavits and composition agreement required by Maine Rev. St., ch. 70, § 62, and they are duly filed in the insolvency court, a creditor, who is not a party to the agreement of composition, has not the right to examine the debtor upon all matters relating to his insolvency; but the examination must be limited to the questions whether the agreement was signed by the requisite proportion of the creditors, and whether the debtor had paid or secured to his creditors the percentage agreed upon. Messer v. Storer, 79 Me. 512.

3. Southworth v. Casey, 78 Ky. 395.

4. Briggs v. Hobson, 3 Ala. 404; Clarke v. Ray, 6 Cal. 600.

The order for the meeting of the creditors of an insolvent made May 21st, 1879, and fixing June 23rd, 1879, for the meeting, directed notice to be published at least once a week for four weeks in "The Woodland Democrat"; and the notice was published in "The Woodland Daily Democrat" on the 23rd and 30th of May, and on the 6th and 13th of June. Held, that the publication was sufficient. Steele v. His Creditors, 58 Cal. 244.

An affidavit in a proceeding in insolvency stating that the notice to creditors had been published "at least four consecutive weeks, beginning on the 31st of October, 1878, and ending on the 5th of December, 1878, both days inclusive," does not confer jurisdiction.

The words "at least once a week for four successive weeks" require, in effect, that there shall be four publications not more than seven days apart from each other. Hernandez v. His Creditors, 57 Cal. 333.

Distinguishing Ronkendorf v. Taylor, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 349.

5. Schloss v. His Creditors, 31 Cal. 201; Barrett v. Carney, 33 Cal. 530.

Under an amendment to the California insolvent act of 1852 (St. 1863, p. 750), the county court, on the filing of the insolvent's petition, is required to issue notice to the creditors calling them to meet on a day not less than 30 days thereafter. Held, that such a notice issued on December 7th, and returnable January 6th following, was sufficient. Dean v. Grimes, 72 Cal. 442.

Service of—Amendment of Petition.—The service of an attested copy of the creditors' application and the warrant of the judge, provided in St. 1878, ch. 74, § 15, of the insolvent laws of Maine, upon the debtor, is sufficient if left at his last and usual place of abode.

It will be sufficient to give the court jurisdiction, in the absence of fraud, if the creditors in their petition allege that they believe that their aggregate debts provable under the insolvent laws of Maine amount to more than one-fourth part of the debts provable against their debtor, and that they further believe and have reason to believe that such debtor is insolvent, and that it is for the best interest of the creditors that the assets of the debtor should be divided as provided by the insolvent law.

Where an insolvent debtor, after an adjudication in insolvency, on examination upon his petition to this court to have such adjudication and proceedings in insolvency declared void because the requisite amount of his creditors did not join in the petition for insolvency, admitting his insolvency and that a large proportion of his creditors are willing to become parties to the insolvency proceedings, declines to answer proper enquiries, his petition will be dismissed—especially when it appears that the only purpose of his petition is to give effect to preferences in fraud of the insolvent law.

It seems that creditors not originally parties to the petition may by leave of court become parties thereto and prosecute the original application the same as the petitioning creditors could have done.

An amendment to the creditor's petition by adding new creditors, it seems would relate back to the commencement of the proceedings in insolvency. In Re Cassius C. Roberts, 71 Me. 390.

Proof by Affidavit—An affidavit presented in proceedings under the two-third act, as proof of service of the order requiring creditors to show cause why an assignment of the insolvent's estate should not be made, and he be discharged, as prescribed by the act of 1847 (§ 2, ch. 366, Laws of 1847), averred that deponent "served a printed notice, of which the following is a copy," it was objected that no notice followed the affidavit; in the printed appeal book a notice did follow the affidavit, and one preceded it. Held, that it did not appear that the affidavit was defective in this particular.

The affidavit averred that the printed notice was served "on each of the following named persons, on the days and in the manner next herein specified;" then followed a list of names under a column headed "names of creditors," and in another column, on the same line with each name the statement of the residence, save in one instance, where the word "unknown" was written. Following the list was this averment, "By depositing, 1860, April 9th, in the postoffice in the city of Brooklyn, a letter envelope directed to each of the foregoing creditors, at the place of residence hereinbefore designated, and in each envelope was a printed notice, of which the following is a true copy, and on each envelope so directed was placed a postoffice stamp to pay the legal postage of each letter." Held, that the averments were sufficient to show service by mail upon each of the creditors named.

The residence of most of the creditors was stated in the affidavit as New York city. No number or street was named. Held, that this did not show such a disregard of the law as to vitiate the proceedings; that the requirement to give notice was dependent upon the place of residence being known to the insolvent; that service by letter could be no more perfect, as to the address, than the knowledge of the insolvent, and it could not be said that he did not serve the notices to the best of his knowledge, nor could it be said that the proof was not such as the officer might legally be satisfied with.

The name of one of the creditors was Charles Storrs. This name, so spelled did not appear in the list of creditors, but "Charles Stores" appeared, who was designated as assignee of a firm. Held, that it was a case of idem sonans, and was a sufficient designation of the creditor.

It appeared that two-thirds of the creditors, claiming to represent more than two-thirds of the debts, signed the petition; the liability of the insolvent as to a portion of these debts was as endorser. It appeared that the paper endorsed had been protested for non-payment, and the insolvent had thus become liable. Held, that on this account, and as the effect of the notice of discharge was to exonerate the insolvent from all liability incurred by endorsement, these debts were properly included.

It seems, however, that where the affidavit, to be effectual, must be made by one having and acting in a certain character, or personal capacity, the paper should state the name of the deponent, and that he has that character or capacity. People v. Sutherland, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 192.

Under California Insolvency act, § 7, requiring notice of an adjudication of insolvency, to be published and served, such notice is sufficient, although by a clerical error a wrong letter is used in the insolvent's name, the name being properly printed in two other places.—Pope v. Kirchner (Cal.), 19 Pac. Rep. 264.

*c. Non-Resident.*¹*d. Composition with Creditors.*²

12. The Insolvent or Assignor.—Where a person seeks the benefit of the insolvent law he must comply with all its requirements.³

Generally, no action can be maintained in the name of the insolvent after assignment.⁴

A debtor who fraudulently conceals his property from his creditors may be proceeded against as an insolvent, although his property is actually sufficient to pay his debts.⁵

An insolvent cannot maintain a bill in equity against his assignee for misconduct without first applying to the court of insolvency for relief.⁶ It is generally necessary that he should be a resident of the State in which the assignment is made.⁷ In the surrender of his property he is presumed to tell the truth.⁸

Payment made to an insolvent the day after he has made an assignment, though without notice, is void.⁹ After an insolvent has made an assignment, there is a resulting trust by law for the balance after paying his debts.¹⁰

1. As to nonresidents, see CONFLICT OF LAWS. 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 614, et seq.; DEBTOR AND CREDITOR, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 179.

2. As to compositions with creditors, see COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 385.

Composition Induced by Fraud.—Rev. St. Me., ch. 70, § 62, provides that after a composition with creditors a creditor may maintain an action against the insolvent for the balance of his debt, when the signature of any creditor to the composition has been obtained by fraud, or when the debtor has knowingly made a false statement of a material character in the affidavit or schedules required of him. Held, that the statute requires the existence of wilful fraud or falsehood; mere defects or mistakes in the proceedings, which are not fraudulent, are insufficient. Cobbossee Nat. Bank v. Rich (Me.), 16 Atl. Rep. 506.

3. Burdon v. His Creditors, 20 La. Ann. 364; Hulshizer v. Kocker, 20 N. J. (Spen.) 390.

One who has assigned land subject to a mortgage has no such interest remaining therein as will give force to a contract with the holder of the mortgage that the latter shall bid the land in, and hold it as security for his own demand, and to pay other debts of the assignor. Monteith v. Hogg (Oreg.), 20 Pac. Rep. 327.

4. Keiwan v. Latour, 1 Har. & J. (Md.)

289; Stoever v. Stoever, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 434.

An insolvent debtor may, with the consent of his assignee, bring an action in his own name upon a contract entered into by him before his insolvency. Herring v. Downing, 146 Mass. 10.

Under the insolvent law the debtor has no control over the prosecution or settlement of suits against his estate; this power is lodged with the assignee; thus, in a cause pending in the supreme court, the judgment below, against the objection of the debtor, was affirmed in accordance with a stipulation between the creditor and the assignee, and a motion, filed by the debtor at a subsequent term, to have the cause brought forward and heard, was dismissed; and this on the ground that the debtor was not a party to the proceedings. Brattleboro Bank v. Waite, 57 Vt. 608.

5. Blake v. Sawin, 10 Allen (Mass.) 340.

6. Lincoln v. Bassett, 9 Gray (Mass.) 355.

7. Hogan v. Hutton, 20 N. J. (Spen.) 82; Case of Senior, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 118.

Residence is a question of intention and the enquiry is quo animo; the party either removed from or out of the State. Case of Casey, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 126.

8. Hewlett v. Hewlett, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 7.

9. Wickersham v. Nickolson, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 118.

10. Ross v. McJunkin, 14 S. & R. (Pa.)

364.

One can make an assignment for the benefit of his creditors without being insolvent; and the assignment will be valid unless creditors can show that it was made with the fraudulent intent of hindering them.¹

The insolvent is entitled to notice of proceedings instituted against him in insolvency.²

A person who removes to and becomes an inhabitant of a State, and owes debts contracted therein, is entitled to the benefit of the insolvent law, although the sole purpose of his change of domicile and of contracting debts there was to obtain the benefit of such law.³

1. Munson v. Ellis, 58 Mich. 335; Weaver v. Leiman, 52 Md. 708.

Assignor May be Solvent.—It is claimed that the assignment is void because the footings of the assets, as shown by the inventory, far exceed the debts, as shown by the footings of the amount due to the creditors, and that only insolvent debtors can make a valid assignment. But we think this is a mistaken view of the law. A person may be insolvent, in the proper signification of that term, although his assets may exceed his liabilities. A person may be said to be insolvent when he is unable to pay his debts as they mature in the ordinary course of his business, and this seems to have been the condition of the assignors in this case. Moreover, a person, whether insolvent or not, may legally execute a conveyance of his property to a trustee or assignee to pay his indebtedness if he have any. Such conveyance would not be void upon its face, nor intrinsically so. Creditors could attack its validity upon the ground that it was made with the intent to hinder, delay or defraud them, and unless they could establish such intent the assignment would be valid. Munson v. Ellis, 58 Mich. 335.

Dismissal of Proceedings for Inexcusable Delay.—It is not an abuse of discretion for the court to dismiss a proceeding in insolvency, upon motion of the debtor, for unreasonable delays in its prosecution. But after such dismissal the proceedings may be commenced anew. Kornahrens v. His Creditors, 64, Cal. 492.

2. Only one mode of notification to the alleged insolvent debtor of the institution of the proceedings against him is provided by the Maryland statute (1880, ch. 172), and that is by the service of a summons upon him. By that process he is to be warned to appear and show cause against the proposed adjudication against himself and his property. It was alleged in the petition in this case that the debtor had departed from the jurisdiction and was beyond the reach of the only process provided for by the statute. The summons that issued against him was returned without service, and not even a copy, as was directed by the preliminary order of the court, was left at his last place of abode within the jurisdiction. On appeal from the order of adjudication, it was held:

1st. That in such state of case it was not within the power or jurisdiction of the court below to proceed on an ex parte hearing to adjudicate the party an insolvent, and appoint a trustee whereby all the property of the debtor was divested out of him and transferred to such trustee.

2nd. That while this court reversed the order appealed from, yet inasmuch as the debtor had appeared to the proceedings after the order of adjudication was passed, the case should be remanded in order that he might have an opportunity to show cause against the adjudication prayed for, and to have the benefit of trial as provided by the statute; Whyte v. Betts Machine Co., 61 Md. 172.

3. McConnell v. Kelley, 138 Mass. 372.

The fifth section of the Connecticut insolvent act (Gen. Sts. p. 379) provides that "when a writ of attachment shall have been issued upon a claim founded on contract of one hundred dollars or more, upon which writ shall have been endorsed the affidavit of the plaintiff or his attorney that he believes such claim to be justly due, if the officer serving the same, after making demand of all such debtors as are found within his precincts, cannot find sufficient property to satisfy such attachment, . . . the plaintiff may petition the court of probate for the appointment of a trustee to take possession of the property of such defendant for the benefit of his creditors. Held, that the officer serving the writ was bound to attach real estate, if he could find sufficient to satisfy the claim. Also that it made no difference that the real estate was encumbered, so long as the equity of redemption was of sufficient value. Hawes's Appeal, 50 Conn. 317.

13. Partnership—(See PARTNERSHIPS).—A bona fide sale, for a valuable consideration, by one partner to another, of all the partnership assets and effects, is valid, although the firm and both partners are at the time insolvent.¹

A surviving partner has power to commence proceedings in insolvency which will include the estate of the firm.²

Actual knowledge, by a debtor, of the filing of a petition in insolvency against him is not sufficient to support an indictment against him, on the Massachusetts Gen. Sts., ch. 118, § 106, for secreting a portion of his estate after "notice" of such filing. Commonwealth v. Martin, 130 Mass. 465.

1. Howe v. Lawrence, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 553.

An assignment for a commissioner of insolvency, upon proceedings against a partnership of "all the estate, real and personal, of said insolvent debtors" passes the separate estate of each partner. Judd v. Gibbs, 3 Gray (Mass.) 539.

Materials charged and shipped by the partnership in their usual course of business, to works of one partner on the day of the failure of all the partners, are to be treated as the property of that partner and not of the partnership. Fisher v. Minot, 10 Gray (Mass.) 260.

The question whether, under proceedings in insolvency instituted by a surviving partner, money found upon the person of a deceased partner, and mingled with other money, which is admitted to be his own, is partnership or private property, is a question of fact, which, if a dispute arise in reference to it, must be submitted to a jury. Durgin v. Coolidge, 3 Allen (Mass.) 554.

A sale by one partner of the whole partnership property to a partnership creditor, though made with an intent of giving a preference to such creditor, the partnership being insolvent, and without the knowledge or consent of the other partner, if not tainted with actual fraud is valid. Mabbett v. White, 12 N. Y. 442.

A contract given by one partner to another to assume all the debts of the firm, and save him harmless therefrom, is not such a claim as may be proved against the estate of the obligor in insolvency until there has been a breach. It is not a contingent debt nor a contingent liability, for until the breach, there is no liability. The contingency is whether there ever will be a debt or liability. Nor is there any claim for unliquidated damages, for until the breach there are no damages to be assessed. Fernald v. Johnson, 71 Me. 437.

2. Adams Bank v. Rice, 2 Allen (Mass.) 480; Salsbury v. Ellison, 7 Colo. 167.

If two partners sign a petition in insolvency and one of them is killed before its presentation to the court, a warrant which is afterwards issued thereon, in ignorance of his death, may be treated as having been issued on the petition of the surviving partner. Durgin v. Coolidge, 3 Allen (Mass.) 554.

Where partners severally file their petitions in insolvency, the insolvency court acquires no jurisdiction over the estate of the copartnership, and discharges of the individual members of the firm cannot be made operative as to the debts of the firm. Glenn v. Arnold, 56 Cal. 631.

A, a citizen of this commonwealth (Massachusetts), who was a creditor of the firm of B, which was a limited partnership composed of B as general partner and C as special partner, brought an action against B in another State, and summoned as trustee there a person who was indebted to the firm of B. Soon after, B was adjudged insolvent upon involuntary proceedings, in which C was not mentioned, and of which he was not notified; and an assignment of B's estate was duly made to assignees, who undertook the settlement of the affairs of the firm of B. Subsequently the action of A against B was prosecuted to final judgment, and A received the amount of his claim from the trus-

A petition by a partnership for the benefit of the insolvent laws must aver the individual insolvency of the partners,¹ and it must show the surrender of all the petitioner's property, not merely of the partnership property.²

The assignee of the estate of both partners under distinct proceedings in insolvency must administer the estate of the partnership.³ An assignment by an insolvent firm of all its assets works a dissolution of the partnership.⁴

An insolvent firm cannot, by voluntarily assuming the individual debt of one of its members, and giving to the creditor of such member a judgment note for the amount of such debt, prefer such creditor to the firm creditors. It may do so, however, if there be a moral obligation on its part to pay the debt of the individual member.⁵

Where there are no available net proceeds of partnership assets, and no solvent partner, the partnership creditors share the separate estate concurrently with the separate creditors.⁶

In an action to obtain a decree against defendants ordering tee. Held, in an action by the assignees of B's estate against A to recover the sum so received by the latter, that it was not necessary to have joined C as a codefendant in the action of A against B, and that this action could not be maintained. Lawrence v. Batcheller, 131 Mass. 504.

An assignment by a member of a firm of all his property of every description for the benefit of creditors, under the provisions of the California Civil Code, does not preclude him from applying for and receiving a discharge under the insolvent law. Dresbach v. His Creditors, 63 Cal. 187.

Cases Distinguished.—Neither of the cases entitled respectively Meyer v. Kohlman, 8 Cal. 44; California Furniture Company v. Halsey, 54 Cal. 315; Glenn v. Arnold, 56 Cal. 631; Freeman v. Campbell, 56 Cal. 639; and In re Baker v. Hamilton, 55 Cal. 302, went further than to hold that by the Insolvent act of May 4, 1852, and the act amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, no provision was made for the relief of an insolvent partnership, and, as a consequence, that the insolvency court under those acts could not administer partnership property nor prevent partnership creditors from subjecting such property to the payment of their debts. In none of the cases mentioned was it held that, under the acts referred to, an individual member of a firm could not be discharged from his individual liability for firm debts.

Nor, in our opinion, does such result necessarily or logically follow from the doctrine of those cases. Hawley & Co. v. Campbell, 62 Cal. 442.

A person who holds out and recognizes another as a copartner is estopped to deny the partnership, and an assignment of the firm property by himself in the firm name, requiring releases of all accepting creditors, in which the nominal partner does not join, is void as to the firm's creditors. County of Baylor v. Craig (Tex.), 6 S. W. Rep. 305.

1. Hansom v. Paige, 3 Gray (Mass.) 239; Dearborn v. Keith, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 224.

2. Meyer v. Kohlman, 8 Cal. 44.

3. Harmon v. Clark, 13 Gray (Mass.) 114.

4. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 402; Gordon v. Freeman, 11 Ill. 14; Parsons on Part. 400.

An assignment by one partner works a dissolution of the partnership. Conrad v. Buck, 21 W. Va. 396.

5. Walker v. Marine Bank, 98 Pa. St. 574.

6. The provision of Maine Stat. 1878, ch. 74, § 54, which, in case of insolvency of a partnership and its several members, appropriates the net assets of each estate to its own debts, and the surplus of each to the creditors remaining of the other, is applicable only when there is available joint estate and all the partners are insolvent. Harris v. Peabody, 73 Me. 262.

that a partnership debt be satisfied out of the partnership assets, it is no defence that the defendants have been individually discharged in insolvency from their debts.¹

A joint proceeding against several as partners will not lie under the insolvent law of Maryland, but such proceeding must be taken against each separately.²

The assets of a partnership should be divided pro rata among all the creditors of the partnership.³

When there are no available net proceeds of partnership assets, and no solvent partner, the partnership creditors share in the separate estate concurrently with the separate creditors.⁴

Separate assignments in insolvency by the several members of a copartnership of all their property, made to the same assignee, convey to the assignee their partnership property.⁵ One of two partners with the consent of the other may make an assignment, and a partner absconding, his consent will be implied.⁶

A preference of individual debts of a partner in an assignment of the firm is void.⁷

14. Corporations.—An assignment to receivers passes the property of the insolvent corporation precisely in the same condition and subject to the same equities as they were held by the corporation.⁸

If the question of insolvency is doubtful, and the conduct of the managers of the corporation appears to have been fair and honest, the company should have the benefit of the doubt, as a corporation should not be disturbed in the proper transaction of its business, unless its condition is hopeless.⁹

A corporation generally has, like an individual, power to go into insolvency when unable to pay its debts,¹⁰ unless such

1. Freeman v. Campbell, 56 Cal. 639.

2. Armstrong v. Martin, 57 Md. 397. Neither the California Insolvency act of May 4th, 1852, or the supplementary act of March 31st, 1876, apply to partnerships. In re Baker & Hamilton, 55 Cal. 302.

3. Watkins v. Fakes, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 185.

4. Harris v. Peabody, 73 Me. 262.

5. Boughton v. Crosby, 47 Conn.

577.

An assignment by a firm, under the Minnesota insolvent laws, which is ambiguous as to whether the partnership property only, or the separate property of the partners, as well, is conveyed, will be rather construed in the latter sense, since in the former it would be invalid. And a reservation of exemption therein adds force to this construction, since a firm has no exemptions. Security Bank v. Beede, 37 Minn. 527.

6. Sullivan v. Smith, 15 Neb. 476.

A partner who has not joined in an assignment of the firm assets may thereafter ratify the same and a creditor cannot question its validity. Adee v. Cornell, 93 N. Y. 572.

7. Scheele v. Healy, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 92; Vernon v. Upson, 60 Wis. 418; Willis v. Bremner, 6 Wis. 622.

There is a very full and complete collection of authorities in vol. 25, N. W. Rep. 666, in note to Auley v. Ostermann.

8. Receivers v. Patterson G. L. Co., 23 N. J. L. 283.

Receivers of insolvent corporations are the agents of all creditors. Mechanics' Bank v. Bank of New Brunswick, 3 N. J. Eq. 437.

9. Brundred v. Paterson M. Co., 4 N. J. Eq. 294.

10. 2 Kent's Com., p. 398; De Ruyter v. Trustees, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 124; De Ruyter v. Trustees, 3 N. Y. 238.

right is restricted by its charter or some statutory enactment.¹

In some instances it has been held that such action on the part of the corporation will work a dissolution of the corporation.² It is said that the better opinion seems to be, and the one sustained by authority, that it does not affect the corporate franchise, and does not dissolve the corporation.³

This right is not affected by a provision in its charter that the stockholders shall be individually liable for its debts.⁴

15. What Claims May be Proved.—A holder of special stock of a corporation, which is illegally issued, may prove against the estate of the corporation in insolvency the amount paid by him for the stock, deducting any dividends received, although he did not rescind the contract before the insolvency.⁵ One who lends money after publication of notice of the filing of a petition in insolvency against the borrower, but before the issuing of the warrant, is not entitled to prove his claim against the estate.⁶ A creditor of an insolvent bank whose assets are in custodia legis under decree of court, will be let in to prove his debt after the day fixed for proofs, if he is not guilty of laches; but if he fail to make application to do so until after the fund is distributed, having full knowledge of the proceeding, he will be barred of his right.⁷

In a contest between the creditors of an insolvent, the notes or obligations do not make in themselves conclusive proofs of the debts apparently due them; they must be supported by such additional evidence of the claim as will satisfy the judge of its fairness.⁸

It is no objection to the proof in insolvency of a promissory note against the maker that an accommodation endorser holds

1. Hurlbut v. Carter, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 221; Burr v. McDonald, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 215; Ang. & Ames on Corp. (10th ed.) 191; Hill v. Reed, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 280; Haxtun v. Bishop, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 13; Bank Comm'rs v. Bank of Brest, Harr. (Mich.) 106; Catlin v. Eagle etc., 6 Conn. 233; Pope v. Brandon, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 401; State v. Maryland Bank, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 205; Warner v. Mower, 11 Vt. 385; Flint v. Clinton Co., 12 N. H. 431; Buell v. Buckingham, 16 Iowa 285; McCallie v. Walton, 37 Ga. 611; Ring v. Real Estate Bank, 13 Ark. 563; Dana v. Bank of United States, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 223; United States v. Bank of United States, 8 Rob. (La.) 262; Hopkins v. Gallatin etc. Co., 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 403; Bank of United States v. Huth, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 423; Town v. Bank etc., 2 Doug. (Mich.) 530.

2. Smith v. New York Consolidated etc., 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 419; Abbott v.

American etc. Co., 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 578; Bank Commissioners v. Bank of Brest, Harr. (Mich.) 106; Buell v. Buckingham, 16 Iowa 284.

3. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 85, 401; Ang. & Ames on Corp., § 191; State v. Bank of Maryland, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 205; Hurlbut v. Carter, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 224; Ringo v. Real Estate Bank, 13 Ark. 563.

4. Pope v. Brandon, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 401.

The power may be exercised by a quorum of the board of directors at a meeting at which a bare quorum is present. Buell v. Buckingham, 16 Iowa 284.

5. Reed v. Boston Machine Co., 141 Mass. 454.

6. Spurr v. Dean, 139 Mass. 84.

7. Gleen v. Farmers' Bank, 84 N. Car. 631; Gleen v. Farmers' Bank, 80 N. Car. 97.

8. Johnson v. His Creditors, 16 La. Ann. 177.

security from the maker which has not been surrendered, and that the proof is offered at the endorser's request.¹

A claim for damages not liquidated, which arises from a breach of contract, is provable.²

The qualified liability of a stockholder in a corporation is not a debt that can be proved against the estate of an insolvent.³

1. Meed v. Nelson, 9 Gray (Mass.) 55; Provident Ins. Co. v. Stetson, 12 Gray (Mass.) 27.

What Provable.—A promissory note is not provable in insolvency against the estate of an endorser before its maturity. Stowell v. Richardson, 3 Allen (Mass.) 64.

A bond of indemnity, given for the protection of an attaching officer, who has not been compelled to pay, or sued, for his acts, does not constitute a debt which is provable in insolvency against obligees. Kingman v. Towle, 5 Allen (Mass.) 133.

Promissory notes may be proved against the estate of the maker in insolvency, although the beneficial interest in them has become vested in his wife, if the legal title to them has not been transferred to her. Stearns v. Bullens, 8 Allen (Mass.) 581.

The holder of a bill of exchange, no part of which has been paid, may prove it in full in insolvency against the estate of each party thereto, and receive a dividend from each upon the whole claim, provided he does not receive in all more than the entire amount; but any proof sought to be made after he has been paid a part of his claim can only be for the balance. Sohier v. Loring, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 537.

2. Lothrop v. Reed, 13 Allen (Mass.) 294.

3. Bangs v. Lincoln, 10 Gray (Mass.) 600.

Miscellaneous.—Proving a claim against a corporation and receiving a dividend thereon will not bar a suit against the corporation for the rest of the debt. Coburn v. Boston etc. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 243.

A creditor of an insolvent corporation who holds collateral security from a stockholder therein, may prove his whole debt against the corporation in insolvency without first applying the security in payment or surrendering it to the assignees. Cabot Bank v. Bodman, 11 Gray (Mass.) 134.

Proof of Claims.—A lease provided that if the lessees should be declared bankrupt or insolvent, or should make an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the lessors might re-enter, and, in their discretion, relet the premises, at the risk of the lessees, who should be responsible till the end of the term for the rent and taxes reserved in the lease to them, and should be credited only with such amounts as should be by the lessors actually realized. The lessees became insolvent, and before the publication of notice in insolvency proceedings, the lessors re-entered. Held, that the lessors' claim was contingent in its nature, and could not be proved against the lessees' estate in insolvency. Bowditch v. Raymond, 146 Mass. 109.

Miscellaneous Cases.—A made a mortgage to B to secure a sum then due and future advancements; and afterwards commenced proceedings in insolvency, at which time there was due under the mortgage a certain sum. Prior to the insolvency, B procured certain notes, given by A to him for advances under and secured by the mortgage, to be discounted by C, and endorsed the notes, but did not assign the mortgage, to C; and, at the time of A's insolvency C owned the notes, which constituted a certain portion of the debt secured by the mortgage. At a meeting of A's creditors, the notes were proved by C. The assignee in insolvency advertised for sale the right in equity to redeem the mortgaged estate from the mortgage, representing that there was due thereon the sum which was due at the time of insolvency, which sum the assignee knew before the sale included the amount of the notes; and sold the same to B for a certain sum. At another meeting of the creditors, the assignee presented his account, setting forth the sale, charging himself with the sum received from B, and charging, as a loss upon the property by reason of the mortgage, the difference between that sum and the appraised value of the property; and this account was allowed by the court. Held, on a petition to set aside the decree allowing the account, that C was entitled to prove the notes against A's estate in insolvency, without first having recourse to B, who was also entitled to hold his mortgage as security against his liability as endorser on the notes; and that the assignee was not chargeable with the amount of the notes. Viles v. Harris, 130 Mass. 300.

A conveyed a parcel of land to B by a quitclaim deed, in which he reserved to himself and wife a life estate therein, and covenanted that the premises were free from all encumbrances suffered by him, except said life estate. After this conveyance, but before the deed was recorded, A mortgaged the land to a bank to secure the payment of a promissory note. On the same day, a previous mortgage on the land, given by A's grantor to the bank, and which A had agreed in the deed to him to pay, and existing at the time of A's conveyance to B, was discharged; each mortgage being for the same amount. A died, his estate was represented insolvent, and commissioners were appointed under the statute. Held, that the bank could not prove before the commissioners its claim against A's estate for the full amount of the note, while it still held the mortgage. Bristol Co. Savings Bank v. Woodward, 137 Mass. 412.

An action to foreclose mechanics' liens must be commenced within ninety days after the liens are filed, notwithstanding the insolvency of the debtor. A debt so secured is not provable under the insolvency act, and the commencement of foreclosure proceedings are not stayed by any of its provisions. Bradford et al. v. Dorsey et al., 63 Cal. 122.

If an attachment is dissolved under the Massachusetts Pub. Sts., ch. 157, § 46, by the debtor going into insolvency, and the attaching officer refuses to deliver up the goods on demand by the assignee in insolvency, the creditor is not entitled to prove, under § 139, as a claim against the estate, the expenses subsequently incurred by the officer in keeping the goods. Russell Paper Company v. Smith, 135 Mass. 588.

A bank discounted a draft of a firm, consisting of A, B and C; and, as a condition of making the discount, required security to be given for the whole debt of the firm to it, including previous advances as well as the draft. A and B accordingly transferred to the bank promissory notes of the firm owned by them respectively, given for advances made by them to the firm, and payable on demand. The firm and the individual members of it became insolvent. The draft had been paid before the insolvency proceedings were begun, but some of the previous advances had not been. Held, that the bank could prove the notes against the estate of the firm in insolvency, after having already proved for the whole amount of the unpaid advances. Miller's River National Bank v. Jefferson, 138 Mass. 111.

A creditor of an insolvent debtor, who has a mortgage of real estate of the debtor as security for his claim, and who joins with the assignee in insolvency in making sale of the property, without the order of the judge of insolvency, cannot be allowed, under the Massachusetts Gen. Sts., ch. 118, § 27, to prove the residue of his claim, after applying the proceeds of the sale. Smith v. Warner, 133 Mass. 71.

Where a judgment is obtained against an insolvent debtor, after the first publication of the notice of issuing the warrant, the judgment is not provable against his estate; because at the time of such publication it was not in existence, and the original debt is not provable because it is merged in the judgment. Sampson v. Clark, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 173.

Under the Alabama revised code a claim must be filed after the estate is declared insolvent. Clement v. Nelson, 46 Ala. 634.

Allowance of Claims.—Upon petition of a receiver in insolvency proceedings for instructions, the court advises him to disallow any claims which he considers not true and just, leaving the claimants to come to this court upon exceptions to such disallowance, if they shall see fit, within 30 days after notice to them of the disallowance and of this condition. In re Eddy, 15 R. I. 474.

Upon application for an extension of time within which claims against the estate may be filed, said unproved claims being small in amount, divided among many claimants, the receiver being satisfied the claims are just, and having nearly, if not quite, enough money in his hands to pay all just claims, proved and unproved, and nearly all creditors who had proved their claims being willing that the time should be extended, 30 days were allowed the creditors within which to prove their claims. In re Eddy, 15 R. I. 474.

The claim of a ward who has reached

16. Fraudulent Conveyances—(See also ASSIGNMENTS FOR THE BENEFIT OF CREDITORS; FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE)—a. Construction of Statute of Frauds.—The statute of frauds, as the statute of 13 Elizabeth is known, in reference to fraudulent conveyances, has been adopted universally in the United States.¹

While it was formerly doubted whether this did not cause all assignments for the benefit of creditors to be void, it seems to be now settled that it does not apply to such cases,² unless in instances where it appeared that assignments were fraudulent in intent and in effect.³

her majority, against her guardian, for funds held by him as guardian, is not provable against his insolvent estate, under Pub. St. Mass., ch. 157, § 26, relative to the proof of debts in insolvency, or St. Mass. 1884, ch. 293, providing that "equitable liabilities shall be decreed to be debts provable against estates in insolvency," where the amount due has not been determined by the probate court, and no judgment has been recovered on the guardian's bond. Murray v. Wood, 144 Mass. 195.

1. 1 Story's Eq. Jur., § 253; 4 Kent Com. [462-463] 510.

2. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 450-465.

3. Every conveyance of property by an insolvent or embarrassed man, to the exclusive satisfaction of the claims of some of his creditors, has necessarily a tendency to defeat or hinder his other creditors in the collection of their demands. But if the sole purpose of such a conveyance be the discharge of an honest debt, it does not fall under the operation of the statute of fraudulent conveyances. It is not embraced within its words, which only apply to such as are contrived in malice, fraud, collusion, or covin. to the end, purpose and intent to delay, hinder and defraud creditors. Hafner v. Irwin, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 490.

The fact that creditors may be delayed or hindered, is not of itself sufficient to vacate such a deed, if there is an absence of a fraudulent intent. Every conveyance to trustees interposes obstacles in the way of legal remedies of the creditors, and may to that extent be said to hinder and delay them. Dance v. Seaman, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 778, 782.

One of the most remarkable cases of a debtor being allowed to defeat the execution of some creditors in favor of all, is where a debtor voluntarily assigns over his property for the benefit of creditors, and such assignment is valid, though made for the express purpose of defeating a particular creditor, and that quite independently of any statute enabling a debtor to enter into arrangements with his creditors. May on Fraudulent Conveyances, *105 (2nd ed.)

Assignment for Creditors.—The conveyance was made in contemplation of insolvency, and recites that the grantor was apprehensive that he would not be able to make a fair distribution of his property without an assignment. And it authorizes the sale of the property by the trustees, "either at public or private sale, and with such notice of sale, and in such manner, as they shall think most expedient and beneficial for his creditors," and out of the proceeds to pay, first, the costs and expenses and compensation of the trustees; and, second, that the balance be paid out to all his creditors in proportion to the amount of their respective demands, hoping and expecting that the fund will be sufficient to pay all and leave the grantor a balance, which, it is provided, should be paid back to him. The intrinsic evidence of fraud in the deed relied on is, that by its terms, the trustees had the discretion to sell at private sale, and upon credit, and that provision was made that in case any surplus should remain after payment of debts it should be paid back to the grantor. The statute for the prevention of fraud and perjuries provides that every gift, grant or conveyance of property made or obtained with intent to defraud creditors, shall be deemed void and of no effect. Whether there was fraud in the transaction presented in this case, is a matter of fact to be established by proof, and the onus probandi is thrown upon the party impeach-

b. Void Assignments.—Assignments have been held void as conflicting with the statute of frauds where the time of sale,¹ or of collection² by the assignee, or of finally closing the trust,³ has been by the assignment unreasonably or indefinitely postponed;

ing the deed. And where an instrument is ambiguous or indefinite and in one meaning is inoperative and void, and the other operative and valid, the latter is to be adopted in preference to the former. It is argued that an assignment in trust for creditors, which, by its provisions, tends to hinder and delay creditors is fraudulent and void. The provision of the statutes of 13 Elizabeth, which was held to be declaratory of the common law in England, and which is said to have been followed literally in the statutes of fraud in New York, declares "every conveyance or assignment," 133, etc., "made with intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors," etc., void. The provision in the Ohio statutes omits the words "hinder and delay." But I am not aware that this difference of phraseology is the foundation of any material distinction, in legal effect, between the English statute and that of Ohio. That hindering and delaying of a creditor which would bring an assignment within the operation of the statutes of England, would, I apprehend, constitute a fraud under the statutes of Ohio. As early as the case of Pickstock v. Lyster, Maule & S. 371, where a person being insolvent had, pending a suit against him by one of his creditors, assigned all his effects to trustees for the benefit of all his creditors, it was held that the assignment, although it prevented the suing creditor from reaching his debtor's effects by legal process, was not fraudulent within the operation of the statutes of frauds, although made with intent to delay the plaintiff in the suit in the collection of his debt by legal process. It is true that such an assignment, even where creditors are to be paid pari passu, is, in one sense, to hinder and delay them in the collection of their debts, or by withdrawing the property from the reach of any legal process to which they may wish to resort. This statute is to be construed according to its reasonable intent and object. And assignments, although designed manifestly to deprive particular creditors of speedy remedies at law, and thus hinder and delay them in the collection of their debts, or to deprive some of that full satisfaction of their debts which, by their superior diligence in prosecuting their suits they would otherwise certainly have obtained, are upheld as valid and effectual, although, in one sense, there is a manifest intent to hinder and delay one or more creditors in such assignment, yet there is no intent to cheat or defraud them; and, by a reasonable construction, such hinderance and delay only as would operate as a fraud and are designed as a fraud, come within the operation of the statute. When a man finds himself in failing circumstances and unable to pay all his debts he can do no act more just and equitable than to surrender and assign his property in trust for the benefit of his creditors. In such situation all the law can reasonably demand is a faithful application of all his property to the payment of all his debts; and when this object is accomplished by an assignment or deed of trust, for the benefit of all his creditors, the hinderance and delay which may operate to the prejudice of particular creditors is simply an unavoidable incident to a just and lawful act. And such mere incident to such laudable act cannot be held to vitiate the transaction as fraudulent until the maxim that equality is equity, in the distribution of the property of an insolvent, shall have been repudiated, and the highest act of justice which can be done by a debtor in contemplation of insolvency shall be deemed an act of dishonesty. If authority be necessary to sustain so plain a proposition, reference is made to Muir v. Howell, 4 East 1; Wilder v. Winne, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 284; Hoffman v. Mackall, 5 Ohio St. 132.

1. Hafner v. Irwin, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 490; Hardy v. Skinner, 9 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 191; Rundlett v. Dole, 10 N. H. 465; Farmers' Bank v. Douglass, 11 Sm. & M. (Miss., 469; Ward v. Trotter, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 1; Johnson v. Thweatt, 18 Ala. 745.

2. Storm v. Davenport, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 135.

3. Richardson v. Stapleton, 60 Miss. 97; Arthur v. Commercial etc. Bank 9 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 394.

where the assignee has been expressly authorized to sell at retail and on credit,¹ or on credit simply;² where the assignment has been made with a view to prevent a sacrifice of property;³ where the proceeds of the assigned property have been directed to be used in defending all suits which might be brought to recover their debts;⁴ where creditors who should sue have been expressly debarred from the benefit of the assignment,⁵ or postponed until all the other creditors are paid.⁶ Under a Californian statute, all voluntary assignments by a debtor in failing circumstances will be held void.⁷

Also where there is a reservation of a use or benefit of the grantor or his family or any person not a creditor.⁸ Where there is a reservation of surplus after paying specified debts, leaving other debts unpaid;⁹ where there is a reservation of a power of revocation;¹⁰ where it is provided that the transaction shall be kept a secret until the creditor shall have secured certain advantages to himself.¹¹

1. Carlton v. Baldwin, 22 Tex. 731; Rapalee v. Stewart, 27 N. Y. 311; Moir v. Brown, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 39; Lawrence v. Norton, 15 Fed. Rep. 853; Muller v. Norton, 19 Fed. Rep. 720; Burdick v. Post, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 168; Nicholson v. Leavitt, 2 Seld. (N. Y.) 510; Meacham v. Sternes, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 406.

But where a discretion was given the assignee to sell on credit if he thought it to be to the interest of the creditors, the deed will be held valid. Hoffman v. Mackall, 5 Ohio St. 138; Livesay's Ex. v. Beard, 22 W. Va. 585.

2. Barney v. Griffin, 2 N. Y. 365; Nicholson v. Leavitt, 6 N. Y. 510.

An assignment requiring a credit to be given beyond that authorized by law on sales by executors and administrators would in general be deemed conclusive evidence of an intent to hinder and delay creditors, and therefore void. Conkling v. Coonrod, 6 Ohio St. 612.

3. Van Nest v. Yoe, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 4; Vernon v. Morton, 8 Dana (Ky.) 247. See contra, Cason v. Murray, 15 Mo. 378.

4. Planck v. Schermerhorn, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 644; Mead v. Phillips, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 83.

An assignment for the benefit of creditors provided that the assignee should pay over to the creditors, under the direction of the court, "a pro rata share to each, equal in amount due them, at the same rate per cent. if less than the full sum due them, or to each of them." It was further provided that, if any creditor should not receive the full sum due him, the receipt of any just pro rata share of the amount due should be deemed a satisfaction of the demand, and so by him accepted. Held, that such an assignment was void on its face, as providing that creditors should accept a pro rata share of their claims in full satisfaction. Sperry v. Gallaher (Iowa, 1889), 41 N. W. Rep. 586.

5. Spence v. Bagwell, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 444; Berry v. Riley, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 307.

6. Marsh v. Bennett, 5 McLean (U. S.) 117.

A conveyance by an insolvent debtor in trust for assenting creditors cannot be avoided except for fraud at the suit of a creditor who does not assent. Nat'l etc. Bank v. Eagle etc. Co., 109 Mass. 38.

7. Dana v. Stanford, 10 Cal. 269.

8. Mackie v. Cairns, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 549; Murray v. Riggs, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 571; Kellog v. Richardson, 19 Fed. Rep. 71; Lawrence v. Norton, 15 Fed. Rep. 853; Baldwin v. Peet, 22 Tex. 708; Barney v. Griffin, 2 N. Y. 365.

9. Goodrich v. Downs, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 438; Barney v. Griffin, 2 Comst. (N. Y.) 365; Whallon v. Scott, 10 Watts (Pa.) 237; Planters' etc. Bank v. Clarke, 7 Ala. 765; Janney v. Barnes, 11 Leigh (Va.) 100; Sheppards v. Turpin, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 373.

10. Hoffman v. Mackall, 5 Ohio St. 135.

11. Hafner v. Irwin, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 490.

The reservation of the surplus to the grantor after payment of all the creditors will not make it fraudulent.¹

c. Void Conveyances and Sales.—In a suit to avoid a deed as fraudulent under the insolvent laws, the complainant must allege and prove that the grantor was indebted at the time, and that he made it or caused it to be made with a view of taking the benefit of the insolvent laws.²

A transfer of goods from a failing firm in satisfaction of a debt is not void because of the knowledge of the transferee that such firm is failing.³

A bill of sale, absolute on its face by an insolvent debtor, and delivery of possession of the goods and in pursuance of it, is fraudulent and void if accompanied with a secret trust from which the debtor may ultimately derive a pecuniary benefit.⁴

The mere fact of the insolvency of a decedent does not invalidate a mortgage given by him.⁵

d. Who Can Set Aside.—Where a failing debtor makes a conveyance void as against creditors under the insolvent law, it cannot be set aside by such creditors except by proceedings under the insolvent law.⁶ A court of equity may usually vacate such deeds.⁷

The assignee in some States has power to bring an action to set aside a conveyance void as defrauding creditors.⁸

1. Conkling v. Carson, 11 Ill. 503; Miller v. Stetson, 32 Ala. 166; Knapp v. McGowan, 96 N. Y. 75; Hoffman v. Mackall, 5 Ohio St. 135; Hall v. Denison, 17 Vt. 318; McFarland v. Birdsell, 14 Ind. 126; Banning v. Sibley, 3 Minn. 389.

2. Faringer v. Ramsey, 4 Md. Ch. 33.

When an absolute deed by the party insolvent to a third party is in fact a mortgage, the insolvent trustee will take the property in dispute into his exclusive possession and control, free from the interference of the mortgage. Waters v. Riggins, 19 Md. 536.

An instruction that the trustee of the insolvent could not recover against the vendee of the goods unless the jury was satisfied that the sale was void by the insolvent laws would be erroneous, for it might be void by the statute of Elizabeth. Dietus v. Fuss, 8 Md. 148.

A court of equity may vacate a deed executed by an insolvent debtor, but has no power to decree a sale of the property by the trustee. Jamison v. Chesnut, 8 Md. 34.

3. Walsh v. Kelley, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 98.

A sale by an insolvent debtor of his property on credit is valid as against creditors, if made in good faith and for a good consideration, and without any intent to hinder or defraud creditors. Scheitlin v. Stone, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 634.

4. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 441, 494.

5. Evans v. Pence, 78 Ind. 439. Ex parte McClenachan, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 502.

6. Berkeley etc. School v. Jarvis, 32 Conn. 412.

7. Jamison v. Chesnut, 8 Md. 34.

8. Huntsecker v. Heineg, 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 250; Englebert v. Blanlot, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 240; Tams v. Bullitt, 35 Pa. St. 308; Freeland v. Freeland, 102 Mass. 475; Filley v. King, 49 Conn. 211.

Knowledge of Transferee.—In a suit by an assignee to recover the value of personal property mortgaged by the insolvent, such mortgage covering practically all the property the latter had, it is proper to instruct the jury that defendant had reasonable cause to believe that the debtor made the mortgage to him in contemplation of insolvency, and in fraud of the provisions of the insolvency law, if such a state of facts was brought to his notice as would lead a prudent business man to the conclusion that the debtor was unable to meet his obligations as they matured, in the ordinary course of business, and that the presumption of fraud arising from the unusual character of the mortgage could only be overcome by proof on defendant's part that he took the proper steps to find out the pecuniary condition of the debtor, and in good faith used all reasonable means for that purpose. Buffum v. Jones, 144 Mass. 29.

17. Preferences—a. At Common Law.—It is a settled rule of the common law that a debtor in failing circumstances may not only dispose of his property for the use and benefit of his creditors generally, but may, by such a conveyance, give a preference in payment to one creditor before another, or to one class of creditors before another class.¹ And this rule applies equally to corporations as well as to individuals.²

In a suit by an assignee to recover the value of personal property mortgaged by the insolvent, such mortgage covering practically all the property the latter had, the question whether a mortgage was in the usual and ordinary course of business of the debtor is one of fact for the jury, and the opinion of witnesses upon the question is inadmissible. Buffum v. Jones, 144 Mass. 29.

Defendant's son called on him at an early hour in the morning, handed him the notes in controversy, without any explanation or direction as to their use, simply saying that he had sold out and was going away, and without any enquiry by defendant. Defendant applied the notes to a debt due him from his son. The notes were not transferred in the usual course of business, which, by R. L. Vt., § 1861, is prima facie evidence of fraud. He knew that his son had sold his entire business to one person. He supposed his son was solvent, and a short time before had released a mortgage for what his son owed him, on the son's application, who stated that he was going to sell out; but he did not enquire of his son why he was going to sell out, or attempt to ascertain his son's financial condition. Held, that he was chargeable with knowledge of his son's insolvency, and must account to the son's assignee for the notes. Reed v. Moody (Vt.), 15 Atl. Rep. 345.

1. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 193; 2 Kent's Com. *531; 1 Tucke's Com. *335; Brashear v. West, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 608; Mackie v. Cairns, 1 Hopk. (N. Y.) 373; Grover v. Wakeman, 11 Wend.

(N. Y.) 187; Hafner v. Irwin, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 496; Webb v. Daggett, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 11; Richards v. Levin, 16 Mo. 599; Pickstock v. Lyster, 3 Maule & S. 371; King v. Watson, 3 Price 6; Marshall v. Hutchinson, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 298, 305; State v. Bank of Md., 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 205; Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 556; Buffum v. Green, 5 N. H. 71; Moffat v. McDowall, 1 McCord. (S. Car.) Ch. 434; Moore v. Collins, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 126; Brown v. Minturn, 2 Gal. (U. S.) 557; Stevens v. Bell, 6 Mass. 339; Wilt v. Franklin, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 502; Grimes v. Farrington, 19 Neb. 44; Leonard v. Green, 34 Minn. 137; Whitfield v. Stiles, 57 Mich. 410; Bierbröwer v. Polk, 17 Neb. 268; Carter v. Reney, 62 Wis. 552; Berry v. O'Conner, 33 Minn. 530; Nelson v. Garey, 15 Neb. 531; Farwell v. Jones, 63 Iowa 316; Smith v. Diedrick, 30 Minn. 60; Messersmith v. Devendorf, 54 Wis. 498; Lord v. Devendorf, 54 Wis. 491; Hills v. Stockwell, 33 Fed. Rep. 432; Means v. Montgomery, 23 Fed. Rep. 421; J. M. Atherton Co. v. Ives, 20 Fed. Rep. 894; Martin v. Hausmen, 14 Fed. Rep. 160; Moline etc. Co. v. Rummell, 14 Fed. Rep. 155; Smith v. Craft, 12 Fed. Rep. 856; Lake Shore B. Co. v. Fuller (Pa.), 1 Atl. Rep. 731; Fuller etc. Co. v. Lewis, 101 N. Y. 674; Grubbs v. Morris, 103 Ind. 106; Ross v. Sedgwick, 69 Cal. 247; Wood v. Franks, 67 Cal. 32; Baily v. Kansas M. F. Co., 32 Kan. 73.

2. Catlin v. Eagle Bank, 6 Conn. 233; State v. Bank of Md., 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 205. See, however, Rouse, trustee v. The Merchants' National Bank of Cincinnati.

A corporation for profit, organized under the laws of this State, after it has become insolvent, and ceased to prosecute the objects for which it was created, cannot, by giving some of its creditors mortgages on the corporate property to secure antecedent debts without other consideration, create valid preferences in their behalf over the other creditors, or over a general assignment

The Supreme Court of the United States has laid down the broad rule that a debtor may prefer one creditor, pay him fully, and exhaust his whole property, leaving nothing for others equally meritorious.¹ This rule has been admitted in England, and under a stringent system of bankrupt laws,² and in States where insolvent laws were in force.³

The debtor may exercise this preference not only by the payment of money, but in the form of an assignment or appropriation of property;⁴ and this preference may be by a direct transfer of property,⁵ or by way of security,⁶ or by operation of law, as by judgment;⁷ or by transferring property in trust to a third person to hold and dispose of for the benefit of creditors.⁸

While this right has generally been admitted to exist where not denied by statute, yet it has often been severely condemned,⁹ thereafter made for the benefit of creditors.

The judgment of the court below establishing the plaintiff's claim, and directing the trustee to allow the same in the administration of the trust, is affirmed. The judgment giving the mortgages priority over the assignment is reversed, and on this branch of the case, judgment for the trustee will be entered. 46 O. S. (June 18th, 1889.)

1. Clarke v. White, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 178; Tompkins v. Wheeler, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 106.

2. Hopkins v. Gray, 7 Mod. 139; Cock v. Goodfellow, 10 Mod. 497; Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 193.

3. Wall v. Lakin, 13 Met. (Mass.) 167; United States v. Bank of United States, 8 Rob. (La.) 404.

4. Cason v. Murray, 15 Mo. 378; Young v. Dumas, 39 Ala. 60; Wright v. Linn, 16 Tex. 34; Cooper v. McClun, 16 Ill. 435; Heydock v. Stanhope, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 474; Garr v. Hill, 1 Stock. (N. J.) 210.

5. Edrington v. Rogers, 15 Tex. 188; Powers v. Green, 14 Ill. 386; Eastman v. McAlpin, 1 Kelly 157; Hickley v. Farmers' Bank, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 377; Bruce's Admrs. v. Smith, 3 Harr. & J. (Md.) 499; Hall v. Denison, 17 Vt. 310; Wedgery v. Haskell, 5 Mass. 153; Nostrand v. Atwood, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 284; United States v. King, Wall. (C. C.) 21.

6. Stevens v. Bell, 6 Mass. 339; Mussey v. Noyes, 26 Vt. 471; Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 197; Davis v. Anderson, 1 Kelley 176; Anderson v. Tydings, 3 Md. Ch. 167; Waters v. Cornly, 3 Harr. (Del.) 117; Johnson v. Whitwell, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 71.

7. Guy v. McIlree, 26 Pa. St. 92; Blakey's Appeal, 7 Pa. St. 449; Williams v. Brown, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 682; Wilder v. Winne, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 284.

8. Nostrand v. Atwood, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 284; Stevens v. Bell, 6 Mass. 339.

9. Condemning Preferences.—In the case of Riggs v. Murray, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 577, CHANCELLOR KENT used the following language in reference to it: "As we have no bankrupt system, the right of one insolvent to select one creditor and to exclude another is applied to every case, and the consequences of such partial payments are extensively felt and deeply deplored. Creditors out of view, and who reside abroad or at a distance, are usually neglected. This checks confidence in dealing and hurts the credit and character of the county. These partial assignments are, no doubt, founded, in certain cases, upon meritorious considerations, yet the temptation leads strongly to abuse and to the indulgence of improper motives."

In Atkinson v. Jordon, 5 Ohio 293, the following description of its workings was given: "The practice among speculating creditors of shattered and desperate circumstances, of accumulating property upon credit with a desire of securing the means of satisfying the claims of confidential creditors, who contribute in various ways to keep up the credit upon which the property has been procured, and then passing these effects so procured into the hands of trustees to be protected from legal process, and to be exhausted in satisfying these preferred and is now abridged or denied by statute in many of the States.

b. Statutory Enactments and State Decisions.—The question of preference is now very much controlled by the statutes of the various States, no two of which are perhaps just alike. In the notes, some of the more important decisions are given.¹

claims, leaving all other creditors without a farthing, can hardly be justified on any sound moral or legal principle. Instances are frequent of merchandise procured from an honest trader, on credit, being handed over in bulk to trustees, to secure endorers and other confidential creditors. Equity delights in equality, and it is becoming a grave question whether courts of justice should longer countenance a sinking debtor in preferring one creditor to another in the distribution of his effects." See Beers v. Lyon, 21 Conn. 610; Barker v. Hall, 13 N. H. 301; Peck v. Merrill, 26 Vt. 686, 692; Pierson v. Manning, 2 Mich. 446; Nichols v. McEwen, 17 N. Y. 22; Huff v. Roane, 22 Ark. 184.

An examination of the following authorities will show that the right is decided to exist in nearly all of the States where not removed by statute:

1 Am. Lead. Cases (Harr. & Wad.) 95; 2 Kent's Com. *532; Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 556; Clarke v. White, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 178; Pearpont v. Graham, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 232; Halsey v. Whitney, 4 Mas. (U. S.) 213; Lawrence v. Davis, 3 McLean (U. S.) 177; Putnam v. Hubbell, 42 N. Y. 106; Cameron v. Montgomery, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 128; Ingraham v. Wheeler, 6 Conn. 277; Nostrand v. Atwood, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 281; Allen v. Gardiner, 7 R. I. 22; Mussey v. Noyes, 26 Vt. 471; Atkinson v. Jordan, 5 Ohio 273; McColgan v. Hopkins, 17 Md. 395; McCullough v. Sommerville, 8 Leigh (Va.) 415; Gordon v. Cannon, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 387; Moffatt v. McDowall, 1 McCord Ch. (S. Car.) 434; Alemant v. Russell, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 183; Bellamy v. Bellamy, 6 Fla. 62; Robinson v. Rapelye, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 86; Rankin v. Lodor, 21 Ala. 380; Layson v. Rowan, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 1; Wright v. Linn, 16 Tex. 34, 42; Pearson v. Rockhill, 4 B. Monr. (Ky.) 296; Cason v. Murray, 15 Mo. 378; Cross v. Bryant, 2 Scam. (Ill.) 37; Hollister v. Loud, 2 Mich. 314; Huff v. Roane, 22 Ark. 184; Lay v. Seago, 47 Ga. 82.

1. Alabama, preferences may be made. Clayton v. Johnson, 36 Ala. 406.

California, preference voids assignment. C. Code, 3449, 3469.

Colorado, preference prohibited. Doggett v. Herman, 16 Fed. Rep. 812; Campbell v. Colorado etc. Co., 9 Colo. 60; Campbell v. Colorado etc. Co. (Colo.), 7 Pac. Rep. 291.

Connecticut, forbidden. Acts 1885, p. 491; Croswell v. Allis, 25 Conn. 301; Robertson v. Todd, 31 Conn. 555; Quinebang Bank v. Brewster, 30 Conn. 559; Berkeley etc. School v. Jarvis, 32 Conn. 412; Utley v. Smith, 24 Conn. 290.

A merchant, finding that he was in failing circumstances, proposed to his largest and most pressing creditor that he should take back the goods he had sold him, and apply them at cost price to the payment of his account. He made this proposition, not with the intention of going into insolvency, but with the view and hope, which he communicated to the creditor, of reducing his stock and cutting down his expenses, and thus of continuing in business. The creditor, finding that the merchant could not sell the goods as a whole to anyone else, and that he was unable to borrow money to meet the bill, took the goods back. A few days later the merchant's store was closed by attachment, and he was forced into insolvency. Held, that these facts did not warrant the conclusion that the return of the goods was made "with a view to insolvency," and that the transfer was, therefore, not invalidated by Gen. St. Conn., p. 378, § 1, providing that preferences made "with a view to insolvency" shall be void. Hayden v. Allyn, 55 Conn. 280.

Dakota, forbidden. C. C., Secs. 2027-2046.

Delaware, forbidden. Laws of Del., vol. 15, ch. 187.

District of Columbia, permitted; common law prevails.

Florida, permitted; common law prevails.

Georgia, permitted, but limited by statute. Code, 1952-3. McWhorten v. Wright, 5 Ga. 555.

Idaho, not permitted. Law, §§ 5875-5932.

Illinois, not permitted. Hurd, 156.

Indiana, preferences not permitted in assignment, but may be made by a bona fide sale or mortgage. R. S. 2662. Wilcoxon v. Annesly, 23 Ind. 285.

Iowa, not permitted in assignment. Farwell v. Jones, 63 Iowa 316; Van Patten v. Burr, 52 Iowa 518.

Kansas, not permitted. Stat. 384.

Kentucky, not permitted. White v. Graves, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 523; Terrell v. Jennings, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 450; Applegate v. Murrill, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 22.

Whenever the debtor contemplates insolvency, and, with the design to prefer one or more creditors, does an act which enables the favored creditor, through the forms of legal proceedings, to obtain a preference he could not obtain without such act of the debtor, it comes within the act of 1856. King v. Moody, 79 Ky. 63.

Louisiana, not permitted within a year prior to assignment.

An insolvent sold his property to a creditor for an alleged consideration of $3,500. The sale was afterwards rescinded, and the insolvent surrendered the property to his creditors. Held, that these acts were not sufficient, under Rev. St. La., § 1802, et seq., prohibiting preference of creditors, to debar the insolvent from the benefit of the insolvent laws. Kolman v. His Creditors, (La.) 3 So. Rep. 382; Dwoal v. Acdreay, 1 La. Ann. 243.

A contract by which an insolvent debtor, in fraud of creditors, transferred to a creditor, in satisfaction of his debt, a number of notes and accounts, and paid the difference in cash, if subject to revocation, must be revoked as a whole; and the payment made, though "of a just debt in money," being part and parcel of the illegal contract, must fall with it. State Nat. Bank v. Monroe Cotton Press Co. (La.), 2 So. Rep. 605.

In an action by creditors to revoke a transfer of property, made by an insolvent banker, where the evidence established that part of the money delivered consisted of the identical bank notes and cash which the debtor, in his capacity as treasurer of a corporation, had received from the stockholders thereof, and which he had set aside in a particular drawer by itself as the property of the corporation, held, as to such moneys, that they were the property of the corporation which the treasurer was bound to deliver, and the corporation had the right to receive, and that such delivery is not subject to revocation. State Nat. Bank v. Cotton Press Co. (La.), 2 So. Rep. 605.

Where the creditor, knowing the insolvency of the debtor, takes from him for an antecedent debt goods on which he has no privilege as vendor, the preference is illegal. Florence v. Nolan, 4 La. Ann. 329.

Maine, not permitted.

If a creditor within four months of the commencement of insolvency proceedings against his debtor receives property from such debtor in settlement of an unmatured claim, it will be deemed a fraudulent preference under the insolvent law when the creditor obtained the property through the agency of the debtor's son, whom he employed for that purpose, and who knew the debtor's financial condition. Mathews v. Riggs (Me.), 13 Atl. Rep. 48.

The giving of security when a debt is created, if free from fraud, is not against the provisions of the insolvent law. A bill of sale given in good faith which would be binding on the vendor is binding on his assignee. The assignee in insolvency stands in the place of the insolvent, and takes the property subject to all valid claims and liens. Creditors electing to avoid a fraudulent conveyance, take the property as it was when transferred and subject to all liens then existing. An exchange of one set of securities for another of equal value is no preference, and may be made by one, though insolvent. Hutchinson v. Murchie et al., 74 Me. 187.

In order to invalidate security taken for a debt as being a preference under the clause of the insolvent law which makes such provision in case the creditor has reasonable cause to believe the debtor insolvent, it is not enough that the creditor has some cause to suspect the insolvency of his debtor, but he must have such a knowledge of facts as to induce a reasonable belief of his debtor's insolvency. King v. Storer et al., 75 Me. 62; Porter v. Bullard, 26 Me. 448; Randall v. Lunt, 51 Me. 246.

Maryland, not permitted. Manrq v. Gittings, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 492; Harding v. Stevenson, 6 Har. & J. (Md.), 264.

Under Code Md. art. 48, providing that preferences contained in deeds made by merchants, bankers, etc., being insolvent or in contemplation of insolvency, shall be void, provided the grantor be proceeded against, etc., the making of a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors, which recites that the debtor is insolvent, and contains preferences, constitutes an act of insolvency, and is avoided upon the proper proceedings. Although the preferred creditors reside in another State, and have agreed to take the deed in satisfaction of all pre-existing debts, yet the deed is not such a contract as that its obligation is protected against State insolvency laws, since it must be taken to have been accepted with regard to the lex loci rei sitæ, and the original debts remain in force. Brown v. Smart (Md.), 14 Atl. Rep. 468.

The honest belief of a person who knows himself to be insolvent at the time of showing preference to creditors that he would be able to go on in business, is no defence to his other creditors' petition to have him declared an insolvent. Castleberg v. Wheeler (Md.), 12 Atl. Rep. 3.

Massachusetts Insolvent Laws.—A conveyance by way of preference, made by an insolvent debtor, in contravention of the provisions of the insolvent law of Massachusetts, while the United States bankrupt act of 1867 was in force, is a sufficient cause for instituting proceedings in insolvency against the debtor after the repeal of the bankrupt act. A petition for a warrant to seize the estate of an insolvent debtor, under the Gen. Sts., ch. 118, § 103, which alleges that he has made a mortgage of his personal property to secure the payment of a pre-existing debt to the mortgagee, with intent to secure to the latter a preference, and to defraud his creditors, the debtor being at the time insolvent and having reasonable cause to believe himself insolvent, need not allege that the mortgagee knew or had reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent. Lothrop v. Highland Foundry Co., 128 Mass. 120; Abbott v. Shepherd, 142 Mass. 17.

A guardian who had misappropriated money belonging to his ward, being insolvent, within six months before the filing of a petition in insolvency against him, and with a view to give a preference to his ward, deposited his own money in a savings bank in his name as guardian of the ward. Held, that his assignee in insolvency could maintain a bill in equity to recover the amount so deposited, although the ward was ignorant of the misappropriation and of the fact of the guardian's insolvency. Bush et al. v. Moore et al., 133 Mass. 108; Crowninshield v. Ketrledge, 7 Met. (Mass.) 520; Penniman v. Cole, 8 Met. (Mass.) 490; Ex parte Jordon, 9 Met. (Mass.) 292; Stevens v.

Blanchard, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 169; Holbrook v. Jackson, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 136.

An agreement by a creditor who has received an unlawful preference to surrender the property and share pro rata, does not purge the illegality. Blodgett v. Hildredth, 11 Cush. 311.

Michigan.—No preference permitted. How. St. Ch. 303.

Act 193 of 1883, the purpose of which was to prevent preferences among creditors and to distribute the debtor's property equally, is void. It is inoperative in omitting to provide for notice to parties concerned; for any record of the proceedings and review thereof; and for any means of giving effect to its provisions. It is unconstitutional as violating (1) the limitations on judicial power, since it gives a judge at chambers power which only a court should exercise, in the final disposition of the debtor's property; (2) the provision which secures the right of trial by jury, since it looks to a summary disposition of cases which necessarily turn on questions of fact; (3) the prohibition against taking property without "due process of law;" (4) the prohibition against imprisonment for debt, in that it allows a circuit judge to issue the writ of ne exeat at discretion; (5) the prohibition against impairing the obligation of contracts, since it deprives creditors of their remedies. It also attempts to exercise the questionable right of legislating upon the claims of foreign creditors, and to place them on a better footing than domestic ones; and it is as capable of being used to defraud as to protect creditors. Risser et al. v. Hoyt et al., 53 Mich. 185.

See Cross v. Cross, 55 Mich. 280; Heinemann v. Hart, 55 Mich. 64; Kellogg v. Root, 23 Fed. Rep. 525.

Minnesota, no preferences.

A petition under Laws 1881, ch. 148, § 2, against an insolvent debtor, on the ground that he has confessed judgment in favor of one of his creditors, need not allege that the creditor thereby obtained a preference. In re Pauline Graeff, 30 Minn. 476.

Minnesota insolvent law (Laws 1881, ch. 148), does not render preferential mortgages fraudulent or void as respects the mortgagor's creditors, except in proceedings under it. Berry v. O'Connor, 33 Minn. 29.

The insolvent law of 1881 is not unconstitutional because of the manner in which the claims of creditors against the insolvent estate are to be established. The determination of the receiver respecting such claims is not conclusive, and one aggrieved thereby may have a judicial determination in the district court. A conveyance by an insolvent debtor, preferring creditors, may be avoided by subsequent insolvency proceedings instituted by creditors against the debtor, under section 2 of the act. In such case the receiver may maintain an action to have such conveyance adjudged void. Weston, Receiver, v. Loyhed, 30 Minn. 221; In re Lindeke, 34 Minn. 282; Leary v. Graeff, 30 Minn. 476.

A provision in an insolvent law providing that a preferential conveyance made in fraud of the provisions of the statute shall be void, is to be construed as meaning simply that it is voidable only in favor of proceedings under and in aid of the law. A creditor who is not a party to the insolvency proceedings, but is claiming the property by virtue of an attachment or judgment against the insolvent debtor, can claim no benefit from this provision. Smith v. Brainerd, 37 Minn. 479.

A conveyance of property or a payment may constitute a preference, although the motive for making it be merely to secure an extension of credit, so as to be enabled to go on in business. Corliss v. Jewett, 36 Minn. 364.

Mississippi, common law exists.

Missouri, preferences invalidate assignment. 1 Rev. St. 354; Freund v. Yeagerman, 26 Fed. Rep. 812; Clapp v. Northmeyer, 25 Fed. Rep. 71; Kerbs v. Ewing, 22 Fed. Rep. 693.

Montana, common law.

Nebraska, no preferences. Insolvent law. Nelson v. Gary, 15 Neb. 531.

Nevada, insolvent law.

New Hampshire, insolvent law.

An insolvent debtor may give a preference to one creditor, by paying his debt in full, to the exclusion of all the rest of the creditors, provided it be done in good faith. Buffan v. Green, 5 N. H. 71.

New Jersey, preferences not allowed, except as to mortgage and judgment creditors. Rev. Sts., p. 36-37.

It is the inherent right of a debtor to prefer creditors in the entire absence of legal or actual fraud, though not in and by an assignment. Owen v. Arvis, 26 N. J. L. 23; Garretson v. Brown, 26 N. J. L. 425.

New Mexico, common law.

New York, assignments are statutory or under the common law. Under the former there can be no preference; under the latter there may be. Code. 2149-2187.

An assignment by a debtor is conclusive evidence of his insolvency at the time, and if, by such assignment, a preference is given to one or many of his creditors, it is a bar to his discharge. Morewood v. Hollister, 6 N. Y. 309.

Where an insolvent in contemplation of obtaining a discharge, confessed a judgment on which his property was sold, his discharge was set aside as fraudulent in law, though the judgment was confessed to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors without preference. Matter of Hurst, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 239.

The assignment of a chose in action will prevent its passing by a general assignment to the assignee under the insolvent and assignment laws, though the debtor and subsequent assignees have no notice. Muir v. Schenck, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 228.

North Carolina, preferences allowed.

Ohio, preferences cannot be given in deed of assignment, but may be given before assignment by sale or mortgage. Bagaley v. Waters, 7 Ohio St. 359; Floyd v. Smith, 9 Ohio St. 546. See Rouse v. Merchant Nat. Bank, 46 O. S. (June 18th, 1889), as to corporations.

Oregon, preferences not permitted.

Pennsylvania, preferences allowed.

Rhode Island, preferences forbidden.

South Carolina, preferences not permitted.

A preference, to be under and within the means of the prison bounds act, must be fraudulent. Robinson v. Amy, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 289; McKenzie v. Garzizer, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 234.

Tennessee, no preferences allowed.

Flash v. Wilkerson, 22 Fed. Rep. 689; Flash v. Wilkerson, 20 Fed. Rep. 257.

Texas, preferences allowed.

A creditor took title to more of the property of an insolvent debtor than was necessary to satisfy his claim, and paid him for the excess. Held, that though a failing debtor in Texas may prefer a creditor, he cannot transfer his property to such creditor, receiving a partial money consideration therefor, and by so doing cut off the rights of other creditors. Black v. Vaughan (Tex.), 7 S. W. Rep. 604.

Utah, common law prevails.

Vermont, no preferences allowed.

Mortgages void under a State insolvency law are not freed from its operation because owned by a national bank.

Where it is declared that a preference is a fraud in law if made within the time limited, it is not fraudulent if made before the time, and mortgages and deeds of trust executed prior thereto and recorded within the time limited are valid.¹

18. Distribution of Assets—a. To Whom Payable.—Distribution to creditors comprises the whole object and aim of insolvency proceedings.² All creditors who have properly presented their claims are entitled to share in the distribution.³ But where an assignment is upon express terms, creditors, in order to participate, must comply with the terms;⁴ and where preferences are made and permitted, preferred creditors must be first paid.⁵ Only Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 758.

A bank is affected with its cashier's knowledge of his insolvency, so that a preferential transfer to it by him within four months of the filing against him of a petition of insolvency is void, under R. L. Vt. 1860. Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 762*.

Securities deposited by a cashier with his bank in lieu of an equal amount of his own paper, vest at once in the bank, and, if so deposited more than four months before a petition filed in insolvency against the cashier, are not within R. L. Vt., § 1860. Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 762*.

R. L. Vt., § 1860, providing that transfers made by the debtor within four months of the filing of a petition in insolvency contemplates immediate action on such petition, and a petition filed three months after such transfer by one creditor, which is acted on two months later at the instance of another, will not avoid the transfer. Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 758; Witters v. Sowles, 33 Fed. Rep. 540.

Under R. L. Vt., § 1860, declaring void all transfers made by the debtor within four months of the filing of the petition in insolvency; and section 1966, providing that chattel mortgages shall not be valid against any person except the mortgagor, his executors and administrators, unless the property changes hands, or the mortgage is recorded,—a chattel mortgage executed more than four months, but recorded only ten days, before the filing of a petition in insolvency against the mortgagor, is valid. Gilbert v. Vail (Vt.), 14 Atl. Rep. 542.

Stevens v. Gosselin, 58 Vt. 38; Clay v. Towle, 78 Me. 86.

Virginia, preferences allowed.

Washington Territory, not allowed.

Wisconsin, not allowed. Winner v. Hoyt, 66 Wis. 227; Bachhaus v. Sleeper, 66 Wis. 68; Batten v. Smith, 62 Wis. 92.

Sec. 2, ch. 349, Laws of 1883 (providing that every sale of property made by an insolvent debtor "within sixty days prior to the making of any such assignment [for the benefit of creditors], and in contemplation thereof or of insolvency, shall be void and of no effect"), does not render any sale void unless an assignment is actually made within sixty days thereafter, or, perhaps, unless the sale was made in contemplation of an application by the vendor for the benefits of the insolvent act. Whether in the latter case the sale would be void is not determined. Anstedt v. Bentley, 61 Wis. 629.

The mere fact that a husband is insolvent will not preclude him from exercising his legal right of repaying his wife, in preference to his other creditors, money which he or his firm borrowed of her. Brickley v. Walker, 68 Wis. 563.

Wyoming, not allowed.

1. Gilbert v. Vail (Vt. 1888), 14 Atl. Rep. 544; Bump on Bankruptcy (10th ed.) 796; Jones on Chattel Mort., § 364.

2. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 586.

3. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 587.

The rule of law that the personal estate is the primary fund for the payment of debts applies as well to the distribution of estates of insolvents as to the distribution of the estates of decedents. But the rule is applicable only to the distribution of an actual fund, and not a fictitious one. Appeal of Scott (Pa.), 8 Atl. Rep. 402.

4. Lea's Appeal, 9 Pa. St. 504; Jewett v. Woodward, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 195.

It should be remembered that such conditions very often invalidate the assignment. See infra, VOID ASSIGNMENTS.

5. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 587-589.

those who were creditors at the time the assignment was made can participate.¹

Where there is a difficulty in determining the mode and order of payment, the court may be applied to for instructions.²

A creditor for usurious interest cannot participate.³

b. How Paid.—The distribution is made either in one payment, or in successive payments or dividends.⁴ Interest should be allowed on all debts.⁵

c. Notice of Payment Should be Given.—Independently of any statute provision, notice should always be given of a distribution.⁶

d. Order of Payment—(1) Claims of United States.—The United States have the exclusive privilege of being entitled to priority of payment over other creditors in all cases of the insolvency or bankruptcy of their debtor.⁷

1. A debt subsequently originating is not entitled to payment out of the trust estate. Rome etc. Bank v. Eames, 4 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 83.

And where a note was made the day after the assignment was executed and delivered, it was held that it could not be included in the assignment, nor could the assignor by antedating the note, vary the effect of the instrument. Sheldon v. Smith, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 594; Power v. Alger, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 284.

A judgment recovered after his assignment on a previous cause of action is valid, and the judgment creditor is entitled to participate in the distribution. Pittsburg etc. R. Co.'s Appeal, 3 Grant (Pa.) 68.

2. Pratt v. Adams, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 615.

Such application may be made either by motion or bill in equity. Codwise v. Gelston, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 507, 521.

All parties should have notice of the application. Anon v. Gelp'ke, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 245; Stone v. Miller, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 431; People v. Soper, 7 N. Y. 431; Wheeler v. Perry, 18 N. H. 307; Dimmock v. Bixby, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 368.

3. Pratt v. Adams, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 639.

To What Debts Applied.—An assignment made under the provisions of the assignment or insolvent law only provides for the payments of such debts as could be recovered against the bankrupt or insolvent himself, either at law or in equity. It therefore follows as a necessary consequence, that every creditor who comes in to prove a debt under such an assignment must be prepared to show a claim which was valid and recoverable against the person whose property has been assigned. But in the case of a voluntary assignment, where the assignor creates his own trusts, a creditor who comes in to claim a share of the fund under it must be content to take such share of it as the assignor intended to give him, and cannot claim that which was intended to be given to the assignees in trust for others. A creditor of the assignor, whether provided for by the assignment or not, who wishes to repudiate the trust of the assignment on the grounds that they are illegal and a fraud upon the honest creditors, must apply to set aside the assignment as fraudulent and void against him as a creditor, instead of coming in under the assignment itself as a preferred creditor or otherwise. Pratt v. Adams, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 615.

4. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 426.

5. Matter of Murray, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 204.

6. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 599; U. S. v. U. S. Bank, 8 Rob. (La.) 262.

Notice is required by statute in many States.

7. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 600; U. S. Statutes, 1797-1799; U. S. Statutes at Large, 515; U. S. Rev. Statutes, § 3466; United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 358.

Reason of Rule.—The right of priority of payment of debts due the government is a prerogative of the crown, well known to the common law. It is founded not so much upon any personal advantage to the sovereign as upon

And this priority has been held to extend to debts due after the assignment as well as those due before.¹ But it has been held that this priority of the United States only extends to assignments that are voluntary, and not to involuntary or legal insolvencies.²

To entitle the United States to priority, the assignment must have been a general one,³ as distinguished from a partial one.⁴

This right of priority of the United States can be avoided by no act of the debtor.⁵ Incorporations are included as well as private individuals.⁶

It only attaches on the residue of the fund in the assignee's hands after payment of expenses incurred in its collection.⁷ A surety who has paid money to the government has the same right of priority.⁸ Local laws of a State cannot create a priority in favor of other creditors which will supersede the claim of the United States.⁹

(2) Taxes and Debts Due State.—Taxes assessed upon the property assigned, and debts due the State, usually occupy the next place in the order of priority.¹⁰

motives of public policy, in order to secure an adequate revenue to sustain the public burdens and discharge the public debts. The claim of the United States, however, does not stand upon any sovereign prerogative, but is exclusively founded upon the actual provisions of their own statutes. The same policy which governed in the case of the royal prerogative may be clearly traced in these statutes, and as that policy has mainly a reference to the public good, there is no reason for giving to them a strict and narrow interpretation; like all other statutes of this nature, they ought to receive a fair and reasonable interpretation, according to the just import of their terms. U. S. v. Bank of N. Car., 6 Pet. (U. S.) 34.

1. U. S. v. Bank of N. Car., 6 Pet. (U. S.) 29.

2. Theluson v. Smith, Pet. (C. C.) 195.

3. U. S. v. Bank U. S., 8 Rob. (La.) 262; U. S. v. McLellan, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 345; Conrad v. Atl. Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 386; U. S. v. Hove, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 73; U. S. v. Hunter, 5 Mas. (U. S.) 229; U. S. v. Clark, 1 Paine (U. S.) 629; U. S. v. Howland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 108; U. S. v. Monroe, 5 Mas. (U. S.) 572.

4. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 604, 190.

5. U. S. v. Mott, 1 Paine (U. S.) 188.

6. Beaston v. Farmers' Bank of Del., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 102.

7. U. S. v. Hunter, 5 Mas. (U. S.) 229.

8. Hunter v. U. S., 5 Pet. (U. S.) 173; U. S. v. Hunter, 5 Mas. (U. S.) 229.

9. Field v. U. S., 9 Pet. (U. S.) 182.

Section 3466 of the Revised Statutes, ante, p. 447, which, in certain cases therein mentioned, gives to the United States priority of payment of debts due to it, does not apply to its demands against an insolvent national bank. Cook Co. Nat. Bank v. United States, 107 U. S. 445.

10. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 607.

This is usually regulated by statute.

All taxes of every description assessed against the assignor, upon any personal property held by him before his assignment, shall be paid by the assignee or trustee out of the proceeds of the property assigned, in preference to any other claims against the assignor. R. Stat. Ohio, § 6355.

A claim against the estate in insolvency of the collector of taxes of a town, for taxes collected and unaccounted for by him, is one entitled to priority in the order for a dividend, as a "debt due to" the town, under the Pub. Sts., ch. 157, § 104, cl. 1. Bent v. Hubbardston, 138 Mass. 99.

Stat. 1879, ch. 154, § 15, requiring "city taxes to be paid in full," is applicable to an insolvent's estate, in which no dividend had been made until after that statute took effect, although proceedings in insolvency were commenced

(3) Rent.—In many cases the landlord of the assignor's premises is entitled to a preference over other creditors, arising from his right to distrain the goods assigned.¹

(4) Labor, etc.—It is now provided by statute in a great many of the States that certain claims for labor shall be entitled to a preference.²

(5) Secured Creditors.—In some courts it has been held that a secured creditor is entitled to receive a dividend on the entire claim on demand for which he is liable as surety to an amount sufficient to pay him in full;³ others have held that he can only prior to the enactment of the statute. Belfast v. Fogler, 71 Me. 403.

1. Burrill on Assign. (3rd ed.) 607; see Morris v. Parker, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 187.

Rent accruing after the tenant has made an assignment for creditors under the insolvency law of the State is not provable as a claim or debt against the estate. Wilder v. Estate of Bristol, 37 Minn. 248.

The court of insolvency may order the assignee of an insolvent estate to pay out of the assets a reasonable sum for the use of leasehold property, by the messenger and assignee, for the storage, sale, and delivery of goods of the insolvent estate, until the lease is disclaimed by the assignee in the manner provided in the Pub. Sts., ch. 157, § 26. Abbott v. Stearns et al., 139 Mass. 168.

An action for use and occupation will not lie against the assignee in insolvency of a debtor who, at the time of filing of his petition, was a tenant at will of certain premises, merely upon proof that the goods of the insolvent were allowed to remain on the premises for about two months thereafter, and that during said time the assignee entered with workmen, who for several days were engaged in removing the goods. Wales v. Chase et al., 139 Mass. 538.

2. See statute of different States.

The Ohio statute is as follows: That every person who shall have performed any labor as an operative in the service of the assignor shall be entitled to receive out of the trust fund, before the payment of general creditors the full amount of the wages due to such person for such labor, not exceeding three hundred dollars, performed within twelve months preceding the assignment. R. S., § 6355.

Certain citizens made subscriptions to the stock of a railroad company whose road was in process of construction. These subscribers were interested as property owners in the completion of the road. The subscriptions were to be made to the company and by the company turned over to these subscribers. The latter entered into a contract for grading, tieing and bridging a certain portion of the road at a designated cost, the subscriptions to be collected by those engaged in this work, and if more than sufficient to pay for the work, the surplus was to be returned to the company. It was further agreed that the company should give either stock or transportation notes, in payment for materials furnished and work done, to each individual subscriber in proportion to his subscription. Of the subscriptions $6,000 were thus collected and work done under the contract to the amount of $9,900. Further work was suspended by reason of the insolvency of the company and a sheriff's sale of its property. In the distribution of the proceeds of said sale the parties who had done the work under the above contract claimed to participate therein as creditors and contractors and to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale. Held, that their claims were properly rejected.

One who contracts to furnish five thousand ties to a railroad is not a contractor and preferred creditor under the joint resolution of 1843 of the General Assembly.

Sub-contractors and laborers employed by sub-contractors are not within the protection of the resolution of 1843. The act of April 4th, 1862, does not enlarge the class of persons protected by the resolution of 1843; it merely aids in the remedy. Hart's Appeal, 96 Pa. St. 355.

Richardson v. Thurber, 104 N. Y. 606; First Nat. Bank v. Baker, 68 Wis. 442.

3. Keim's Appeal, 27 Pa. St. (3 cases) receive a dividend on the balance remaining unpaid after exhausting the secured property.¹ If some creditors have other security, and their dividends with their security will more than pay their debts, the assignee must redeem the security for the benefit of the other creditors.²

42; Morris v. Alwine, 22 Pa. St. 441.

In the latter case a creditor had a bond for a large amount, secured by mortgage, and the dividend allowed to creditors from the avails of personal property was 8.26%, of which the creditor's portion ($1,650) of the whole debt ($20,000) was set apart for future disposition, and he afterwards received $17,938 from his mortgage, it was held that he was entitled to receive the dividend on the whole debt in addition to what he received on the mortgage. Patten's Appeal, 45 Pa. St. 151; Miller's App., 35 Pa. St. 481.

1. Midgely v. Slocomb, 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) N. S. 275; Midgely v. Slocomb, 32 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 423; Wurtz v. Hart, 13 Iowa 515; Dickson v. Chorn, 6 Iowa 19.

2. Allen v. Danielson, 15 R. I. 480.

Mortgages of a decedent were not invalidated by the insolvency of his estate; but under §§ 108 and 109, 2 R. S. 1876, p. 534, were preferred debts as to the personality. Evans v. Pence, 78 Ind. 439.

As to payment of preferred creditors having other security, see Besley v. Lawrence, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 581; Strong v. Skinner, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 546.

As to payment of debts due the assignee himself. See Gibbs v. Cunningham, 4 Md. Ch. 322; French v. Townes, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 513.

When a note is allowed by the commissioners against the insolvent estate of a deceased surety, and afterwards a dividend is paid on the note by the trustees of the insolvent principals, who have assigned, in the final distribution of such surety's estate by the probate court, the owner of the note is entitled to a dividend only on the balance, and not on the amount so allowed. Lowell et al. v. French, 54 Vt. 193.

After execution of the mortgage in suit, and prior to the commencement of the action, the mortgagor was adjudged insolvent, and a stay of proceedings ordered. No judgment herein was asked for any deficiency after sale of the mortgaged property, but the same was waived.

Held, the order in the matter of the insolvency staying proceedings did not prevent plaintiff from foreclosing his mortgage lien. Montgomery v. Merrill et al., 62 Cal. 385.

Where the insolvent law provides that a secured creditor may release and deliver up to the assignee the property held as security, and be admitted as a creditor for the whole of his debt, the proof of the whole claim, without a release, would not of itself operate to discharge or release the security. Only the assignee could avail himself of the right which this provision of the act was intended to secure for the benefit of the estate. A mortgagee who has proved his debt against the estate of the mortgagor without discharging his mortgage, is not thereby estopped to claim under it against a subsequent attaching creditor who has not proved his debt. Smith v. Brainard, 37 Minn. 479.

The Massachusetts insolvent law provides that a creditor of an insolvent debtor, who is secured by a pledge of the debtor's property, may have the same sold, apply the proceeds towards paying the debt, and prove up the residue before the assignee; or else he may deliver up and release the pledge, and prove the whole debt before the assignee, and, "if any property pledged is not released and delivered up, the creditor shall not be allowed to prove any part of his debt" (Pub. St., ch. 157, § 28). Held that, when a creditor of an insolvent debtor, who holds security which comes within the terms of this statute inadvertently, by mistake either of law or fact, proves his whole debt, without disclosing his security, and before he has derived any advantage, or the creditors have suffered any detriment, from his acts, takes proper measures to waive and abandon his proof, and to pursue his rights as a secured creditor, according to law, he does not thereby waive or forfeit his security, and the unsecured creditors do not thereby acquire an equitable right to it, which can be enforced by the assignee. Nichols v. Smith, 143 Mass. 455.

Claim by Second Mortgagee.—Where

real estate of an insolvent, subject to two power of sale mortgages, has been sold under the power contained in the first mortgage, and the holder of the first mortgage has accounted with the holder of the second mortgage, and delivered to her the balance after settlement of his own claim, the holder of the second mortgage is entitled to prove the balance of her claim against the insolvent estate. Pub. St. Mass., ch. 157, § 28, providing a method for proof of claims by creditors having "a mortgage or pledge of real or personal estate of the debtor, or a lien thereon," does not apply to such a case. Washburn v. Tisdale, 143 Mass. 376.

A and B each held promissory notes signed by C and endorsed by D for C's accommodation. In pursuance of an arrangement agreed to by all the parties, C executed to D mortgages of real estate, conditioned to save D harmless from all loss by reason of his signing or endorsing any notes for or on account of C. C went into insolvency, and D, although not in insolvency, became in fact insolvent before the proceedings in insolvency were begun by C. A offered the notes held by him for proof at the first meeting of the creditors of C, and they were allowed in full, against the objection of unsecured creditors; and A voted on the proof and controlled the election of the assignee. B did not offer his notes for proof, but petitioned the court of insolvency to have the property conveyed by the mortgages sold, and the proceeds of the sale applied to the payment of his notes; and that he might be admitted as a creditor for the balance of his debt. All parties consented that the petition might be granted. The mortgaged premises were sold pursuant to a decree of the court, and the proceeds of the sale were ordered to be applied in part payment of B's notes, and he was admitted to prove for the balance of his debt. A thereupon filed a bill in equity under the Pub. Sts., ch. 157, § 15, praying that the decree of the court of insolvency might be set aside, and that part of the proceeds of said sale might be ordered to be paid to A; or, if he was not entitled to such part, that it might be paid over to the assignee for the benefit of the creditors generally. Held, that the decree of the court of insolvency should be so modified that A and B should share in said proceeds proportionately to the amount of the notes held by each; and that each should prove against the general assets for the residue of the notes. Franklin Co. Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank of Greenfield et al., 138 Mass. 515.

C borrowed of Mrs. P $6,000, and gave his promissory note to her for that amount, embracing in it the stipulation to pay all attorneys' fees expended in collecting it, and depositing with her as collateral security $8,000 in certificates of stock in a certain bank. C made default in the payment of his note, and died; and P recovered judgment in the circuit court against the bank on the certificates of stock in an amount exceeding the sum due on the note. Upon appeal to this court it was held that she was only entitled to recover the amount due for loaned money, there being no proof as to the attorneys' fee. P entered a remittitur of all above the amount due for the loan, and judgment was rendered accordingly. During the pendency of that suit C's estate was placed in the hands of a receiver, and was being administered in the chancery court as an insolvent estate; and P. probated against it her claim for $6,000. A dividend of 20 per cent was decreed upon all probated claims, thereby awarding a pro rata of $1,200 to P; but the receiver refused to pay anything to P until the termination of litigation between her and the bank. After that litigation terminated, she obtained from the chancery court an order directing the receiver to pay her so much of the dividend theretofore decreed to her as was necessary to liquidate her attorneys' fees in her suit against the bank, which she proved to be $1,050. From that order the other creditors of C appealed. Held, that the order appealed from was erroneous. P was entitled to a pro rata on the amount of her attorneys' fees, that being the extent of her claim against C's estate after her remittitur, and to no more; and her rights in this respect were not enlarged by the existence of the former decree awarding her a dividend of $1,200, such decrees being interlocutory and subject to the control of the court till the winding up of the estate. Meacham et al. v. Pinson, 60 Miss. 217.

A savings bank, which holds two promissory notes made by the same person, the payment of one of which is secured by a mortgage of land, and of the other not, is not entitled to apply the surplus proceeds of a sale of the

19. Discharge—a. Definition.—It is the act by which a person in confinement under some legal process, or held on an accusation of some crime or misdemeanor, is set at liberty; the writing containing the order for his being so set at liberty is also called a discharge.¹

b. To Whom and When Granted.—It does not apply to the case of a person imprisoned under the bastardy act.² An arrest was not generally necessary to entitle a person to a discharge.³ The failure of a creditor to file a proper schedule of the debts and of his property will debar him from a discharge until he does comply with such arrangements.⁴ The giving of a security for a pre-existing debt may invalidate the discharge, although the debtor agreed to give such security when the debt was contracted, it having been in fact given not until afterward.⁵ land, under a power in the mortgage, to the payment of the unsecured note, if the sale is made after the publication of a petition in insolvency against the maker of the notes, who is afterwards adjudged an insolvent, although the first publication of the time and place of the sale under the mortgage is made, and read by the mortgagor, before the publication of the petition in insolvency. Tallman v. New Bedford etc. Bank, 138 Mass. 330.

1. Bouv. Law Dict.

In this country, where imprisonment for debt has generally been abolished by a discharge, is usually meant that by virtue of some act of an insolvent debtor in compliance with a statute of bankruptcy or insolvency, he is absolved from all future liability for his then existing debts. This may be said to be one of the distinguishing features of an insolvent or bankrupt law.

2. Lower v. Wallick, 25 Ind. 68.

Nor does it exempt one from the liability to arrest for failing to pay sums afterward falling due for the support of a bastard. Comm. v. Miller, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 569.

3. Trail v. Snouffer, 6 Md. 308.

4. Teackle v. Crosby, 14 Md. 14.

But the omission to do so must be fraudulent and wilful. Whiton v. Nichols, 3 Allen (Mass.) 583.

5. Blodgett v. Hildreth, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 311.

Miscellaneous.—To entitle a merchant or trader to a discharge in insolvency, he must, under Rev. St. Me., ch. 70, § 46, have kept for the period material to the enquiry "a cash-book and other proper books of account," and this requirement is absolute, and the motive of the insolvent in not keeping such books is entirely immaterial. Jones v. First Nat. Bank, 79 Me. 191.

False swearing by the insolvent, in material matters, before the insolvency court, deprives him of a discharge, under Rev. St. Me., ch. 70, § 46; and if he swears falsely in such matters, the presumption of fraudulent intent on his part is conclusive.

The insolvent act of California, § 49, which provides that "no discharge shall be granted, or, if granted, shall be valid, if the debtor, or any other person on his account, has influenced the action of any creditor at any stage of the proceedings by any pecuniary consideration or obligation," does not require that the pecuniary obligation shall be in writing, or one that can be enforced in the courts, and a mere verbal promise is sufficient. Estudillo v. Meyerstein, 72 Cal. 317.

One petitioning for his discharge as an insolvent debtor filed a schedule showing an indebtedness of about $49,000, and assets consisting only of personalty, such as household goods, upon which there was a mortgage. It was shown that a homestead once owned by the debtor had been conveyed to his wife; that the latter had given a mortgage upon it to secure a loan to the husband; and that the value of the homestead exceeded the exemption by about $650. Held, that it could not be said, as a matter of law, that there was any intent to defraud creditors, as Rev. St. Wis., § 2323, relating to fraudulent conveyances, provides that the question of fraudulent intent shall be deemed one of fact. Mabbett v. Davis (Wis.), 41 N. W. Rep. 531.

Under the Pub. Sts., ch. 157, § 93, providing that a discharge shall not be granted, or valid, if the insolvent debtor, "being a merchant or tradesman, has not kept proper books of account," it is a question of fact in each case whether the debtor has kept such books as will enable a competent person examining them to ascertain the true state of his affairs; and it cannot be ruled, as matter of law, that the failure to keep a cash book invalidates a discharge. Wilkins v. Jenkins, 136 Mass. 38.

Where, in an action on a promissory note, a discharge in insolvency, under the California Insolvent act of 1852, was pleaded, and the court, after reading to the jury certain sections of that act, and of the amending act of 1876, relating, not only to fraud and misconduct on the part of the insolvent as avoiding the discharge, but also to the form of the proceedings, instructed them that any failure to comply with said sections would avoid the discharge, held error, as not only submitting the question of fraud or misconduct, but also of literal compliance with the formal requirements of the statute, which was a matter of record to be passed on by the court. Dean v. Grimes, 72 Cal. 442.

If such instructions mean that the jury should scrutinize the petition, schedule, and affidavit in the insolvency proceedings for any false statement of the insolvent, they are erroneous as omitting to charge on the fraud necessary to avoid the proceedings. Id.

An instruction that the statute being novel and extraordinary, and in derogation of common law, everything bearing on the question of jurisdiction must appear affirmatively, held error, as the jurisdiction of a county court is a question for the court; and, if the record shows want of jurisdiction, it should not have been admitted in evidence. Id.

Under section 8 of the California Insolvent act of 1876, forbidding preferences, and declaring void all assignments of parts of the insolvent's estate within two months of the filing of his petition, an instruction that a failure to comply with said section would avoid the insolvent's discharge is erroneous, since the only penalty prescribed by the statute for attempting to prefer a creditor within the two months is a recovery of the property by the assignee. To constitute a fraud which will avoid the discharge, the transfer must have been made out of the usual course of business. Id.

In such case the sole question for the jury is whether the defendant, having had the benefit of the insolvent act, "had concealed any part of his property or estate, or given (knowingly) a false schedule, or committed any fraud under the provisions of the act" of 1852, and its amendments. Id.

In Maine the following law applies: At any time after four months, debtor may apply for his discharge. The discharge, when granted, releases the insolvent from all debts provable against his estate, except those created by the fraud or embezzlement of the insolvent or by his defalcation as a public officer or while acting in any fiduciary character. (§§ 47, 49.) No discharge is granted, or, if granted, is valid: (1) If the debtor has sworn falsely; (2) if he has concealed any property, books or papers; (3) if within four months, having reason to believe himself insolvent, he has preferred any creditor, or has caused his effects to be attached; (4) if he has destroyed, altered, mutilated or falsified any of his books, documents, papers, writings or securities, or has removed or allowed to be removed, any property, with intent to defraud his creditors; (5) if he has made any fraudulent payment, gift, transfer or assignment of any part of his property; (6) if, having knowledge that any person has proved a false debt against his estate, he has not disclosed the same to the assignee within thirty days after such knowledge; or, (7) if, being a merchant or trader, he has not kept proper books of account. The discharge is null and void, if the debtor, or any one in his behalf, has procured the assent of any creditor thereto by any pecuniary consideration or promise of future preference. (§ 46.) No discharge releases any person liable for same debt with the insolvent, either as partner, joint contractor, endorser, surety or otherwise. (§ 48.) Any creditor desiring to test the validity of the discharge on the ground that it was fraudulently obtained, may, within two years after the date thereof, apply to the court which granted it to annul the same. (§ 49.) No claim purchased after commencement of proceedings can be set off against a claim due the estate prior to such purchase. (§ 50.) No creditor can commence or maintain any suit against the insolvent until after a discharge is refused, nor is

c. When Valid and a Good Defence.—A discharge in bankruptcy is a good defence to a creditor's bill founded on a judgment obtained before the discharge,¹ or to a judgment rendered on a contract induced by fraud;² or to a judgment on a debt which itself as a simple debt would not be barred thereby;³ or to a judgment on a contract obtained against the bankrupt after the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings.⁴ It also releases the bankrupt from a contingent liability, such as that of a surety on a bond.⁵

All creditors who assent to a discharge by participating in the proceedings are barred.⁶

Property acquired "by descent, gift, devise bequest, or in the course of distribution," is not liable for debts contracted prior to the discharge.⁷ It is a bar to the recovery of damages for the conversion of goods, though such damages are alleged by way of aggravation in an action of tort for breaking and entering plaintiff's close.⁸ It operates as well upon debts arising ex delicto as upon those arising ex contractu.⁹ A discharge will operate on a note, but not on the mortgage which secures it.¹⁰

d. When invalid, or not a good defence, it is a general rule that a discharge only operates against claims which were provable as debts under the insolvency proceedings.¹¹ A debt due the United States is not barred by a discharge.¹² A legal lien upon property, secured before the bankruptcy proceedings, is not affected by the discharge.¹³ And the discharge of the mortgagor is no defence to an action to foreclose his mortgage, but it will bar a judgment against him for a deficiency.¹⁴

Debts created by fraud,¹⁵ or arising from defalcation of a debtor liable to arrest or imprisonment on a claim due nonresidents after a discharge is granted. (Act of 1885, ch. 319.)

1. Ocean Nat. Bank v. Olcott, 46 N. Y. 12.

2. Palmer v. Preston, 45 Vt. 154; Shuman v. Strauss, 34 N. Y. Supr. 6.

3. Hubbell v. Flint, 15 Gray (Mass.) 550.

4. Monroe v. Upton, 50 N. Y. 593.

5. Jones v. Knox, 46 Ala. 53; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 583.

And this may be as surety on a bond not directly for the payment of money, such as one for the return to an officer of property attached by him. Payne v. Able, 7 Bush (Ky.) 344; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 316; or the official bond of a constable; McMinn v. Allen, 67 N. Car. 131; or that of a collector, U. S. v. Throckmorton, 8 Nat. Bank Reg. 309. See Sanders v. Best, 17 C. B. (N. S.) 731.

6. Clay v. Smith, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 411.

7. Pollitt v. Parsons, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 61.

8. Bickford v. Barnard, 8 Allen (Mass.) 314.

9. Luther v. Deyo, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 629.

10. Lunning v. Brady, 10 Cal. 265.

11. Houston v. State, 34 Tex. 542; Pierce v. Wilcox, 40 Ind. 70.

12. U. S. v. Herron, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 251.

13. Jones v. Lellyet, 39 Ga. 64; State v. Recorder etc., 21 La. Ann. 401; Barstow v. Hansen, 2 Hun (N. Y.) 333.

14. Roberts v. Wood, 38 Wis. 60.

15. In re Wright, 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 167; In re Robinson, 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 176; In re Patterson, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 155; Stewart v. Emerson, 8 Nat. Bank Reg. 462.

An insolvent debtor shown to have committed any "kind of fraud to the prejudice of his creditors, whether it is specially denounced in the statute or a public officer, or in some fiduciary capacity, are not barred.¹

A discharge of one of several partners or joint debtors is no defence to an action against the others therein.² It is no defence to a surety in a bond by which he is bound, on some contingency, to pay his principal's debt, such as one to secure the payment of damages and costs in an injunction case,³ or release property from an attachment;⁴ or a bail bond,⁵ that his principal has been discharged.

A debt for defalcation as guardian is not affected by a discharge.⁶ A contract made prior to the passage of the law is not, may be proceeded against and condemned, under Rev. St. La., § 1803. Mayewski v. Creditors (La. 1888), 4 So. Rep. 9.

To support a charge of fraud under the insolvent law of Louisiana it is unnecessary to show that the mass of creditors have been injured by the fraudulent acts of the insolvent debtor, whereby the amount of property applicable to their demands has been reduced. It will suffice to show that the insolvent obtained goods, under a false and fraudulent pretence, from a single, individual creditor. Mayewski v. Creditors, 4 So. Rep. 9.

Where a creditor of an insolvent accepts the dividend under a composition with creditors, and gives a receipt reciting that it is according to the composition confirmed by the court, he waives his right to allege that the discharge was invalid as to him, on the ground that his claim antedated the statutes under which the discharge was obtained, though he appeared at the hearing when the composition was proposed, and raised such objection. Eustis v. Bolles, 146 Mass. 413.

1. Stow v. Parks, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 60.

What Is Held to be Fiduciary Within This Meaning. This has been held, however, not to apply to the failure of an administrator, entrusted with bills as collateral, to a debt due the estate, and apply the proceeds as directed. Croan v. Cotting, 104 Mass. 245; s. c., 6 Am. Rep. 232; or the failure of an agent to account for and pay over to his principal moneys collected by him as agreed. Grover etc. Co. v. Clinton, 8 Nat. Bank Reg. 113.

But it does apply to the case of an agent who converts to his own use moneys entrusted to him solely for the purpose of being invested by him on bond and mortgage. Flagg v. Ely, Edm. S. C. (N. Y.) 206; and that of an attorney who fails to pay over money collected for his client. Heffren v. Jayne, 39 Ind. 463; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 281; Flangan v. Pearson, 42 Tex. 1; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 40. See, however, Wolcott v. Hodge, 15 Gray (Mass.) 547.

An auctioneer, who receives money for goods sold by him, also acts in a fiduciary capacity, and his discharge is no bar to a suit, therefore.

The obligation of a bank receiving money in its ordinary capacity from customers is not fiduciary. In re Bank of Madison, 9 Nat. Bank Reg. 184.

Commission merchants and factors act in a fiduciary capacity, and claims against them for the proceeds of goods sold by them, which have been converted by them to their own use or not paid over on demand, are not barred by a discharge. Gay v. Farran, 2 Cin. (Ohio) 426; Banning v. Bleakley, 27 La. Ann. 257; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 554; Lemcke v. Booth, 47 Mo. 387. In matter of Seymore, 6 Int. Rev. Rec. (U. S.) 60. In re Kimball, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 292.

A receipt reciting, "Rec'd of H. $5,000.00 for the purchase of stocks and margins on the same, for which I agree to acc't for on demand," held, under the Massachusetts statute not to be such a fiduciary debt as a discharge would bar. Halpine v. May, 100 Mass. 498.

3. Matter of Levy, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 169; Payne v. Able, 7 Bush (Ky.) 344; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 316; Elsworth v. Caldwell, 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 20.

2. Eastman v. Hibbard, 54 N. H. 504; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 157.

4. Holyoke v. Adams, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 223.

5. Claffin v. Cogan, 48 N. H. 411.

6. Halliburton v. Carter, 10 Nat. Bank Reg. 357.

not affected by a discharge under it.¹ It does not bar a debt due the State.² It is no bar to one who had no notice of the proceedings.³ A discharge granted after the repeal of the law, without a saving clause in the application, is void.⁴

Where the court has jurisdiction in the matter, mere irregularities in the proceedings will not render the discharge void.⁵

1. Wyman v. Mitchell, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 316.

A discharge under the Vermont Insolvent law does not bar a debt contracted before its passage, the creditor in no way becoming a party to the proceedings in insolvency. Nor is such debt discharged though merged in a judgment rendered after the discharge, and which judgment is the basis of this action. A law discharging such debt is unconstitutional. Cotway v. Seamons, 55 Vt. 8; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 579; Percy v. Foote, 36 Conn. 102.

2. People v. Herkimer, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 345; People v. Rossiter, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 143.

A discharge under the insolvent laws releases the debtor from a judgment previously rendered against him on behalf of the State, and will protect him from a ca. sa. on such judgment, and if arrested the court will discharge him on motion. State v. Walsh, 2 Gil & J. (Md.) 406.

A discharge in insolvency does not release the insolvent from arrearages of state, county, or town taxes, as the insolvency statute contains no words declaratory of such intention. Inhabitants of Cape Elizabeth v. Skillin, (Me.) 12 Atl. Rep. 543.

3. Wetherbee v. Martin, 16 Gray (Mass.) 518.

4. State v. Shinn, 5 N. J. L. 553.

5. Cobbossee Nat. Bank v. Rich (Me. 1889), 16 Atl. Rep. 506.

Miscellaneous.—The legal debt of an obligor in a bond is contracted at the time of making the bond and a discharge in insolvency granted to the obligor after making the bond, although prior to breach of the condition will bar his liability. State v. Culler, 18 Md. 418.

If a person gets a note discounted at a bank, and on the maturity of the note, having on deposit a sum insufficient to pay the note gets another note discounted at the same bank and deposits the proceeds to his account, and then draws his check on the bank for the amount of the first note payable to the bank as holder, this is a payment of that note, within the Gen. Sts., ch. 118, § 87, which, if the other conditions mentioned in the statute exist, will forfeit his right to a discharge in insolvency. It is within the discretion of the presiding judge, after a case has been committed to the jury, to refuse to give them further instructions; and to the exercise of this discretion no exception lies. Phillips's Case, 132 Mass. 233.

Although the statute requires an accurate description of the insolvent's estate, a statement of "debts due petitioner, $—," is sufficient after discharge, as against collateral attack. Id.

Nor will it avoid the discharge that debts were omitted from the inventory, it appearing that they were worthless, and barred by limitation. Id.

A discharge under the Vermont insolvent law is not a bar to recovery on a note owned by one who, when the discharge was granted, was a citizen of another State, and in no way a party to the insolvency proceedings, though the note was executed in Vermont, of which State both parties were then citizens. Roberts v. Atherton (Vt.), 15 Atl. Rep. 159.

Rev. St. Me., ch. 70, § 49, which provides that the certificate given to the insolvent shall be conclusive evidence in his favor of the fact and regularity of such discharge, applies as well to discharges obtained under a composition as to those in regular insolvency proceedings.

Section 62 requires the debtor to produce at a meeting of the creditors an affidavit signed by him, to be sworn to before the judge, that "my assets and liabilities are correctly stated in the schedule hereunto annexed." Held, that where the affidavit produced was in due form, but from inadvertence of either judge, register, or party, the schedules and affidavit were filed away without being annexed, the discharge was not thereby rendered void.

It is not a legal objection to a debtor's discharge that the schedule of assets lodged with the messenger was adopted as a schedule for use in the composition proceedings, though to

e. Effect Upon Rights of Insolvent.—A debtor discharged under the insolvent laws cannot sue or be sued in respect to the property transferred under such law for the benefit of creditors.¹

An insolvent maker of a promissory note who has obtained his discharge is liable to an endorser who paid the note before the discharge.²

A discharge, void as to its effect in relieving the defendant from the payment of his debts is equally inoperative to protect him from imprisonment.³

Discharges are personal, and do not operate to discharge one who is a joint debtor with the insolvent.⁴ A discharge vests in his trustees all his real and personal property.⁵

The fact that the debtor was not actually insolvent does not affect the discharge.⁶

The effect of a discharge in insolvency is to be determined by the law in force at the time it is granted, and not by the law in force at the time the proceedings in insolvency are begun.⁷

f. How Proven, etc.—The discharge of an insolvent can only be proved by the record or by parol; but unless the existence of the record be first shown, other evidence is inadmissible.⁸

A certificate of discharge is conclusive as to all facts stated in it, except acts of fraud specified⁹ in the statute.

furnish new and separate schedules would be a more commendable practice.

The discharge cannot be invalidated by proof that creditors holding the requisite amount of claims did not assent to the composition under which the discharge was obtained, the record showing that the agreement presented to the judge was on its face sufficient, and the judge having adjudged it to be so. Cobbossee Bank etc. v. Rich (Me. 1889), 16 Atl. Rep. 506.

1. Hall v. McPherson, 3 Bland (Md.) 529; Young v. Willing, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 276.

2. Frost v. Carter, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) Cas. 311.

3. Witt v. Follett, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 501.

An insolvent discharge, after a verdict and before judgment, in an action of trespass, does not protect a defendant from imprisonment. Hodges v. Chace, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 248.

4. Elsworth v. Caldwell, 27 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 188.

The discharge of a husband under the insolvent laws does not operate to discharge the wife from her obligation to pay a promissory note, of which she and her husband were the makers. Allers v. Forbes, 59 Md. 374; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 557.

5. McAlister v. Samuel, 17 Pa. St. 114; Moncure v. Hanson, 15 Pa. St. 385.

6. The fact that a petitioner for the benefit of the insolvent laws is not actually insolvent, does not affect the validity of his discharge, nor oust the jurisdiction of the insolvent court. In such case the surplus remaining in the hands of the trustee, after payment of debts, belongs to the insolvent by way of resulting trust, and is not held by the trustee under any express trust for the benefit of the petitioner. Weaver v. Leiman, 52 Md. 708.

7. Batten v. Sisson, 133 Mass. 557.

8. Loughry v. McCullough, 1 Pa. St. 503; Karch v. Comm., 3 Pa. St. 269.

The acknowledgment by a debtor of his indebtedness and insolvency is evidence thereof between the parties. Guy v. McIlree, 26 Pa. St. 92.

In an action on an insolvent's bond the record of his discharge is not conclusive that he gave the creditors notice required by law. Berens v. Rasch, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 45.

9. Lester v. Thompson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 300.

The certificate of an insolvent is not conclusive evidence of the facts therein stated; but when offered in evidence,

g. Must be Plead.—A discharge will not avail as a defence unless pleaded;¹ and a neglect to plead it, although arising from ignorance of the law, will not be aided by the court.² It must be pleaded specially,³ and it should show that the court that granted it had jurisdiction.⁴

It is a matter of record, and should be pleaded as such.⁵ If obtained too late to be pleaded originally, or by amendment, the defendant's remedy is by motion to stay execution.⁶

*h. Extra Territorial Effect.*⁷

*i. New Promise.*⁸—A discharge will only protect a debtor when he claims its protection, and he may revive an obligation barred by his discharge by means of a new promise made after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and either before or after his discharge.⁹

To be effective, the new promise must be distinct, specific, un-the court may look into the record of the proceedings in insolvency, in order to determine whether the certificate was properly granted. Gardner v. Nute, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 333.

Evidence, etc.—Action on a promissory note. The defendant pleaded a discharge in insolvency. Held, that the plaintiff might show in answer to the plea that the defendant had intentionally omitted certain real property owned by him from the schedule annexed to his petition. Dean v. Baker et al., 64 Cal. 232.

A debtor, after his discharge in insolvency, wrote to his creditor expressing his desire to pay all his debts, and his hope and trust that he would be able to pay the debt of his creditor in future, mentioning partial payments made, and regretting that he could not do more. Held, insufficient to prevent the operation of his discharge. Kenny v. Brown, 139 Mass. 345.

A motion to set aside a decree of final discharge in insolvency rests largely on the discretion of the nisi prius court, and will not be reviewed except in case of an abuse of that discretion. Longnecker v. His Creditors (Cal.), 17 Pac. Rep. 220.

The Massachusetts St. of 1879, ch. 245, § 4, making a certificate of discharge in insolvency conclusive evidence of the fact and regularity of the discharge, unless annulled by the court which granted it, is applicable to a certificate granted after its passage upon proceedings begun before, although the action in which the discharge is pleaded was begun before the passage of the statute. Upham v. Raymond, 132 Mass. 186.

The Massachusetts St. of 1879, ch. 245, § 4, making a certificate of discharge in insolvency conclusive evidence of the fact and regularity of the discharge, unless annulled by the court which granted it, is constitutional, and is applicable to a certificate granted after its passage upon proceedings begun before. Kempton v. Saunders, 130 Mass. 236.

1. Jenks v. Opp, 43 Ind. 108; Rudge v. Rundle, 1 Thomp. etc. (N. Y.) 649.

If he neglects to do so, the court will not afterwards relieve him on motion. Price v. Peters, 15 Abb. Pr. 197.

2. Ackerman v. Van Houten, 5 Hals. (N. J.) 332.

3. Cross v. Hobson, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 102.

4. Morgan v. Dyer, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 161; Wyman v. Mitchell, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 316.

5. Murphy v. Richards, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 279.

6. Cornell v. Dakin, 38 N. Y. (11 Tiff.) 253; World Co. v. Brooks, 7 Abb., N. S. (N. Y.) 212.

7. See as to extra territorial effect, CONFLICT OF LAWS, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 622.

A discharge in insolvency by an insolvent court of Oregon to one of its citizens is no bar to an action brought by a citizen of another State in Oregon, when such creditor was not a party to the insolvency proceedings. Main v. Messner (Oreg.), 20 Pac. Rep. 255.

8. See also LIMITATIONS.

9. Hornthal v. McRae, 67 N. Car. 21; Chabot v. Tucker, 39 Cal. 434.

After a discharge in insolvency, as where the cause of action is barred by ambiguous, certain, and satisfactorily proved.¹ If the promise is conditional, the performance of the condition must be shown.²

the statute of limitations, a new promise is necessary in order that an action may be brought upon a prior liability. It is the new promise and not the former liability that is the cause of action, and it must be so pleaded. Chabot v. Tucker, 39 Cal. 434.

1. Richardson v. Brecker, 7 Colo. 58; Stern v. Nussbaum, 47 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 489; Landas v. Roth, 109 Pa. St. 621.

2. Sufficient Promise—A debtor, after proceedings in insolvency had been begun, wrote to his creditor: "My last meeting of insolvency comes off the last of this month, when I intend to receive my discharge. I wish I could give you some money, as you ask, but cannot at present. I shall not take any notice of your abuse of me till I have paid you the amount I owe you, which I shall surely do." Held, in an action on the debt, that the letter did not take the debt out of the operation of a discharge in insolvency subsequently obtained. Dennan v. Gould, 141 Mass. 16.

A debtor wrote, "I think I see my way clear to pay you $200, and interest I owe you. I am in hopes another two years will enable me, from my present income, to clear off all pressing debts."

Rest assured that not a day of pecuniary freedom will pass over my head without you hearing from me." Held, insufficient. Pierce v. Seymour, 52 Wis. 272.

"I am sorry that you had to pay the notes of Frank Pellond and myself, upon which you were surety for us. I cannot at this time pay you the money, but propose to pay you my share, which I am told is about $413. I hope to be able to pay soon, but will let you know in a few days," was held to be sufficient. Rolfe v. Pellond, 19 N. W. Rep. 970.

Also, "If I ever get able I will pay you every dollar I owe you and all the rest. You can tell all as soon as I get anything to pay with I will pay. As for giving note, it is no use. I will pay just as quick without it," held sufficient. Devereaux v. Henry, 19 N. W. Rep. 697.

Insufficient Promise.—The plaintiffs declare upon a promissory note for $3,764.58, dated March 20th, 1867, payable one day after date, with interest. The defendant appeared and pleaded his discharge in bankruptcy in bar to the action. The plaintiffs replied a new promise in writing made while the proceedings in bankruptcy were pending. They promise the plaintiffs to collect their debt. They alleged that the promise is contained in the following letter, which is made a part of their replication, viz.:

Crockett's Bluff, Ark., Jan. 7th, 1868.
Messrs. Thos. H. Allen & Com.:

Dear Sir: I avail myself of this opportunity to give you fair statement of my pecuniary affairs. First: I failed to make a crop. Second: Find myself involved as security to the amount of five or eight thousand dollars; was sued and judgment was rendered against me at the last term of court for about four thousand dollars, sum sufficient to sell, all the available property that I am in possession of. I lost about three thousand dollars by persons taking the bankrupt law. This my situation, I was, as you can readily conclude, in a bad fix. To remain as I was at that time my property would be sold to pay security debts, and my just creditors would not get any part of it and that I would be reduced to insolvency, and still judgments against me. As a last resort concluded to render a schedule myself, in order to force a pro rata division of my effects. The five bales of cotton I shipped you were all my crop, to pay you for the meat that you had sent me to enable me to make the little crop that I did make. The cash that I requested you to send me was for myself and William F. Ferguson, to pay his hands for labor; and one hundred and fifty yards of the bagging was for W. F. Ferguson, and one barrel of the salt. I have been absent from home for the last two weeks; got home last night and have not seen him yet, but suppose he has shipped you some cotton. If he has not done so, I will see that he sends you cotton at once. Be satisfied all will be right. I intend to pay all my just debts if money can be made out of hired labor. Security debt I cannot pay. I shall have a hard time, I suppose, this season, but will do the best I can.

January 8th. Since the above was written I have seen William Ferguson. He says he shipped you two bales cotton ten or twelve days ago, and shipped in my name, as the bagging was ordered by me for him. William Ferguson will be in Memphis betwixt this and the first of March, and will call and see you on business matters betwixt me and yourself. All will be right betwixt me and my just creditors. Don't think hard of me. Attribute my poverty to the unprincipled Yankee. Let me hear from you as usual. Yours very respectfully, A. H. Ferguson.

To this replication the defendant demurred. The demurrer was sustained by the circuit court, and the plaintiffs appeal to this court.

It is necessary to discuss but a single question. Does the letter defendant set forth in the replication contain a sufficient promise to pay the debt in suit? All the authorities agree in this, that the (see Hillard on Bankruptcy, 264 and 266 where cases are collected) promise by which a discharged debt is revived must be clear, distinct and unequivocal. It may be an absolute or a conditional promise, but in either case it must be unequivocal, and the occurrence of the condition must be averred if the promise be conditional. The rule is different in regard to the defence of the statutes of limitations against a debt barred by the lapse of time. In that case, acts or declarations recognizing the present existence of the debt have often been held to take a case out of the statute. Not so in the class of cases we are considering. Nothing is sufficient to revive a discharged debt unless the jury are authorized by it to say that there is the expression by the debtor of a clear intention to bind himself to the payment of the debt. Thus partial payments do not operate as a new promise to pay the residue of the debt. The payment of interest will not revive the liability to pay the principal, nor is the expression of an intention to pay the debt sufficient. The question must be left to the jury with instructions that a promise must be found by them to have been made before the debtor is bound. Hill. Bankr., 264-266, where the cases are collected. The plaintiffs in error contend that such promise is to be found in the letter of the defendant, forming a part of their replication. They rely chiefly on these expressions: "Be satisfied; all will be right." "I intend to pay all my just debts, if money can be made from hired labor." "Security debts I cannot pay," and on the postscript where he adds, "All will be right betwixt me and my just creditors." There can be no more uncertain rule of action than that which is furnished by an intention to do right. How or by whom is the right to be ascertained? What is right in a particular case? ARCHBISHOP WHATELY says: "That which is conformable to the supreme will is absolutely right, and is called right simply without reference to a special end. The opposite to right is wrong." This announces a standard of right, but it gives no particle of aid. What may be right between the defendant and his creditors is as difficult to determine as if he had no such standard. It is not absolutely certain that it is right for a creditor seizing his debtor to say, pay me what thou owest, or that it is wrong for the debtor to resist such an attack. It is not unnatural that the creditors should think that payment of the debt was right and that it was the only right in the case. It is equally natural that the debtor should entertain a different opinion. The law holds it to be right that a debtor shall devote his entire property to the payment of his debts, and when he has done this that after acquired property shall be his own to be held free from the obligation of all his debts as well as security debts. Neither the supreme will, so far as we can ascertain it, nor the law of the land, requires that a debtor whose family is in need, or who is himself exhausted by a protracted struggle with poverty and misfortune, should prefer a creditor to his family; that he should appropriate his earnings to the payment of a debt from which the judgment of the law has released him, rather than to the support of his family or his own comfort. What an honest man should or would do under such circumstances it is not always easy to say. When, therefore, the debtor in this case wrote to the plaintiff: "Be satisfied, I intend to do right; all will be right betwixt my just creditors and myself," he cannot be understood as saying that he would certainly pay his debt, much less that he would pay it immediately, as the plaintiff assumes. What is or what may be right depends upon many circumstances. The principle is impracticable as a rule of action to be administered by the courts. There is no standard known to us by which we are able to say that it is wrong in the defendant not to pay the plaintiff's debt.

20. Exemptions.—Whatever, as a rule, is exempt from execution may be reserved by the debtor,¹ and an express reservation

We are of the opinion that the letter produced does not contain evidence of a promise to pay the debt in suit and that the judgment appealed from must be affirmed. Allen v. Furgeson, 85 U. S. 1.

Opposition to Discharge.—The court of common pleas of the county of Middlesex has not power to discharge under the insolvent laws a defendant from confinement he is undergoing in the county jail, by virtue of an execution against the body, issued by the recorder of the city of Perth Amboy, on conviction for violation of the ordinance of said city in relation to inns and taverns, beer saloons, etc. Proceedings under said ordinance are criminal in their character. The insolvent laws apply only to civil actions. State v. Brophy, 43 N. J. L. 589.

Any creditor of an insolvent may file his opposition to the debtor's discharge, and may withdraw the same at his pleasure, without the consent of the other creditors. Brangon v. His Creditors, 64 Cal. 394.

This court has no jurisdiction, under the Massachusetts Gen. Sts., ch. 118, § 16, of a petition in the nature of an appeal by a creditor from the decision of the court of insolvency granting a discharge to a debtor, although since the St. of 1879, ch. 245, § 4, the creditor cannot impeach the validity of the discharge in an action at law. Kempton v. Saunders, 132 Mass. 466.

Under the insolvent law of 1852, it was competent for the regularly elected assignee, being a schedule creditor, to file a written opposition to the insolvent's discharge on the ground of fraud in wilfully and knowingly omitting property from the schedule and executing sham deeds with intent to defraud creditors. Such an opposition having been stricken out by the court, held, error. Hinkel v. His Creditors, 63 Cal. 328.

Under the Maryland Insolvency act of May 4th, 1852, it was not required that a creditor should be a judgment creditor, in order to give him a status in court to oppose the application of an insolvent for a discharge. The setting aside by the court in which it was rendered of a judgment recovered by Van W. against D., on the ground that no notice was given to D.'s attorneys, does not prevent Van W. from opposing, as a creditor under the Insolvency act of May 4th, 1852, the application of D., under that act, for a discharge, when the opposition filed by Van W. and the schedules filed by D. in the insolvency proceedings show that he is a creditor of D.; and it is error for the court, on motion, in the insolvency proceeding, to dismiss the opposition of Van W. on the ground that he has no status in court on which to make such opposition. Davenport v. His Creditors, 62 Md. 29.

1. Garnor v. Frederick, 18 Ind. 507; Hollister v. Lond, 2 Mich. 309; Brooks v. Nichols, 17 Mich. 38; Smith v. Mitchell, 12 Mich. 180; Richardson v. Marqueeze, 59 Miss. 80; Dow v. Platner, 16 N. Y. 562; Mulford v. Shiek, 26 Pa. St. 473; Heckman v. Messinger, 49 Pa. St. 465; Sugg v. Tillman, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 208; Farquaharson v. McDonald, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 404.

The homestead of an insolvent debtor passes to his assignee on the assignment of his estate by the court, when such homestead is liable to be taken on execution in payment of debts contracted before it was acquired; and the assignee may convey the homestead to one who has purchased the premises of him.

An assignee's deed, which describes the interest conveyed as "subject to the mortgagor's homestead right," means such right as he had against the order of assignment; and, whether the deed does or does not convey the homestead, it still remains vested in the assignee for the payment of such debts, and cannot be set up by the assignor. Id. Tilden v. Cummins, 15 Atl. Rep. 178.

A debtor excepted from an assignment for the benefit of creditors all property "exempt by law from attachment and execution." In a schedule, made a part of the assignment, mention was made of a quarter section of land "incumbered by a homestead filing," and described as "the exempt real property" of the debtor, "the same being the homestead property of the within assignor, valued at $5,000." Held that, whether the value placed upon such quarter section was correct or not, the purpose of the assignor was to except from the assignment the whole of such land, and no interest in

INSOLVENT LAWS—INSPECTION.

of such property in the assignment is valid.¹ Some courts hold a specific mention of property must be made,² while others hold that it need not be specifically designated.³ The claim must be made with promptness,⁴ and will be lost by delay.⁵ It is too late after the property has been sold,⁶ and proceeds distributed. In another case, however, it was held that the assignor is under no obligation to make any selection of a homestead claimed by him as exempt;⁷ and the mere failure to claim the exemption until the morning preceding the sale will not lose him the right.⁸ Partners cannot claim any partnership property as exempt.⁹ The debtor cannot exempt property when there are judgments against him in which he has waived his right to exemptions.¹⁰

INSOLVENT LAWS.—See BANKRUPTCY.

INSPECTION.—See note 11.

it passed to the assignees. Wilhoit v. Bryant (Cal. 1887), 20 Pac. Rep. 561.

1. Hildebrand v. Bowman, 100 Pa. St. 580; Mulford v. Shirk, 26 Pa. St. 473; Knight v. Waterman, 36 Pa. St. 258; Lininger v. Raymond, 9 Neb. 40.

2. An assignment reserving "so much as I am by law allowed to retain free from execution," has been held void, the court saying: "How are excluded creditors to know what articles in particular are claimed under those acts (of exemption), if they are thrown into confusion with a large quantity of the same nature and description. The person claiming the benefit of exemption must set apart what the law allows him, that it may be known by all who are concerned, and separated from that part of his estate which is subject to his debts. But in this deed, it is included in the conveyance with the mass of his property and reserved in general terms. Creditors are not able to judge whether the quantity or kind of property specified in the law is claimed, as there is no separation or description of it." Sugg v. Tillman, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 208. An assignment reserving "property to the value of $400 each which said" assignors "shall elect to retain as stock in trade under the laws of the State of Kansas exempting certain property from sale on execution or other process," was held void on its face. Clark v. Robbins, 8 Kan. 574; though the same court held an assignment by a partnership of all their property "except what is by law exempt," valid, the provision being nugatory, as none of the assigned property was exempt. Dodd v. Hills, 21 Kan. 707.

3. Richardson v. Marqueze, 59 Miss. 80; Brooks v. Nichols, 17 Mich. 38; Hollister v. Loud, 2 Mich. 309; Garnor v. Frederick, 18 Ind. 507; Mulford v. Shirk, 26 Pa. St. 473.

4. Shaeffer's Appeal, 101 Pa. St. 45; Bowyer's Appeal, 21 Pa. St. 210; Morris v. Shafer, 93 Pa. St. 489.

5. Chilcoat's Appeal, 101 Pa. St. 22.

6. Chilcoat's Appeal, 101 Pa. St. 22.

7. Batten v. Smith, 62 Wis. 92.

8. Rice v. Nolan, 33 Kan. 28.

9. Ex parte Hopkins, 104 Ind. 157.

10. Shaeffer's Appeal, 101 Pa. St. 45. An insolvent exchanged a quantity of wheat for a wagon and team, with a view of claiming the latter exempt. Held void.

List of Authorities. Burrill on Assignments (3d ed.); Wait on Insolvent Corporations, —; Bishop on Insolvency (4th ed.)

11. Inspection Laws within the meaning of art. 1, § 10, cl. 2, of the Constitution of the United States, which provides that "no State shall, without the consent of congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws." Such laws must provide for the examination of personal property, or, at all events, they must provide for an examination by some crucial test, and not by the taking of testimony or evidence. An act providing for the examination of immigrants to determine whether they are "habitual criminals, or pauper lunatics, idiots, or imbeciles, or deaf, dumb, blind, infirm, or orphan persons, without means or capacity to support themselves, and whether they . . . are affected with any infectious or contagious disease," is not an inspection law. Said the court: "What laws may be properly classed as inspection laws under this provision of the constitution must be determined largely by the nature of the inspection laws of the States at the time the constitution was framed. In the opinion of this court, in the case of Turner v. Maryland (107 U. S. 38), . . . there is an elaborate examination of these statutes, many of which are cited. Similar citations are found in a foot note to the report of Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 119. We feel quite safe in saying that neither at the time of the formation of the constitution nor since has any inspection law included anything but personal property as a subject of its operation. . . . In addition to what is said above, it is apparent that the object of these New York enactments goes far beyond any correct view of the purpose of an inspection law. The commissioners are to 'inspect all persons arriving from any foreign country to ascertain who among them are habitual criminals, or pauper lunatics, idiots or imbeciles, . . . or orphan persons, without means or capacity to support themselves, and subject to become a public charge.' It may be safely said that these are matters incapable of being sufficiently ascertained by inspection. What is an inspection? Something which can be accomplished by looking at, or weighing or measuring the thing to be inspected, or applying to it at once a crucial test. When testimony or evidence is to be taken and examined, it is not inspection in any sense whatever." People v. Com. Gen. Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59.

They may provide for the examination of articles imported, and those intended for domestic use, as well as for the examination of those intended for exportation. Said the court in Neilson v. Garza, 2 Woods (U. S.) 287: "No doubt the primary and most usual object of inspection is to prepare goods for exportation in order to preserve the credit of our exports in foreign markets. CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL, in Gibbons v. Ogden, says: 'The object of inspection laws is to improve the quality of articles produced by the labor of a country, to fit them for exportation, or, it may be, for domestic use. 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 203; Story on the Const., § 1017.' But in Brown v. Maryland, he adds, speaking of the time when inspection takes place: 'Inspection laws, so far as they act upon articles for exportation, are generally executed on land before the article is put on board a vessel; so far as they act upon importations, they are generally executed upon articles which are landed. The tax or duty of inspection is a tax which is frequently, if not always, paid for service performed on land.' 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 419; Story on the Const., § 1017. So that, according to CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL, imported as well as exported goods may be subject to inspection; and they may be inspected as well to fit them for domestic use as for exportation. Bouvier defines inspection as the examination of certain articles made by law subject to such examination, so that they may be declared fit for commerce. Law Dict. The removal or destruction of unsound articles is undoubtedly, says CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL, an exercise of that power. Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 419; Story on the Const., § 1024. 'The object of the inspection laws,' says JUSTICE SUTHERLAND, 'is to protect the community, so far as they apply to domestic sales, from frauds and impositions; and in relation to articles designed for exportation, to preserve the character and reputation of the State in foreign markets.' Clintman v. Northrop, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 46. It thus appears that the scope of inspection laws is very large, and is not confined to articles of domestic produce or manufacture, or to articles intended for exportation, but applies to articles imported, and to those intended for domestic use as well."

They may regulate the character of the package containing an article of commerce without providing for the examination of the article itself. A law providing that a product of a State shall be put in packages of a certain form and of certain prescribed dimensions, rendered necessary either on account of the nature and character of such product, or to enable the State to identify the product of its own growth, and to furnish the evidence of such identification in the markets to which they are exported, is an inspection law. Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38.

They may require the article to be brought to a warehouse for examination instead of requiring the inspector to go to the article. Said the court, in Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38: "It being

INSTANTER—INSTEAD OF—INSTRUCTIONS.

INSTANTER.—See note 1.

INSTANTLY.—See note 2.

INSTEAD OF.—In the place or room of.³

INSTITUTION.—See note 4.

INSTRUCTIONS—(See TRIAL; PRACTICE; ERROR; EXCEPTION; JURY; VERDICT).

1. Definition, 237.

2. Instructions Must be Upon the Law, 238.

a. Generally, 238.

b. Admissibility of Evidence, 240.

c. Construction of Pleadings, 240.

d. Construction of Written Instruments, 241.

e. Construction of Parol Contracts, 242.

f. Construction of Written Laws, 242.

lawful to require the article to be subjected to the prescribed examination by a public officer before it can be accounted a lawful subject of commerce, it is not foreign to the character of an inspection law to require that the article shall be brought to the officer instead of sending the officer to the article. It is a matter as to which the State has a reasonable discretion."

1. "The term instanter means, it is said, that the act shall be done within twenty-four hours (Price v. Simpson, 1 Taunt. 343; Tidd, 567, 641, 674); but a doubt has been suggested by whom the account of hours is to be kept, and whether the term instanter, as applied to the subject matter, may not more properly be taken to mean 'before the rising of the court,' when the act is to be done in court; or 'before the shutting of the office on the same night,' when the act is to be done there. Tidd, 567, 641; King v. Johnson, 6 East 587, n." 3 Chitty Pr. 111. The New York courts have adopted the former of these meanings. Harman v. Glover, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 617; Sabin v. Johnson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 421. But the Illinois courts have adopted the latter. Northrop v. McGee, 20 Bradw. (Ill.) 108; Montague v. Hanchett, 20 Bradw. (Ill.) 226.

2. In an Inquisition of a Coroner's Jury or in an Indictment for Murder.—The time of death is not sufficiently set out in an inquisition of a coroner's jury that after describing the cause of the death and the nature of the injuries sustained by the deceased, proceeds as follows: "of which, etc., the said N. B. . . . instantly died." Said DENMAN, C. J.: "The time when the death took place is not pointed out with sufficient accuracy and precision; the words are, 'of which blow, shock and concussion the deceased instantly died.' And on this point it was contended that the word instantly was equivalent to the words 'then and there.' Then or ad tunc involves the precise time at which the accident happened, something done at the same time and moment. Instantly means some time after, that is, instantly upon, and immediately following, but not at the same moment. But the word 'instantly' is not sufficient, and the words 'instanter' and 'incontinenter,' according to the whole course of precedent, do not dispense with the words ad tunc et ibidem." Queen v. Brownlow, 8 Dowl. 157; s. c., 3 Pen. & D. 52. A similar averment is likewise insufficient in an indictment for murder. State v. Lakey, 65 Mo. 217.

3. Section 1, ch. 245, of the Laws of New York of 1853, provides as follows: "Instead of the toll authorized to be demanded and received on plank roads by § 35 of ch. 210 of the Laws of 1847, the following rates of toll may hereafter be demanded and received," etc. Said the court in a case arising under this section: "The term 'instead of' means in the place or room of; and the plain intent of the legislature was to supersede section 35 by section 1; and the result was, that section 35 was repealed by implication. The intent could not have been more patent had that section read that section 35 is hereby amended so as to read as follows." Southport Plank Road Co. v. Russell (N. Y. Sup. Ct.), 7 N. Y. St. Rep. 596.

4. The term "institution" is sometimes used as descriptive of the establishment or place where the business of a society or association is carried on; at other times it is used to designate the organized body. Gerke v. Purcell, 25

- g. Definition of Words and Terms, 242.*
- h. Negligence, 242.*
- 3. When Instruction to Return Verdict May be Given, 243.
 - a. When There Is No Evidence, 243.*
 - b. When the Evidence Is Insufficient, 245.*
 - c. When the Court Would be Bound to Set Aside the Verdict, 246.*
 - d. When There Is a Variance, 247.*
 - e. At What Stage of Trial to be Given, 247.*
- 4. Elements of Charge, 247.
 - a. Relation to Verdict, 247.*
 - b. Abstract Propositions of Law, 248.*
 - c. Should be Pointed and Definite, 249.*
 - d. How Taken and Construed, 250.*
- 5. Duty of Judge in Instructing Jury, 251.
 - a. Duty to Give Instructions, 251.*
 - b. Instructions Given Presumed Correct, 253.*
 - c. Must Present All Material Facts, 253.*
 - d. Must Not Assume State of Facts as Proven, 254.*
- e. Must Not Assume Facts Not in Evidence, 254.*
- f. Must Not Give Argumentative Instructions, 256.*
- g. Right to Modify Instructions, 256.*
- h. At What Stage of Trial to be Given, 257.*
- i. Must be Given in Open Court, 257.*
- j. Must Not Suggest Compromise Verdict, 258.*
- 6. Specific Instructions, 258.
 - a. Must be Asked for, 258.*
 - b. Written or Verbal, 259.*
 - c. When Presented to Court, 259.*
 - d. How Presented to Jury, 260.*
- 7. Written Instructions, 261.
 - a. Not Required at Common Law, 261.*
 - b. Required by Statute, 261.*
 - c. Statute Must be Strictly Complied with, 263.*
 - d. At What Stage of Trial Given, 264.*
- 8. Exception to Instructions, 265.
 - a. When to be Made, 265.*
 - b. Must be Made to Specific Parts, 266.*
- 9. Misdirection, When Ground for Reversal, 266.

1. Definition.—An instruction, as used in law, is the written or oral address of the presiding judge, in jury trials, delivered at the close of the arguments of counsel, to the jury, informing them of the law applicable to the cause at trial, and their duties thereunder.¹

Ohio St. 244; Humphries v. Little Sisters of the Poor, 29 Ohio St. 201; Morris v. Lone Star Chapter etc. (Tex.), 5 S. W. Rep. 519; s. c., 68 Tex. 698.

By the term institution is to be understood an organization which is permanent in its nature, as contradistinguished from an undertaking which is transient and temporary. Humphries v. Little Sisters of the Poor, 29 Ohio St. 201; Indianapolis v. Sturdevant, 24 Ind. 391.

1. It is synonymous with the term "charge," which is defined to be "The exposition by the court to the jury of those principles of the law which the latter are bound to apply in order to render such a verdict as will, in the state of facts proved at the trial to exist, establish the rights of the parties to the suit."

"The essential idea of a charge is that it is authoritative as an exposition of the law, which the jury are bound by their oath and moral obligations to obey." Bouv. Law Dict., tit. Charge.

The purpose of instructions is to give to the jury a statement of law applicable to the particular case, to declare what presumptions of law are applicable to the facts, and declare the legal effect of certain evidence. The object is thus pointed out in a Kansas case: "The purpose of an instruction is to assist the jury in correctly applying the law to the facts of the case; and it not unfrequently happens that a general statement of the rights and obligations of the parties to a transaction assist materially to a clear understanding of the particular obligation claimed to have been violated." Sawyer v. Sauer, 10 Kan. 470.

And the instructions must be predicated upon the whole evidence; it will not do to state abstractly general princi-

2. Instruction Must be Upon the Law—a. Generally.—It is an old, settled rule of law that in trials by jury the judge decides questions of law, and the jury questions of fact.¹ In other words, the court must not invade the province of the jury.²

ples of law, or to state the law upon any isolated fact in the case to the exclusion of other facts which are in evidence. This defect in a charge was pointed out in Morris v. Platt, 32 Conn. 75, and a new trial was granted. The court say: "The charge as given informed the jury what the great principle of law of self-defence is, and correctly, but that was not all to which the defendant was entitled, . . . when the facts are admitted, or proved, and found, it is for the court to say what the law, as applicable to them, is." Proffatt on Jury Trials, § 311.

The longest charge known was delivered in the celebrated Tichborne Case, in which the court was eighteen days in delivering it to the jury. Am. L. R., Ap. 1874.

1. Co. Litt. 155-156; Fost. Cr. L. 256.

The jury, in an action at law, are judges of the facts, and the judge has no power or right to give binding instructions, where no conclusive fact is proven; and even if he thinks the testimony to establish a material fact was incredible he cannot instruct the jury to cast it aside. Curry v. Curry, 114 Pa. St. 367.

2. Invading Province of Jury.—The court has no right to direct as to the weight the jury shall give to any evidence submitted to them. State v. Huffman (Oreg.), 16 Pac. Rep. 640.

Where the evidence conflicted without any apparent preponderance on either side, it was error to instruct the jury to find for defendant. Adams v. Berg (Miss.), 3 So. Rep. 465.

In a trial to a jury, when questions are presented for special findings, which assume as true material facts in issue, the submission of such questions is properly refused. Elliott v. Reynolds, 38 Kan. 274.

In an action for personal injuries, an instruction which refers for the particulars of the alleged injury and negligence to plaintiff's petition, and then states the gist of the action, and submits the questions of fact to the jury, is not erroneous as assuming the facts stated in the petition as true. Hotel Ass'n v. Walters, 23 Neb. 280.

In an action of ejectment, the issue was as to the location of the true boundary line. Three of the plaintiff's witnesses, surveyors, testified to the exact location of a certain hickory tree which they claimed to be a corner; one of the defendant's witnesses testified that he believed the hickory stump to be the true corner at that point, and always believed it to be, and another witness said that there was no dispute as to the line from the hickory. In the charge to the jury, the court used this language: "Mr. McRoberts, and those who agree with him, are of opinion they have found a true line by measuring from the hickory that they claim is evidently a corner. Yet there is no mark here." Held, that this was calculated to weaken the effect of plaintiff's testimony, and thus mislead the jury. Bughman v. Byers (Pa.), 12 Atl. Rep. 357.

Plaintiff had introduced testimony to show that a certain stump which is 197 rods distant from the starting point is the stump of a tree called for at that distance in the line of the patent under which plaintiffs claimed. Referring to this testimony, the judge remarked: "It would be a marvel in surveying if they found, right at the end of the distance called for in the original survey, the stump of the identical tree." Held, that not only is this inaccurate as a general proposition, but was calculated to unduly weaken the effect of plaintiffs' evidence on that point. Brightman v. Byers, (Pa.), 12 Atl. Rep. 357.

It is not reversible error to refuse to charge that the burden of proof is on plaintiffs to show that they had complied with the contract sued on when the proof fully authorizes a finding in plaintiffs' favor. Howard v. Britton (Tex.), 9 S. W. Rep. 73.

A statement by the presiding judge that he declines to give a requested instruction because there is no evidence in the case to justify it, is not in conflict with Rev. St. Me., ch. 82, § 83, which provides that "the presiding justice shall rule and charge the jury . . . upon all matters of law arising in the case, but shall not during the trial, including the charge, express an opinion upon issues of fact arising in the case." Pillsbury v. Sweet (Me.), 14 Atl. Rep. 742.

An instruction, in a suit on a note, that plaintiff's failure to return all his property to the tax assessor would not vitiate the note sued on, is properly refused as an unnecessary comment upon the evidence. Bogie v. Nolan (Mo.), 9 S. W. Rep. 14.

Defendant's request to charge that, prior to the adoption of Code Proc. N. Y., or prior to the present constitution, plaintiff, being a party, was not a competent witness in his own behalf, and that it is under that constitution he is enabled to be a witness, and the question as to his credibility is entirely one for the jury, and that they have a right, in considering the case, to wholly reject his evidence, was properly refused when the court said: "I charge you, without any reference to the constitution, that the plaintiff's testimony, as that of every other witness, is to be considered by you, and believed or disbelieved according as your good sense and judgment govern you;" no exception being taken to the words "as that of every other witness," and the attention of the court not being called to that phrase by the general exception. West v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 1 N. Y. Supplement 519.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff's pier, the court refused to charge "that it was an improper use of the pier to moor heavy boats to the spiles," but charged that the defendant was liable for damage occasioned by neglect of its servants, and that it was their duty, if the pier was not safe to moor boats to, to refrain from so doing, and not to tie boats to spiles so as to break them off. Held, that the first charge was properly refused, as involving a question of fact, and that the charge given properly submitted the question. N. J. Steam-Boat Co. v. New York, 109 N. Y. 621.

When counsel have referred, in their speeches to the jury, to the interest of witnesses, it is not error for the court to instruct the jury that if the interest or employment of a witness has impaired or biased his judgment, such fact may be considered by them in weighing the value of his testimony. McDonell v. Rifle Boom Co. (Mich.), 38 N. W. Rep. 681.

It is not error to refuse the following instructions in a suit for injuries received on a railroad track: "The positive testimony of a witness who said he heard the whistle blow is entitled to more weight than the negative testimony of a witness who says he did not hear it,"—since it is the province of the jury to pass upon the weight and credibility of the testimony of every witness. Sibley v. Ratliffe (Ark.), 8 S. W. Rep. 686.

Defendant's driver, in charge of a beer wagon, was driving rapidly through a public street of a city, and at a crossing collided with plaintiff, who was crossing the street on foot, and injured her. In an action for damages defendant asked the court to rule that "if the jury believed that, at the time of the alleged accident, the defendant's driver was travelling in an ordinary manner, the defendant is not liable for an injury resulting from the use of the public street." Held, that this was properly refused, as it assumed the very point in controversy, the question being whether the driver was travelling over the public crossing with the ordinary care requisite when passing such a point. Schmidt v. Magill (Pa.), 14 Atl. Rep. 383.

After a charge that the "preponderance of evidence in a case is not alone determined by the number of witnesses testifying to a particular fact or statement," and that the jury should consider the "opportunities of the witnesses for seeing or knowing the particular things about which they testify, their conduct and demeanor, their interest or lack of interest in the suit, the probability or improbability of the truth of their statements," it is not error to add: "If, however, the witnesses testify differently to the same fact, are all of them of equal candor, fairness, intelligence and truthfulness, and equally well corroborated by all the other evidence, and are upon an equal footing as to interest in the result of the suit, then the preponderance of evidence as to that fact would be determined by the number of witnesses," especially when the greater number of witnesses are on the side of the party complaining of the instruction. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Holmes (Wash. T.), 18 Pac. Rep. 76.

It is for the jury to determine the truth or falsity of testimony, and it is improper for the court in its instructions to call the attention of the jury to facts which may have tended to influence the testimony of the witness whose credibility it is their duty to pass upon,

b. Admissibility of Evidence.—It is the exclusive province of the court to decide upon the admissibility of evidence, and it is none the less so where, in order to make such determination, the court is obliged to examine and pass upon questions of fact;¹ and it is error to submit such questions to the jury.²

Whether there be any evidence or not is a question for the judge; whether it be sufficient evidence is a question for the jury.³ Whether a witness is incompetent by reason of interest,⁴ or want of religious belief,⁵ whether one person sustains such relations to another that the declarations of the former are admissible in evidence against the latter;⁶ whether a proper foundation has been laid for the admission of secondary evidence of a lost instrument of writing,⁷ are all questions for the judge, and not for the jury.⁸ So in all cases the question whether a witness is competent to testify concerning the matters in issue is a question of law for the court.⁹

c. Construction of Pleadings.—It is the province of the court to determine from the pleadings what allegations are admitted and what denied.¹⁰ It is, therefore, the duty of the court to state the issues to the jury without referring them to the pleadings to ascertain what the issues are.¹¹ The judge should inform the or to otherwise weigh the evidence before them. Long v. State, 23 Neb. 33.

It is proper for the court to state to the jury for what purpose certain testimony was received, but error to state to them what such testimony tends to prove, without submitting to them at the same time the question of its credibility. Davis v. Gerber (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 281.

Where the evidence showed that plaintiff visited defendant's mill on business of his own, and, asking to see an employe, was directed to him, and in the search was injured, a charge submitting to the jury whether the plaintiff entered the mill on the defendant's invitation is error. Galveston Oil Co. v. Morton (Tex.), 7 S. W. Rep. 756.

The cases referred to above in the Reporters will be found in the various States' reports for the years 1887, 1888, 1889.

1. Robinson v. Ferry, 11 Conn. 460; Carter v. Bennett, 6 Fla. 283; Scott v. Coxe, 20 Ala. 294; Gorton v. Hadsell, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 508; Clayton v. Anthony, 6 Rand (Va.) 285; Carrico v. McGee, 1 Dana (Ky.) 6.

The court cannot instruct on the sufficiency. Chesapeake etc. Co. v. Knapp, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 545; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 410. Or on the weight and credibility of the evidence. Bur- dell v. Denig, 92 U. S. 716; Crane v. Morris, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 598.

2. De Graffenreid v. Thomas, 14 Ala. 681; Ratliff v. Huntly, 5 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 545; Thomason v. Odune, 31 Ala. 108; Robinson v. Ferry, 11 Conn. 460; Thompson's Charging the Jury, 5.

3. Greenl. on Ev., § 49; Carpenters v. Hayward, Dougl. (Mich.) 360; Chandler v. Van Roeder, 24 How. (U. S.) 227; Wittowsky v. Wasson, 71 N. Car. 451.

4. Cook v. Mix, 11 Conn. 432.

5. Wakefield v. Ross, 5 Mason (U. S.) 16; People v. Mattison, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 433 n.; Jackson v. Gridley, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 98.

6. Cliquot's Champagne, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 114-140; Clayton v. Anthony, 6 Rand. (Va.) 285.

7. Ratliff v. Huntly, 5 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 545; Graff v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 31 Pa. St. 489; Witter v. Latham, 12 Conn. 392; Donelson v. Taylor, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 390.

8. De France v. De France, 34 Pa. St. 385.

9. Cook v. Mix, 11 Conn. 432; Navis Admr. v. Williams, 22 Ind. 368; Reynolds v. Lounsbury, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 534; Choteau v. Searcy, 8 Mo. 733; Thompson Charging Jury, 11.

10. Potter v. Wooster, 10 Iowa 334; McKinney v. Hartman, 4 Iowa 154.

11. Dassler v. Wisley, 32 Mo. 498.

jury specifically what the issues are.¹ Whether there is a variance between the pleadings and the proof is for the exclusive determination of the court.²

d. Construction of Written Instruments.—It is a well settled principle of law that written instruments are always to be construed by the court; and except where they contain technical words or terms of art, or where the instrument is introduced in evidence collaterally, and where its effect depends not merely upon the construction of the instrument, but upon extrinsic facts and circumstances, in which case the inference to be drawn from it must be left to the jury,³ it is error to submit the construction of a written contract to the jury; it is a question of law for the court.⁴ This extends to and embraces every species of writings, contracts,⁵ records,⁶ deeds,⁷ wills,⁸ and all others.⁹

Where the written contract requires parol explanation, it is equally the province of the jury to ascertain its terms, and of the

1. Missouri etc. Co. v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 35 Mo. 84.

2. Brich v. Benton, 26 Mo. 161; Berry v. Dryden, 7 Mo. 324.

3. Goddard v. Foster, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 123.

The court should construe a written instrument, and not leave the construction to the jury. If parol evidence has been admitted to explain the instrument, the court should give a construction applicable to each phase of the case developed by the evidence. Long v. McCauley (Tex.), 3 S. W. Rep. 689.

4. Collins v. Benbury, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 118; Wason v. Rowe, 16 Vt. 525; Moore v. Miller, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 279; Vincent v. Huff, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 381; Roth v. Miller, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 100; Brown v. Hatten, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 319; Rogers v. Colt, 21 N. J. L. 704; Perth Amboy Man. Co. v. Condit, 21 N. J. L. 659; Nash v. Drisco, 51 Me. 417; Illinois Central R. Co. v. Cassell, 17 Ill. 389; Williams v. Waters, 36 Ga. 454; Emery v. Owings, 6 Gill (Md.) 191; Cocheco Bank v. Berry, 52 Me. 293; Smith v. Faulkner, 12 Gray (Mass.) 257; Thomas v. Thomas, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 178; Shepherd v. White, 11 Tex. 346; Drew v. Towle, 30 N. H. 331; Streeter v. Streeter, 43 Ill. 155; Levy v. Gadsby, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 180; Eyser v. Weissgerber, 2 Iowa 463; Lapeer Ins. Co. v. Doyle, 30 Mich. 159; Goddard v. Foster, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 123; United States v. Hodge, 6 How. (U. S.) 279; Bliven v. New England Screw Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 420.

5. See authorities cited in preceding note.

6. Adams v. Betz, 1 Watts. (Pa.) 425.

7. McCutchen v. McCutchen, 9 Port. (Ala.) 650; Seaward v. Malotte, 15 Cal. 394; Bonney v. Morrill, 52 Me. 252; Venable v. McDonald, 4 Dana (Ky.) 336; Hodges v. Strong, 10 Vt. 247; Whittelsey v. Kellogg, 28 Mo. 404; Hurley v. Morgan, 1 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 425; Morse v. Weymouth, 28 Vt. 824; Addington v. Etheridge, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 436; Poage v. Bell, 3 Rand (Va.) 586; Smith v. Clayton, 29 N. J. L. 357; Brown v. Huger, 21 How. (U. S.) 305; Am. Bank v. Inloes, 7 Md. 380; Dean v. Erskine, 18 N. H. 81; Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 361; Montag v. Linn, 23 Ill. 551; Harris v. Doe, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 369; Symmes v. Brown, 13 Ind. 318; Miller v. Shackleford, 4 Dana (Ky.) 264; Stevens v. Hollister, 18 Vt. 294; Cox v. Freedly, 33 Pa. St. 124; St. John v. Bumpstead, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 100.

8. Magee v. McNeil, 41 Miss. 17; Downing v. Bain, 24 Ga. 372; Sartor v. Sartor, 39 Miss. 760; Wilson v. Whitfield, 38 Ga. 269; Roe v. Taylor, 45 Ill. 485; Riley v. Riley, 36 Ala. 496; Sullivan v. Honacker, 6 Fla. 372.

9. Kidd v. Cromwell, 17 Ala. 648; Long v. Rodgers, 19 Ala. 321; Turner v. Yates, 16 How. (U. S.) 14; Cahoon v. Ring, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 592; Caldwell v. Dickson, 26 Mo. 60; Pickerell v. Carson, 8 Iowa 544; Leviston v. Junction R. Co., 7 Ind. 597; Carpenter v. Thirston, 24 Cal. 268; Richmond etc. Co. v. Farquar, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 89.

court to define its meaning.¹ But where a contract has to be made out partly by written and partly by parol evidence, it is properly left to the jury to say whether it has been proved.²

e. Construction of Parol Contracts.—The construction of parol contracts is equally a question for the court. It is the province of the jury to determine whether there was such a contract, and what were its terms; and it is equally the duty of the court to declare to them, by proper instructions, its legal meaning and effect.³

f. The Construction of Written Laws.—The construction of statutes, constitutional ordinances, municipal ordinances and by-laws, and all other written laws, is for the court, and not for the jury.⁴ Likewise foreign laws are to be construed by the court.⁵

g. Definition of Words and Terms.—It is clearly within the province of the court to define technical terms and words to the jury.⁶

h. Negligence.—Whether a defendant or his servants have been negligent, or, on the other hand, whether the plaintiff was guilty

1. Silverthorne v. Fowle, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 362; Hutchison v. Bowker, 5 M. & W. 535; Thompson's Charging the Jury, 18.

2. Bolckow v. Seymour, 17 C. B. (N. S.) 107.

3. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 19; Islay v. Stewart, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 160; Belt v. Goode, 31 Mo. 128; Judge v. Le Clare, 31 Mo. 127; De Ridder v. McKnight, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 294; Smalley v. Hendrickson, 29 N. J. L. 371; Short v. Woodward, 13 Gray (Mass.) 86.

4. Barnes v. Mayor, 19 Ala. 707; Fairbanks v. Woodhouse, 6 Cal. 433; Peoria v. Calhoun, 29 Ill. 317; Matters v. Shields, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 553; Carleton v. People, 10 Mich. 250; Ramsey Co. Super. v. Heenan, 2 Minn. 330.

5. Cecil Bank v. Barry, 20 Md. 295; Consequa v. Willings, Pet. (C. C.) 225; Charlotte v. Choteau, 33 Mo. 194; Livingstone v. Maryland Ins. Co., 6 Cranch (U.S.) 280; Bowditch v. Solytk, 99 Mass. 136; Kline v. Baker, 99 Mass. 253.

6. 1 Greenl. on Ev., § 5 (Redfield ed.); Townshend on Slander and Libel, 160; Homer v. Taunton, 5 H. & N. 667; Barnett v. Allen, 3 H. & N. 376; Hoar v. Silverlock, 12 Ad. & El. 624.

Thus, in an action for libel, it has been held by a learned federal judge that the court might properly explain to the jury the meaning of the words crim. con. and flagrante delicto. "Courts," said the learned judge, in giving his judgment on this point, "take judicial notice of the meaning of words and idioms in the vernacular of the language, and no colloquium or innuendo is necessary to point out their meaning. Where the meaning is well settled by common usage, there is no use in calling persons to testify as to what was meant at the time they were uttered, or to explain their meaning if published in a newspaper. The words crim. con. are usually understood as an abbreviation for criminal conversation, and these terms have of themselves acquired a fixed and universal significance. Equally unobjectionable was the translation by the court of the words flagrante delicto. While a libel, published in a foreign language, would ordinarily be interpreted by witnesses skilled in the knowledge of both languages, there is a class of foreign words that have been so far anglicized by common use as to have become substantially a part of the language. Instances of these are habeas corpus, bona fide, prima facie, a fortiori, from the Latin, and a large number from the French and other modern languages. Whenever such words occur it is clearly within the province of the court to define them to the jury." Thompson's Charging Jury, 21.

A court in instructing the jury as to the meaning of a word should not mislead and confuse them by reading a whole opinion of the supreme court, whose main point is not analogous to of contributing to the injury, will generally be a question for the jury,¹ though, in the view of some courts, it is a question for the court where there is no conflict as to the evidence.²

3. When Instruction May be Given to Return Verdict—a. Where There Is No Evidence.—Even under the rule of “scintilla of evidence,” where there is no evidence having a tendency to prove the issue, the case at bar, though it contains a correct definition of the word, but should cull that part which is to the point. Stewart v. Hunter (Oreg.), 16 Pac. Rep. 876.

1. Brehm v. Great Western R. Co., 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 256; Thatcher v. Great Western R. Co., 4 Upper Canada C. P. 543; Sullivan v. Phila. etc. R. Co., 30 Pa. St. 234; Crissey v. Hestonville etc. R. Co., 75 Pa. St. 83; Memphis etc. R. Co. v. Whitfield, 44 Miss. 467; Zemp v. Wilmington etc. R. Co., 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 84; Allender v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 37 Iowa 264; Thompson's Charging Jury, 22.

2. Dublin v. Slattery, 3 App. Cas. 1201; Dascomb v. Buffalo R. Co., 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 221; Biles v. Holmes, 11 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 16; Thrings v. Central Park R. Co., 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 616; Foot v. Wiswall, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 304; Van Lieu v. Scoville Manf. Co., 4 Daly (N. Y.) 554; Flemming v. Western Pac. R. Co., 49 Cal. 253; Pittsburg etc. R. Co. v. Evans, 53 Pa. St. 250; Grigsby v. Chappell, 5 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 446; Costello v. Landwehr, 28 Wis. 522; Louisville etc. Co. v. Murphy, 9 Bush (Ky.) 522; Gagg v. Vetter, 41 Ind. 228.

“The case must go to the jury:

(1.) Where facts, if true, would constitute “evidence of negligence” are controverted. Saltonstall v. Stockton, Taney (U. S.) 11; Pittsburg etc. R. Co. v. Andrews, 39 Md. 329; Chicago City R. Co. v. Young, 62 Ill. 238; Bernhardt v. Rensselaer R. Co., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 166.

To illustrate: In Maryland, if it appear that the plaintiff was injured in consequence of having voluntarily put his arm out of the window of a railway coach, he cannot recover. Yet, if there is a conflict of testimony as to how his arm came to be thus exposed, the case must go to the jury. Pittsburg etc. R. Co. v. Andrews, 39 Md. 329.

(2.) Where, although the facts are not controverted, fair minded men might differ as to whether the inference of negligence should be drawn from them. Gaynor v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 100 Mass. 208; Patterson v. Wallace, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 748; Johnson v. Hudson River R. Co., 20 N. Y. 65; Phila. etc. R. Co. v. Spearen, 47 Pa. St. 300; Seabrook v. Hecker, 2 Robb (N. Y.) 201; Haycroft v. Lake Shore P. Co., 64 N. Y. 636.

In other words where the facts do not amount to what the books term “evidence of negligence.” And where the court directs a verdict for the defendant, the plaintiff is entitled to have everything on which his right to recover depends and which the proof tended to establish, regarded as proof. Stone v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 47 Iowa 82; McClenaghan v. Brock, 5 Rich. L. (N. Car.) 17.

(3.) Where, at the same time, the facts are in dispute and the inferences which fair minded men would draw from them are doubtful. Nichols v. Sixth Avenue R. Co., 38 N. Y. 131; Railroad Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 405; Fernandez v. Sacramento, 4 Cent. L. J. 82; Detroit etc. R. Co. v. Van Steinburg, 17 Mich. 99; State v. R. R. Co., 52 N. H. 529; Gaynor v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 100 Mass. 208; McGrath v. Hudson River R. Co., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 144; Bridges v. North London R. Co., L. R. 7, H. L. 213; Beers v. Housatonic R. Co., 19 Conn. 566; Vinton v. Schwab, 32 Vt. 612; Penn. Canal Co. v. Bentley, 66 Pa. St. 34; Wyatt v. Citizen's R. Co., 55 Mo. 485; Jenkins v. Little Miami etc. R. Co., 2 Disney (Ohio) 49.

More briefly the question of negligence is said to be for the jury when there is a substantial doubt as to the facts or as to the inferences to be drawn from them. Crissey v. Hestonville etc. R. Co., 75 Pa. St. 83; Barton v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 52 Mo. 253; and it is for the court only where the facts are undisputed, and the inference of negligence is clear. Dickens v. New York etc. R. Co., 1 Abb. App. Dec. 504.

The foregoing doctrines apply in favor of the plaintiff as well as the defendant; so that, where the court can see from the undisputed evidence that the

the court may so instruct the jury.¹ If there is no evidence establishing the plaintiff's case, it is the right of the defendant to ask defendant was guilty of negligence, it will set the verdict aside for the defendant and award a venire de novo. Derwort v. Loomer, 21 Conn. 245; Thompson's Charging the Jury, 23.

1. Tison v. Yawn, 15 Ga. 491; Boland v. Mo. R. Co., 36 Mo. 484; Meyer v. Pac. R. Co., 40 Mo. 151; Vinton v. Schwab, 32 Vt. 612.

"It is well established that where the testimony is all in one direction or where all the evidence for the plaintiff has been given, and it has no tendency whatever to prove the particular issue relied on to recover, and there is no question in regard to the credibility of the witnesses who have given evidence, the court may determine the whole case as a question of law. WAGNER, Judge in Boland v. Missouri R. Co., 36 Mo. 484, 491; Thompson's Charging the Jury, 44.

Doctrine of "Scintilla of Evidence."—This doctrine is said to be that where there is any evidence, however slight, tending to support a material issue, the case must go to the jury, since they are the exclusive judges of the weight of the evidence. Lewis v. Pratt, 48 Vt. 358; Muldowney v. Ill. etc. R. Co., 32 Iowa 178; Meyer v. Pac. R. Co., 40 Mo. 151; Matthews v. St. Louis Grain Elevator Co., 50 Mo. 149; Brooks v. Somerville, 106 Mass. 275; Mercer v. Mercer, 43 Ga. 323. And this is so although the judge may be of the opinion that the weight of the evidence is insufficient to support the issue. Brown v. Lazalere, 144 Mo. 383. "In other words," says JUDGE THOMPSON (charging jury 36), "when the facts offered in evidence by the plaintiff, if true, make out a prima facie case, the jury and not the judge, ought to pass upon them." On the other hand, where there is any evidence to sustain a verdict for the defendant, an instruction ordering the jury to find for the plaintiff is improper. Holliday v. Jones, 59 Mo. 482.

Not Followed in Federal Courts.—The judges are no longer required to submit a case to the jury merely because some evidence has been offered by the party having the burden of proof, unless the evidence be of such a character that it would warrant the jury to proceed in finding a verdict in favor of the party adducing such evidence. Decided cases may be found where it is held that, if there is a scintilla of evidence in support of a case, the judge is bound to leave it to the jury; but the modern decisions have established a more reasonable rule, to wit: that before the evidence is left to the jury, there is, or may be, in every case, a preliminary question for the judge, not whether there literally is no evidence, but whether there is any evidence upon which the jury can properly proceed to find a verdict for the party producing it, upon whom the burden of proof is imposed. CLIFFORD, Justice in Marion Co. Comm. v. Clark, 94 U. S. 284. See Parks v. Ross, 11 How. (U. S.) 373; Hickman v. Jones, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 201; Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 637; Pawling v. U. S. 4 Cranch (U. S.) 222; Pleasants v. Faut, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 122; Improvement Co. v. Munson, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 448; Schuchardt v. Allens, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 359; Bank of U. S. v. Smith, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 171.

Nor in the English Courts.—The English courts hold a similar doctrine to the federal courts. Jewell v. Parr, 13 C. B. 916; Tomey v. London etc. R., 3 C. B. (N. S.) 150; Whelton v. Hardisty, 8 El. & Bl. 262; Giblin v. McMullen, L. R., 2 P. C. 335; Rider v. Wombwell, L. R., 4 Exch. 38.

Nor in Some of the States.—Cooper v. Waldron, 50 Me. 80; Morton v. Frankfort, 55 Me. 46; Mason v. Lewis, 1 Greene (Iowa) 494; Bailey v. Kimball, 26 N. H. 351; Colt v. Sixth Ave. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 671.

In Howard v. Smith, 1 J. & S. (N. Y.) 128, in the Superior Court of N. Y., JUDGE SPENCER makes use of the following language:

"The decision of the question of fact in the case by the court when uncontested or when clearly established by the weight of testimony, narrows the issues and reduces the number of questions for the consideration of the jury and thus lessens its labors in reaching a verdict, and in this view is to be favored and sustained, to the full extent of the rules of law applicable to jury trials. The rulings of the court, however, in such cases are often subject to a review and reversal by the appellate courts, although a decision of the jury would have been final upon the same facts, the court to charge the jury that the plaintiff cannot recover, and a refusal so to charge is error.¹

b. Where the Evidence Is Insufficient in Law.—Where the evidence which has been offered is not sufficient in law to make out

I hold that all questions of fact, that are contested to that degree by the evidence that sensible men might conscientiously arrive at different conclusions upon the same evidence, should be submitted to the decision of a jury. The rule of law I hold to be the same as in the case of directing a verdict by the court. The court has a right so to direct, when the facts are so clearly established on the trial, or the weight of the evidence is so strong that if, on a submission to a jury, it found a verdict against them the court would set it aside as against the evidence." This decision is commented on by JUDGE THOMPSON as worthy of attention. Thompson on Charging the Jury, 43.

1. Directing a Verdict.—When the evidence upon an issue is uncontradicted, and no circumstances appear in the case to discredit it, and it appears to the court that a verdict contrary to this evidence could not be supported, an express direction should be given to the jury to find in accordance with such evidence. National Exchange Bank v. White, 30 Fed. Rep. 413.

Where the defence in an action of assumpsit for goods sold to defendant, a corporation, is that the credit was not given to the corporation, but to its superintendent personally, and there is evidence tending to show that plaintiff believed he was dealing with the corporation, it is proper for the court to refuse to instruct the jury to find a verdict for the defendant. Hart Mfg. Co. v. Mann's Boudoir Car Co. (Mich.), 32 N. W. Rep. 820.

When the case is such that the court would be compelled to set aside a verdict, if rendered in favor of a party, because not reasonably supported by the evidence, the court may direct a verdict for the opposite party. Thompson v. Pioneer Press Co., 37 Minn. 285.

While it is proper to direct the jury to render a general verdict, or to render a special verdict, it is bad practice to give them a general charge authorizing them to render a general verdict, and also, at the same time, submit to them special issues. Such a course is calculated to mislead and confuse the jury. Dwyer v. Kaltayer, 68 Tex. 554.

It is proper for the court to direct a verdict, when it would be its duty to set aside a different one, if rendered. North Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. (U. S.) 266.

Where there are disputed facts, or facts from which others may or may not be inferred, the court should submit them all to the jury without instruction as to what inferences they should accept or reject; but, when no reasonable construction would entitle defendant to a verdict, the court may give binding instructions for plaintiff. Maynard v. Lumberman's Nat. Bank (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 529.

Under Rev. St. Ind. 1881, § 546, relating to the verdict of a jury, the court may direct the jury to return a general verdict, and, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that the authority was justly exercised. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Wood, 113 Ind. 544.

Where instructions are asked which are correct as abstract propositions, but there is no evidence making them applicable to the case, and the uncontradicted evidence entitles plaintiffs to recover, it is not error to refuse these instructions and charge the jury to find for plaintiffs. Gould v. Saunders (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 37.

A direction to find a verdict should not be given unless the evidence for the adverse party, considering it as undisputed, and giving to it the most favorable construction in his favor it will legitimately bear, including all reasonable inferences from it, is insufficient to justify a verdict in his favor. Jackson v. Jacksonport, 56 Wis. 310.

Offer to Direct Verdict.—In the course of a charge by the court to the jury, an offer was made to defendant's counsel to direct a verdict for the defendant, if he so desired, but he did not avail himself of the opportunity, and the jury subsequently returned a verdict for the defendant. Held, that the offer of the court was error. Wright v. Towle (Mich.), 34 N. W. Rep. 578.

the case of the party who offered it, it is the duty of the judge so to instruct the jury.¹

c. Where the Court Would be Bound to Set the Verdict Aside.—Some of the leading courts have held that the judge ought to order a nonsuit against the will of the plaintiff where he can see that the evidence would not warrant the jury in finding for the plaintiff,² and that if they did so find it would be his duty to set aside the verdict as against the evidence, even though there is some slight conflict in the evidence.³ It has been held that the same rule will apply where the verdict would be against the clear weight and effect of the evidence.⁴

1. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 44; Proffatt on Jury Trial, §§ 351-4.

If a plaintiff has no case in law he has no business in court; and if a jury find a verdict upon evidence that does not legally make out a case, they may find a verdict on no evidence at all. Nolan v. Shickle, 3 Mo. App. 300; State v. Thayer, 5 Mo. App. 420.

"When assuming that all the testimony adduced by the one or the other party is true, it does not support the issue, it is the duty of the judge to declare this clearly and directly." CAMPBELL, J., in Chandler v. Von Roeder, 24 How. (U. S.) 227.

Thus where, in an action on a contract to buy a note, there was no evidence of a contract to buy a note, but evidence to pay, which contract was void under the statute of frauds, the court erred in refusing a nonsuit. Hoeflinger v. Stafford, 38 Wis. 391.

2. Brown v. European etc. R. Co., 58 Me. 384; Cooper v. Waldron, 50 Me. 80; Hartfield v. Roper, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 615; s. c., Thom. on Neg., 1121; Deyr v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co., 34 N. Y. 9; Ringgold v. Haven, 1 Cal. 108; Eusminger v. McIntire, 23 Cal. 593; Stuart v. Simpson, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 376.

3. Corning v. Troy Iron Factory, 44 N. Y. 577.

4. Rudd v. Davis, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 529.

Power to Order Nonsuit as Against the Wish of the Plaintiff.—In England. 2 Tidd's Pr. 869; Dewae v. Purday, 4 N. & M. 633; Watkins v. Towers, 2 T. R. 275.

In the U. S. Federal Courts. Elmore v. Gryme, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 469; De Wolf v. Roband, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 476; Foote v. Silsby, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 445; Boucicault v. Fox, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 87; Crane v. Morris, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 598, 609; Castle v. Bullard, 23 How. (U. S.) 172.

North Carolina. Dickey v. Johnson, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 450.

Tennessee. Scruggs v. Brackin, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 528.

Alabama. Hunt v. Stewart, 7 Ala. 525.

Arkansas. Martin v. Webb, 5 Ark. 72; Ringo v. Field, 6 Ark. 43; Carr v. Crain, 7 Ark. 241.

Missouri. St. Louis etc. Co. v. Sou-lard, 8 Mo. 665. See, however, Morgan v. Durfee, 9 Cent. L. J. 12.

Kansas. Case v. Hannahs, 2 Kan. 490.

Indiana. Williams v. Port, 9 Ind. 551.

Vermont. French v. Smith, 4 Vt. 363.

Michigan. Cahill v. Kalamazoo Mutual Ins. Co., 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 124.

Mississippi. Winston v. Miller, 12 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 550, it is held that the judge cannot, in any case, direct a nonsuit where the plaintiff insists in going to the jury.

But in New York, Pratt v. Hull, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 334; Betts v. Jackson, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 173; Foot v. Sabin, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 159; Jansen v. Acker, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 480.

Pennsylvania. Munn v. Mayor, 40 Pa. St. 364; Myers v. Girard Ins. Co., 26 Pa. St. 192.

Ohio. Ellis v. Ohio etc., 4 Ohio St. 628; Slipper v. Fisher, 11 Ohio 299; Powell v. Jones, 12 Ohio 35.

Wisconsin. Woodward v. McReynolds, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 244; Cutler v. Hulburt, 29 Wis. 165; Hoeflinger v. Stafford, 38 Wis. 391.

Iowa. Eddy v. Wilson, 1 Greene (Iowa) 259.

Connecticut. Naugatuck R. Co. v. Waterbury Button Co., 24 Conn. 468.

Maine. Perley v. Little, 3 Me. 97; Lyon v. Sibley, 32 Me. 577.

New Hampshire. Bailey v. Kimball,

d. Where There Is a Variance, etc.—Where there is a substantial variance in the pleadings and in the evidence, the judge should generally direct a nonsuit to be entered for the defendant.¹

e. At What Stage of Trial to be Given.—Where the evidence offered by the plaintiff has no tendency to support the issue, or is insufficient in law to entitle him to recover, the judge is at liberty to so instruct the jury at any time after the plaintiff had closed his case.² A nonsuit may well be ordered at the close of the defendant's testimony, although at the close of the plaintiff's testimony there was a prima facie case.³

4. Elements of the Charge—a. Its Relation to the Evidence.—The judge instructs hypothetically upon whatever state of facts there is evidence tending to prove.⁴ It is error for him to submit to the jury a fact, or a state of facts, which there is no evidence tending to prove, or to give instruction with reference to a state of facts not in evidence.⁵

26 N. H. 351; Stickney v. Stickney, 21 N. H. 61.

California. Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221; Ensminger v. McIntire, 23 Cal. 593.

Georgia. Tison v. Yawn, 15 Ga. 491; Long v. Lewis, 16 Ga. 154.

New Jersey. Aycrigg v. New York etc. R. Co., 30 N. J. L. 460; Cent. R. Co. v. Moore, 24 N. J. L. 830.

South Carolina. Turnbull v. Rivers, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 131; Clason v. Bird, 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 370, it has been conceded that the judge, in proper cases, has power to nonsuit, and to this view the decisions of the courts holding the contrary are slowly progressing.

1. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 46; Johnson v. Moss, 45 Cal. 515.

This, perhaps, under the liberal allowance of amendments under the code, will seldom need to occur, for amendments are generally allowed at any stage of the case, in order that substantial justice may be done.

2. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 47;

There is no point in an objection that such instructions were given before the defendant had announced that he had closed his case. Harris v. Woody, 9 Mo. 113.

Nor, if the case is a proper one for such instructions, is the judge at liberty, after the plaintiff has closed his case, to refuse them on the ground that the defendant is not ready to close his case, and submit it to the jury.

3. Unger v. Forty-second Street R. Co., 51 N. Y. 497; Cooper v. Waldron, 50 Me. 80-82.

But to award a nonsuit before the plaintiff has closed his case is an obvious error. Walker v. Supple, 54 Ga. 178.

4. "The instructions should be confined to the issues is a leading cardinal rule." Proffat in Jury Trial, § 313; Nollen v. Wisner, 11 Iowa 190; King v. King, 37 Ga. 205; Miles v. Douglas, 34 Conn. 393; Hill v. Canfield, 56 Pa. St. 454; Hooker v. Johnson, 6 Fla. 630.

"The charge ought not only to be correct, but to be so adapted to the case and so explicit as not to be misconstrued or misunderstood by the jury in the application of the law to the facts as they find them from the evidence." Little Miami R. Co. v. Wetmore, 19 Ohio St. 110.

Thompson's Charging the Jury, 87.

5. Wakefield v. Smithwick, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 327; Gilchrist v. Rogers, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 488; Herdic v. Bigler, 47 Pa. St. 60; Kelso v. Townsend, 13 Tex. 140; Bogle v. Kreitzer, 46 Pa. St. 465; Sartwell v. Wilcox, 20 Pa. St. 117; Manwell v. Briggs, 17 Vt. 176; Switland v. Holgate, 8 Watts (Pa.) 385; Sutton v. Madre, 2 Jones L. (N. Car.) 320; Cobb v. Fogalman, 1 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 444; Bond v. Hall, 8 Jones L. (N. Car.) 14; Webster College v. Tyler, 35 Mo. 268; Jeffersonville R. Co. v. Swift, 26 Ind. 459; Dickerson v. Johnson, 24 Ark. 251; Cothran v. State, 39 Miss. 541; Herndon v. Bryant, 39 Miss. 336; Oliver v. State, 39 Miss. 526; Galena etc. R. Co. v. Jacobs, 20 Ill. 487; Swank v. Nichols, 24 Ind. 199.

But where there is any evidence, however slight, it is the duty of the judge to declare the law thereon.¹

b. Abstract Propositions of Law.—No instructions should be given which are not relevant to the facts which there is evidence tending to prove. In many cases the giving of such instruction has been held error;² on the other hand, it is held not error to refuse to give them.³ And if the instructions are not based upon facts which the evidence tends to prove, and are also, when examined by the appellate court, found to have a tendency to mislead, the judgment will be reversed because they were given, although they are correct as abstract propositions.⁴ When an instruction is so worded as to lead the jury to infer the existence of a state of facts not warranted by the evidence, it will afford good cause for reversing the judgment.⁵ Judgment will not be reversed

1. Flournoy v. Andrews, 5 Mo. 513; Bradford v. Pearson, 12 Mo. 71; Camp v. Phillips, 42 Ga. 289; Abilene v. Hendricks, 36 Kan. 106.

2. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 88, citing Gist v. Loring, 60 Mo. 487; Huffman v. Ackley, 34 Mo. 277; Lellis v. St. Louis R. Co., 64 Mo. 464.

3. Straus v. Minzesheimer, 78 Ill. 492; Clark v. Vorce, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 232; Wendell v. Moulton, 26 N. H. 41; McKnight v. Rutcliff, 44 Pa. St. 156; Allan v. Wanamaker, 31 N. J. L. 370; Patton v. Gregory, 21 Tex. 513; Laber v. Cooper, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 565; Davis v. Fairclough, 63 Mo. 61; Hamilton v. Russell, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 495; Roach v. Hulings, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 326; Phett v. Poe, 2 How. (U. S.) 458; State v. Rash, 12 Ired. (N. Car.) 382; Hibler v. McCarter, 31 Ala. 501; Breese v. State, 12 Ohio St. 146; Montgomery v. Evans, 8 Ga. 178; State Bank v. Hubbard, 8 Ark. 183; Mayeys v. Farish, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 41; Edelin v. Saunders, 8 Md. 118; Snyder v. Witt, 15 Pa. St. 59; Croft v. State, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 317; Cowles v. Bacon, 21 Conn. 451; Conlon v. San Francisco, 36 Cal. 404; Rice v. Rice, 6 Ind. 100; Shaw v. Brown, 13 Iowa 508; Gilbert v. Woodbury, 22 Me. 246; Harvey v. Skipwith, 16 Gratt. (Va.) 405; Ely v. Tallman, 14 Wis. 28.

4. Ocheltree v. Carl, 23 Iowa 394; Beaver v. Taylor, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 644; Coughlin v. People, 18 Ill. 266; State v. Bailey, 57 Mo. 131; Clarke v. Dutcher, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 674; Horner v. Wood, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 386; Cummings v. Chandler, 26 Me. 453; Caw v. People, 3 Neb. 367.

The fair test of the propriety of a charge cannot be whether in the abstract it is right. It must be taken in view of the evidence of the facts charged on which the jury is to respond. A charge in the abstract, as a mere legal proposition might be perfectly inoperative and harmless, when, however, referred to a certain set of facts and circumstances in the proof, it might have a most important and conclusive influence on the jury in forming their verdict. Liscomb, J., in Thompson v. Shannon, 9 Tex. 536.

5. Cane v. People, 3 Neb. 357.

Instances.—In State v. Bailey, 57 Mo. 131, it appeared that the accused and the deceased met at a certain place and commenced firing at each other at so nearly the same time that it was impossible to tell which fired first. This was either a case of murder or justifiable homicide in self defence, and it was therefore error for the judge to instruct the jury as to the law of manslaughter, although his instructions on that branch of the law were in the abstract correct.

So in Kennedy v. North Mo. R. Co., 36 Mo. 351, where a farmer sustained an injury by reason of his wagon coming in contact with a railway train at a farm crossing, and it appeared from the evidence that the collision was the result of a mere casualty, it was error to instruct the jury that, if they believed from the evidence that the injury complained of was wilfully or recklessly done by the defendant, then they were not confined to the actual damages sustained by the plaintiff, and might give such exemplary damages as the circumstances of the case might warrant. This instruction was correct as an abstract proposition of law, but it was misleading because it intimated to the jury that they might give exemplary for error in charging an abstract proposition,¹ unless misleading.

c. Should be Pointed and Definite.—The instructions of the judge to the jury should be pointed and definite.² The instruction should not be ambiguous, that is, capable of two interpretations, one correct and the other incorrect.³ Neither should inconsistent or contradictory instructions be given.⁴ Nor should damages in a case in which there was no evidence tending to show those facts which constitute a basis of exemplary damages. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 92.

1. Schneider v. Hosier, 21 Ohio St. 113, 98.

2. McKinney v. Snyder, 78 Pa. St. 497; Gas Co. v. Wheeling, 8 W. Va. 323.

We suggest to the courts the necessity, when instructions are asked, to see that the law is properly laid down to the jury, and not content themselves with simply giving or refusing the instruction asked. The object of the courts should not be to get clear of laying down the law by refusing to instruct, especially when instructions are prayed for, which in part contain the law, and which obviously show a desire to have the jury properly instructed, although in the hurry, and for other reasons, the counsel have not properly attended to the framing and the phraseology of the instructions. Let the lower courts place the law fairly before the jury in a few plain, forcible, pointed and pithy instructions, and there will be much less appealing—much less dissatisfaction with their decisions. They should declare the law whenever called upon, in order to assist the juries in coming to a proper determination. Talbot v. Mearns, 21 Mo. 431.

We have often thought and said that instructions were designed ex vi termini to assist the jury upon the law, to find properly the facts and issues in controversy. Therefore a few plain, direct instructions, embracing the law of the case, will always aid a jury to come to the correct conclusions. The court had better give no instructions than such as mystify, confuse and involve the case in intricacy, thereby often misleading them instead of giving light to them. Improper instructions given to juries are a fruitful source of litigation. Crole v. Thomas, 17 Mo. 332; State v. Floyd, 15 Mo. 349.

Instructions should always be clear, accurate and concise statements of the law as applicable to the facts of the case. It was never contemplated under the provisions of the practice act that the court should be required to give a vast number of instructions, amounting in the aggregate to a lengthy address. . . . Adams v. Smith, 58 Ill. 417; Trish v. Newell, 62 Ill. 296.

3. Belt v. Goode, 31 Mo. 128; Henry v. Davis, 7 W. Va. 715; Central R. etc. v. Sanger, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 231; Siebert v. Leonard, 21 Minn. 442; Ill. Linen Co. v. Hough, 91 Ill. 63; Vanslyck v. Mills, 34 Iowa 375.

Where one instruction states the defendant's liability more strongly than the law warrants, and another series states it correctly, and the two relate to vital points in the issue, they are calculated to confuse the jury, and the latter instructions will not cure the former. Steinmeyer v. People, 95 Ill. 383.

3. Whitfield v. Westbrook, 40 Miss. 311; Ferguson v. Fox, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 83; Selin v. Snyder, 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 319; Clem v. State, 31 Ind. 480; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Payne, 49 Ill. 499; Pond v. Wyman, 15 Mo. 181; Mackey v. People, 2 Colo. 13; Rice v. Olin, 79 Pa. St. 391; Pittsburg R. v. Krouse, 30 Ohio St. 240.

A merely misleading charge is not reversible error. Perkerson v. Snodgrass (Ala.), 4 So. Rep. 752.

In an action for driving logs, where defendant alleged that he had been damaged by the injudicious use by plaintiff of a certain dam, the court properly refused to charge "that there is no evidence of any damage to the defendant by reason of the manner in which the dam was operated; and the jury will not allow any damages to the defendant by reason of any alleged improper use of the dam," as such charge would mislead the jury. Beard v. Clarke (Minn.), 39 N. W. Rep. 63.

In an action on a firm note given by one partner without authority from the other, for a purchase in the firm name, instructions that the burden of proving notice to plaintiffs that such latter party was not to be bound is on him; and if the witnesses are equally credible, and their evidence contradictory as to they be couched in technical language;¹ nor on isolated parts of the testimony. Instructions should cover the whole case.²

d. How Taken and Construed.—Instructions should be taken and construed together with reference to one another.³

the notice, then he has not proved notice, and plaintiffs should recover; and that if the witnesses are equally credible and honest as to the notice, and their evidence on that point in direct conflict, then notice cannot be said to be proved, —are properly refused, as calculated to confuse and mislead the jury. Alabama Fertilizer Co. v. Reynolds (Ala.), 4 So. Rep. 639.

It is error to give to the jury conflicting instructions based upon different views of the law applicable to the case, without such instructions being harmonized by the judge. Kelley v. Cable Co., 7 Mont. 70.

Any instructions calculated to mislead the jury, whether such tendency arises from ambiguity, prolixity, or any other cause, should be avoided; and if given in such form, the appellate court should reverse the judgment. Gordon v. Richmond, 83 Mo. 436.

1. Chappell v. Allen, 38 Mo. 213.

The judge ought to instruct the jury in plain English, and avoid, as far as possible, the use of technical terms. The use of such expressions as "prima facie" and "preponderance of evidence" has been criticised. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 99.

2. First Nat. Bank v. Currie, 44 Mo. 91.

If requests for instructions which do not cover the whole case, are presented to the judge, he may modify them so as to make them present the law applicable to the facts contended for by both parties, there being, of course, evidence of such facts. Neither is it error that the instructions given fail to present the view of the case taken by one of the parties, provided that, taken together, they fairly present the law of the case in a way that is not calculated to mislead. Instructions are to be considered in their combination and entirety, and not as though each instruction was intended to present the whole law of the case. Hawkins v. Hudson, 45 Ala. 482; McKeon v. Citizens' R. Co., 43 Mo. 405; People v. Doyell, 48 Cal. 85; Smith v. Carr, 16 Conn. 455; Thompson's Charging the Jury, 100.

3. Cowger v. Land, 112 Ind. 263; Conrad v. Kinzie, 105 Ind. 281.

An instruction should be taken as a whole, and in connection with the other instructions in the case; and if, when so taken, the law of the case is correctly stated, an inaccurate expression in the particular instruction will not be available error. Hence an instruction, to an action for damages caused by a railroad accident, that upon plaintiff's showing lack of negligence on his part, it devolved upon the railroad company to show how the accident happened, is not erroneous, if modified by the further instruction that the defendant would not be liable if the accident did not occur through its negligence. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Jones, 108 Ind. 551.

Where certain instructions in the judge's charge to the jury, claimed by appellant to be erroneous, are so qualified by subsequent instructions that the charge, taken as a whole, lays down the true rule of law, objections to it will not be sustained. Fort Worth etc. R. Co. v. Hogsett, 67 Tex. 685.

Where the court gave an instruction at request of the defendant, and then gave a more complete instruction, applying the law involved to the particular facts of the case, the defendant has no ground of exception. Baker v. State, 69 Wis. 32.

The instructions given to a jury must be construed together, and if, when considered as a whole, they properly state the law, it is sufficient. Campbell v. Holland, 22 Neb. 587.

In the trial of a case, a correct apprehension by the court of all the principles of law involved is not demanded; but it is sufficient if the instructions are correct, as applicable to the case presented, and that the court should not be wrong to the extent of misleading the jury. Schutz v. Jordan, 32 Fed. Rep. 55.

Instructions should be considered with reference to one another, and as an entirety; and if, when thus construed, they contain a full, fair and correct statement of the law applicable to the case, and are not calculated to mislead the jury, the judgment will not be reversed because of the mere inaccuracies or "loose expressions" therein when separately considered. Kopelke v. Kopelke, 112 Ind. 435.

5. Duty of Judge in Instructing Jury—a. Duty to Give Instructions.—It is the duty of the judge to see that every case so goes to the jury that they have clear and intelligent notions of the points they are to decide, and to this end he shall give necessary instructions whether so requested by counsel or not, and his failure to do so is held ground for a new trial when the verdict was not one which effectuated justice between the parties.¹

In the absence of a statute or constitutional provision, it will not be error, however, in a civil case to submit a cause to a jury without instruction, if no instructions are asked for.² And even when requested, the court is not bound to instruct upon an abstract proposition of law not applicable to the case.³ In criminal cases it has been held that it is the duty of the judge to instruct the jury whether requested or not.⁴ This rule is not universal,⁵

In an action by an employe for injuries caused by the fall of a building, defendant alleged that it would have withstood any ordinary storm, but that the one that overthrew it was most extraordinary. The court instructed the jury that the defendant would be liable, unless he showed that it was such an unusual storm as builders do not provide against,—“a phenomenal one.” Held, that all the judge said in relation to storms in his charge must be considered together, and that the charge in substance meant an “extraordinary storm such as builders do not provide against or contemplate, in planning their architecture,” and was correct. Diamond State Iron Co. v. Giles (Del.), 11 Atl. Rep. 189.

If a court instructs a jury to take into consideration all of the facts brought out in the evidence, it is not error for it to refuse to indicate particular points in the evidence, suggested by defendant's request for instructions. State v. Laughlin, 73 Iowa 351.

1. Owen v. Owen, 22 Iowa 270; State v. Brainard, 25 Iowa 572.

It is the duty of the court to instruct the jury as to the issues joined in the pleadings and to determine from the pleadings what allegations are admitted and what denied. Potter v. C. R. I. etc. R. Co., 46 Iowa 399; Dassler v. Wisley, 32 Mo. 498.

“It is the practice for judges at nisi prius not only to state to the jury all the evidence that has been given, but to comment upon its bearing and weight, and to state the legal rules upon the subject, and their application to the particular case, and to advise them as regards the verdict they should give. Chitty, cited in Sackett on Instructions, 1.

See Morris v. Platt, 32 Conn. 75; Carpenter v. State, 43 Ind. 371; Nels v. State, 2 Tex. 280.

While the trial court is not bound to instruct the jury of its own motion, yet, if it does so instruct them, it should not direct them unconditionally to find against a party upon a given hypothesis, when there may be another hypothesis equally supported by the evidence, but withheld from their consideration, upon which they might find in favor of such a party. Swope v. Schafer (Ky.), 4 S. W. Rep. 300.

The case should be submitted to the jury upon the theories of the parties. Winchester v. King, 46 Mich. 102.

2. Drury v. White, 10 Mo. 354; Coates v. Sangston, 5 Md. 121; Haupt v. Pohlman, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 307.

In the trial of causes neither party is bound to ask instructions. If they are not asked, the giving of them or not is at the discretion of the court. If instructions are asked on the whole case, or on any particular matter arising out of it, which the court refuses, it is not bound afterwards to give instructions of its own as substitutes for those refused. If erroneous instructions are asked and refused, it is entirely at the option of the judge whether he will afterwards give any or not. Clark v. Hammerle, 27 Mo. 55.

3. See ante, 4*b.*, Abstract Propositions.

4. State v. Matthews, 20 Mo. 55; State v. Stonum, 62 Mo. 596.

5. People v. Gray, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 289.

and in no instance will it be error unless excepted to at the proper time in absence of statutory provision.¹

1. Krock v. Wolf, 39 Ind. 88; Murray v. State, 26 Ind. 141.

Charging Juries.—It is, of course, the duty of the judge, when requested to lay down the law to the jury, touching every hypothesis of fact presented by the evidence. But it is often a question of much perplexity, what degree of probability must support the hypothetical state of facts in order to require the judge to instruct the jury with reference to it. Upon this point there seem to be two ideas. One is that if there is any evidence, however slight,—even a scintilla, as it is sometimes called, tending to show a certain state of facts, the judge is bound, if requested, to instruct the jury with reference to the law applicable to these facts. By necessary analogy, where this idea prevails, a verdict of the jury will not be set aside on appeal or error if there is a scintilla of evidence to support it; for it is an unavoidable conclusion that the judge is bound if requested to charge the jury upon any hypothetical state of facts presented by evidence of sufficient force to support a finding of the jury in favor of the existence of those facts. The other idea is that, in order to make it obligatory upon the judge to lay down the law to the jury with reference to a hypothetical state of facts, there must be evidence tending to show such facts sufficiently strong to require the judge to allow the verdict to stand if rendered in favor of the existence of such facts, on a motion for new trial, where he decides in the exercise of a sound discretion, and not within restricted limits which courts occupy on appeal or error. In other words, according to this doctrine, the judge is not bound to instruct the jury with reference to the state of facts, unless there is evidence making it in some degree probable that such facts exist. This doctrine is much more consistent with sense and conducive to justice than the scintilla doctrine. In a Texas case it was thus laid down by CHIEF JUSTICE ROBERTS, himself an able and experienced judge:

"When the evidence tends sufficiently to the establishment of a defence or mitigation of the offence charged, as to reasonably require a charge as applicable, is a question of sound judgment to be exercised by the district judge, in the first instance, and afterwards by the supreme court on appeal. If its force is deemed to be very weak, trivial, light, and its application remote, the court is not required to give a charge upon it. If, on the other hand, it is not so pertinent and forcible as that it might be reasonably supposed that the jury could be influenced by it in arriving at their verdict, the court should charge so as to furnish them with the appropriate rule of law upon the subject." Bishop v. State, 43 Tex. 402.

This doctrine was lately reaffirmed and applied by the court of appeals of Texas. Elan v. State, 16 Tex. App. 34; 20 Cent. Law Jour. 123.

The duty of a judge, in instructing the jury on the issue between the parties, is a very important and delicate one. Care is to be taken not to trench on the provision of a jury in finding the facts, while the court does not allow them to be misled. The first duty is to make the jury comprehend what is the question or fact in dispute between the parties. The jury go wrong oftener from not understanding the true issue than from any wish to go wrong or do wrong in finding a verdict. And the judges often fail in conveying to the minds of a jury the exact fact in dispute, or the issue between the parties through a fear of exceeding the proper limits of a judge. In doing this, a judge need express no opinion as to what the truth is on the evidence; he can still leave this to the unbiased action of the minds of a jury. But he should never omit the first duty of a judge, that of making the jury see the exact and naked point in dispute, and leaving that dispute to be settled by the yea or nay of the jury. Unless a charge succeeds in doing this, it has done very little, if any, good. So also should the judge make the jury understand the application of the law to the evidence, and its bearings upon the case and upon the decision which they are about to give. It often happens that there are many points in a case about which there is no dispute. It is well to call the attention of the jury to these undisputed facts, with the remark that as to these there seems to be no dispute. The object of this is to fix the attention of the jury upon the really contested fact, and to prevent them from wasting time and becoming con-

b. Instructions Presumed to be Correct.—In the absence of evidence to the contrary, it is presumed that the presiding judge at a trial has given proper instructions.¹

c. The Judge Must Present All the Material Facts.—The judge is not bound to sum up the evidence,² but if he does so he must present all the material facts.³ He must not single out isolated parts of the testimony, and instruct the jury as to the law arising on the facts which such testimony tends to prove, and he must be careful not to give undue prominence to certain portions of it, and especially he ought not to review only those facts which have a tendency to establish one side of the case.⁴

fused on immaterial matters. Juries have been known to disagree or find a verdict contrary to the truth of a case, and that, too, on an issue about which the parties had no dispute. The judge had to call their attention to it as a fact in the case, which they must find; and it was a fact about which there had been no dispute and little said; jurors forgot that it had been proved or admitted. It is well, therefore, for the judge to point out the facts which are not disputed and call the attention of the jury to the really contested points in the case. The jury will then give their whole attention to these points, and will usually decide them right, unless a criminal prejudice shall have by stealth crept into the jury box, and warped the minds of the jurors. Nash's Pleading and Practice (Ohio) 978.

1. Commonwealth v. Ford, 146 Mass. 131.

2. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 109.

It cannot be traced or ascertained that any rule of common law exists that makes it imperative on a judge to repeat the evidence to the jury. He is placed on the bench to the end that he may preside over the order and solemnity of trials, maintain the authority of the laws, and administer them upon all applications which are solely confined to his jurisdiction. If, on the trial of a case, the witnesses are numerous, the evidence complicated, and the main question or principal issue obscured by various and conflicting testimony, he may, in his direction, sum up the whole to the jury, that they may apply it properly, and have their attention directed to the essential points in controversy. No judge would ever refuse to impart such assistance when it is requested by a jury; nor would he withhold it in any case, wherein the nature of the evidence or the conduct of the cause led him to believe that his aid would enable them to discharge their constitutional functions with more correctness or facility. But it must of necessity depend on the circumstances of each case whether the judge believes that his aid would be of any efficacy; whether the case be not so plain and intelligible as to render his interference unnecessary, or the evidence so equally balanced as to make it unsafe. All these considerations the law has wisely confided to the sound discretion of the judge; and it affords a singular testimony in favor of free institutions that the reluctance of judicial interposition should be made a subject of complaint, when in other countries, where the same system of law prevails, the invasion of the right of juries has been an abundant source of public evil. The common law is not altered in this respect by the act of 1796, ch. 52, which professes only to prescribe the manner in which a judge shall charge the jury, when he thinks fit to deliver a charge—not to make it his duty to deliver one, if he deem it unnecessary: "It shall not be lawful for any judge, in delivering a charge to the petit jury, to give an opinion whether any fact is fully or sufficiently proved, such matter being the true office and proper province of the jury; but it is hereby declared to be the duty of the judge in such cases to state, in a full and correct manner, the facts given in evidence, and to declare and explain the law arising therefrom." No implication can arise from this law that he must charge the jury; but if he does charge them, he must do it according to the rule there laid down. State v. Morris, 3 Hawks (N. Car.) 390.

3. Penn. R. Co. v. Zebe, 33 Pa. St. 318.

4. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 111.

d. The Judge Must Not Assume a State of Facts as Proven.—The judge should always direct the attention of the jury to a hypothetical state of facts, which they may or may not find from the evidence to be true. He should never so frame his instructions as to assume a disputed state of facts as proven. The rule is of equal application in civil and criminal cases.¹

e. He Must Not Assume the Existence of Facts Not in Evidence.—The judge in the charge to the jury must not assume the existence of facts not in evidence, or which there is no evidence

"It is therefore a golden rule, that the judge, who undertakes to present the evidence to the jury, must array before them all the material evidence on either side." Thompson's Charging the Jury, 111.

Comments on the Evidence.—A reference in a charge by the court to a fact, which, upon the testimony, is undisputed, is not error. Wright v. Towle (Mich.), 34 N. W. Rep. 578.

It is not error for the court to express its opinion upon the weight and character of the evidence if in the end the question is submitted to the jury. Rowell v. Fuller's Estate, 59 Vt. 688.

The defendant company requested an instruction to the effect that it had a right to leave a defective car upon the side track in the usual and regular course of business, as known to and understood by its employees. The court refused the request, and, in doing so, said: "Is there any testimony in this case that shows that [the plaintiff] knew the cars upon the grade might pass out upon the main track by the wind?" etc. It was part of the contention on the part of the plaintiff that the force of the wind had started the car. Held, that the refusal of the request was proper, but that the reference to the action of the wind was damaging error. Hewitt v. Flint etc. R. Co., (Mich.) 34 N. W. Rep. 659.

It is proper for the judge to aid the jury by explaining and commenting upon the testimony, and to even give them his opinion upon questions of fact, provided only he submit those questions to their determination. United States v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., 8 S. Court Rep. (U. S.) 77.

The court, in charging the jury, made an arithmetical calculation of the amount due one of the parties, but expressly charged: "I only give these suggestions, and I do not intend to indicate to you that you should take them, but they are only suggestions of the way you may look at it; not the way you must look at it. That is exclusively for you." Held, no error. Curry v. Curry (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 198.

It is not error for the court, when instructing a jury, to speak of the testimony of one party to the action as uncorroborated. Lillibridge v. Barber, 55 Conn. 366.

1. Seibert v. Leonard, 21 Minn. 442; Straus v. Minzesheimer, 78 Ill. 492; Boddie v. State, 52 Ala. 395; Wash. etc. R. Co. v. Gladmon, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 401; N. J. Life Ins. Co. v. Baker, 94 U. S. 611; Peck v. Ritchey, 66 Mo. 114; Gaither v. Martin, 3 Md. 162; State v. Kennedy, 7 Nev. 374; Kinney v. Williams, 1 Colo. 191; Wall v. Goodenough, 16 Ill. 415; Walters v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 41 Iowa 71; McDonald v. Beal, 55 Ga. 288.

In summing up in a criminal case, says JUDGE THOMPSON (Charging the Jury, 73), the judge will therefore direct the minds of the jury to the salient points of the testimony in such a manner as, if possible, to leave no definite impression upon their minds as to what his own opinion upon the weight of the testimony. The duty of the judge in this respect was well stated to the jury by the late CHIEF JUSTICE PACKER, in his summing up in the celebrated trial of Selfridge: "I hold the privilege of the jury to ascertain the facts, and that of the court to declare the law, to be distinct and independent. Should I interfere with my opinion on the testimony, in order to influence your minds to incline either way, I should certainly step out of the province of a judge into that of an advocate. All which I conceive necessary or proper for the one to do in this part of the cause is, to call your attention to the points of fact on which the case may turn, state the prominent testimony in the case which may tend to establish or disprove those points, give you some rules by which you are tending to prove.¹ Neither must he assume that there is a doubt if there is none.² But he may assume the nonexistence of facts as to which there is no evidence.³ Even incidental expressions of opinion as to the facts during the progress of a case has been held ground for reversing the case;⁴ or where the opinion is made by a careless or playful remark;⁵ or where to weigh testimony, if a contrariety should have occurred, and leave you to form a decision according to your own best judgment, without giving you to understand, if it can be avoided, what my own opinion of the subject is."

1. Wash. etc. Ins. Co. v. St. Mary's Seminary, 52 Mo. 480; Andreas v. Ketchum, 77 Ill. 377; Moffit v. Conklin, 35 Mo 457; Shellito v. Sampson, 61 Iowa 40; Manning v. Burlington, 64 Iowa 240; Newton Wagon Co. v. Dier, 10 Neb. 284.

2. Where there is no conflict in the testimony, and no room to doubt or hesitate as to a matter of fact in issue, the judge in his charge, ought not to assume that it is or may be doubtful. Such a course is calculated either to confound the jury by causing them to doubt the justice of their own clear convictions, or to mislead, by inducing them to suppose that they may find the fact either way when the evidence warrants but one conclusion, and to find contrarywise would be to find manifestly against the evidence. The rule which forbids the judge to charge upon the weight of evidence, does not require or authorize him to assume as doubtful that which is clear and indisputable, or to assume hypotheses at variance with certain facts. When the evidence to a fact is positive and not disputed or questioned, it is to be taken as an established fact, and the charge of the court should proceed upon that basis. It is only when there may be doubt, that the jury are required to weigh the evidence, and it is then only that the rule applies that the court shall not charge upon the weight of the evidence. It is not the meaning of the rule that the judge shall ignore the indisputable facts of the case, or distrust the evidence of his senses, or that he shall assume that the jury may doubt where there is no room for doubt, or find contrary to the evidence and manifest truth and justice of the case. WHEELER, J., in Wintz v. Morrison, 17 Tex. 372.

No instruction should be given which assumes as a matter of fact that which is not conceded or established by uncontradicted proof.

Knickerbocker Ins. Co. v. Foley, 105 U. S. 350; Leavenworth Nat. Bank v. Hunt, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 391; Washington etc. R. Co. v. Gladmon, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 401; New Orleans Ins. Co. v. Piaggio, 16 Wall. 378; Orleans v. Platt, 99 U. S. 676.

3. People v. Welsh, 49 Cal. 185; Thompson's Charging the Jury, 5.

4. State v. Harkin, 7 Nev. 377; McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 319.

5. Fuhrman v. Huntsville, 54 Ala. 263.

Thus in a case in Alabama, the judge, in telling the jury that they might give exemplary damages, and explaining to them what such damages were, playfully remarked, "Such as would teach the old gentleman not to violate the sabbath, nor injure his health by riding in the night, nor interfere with rights of others." For this remark the judgment was reversed.

Remarks by Judge.—In an action for damages against a city, a charge by the court, who has been deprecating the excess of partisan zeal displayed, that "I may here remark that, as a citizen, if the jury award to this plaintiff a verdict, the court, like the counsel, will be called upon to pay its share of the verdict, and I shall never, gentlemen, be found turning my back upon a tax which is the result of substantial justice, —never,"—is not an abuse of the discretion which the court may exercise in influencing the jury. Magee v. City of Troy, 1 N. Y. S. Rep. 24.

Language in a charge as follows: "It is my duty to charge you the law as it is declared to be by our supreme court, without reference to my own personal opinion in regard to the matter," followed by a statement of the law as decided by the supreme court, is not error. Dial v. Agnew (S. Car.), 6 S. E. Rep. 295.

The court instructed the jury that he gave them, with some regret, the law as laid down by the supreme court, an opinion is expressed by the manner and emphasis of the judge.¹

f. Should Not be Argumentative.—It is erroneous to give an instruction which is more in the nature of an argument than a statement of the law governing the case, giving undue prominence to facts relied on, and reciting facts having no tendency to support the theory presented.² Long instructions with arguments injected into them are likewise condemned.³

g. Right to Modify Instructions Given.—The court has power at any time during the trial to modify instructions already given, or give or revoke them entirely upon reflection if he concludes that they are erroneous.⁴ But where erroneous instructions are given for one party, the error is not cured by giving for the other party instructions explanatory or contradictory of those first given. The erroneous instruction should be expressly withdrawn from the jury.⁵ If the additional instruction is not inconsistent, it may cure an erroneous prior instruction.⁶ The giving of addithat, in a suit for breach of promise, the birth of a child might not be proved, to aggravate the damages. He further told them they might consider all the circumstances: the disgrace, the feelings of misery, apart from the child being born; and made many similar comments. Held, that a judge should not tell the jury that he regrets the state of the law, or practically take away all its effect by observations which inflame the jury into disregarding it. McFadden v. Reynolds (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 638.

It is not improper for the judge to remark in the hearing of the jury, after allowing a witness to be recalled to impeach another, that, had he known the nature of the impeaching question he would not have permitted such recall; the re-examination of a witness being entirely discretionary with the court. The remark does not violate Code N. C., § 413, providing that no judge in giving a charge to a petit jury shall give an opinion whether a fact is sufficiently proven. De Berry v. Carolina Cent. R. Co. (N. Car.), 6 S. E. Rep. 723.

A maker of maps procured from the defendant an agreement to pay him $74 for printing, in an atlas of Morgan county, Ill., a sketch of his residence. The defendant refused payment on the ground that the sketch was incorrect, and on the trial it became purely a question of fact whether this was so or not. After the evidence had been submitted to the jury, the attorney for the defendant asked the judge "whether or not his honor would know the view to be the residence of the defendant with the defendant's name taken from the view," to which the judge replied, "I do not know that I would." The jury found for the defendant. For this error the judgment was reversed. Andreas v. Ketcham, 77 Ill. 377.

1. Reiger v. Davis, 67 N. Car. 185; State v. Simmons, 6 Jones L. (N. Car.) 309.

2. Ludwig v. Sager, 84 Ill. 99; Thorp v. Growey, 85 Ill. 612; Sackett on Instructions, 14; State v. Orr, 64 Mo. 339; Morris v. Lachman (Cal.), 8 Pac. Rep. 799.

3. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 81; Pierce v. Rehfus, 35 Mich. 53; Thompson v. Force, 65 Ill. 372.

"We may here, with great propriety, take occasion to remark that a practice seems to be growing up to draw out instructions to a very great length, and injecting into them an argument of the case. This is bad practice, and should not be encouraged by the courts." Merritt v. Merritt, 20 Ill. 80; Dingman v. State, 48 Wis. 485.

In the famous Tilton-Beecher trial, which lasted six months, the charge of the court was delivered in twenty minutes. It is regarded as a model charge.

4. Sittig v. Birkestock, 38 Md. 158; Hall v. State, 8 Ind. 444; Jones v. Van Patten, 3 Ind. 107.

5. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 123; Jones v. Talbot, 4 Mo. 289.

6. Pond v. Wyman, 15 Mo. 181; Williams v. Van Meter, 8 Mo. 339.

If the instructions given are consistent with each other, and, taken to-tional instructions rests in the discretion of the court.¹ Such instructions should not be given in the absence of the parties or their attorneys.²

h. At What Stage of Trial Instructions to be Given.—In the regular and orderly progress of a trial, it is the duty of the judge to give instructions to, or “charge” the jury, after counsel have closed their argument and immediately prior to the retirement of the jury.³

But he is not precluded from giving instructions to the jury at such other times as he may deem advisable. He may call the jury in for further instructions at their own request, or by the agreement of counsel, or through his own desire.⁴ It is not error for him to refuse so to do. It is a matter solely within his discretion.⁵ The only limit to this privilege is that it must be done in the presence of the parties or counsel in civil cases, and in the presence of the prisoner in criminal prosecutions.⁶ These instructions are subject to exceptions for error, just the same as those given before the jury retired.⁷

i. Instructions Must be Given in Open Court.—There must be no private communication between the judge and jury; he must not go to the room where they are deliberating,⁸ even for the purpose of giving additional instruction,⁹ or to answer certain questions to them,¹⁰ or, in the absence of the counsel, at the request of the jury, to expound the charge to them;¹¹ or go to their room and suffer them to put certain questions to him, though he do not answer them;¹² or to visit them in their room merely for the gether, constitute a correct exposition of the law applicable to the case, a reversal of the judgment cannot be asked because a single instruction taken by itself is defective. Whilst erroneous instructions cannot be cured by subsequent instructions that are correct, a defective instruction, or an instruction that is not true under all contingencies, and is, therefore, not applicable to all the facts before the jury, may be supplied by instructions to follow. Neale v. McKinstry, 7 Mo. 132; Browne v. Clay Fire Co., 68 Mo. 133.

JUDGE THOMPSON, however, adds that these cases must be treated as exceptional, if, indeed, they can be sustained on principle. Charging the Jury, 124.

1. State v. Pitts, 11 Iowa 343; Hogg v. State, 7 Ind. 551; Nelson v. Hodge, 116 Mass. 367.

2. Davis v. Fish, 2 Greene (Iowa) 447; O'Conner v. Guthrie, 11 Iowa 80; Campbell v. Beckett, 8 Ohio St. 210; Hoberg v. State, 3 Minn. 262.

In has, however, been held that it is not error for a judge to give the jury further instruction in the absence of parties. For in contemplation of law the parties and their counsel remain in court until a verdict is rendered, or the jury discharged. Cooper v. Morris, 48 N. J. L. 607.

3. Sackett on Instructions (1st ed.)

4. State v. Pitts, 11 Iowa 343; Lee v. Quirk, 20 Ill. 392; O'Shields v. State, 55 Ga. 696; Thompson's Charging the Jury, 131.

5. Nelson v. Dodge, 116 Mass. 367.

6. Davis v. Fish, 2 Greene (Iowa) 447; O'Conner v. Guthrie, 11 Iowa 80; Campbell v. Beckett, 8 Ohio St. 210; Hoberg v. State, 3 Minn. 262.

7. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 132; Nelson v. Dodge, 116 Mass. 367; Lund v. Tyngsboro, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 563.

8. Hoberg v. State, 3 Minn. 262; Crabtree v. Hagenbaugh, 23 Ill. 349.

9. Fish v. Smith, 12 Ind. 563.

11. Taylor v. Betsford, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 487.

10. Kirk v. State, 14 Ohio 511.

12. Benson v. Clark, 1 Cow. (N. Y.)

purpose of informing them that if they should desire any further information on matters of law they should ask him for it, even though he held no other communication;¹ or, at their request, to send a paper to them in the absence of counsel;² or to write a letter to them;³ or to send a written instruction to them as in answer to a request made by them in writing.⁴

j. Must Not Suggest Compromise Verdict.—The court must not suggest that they should render a verdict arrived at by compromises among themselves, if they could not otherwise agree, rather than disagree.⁵ The judge may, however, tell the jury that a verdict ought, in all cases submitted to them, to be returned by them.⁶

6. Specific Instructions—a. Must be Asked for.—It is not error for the judge to omit to charge the jury on a particular point unless asked to do so at the trial. A party cannot, in a court of error, avail himself of an omission which he made no effort to have supplied at the time.⁷ The rule is that for a mis-

1. Hoberg v. State, 3 Minn. 262.

2. Benson v. Clark, 1 Cow. (N. Y.)

258.

3. Sargent v. Roberts, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 337.

4. O'Conner v. Guthrie, 11 Iowa 80.

5. A jury returned and stated they had not agreed, but stood eleven to one and divided on $200. The judge then said, "If that is the only difference it would be better for the county and the parties that one or both sides yield so as to come together. It would be unfortunate for all to have a disagreement when the difference is so small." Held, error.

"It is no doubt true," says JUDGE COOLEY, "that juries often compromise in the way here suggested by splitting a difference and that they sometimes return verdicts with which the judgment of no one is satisfied. But this is an abuse. The law contemplates they shall, by their discussions, harmonize their views if possible, but not that they shall compromise, divide or yield for the mere purpose of an agreement. The sentiment or motive which permits this tends to bring jury trial into discredit and convert it into a lottery. It was no doubt very desirable to the public that the jury should agree if they could do so without sacrificing what any one of them believed were the just rights of the parties; but not otherwise. Goodsell v. Seeley, 46 Mich. 623; Cranston v. N. Y. etc. R. Co., 103 N. Y. 614.

A jury, after being out nearly two days, reported that they could not agree, whereon the court told them that it seemed very difficult for juries to agree at the present term; that they ought to agree and decide cases; that he had no idea of discharging them, but would keep them together during the entire term if they did not sooner agree. The next evening the jury announced a verdict. Held, that such remarks on the part of the court were reversible error. Chesapeake etc. R. Co. v. Barlow (Tenn.), 8 S. W. Rep. 147.

After the argument was closed, and the issue given to the jury, the court, upon its own motion, read an address to the jury on the theory that they were unevenly divided in sentiment, in which it advised them to compromise their views, and yield something in deference to the opinions of others, especially when those differing were in the majority, and told them to do their duty, and leave the rest to him. Held, an unwarrantable interference with the province of the jury, and ground for a new trial. Whitelaw's Exr. v. Whitelaw, 83 Va. 40.

6. Whitman v. Morey, 63 N. H. 448; Ahearn v. Mann, 60 N. H. 473; Allen v. Woodson, 50 Ga. 53; Pierce v. Reh-fuss, 35 Mich. 53.

In Allen v. Woodson, 50 Ga. 53, the judge in his charge said: "This case has been troublesome, and has cost much time and trouble to investigate it, therefore there should be a verdict." Held, no error.

7. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 112; Rozar v. Burns, 13 Ga. 34; Hatch v. Spearin, 11 Me. 354; Hall v. Weir, 1 direction judgment will be reversed, though no instruction be asked; but not for the omission to instruct on a particular point where the judge was not requested to do so.¹ Where the court instructs the jury in a manner sufficiently clear and sound as to the rules applicable to the case, it is not bound to give other instructions asked for, whether they are correct or not.² Where instructions are asked, they should be precise and certain to a particular intent.³

b. Can be Written or Verbal.—In the absence of statute or rule of court requiring otherwise, a request by counsel for the court to charge in a particular way may be made verbally; though it is, no doubt, the preferable practice to require that such requests be made in writing.⁴ If the record fails to show whether it was written or verbal, when it is required to be in writing, it will be presumed to be in writing.⁵

c. When Presented to Court.—The proper time to submit requests for specific instructions is after the evidence is concluded and before the argument to the jury is commenced.⁶ But where Allen (Mass.) 261; Burns v. Southerland, 7 Pa. St. 103; Taft v. Wildman, 15 Ohio 123; Farquhar v. Dallas, 20 Tex. 200; Davis v. Elliott, 15 Gray (Mass.) 90; State v. O'Neal, 7 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 251; Ward v. Herrin, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 322; Parsons v. Brown, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 590; Chamberlain v. Porter, 9 Minn. 260; Jones v. State, 20 Ohio 34; Cato v. State, 9 Fla. 163; Coates v. Sangston, 5 Md. 121; Bain v. Doran, 54 Pa. St. 124; Moore v. Ross, 11 N. H. 547; Castle v. Bullard, 23 How. (U. S.) 189; Kent v. Tyson, 20 N. H. 121; Fisher v. Filbert, 6 Pa. St. 61; State v. Straw, 33 Me. 554; Tomlinson v. Wallace, 16 Wis. 225; Express Co. v. Kountze, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 342; Pennock v. Dialogue, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 1; Miller v. Bryan, 3 Iowa 58; Koehler v. Wilson, 40 Iowa 183; Eiland v. State, 52 Ala. 322; Congsees etc. Co. v. Edgar, 99 U. S. 645; Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Snyder, 93 U. S. 393; Hall v. Weare, 92 U. S. 728.

1. Siegle v. Louderbaugh, 5 Pa. St. 490; Parsons v. Brown, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 590; Herbert v. Huie, 1 Ala. 18; United States v. Fourteen Packages, 1 Gilp. (U. S.) 235; Seabury v. Field, 1 McAll. (U. S.) 67.

2. Iron etc. Co. v. Chessmen, 116 U. S. 529; Kelley v. Jackson, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 622; Winans v. N. Y. & E. P. R., 21 How. 88; Law v. Cross, 1 Black (U. S.) 533; Tweed's Case, 16 Wall. 504; Klein v. Russell, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 433; Burton v. Driggs, 20 Wall. (U. S.)

125; Woodruff v. Hough, 91 U. S. 596; Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. Horst, 93 U. S. 291; Ohio etc. R. Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 258; Smith v. Field, 105 U. S. 52; Ayers v. Watson, 113 U. S. 594.

3. United States v. Bank of Metropolis, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 377.

A new trial will not be granted because the presiding justice did not formally leave to the jury a question not raised by counsel at the trial. The attention of the court should have been called to it before the jury retired. Barrett v. Delano (Me.), 14 Atl. Rep. 288.

The court having fully instructed the jury as to the law upon a particular question, it is not error to refuse an instruction upon the same question, although correctly propounding the law. Fisher v. Cook (Ill.), 17 N. E. Rep. 763; Abenheim v. Samuel, 1 N. Y. S. 868; Coates v. Harvey, 2 N. Y. S. 5; In re Bull, 2 N. Y. S. 52.

When certain points are covered by the general charge of a court, it is not error to refuse to repeat them in special instructions requested. Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Gascamp (Tex.), 7 S. W. Rep. 227; Shannon v. Town of Tama City (Iowa), 36 N. W. Rep. 776.

4. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 126.

5. Myatts v. Bell, Ala. 222.

6. Billings v. McCoy, 5 Neb. 187; Tinkham v. Thomas, 2 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 236; Glasgow v. Hobbs, 52 Ind. 239;

the instruction is unobjectionable and such as will aid the jury in their rendering a proper verdict, it ought not to be refused, although it might have been requested out of time.¹

d. How Presented to Jury.—Except where regulated by statute, there is no prescribed way in which the judge shall present "requested instructions to the jury." They may be given orally or in writing.² Where instructions to a jury are asked in a mass, if one of them is wrong, the whole may be rejected.³

United States v. Gibert, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 22.

The dispatch of business, the rights of litigants, jurors and witnesses, all require that the time of the court shall not be unnecessarily consumed in the trial of the causes; and to avoid such consequences, judges must be invested with power to adopt all reasonable rules for the practice of their courts. Ever since the adoption of the statute requiring all instructions to be in writing before they are given, it is believed that similar rules have been in force in all the circuit courts in the State. They have varied slightly in their requirements, but all are designed to meet the same ends. The rule which is believed to have most generally obtained requires all instructions to be furnished the court by the commencement of the closing argument. That seems to us is well calculated to meet the convenience of both parties and the court and to economize time, and can in no way hinder or prevent the attainment of a fair trial by both parties. So far as observation has extended, such a rule has operated well. It gives ample time after the close of the evidence, and the case is fully opened to the jury for both parties to prepare their instructions. And the court, being thus apprised of the legal propositions they have assumed has, after the instructions are thus presented, usually ample time for their examination, and to determine upon their correctness. It is essential that the court shall exercise such powers, through reasonable and proper rules, as shall enable him to despatch business at least so fast as the proper administration of justice may require. Prindle v. People, 42 Ill. 221.

The rule of the court, that any instruction asked for must be presented in writing before any argument is made to the jury, is reasonable, and a party cannot disregard it. Manhattan Life Ins. Co. v. Francis, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 672.

Where instructions are submitted by counsel after the jury has been directed to retire, and the court refuses to consider them because offered too late, the judgment of the trial court will not be reversed, unless it affirmatively appears that the court manifestly abused its large discretion. Tully v. Despard (W. Va.), 6 S. E. Rep. 927.

1. Billings v. McCoy, 5 Neb. 187.

In the hurry of trial the most careful lawyer may overlook some question on which it is proper the jury should be instructed. The object of the law is to administer justice, and the rules of courts for conducting trials should not be so construed as to prevent a fair submission of the case to the jury. MAXWELL J., in Billings v. McCoy, 5 Neb. 187.

2. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 126.

Where counsel read from a decision of the supreme court, in his argument to the jury, and the judge, taking the book, said to the jury: "Gentlemen, without stopping to weary you by repeating the decision of the supreme court, which has just been read by counsel of the plaintiff, I charge that decision to be the law." This was held sufficient. Dillon v. McRea, 40 Ga. 107. See Talmage v. Davenport, 31 N. J. L. 561.

As a matter of practice, when counsel for either party reads written requests to charge in the presence and hearing of the jury, the court should either give or refuse to give such requests in the charge. If the request is a legal and pertinent charge which ought to be given to the jury, then the court should give it in the language of the request by reading the same to the jury, and not hold up the paper containing the requests to charge after the same had been read and handed to the court, and say: "Gentlemen, I give you all these in charge, as requested." Leaptrot v. Robertson, 44 Ga. 46-50.

3. Springer v. United States, 102 U.

7. Written Instruction—a. Not Required at Common Law.—

Where there is no statute requiring instructions to be in writing, it rests in the sound discretion of the judge whether he shall deliver his instructions verbally or in writing.¹

b. Required by Statute.—It is required now by quite a number of the statutory laws of the States that the instructions of the court be delivered to the jury in writing. And where such is the law, it is error for the court to make any oral change in the written instructions modifying or explaining them.² The charge,

S. 586; Harvey v. Tyler, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 328; Beaver v. Taylor, 93 U. S. 46; Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. Horst, 93 U. S. 291; United States v. Hough, 103 U. S. 71; Worthington v. Mason, 101 U. S. 149.

1. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 137; Proffatt, Jury Trial, § 349; Sackett on Instructions (1st ed.)

Where the instruction is definite and contains sound views of the law applicable to the case and intelligible to the jury, it can make no essential difference whether it is communicated to them in writing or orally. It is true that in the trial of causes, and exposition of the law to the jury, the reduction of the instructions to writing is certainly more formal, less liable to hasty error, and may enable the court the better to mature their views, and more distinctly and formally to express them to the jury, as a general rule, but still the law may be sufficiently expounded to the jury through oral instructions. No doubt the court would not hesitate, where it was requested and deemed by counsel to be material, to embody their views in writing in advance of any oral communication to the jury. This matter, however, is left to the sound discretion of the court below, and is not the subject of review by this court. When verbal instructions are given to the jury, it is certainly the right of the party who desires to except thereto, to have them reduced to writing, so that they may be reviewed on appeal, as was done in the present instance; and when that is the case it is no good cause of complaint that the court, in its discretion, chose in the first instance to instruct the jury orally. Smith v. Crichton, 33 Md. 108.

2. Head v. Langworthy, 15 Iowa 235; Hardin v. Helton, 50 Ind. 320; Horton v. Williams, 21 Minn. 187; State v. Jones, 61 Mo. 232; Miller v. Hampton, 37 Ala. 342; Widner v. State, 28 Ind. 394; Strattan v. Paul, 10

Iowa 139; Ray v. Wooters, 19 Ill. 82; Parris v. State, 2 Greene (Iowa) 449; Dixon v. State, 13 Fla. 636.

It has been held that it is a violation of the statute for the court to instruct the jury orally as to the impropriety of certain modes of arriving at their verdict. Ill. Cent. R. Co. v. Harnner 85 Ill. 526.

The following is the statute law upon the subject in several of the States:

Illinois.—The court, in charging the jury, shall only instruct as to the law of the case. Hereafter no judge shall instruct the petit jury in any case, civil or criminal, unless such instructions are reduced to writing.

And when instructions are asked which the court cannot give, he shall on the margin thereof write the word "Refused," and such as he approves he shall write on the margin thereof the word "Given;" and he shall in no case, after instructions are given, qualify, modify, or in any manner explain the same to the jury otherwise than in writing.

Iowa.—When the argument is concluded either party may request instructions to the jury on points of law, which shall be given or refused by the court. If the court refuses a written instruction as demanded, but gives the same with a modification, which the court may do, such modification shall not be by interlineation or erasure, but shall be well defined, etc.

The court must read over all the instructions which it intends to give, and no others, to the jury, and must write the words "Given" or "Refused," as the case may be, on the margin of each instruction.

After argument, the court may also, of its own motion, charge the jury, which shall be exclusively in writing. The court shall not make any oral explanation of any instruction or charge.

Indiana.—"When the evidence is concluded and either party desires and every modification of it, must be in writing.¹

These statutes are generally held to be mandatory, and any failure to comply with them is error for which a judgment will be reversed.² In criminal cases they must be strictly complied with.³ It has generally been held, however, that the requirement that they should be in writing may be waived.⁴

special instructions to be given to the jury, such instructions shall be reduced to writing, numbered and signed by the party, or his attorney, asking the same, and delivered to the court.

When either party asks special instructions to be given to the jury the court shall either give each instruction as requested or positively refuse to do so, or give the instruction with a modification in such manner that it shall distinctly appear what instructions were given in whole or in part, and in like manner those refused, so that either party may except to the instructions as asked for or modified, or to the modification.

When the argument of the cause is concluded, the court shall give general instructions to the jury, which shall be in writing and signed by the judge, if required by either party.

Michigan.—Hereafter, in all civil and criminal cases at law, circuit courts, in charging or instructing juries, shall charge or instruct them only as to the law of the case, and such charge or instruction shall be in writing, and may be given by the court upon its own motion.

Either party may present a written request for instructions on any point of law arising in the case. Whenever instructions are asked which the court cannot give, he shall write on the margin thereof "Refused;" and such instructions as the court approves he shall designate by writing on the margin thereof the word "Given."

And the court shall in no case orally qualify, modify or in any manner explain the same to the jury."

Ohio.—The court, after the argument is concluded, shall, before proceeding with other business, charge the jury; any charge shall be reduced to writing by the court if either party request it before the argument to the jury is commenced, and such charge or instruction, when so written, shall not be orally qualified, modified or in any manner explained to the jury by the court.

Wisconsin.—Upon the trial of every action the judge presiding shall, before giving the same to the jury, reduce to writing, and give as written, his charge and instruction to the jury, and all further and particular instructions given them when they shall return after having once retired to deliberate, unless a written charge be waived by counsel at the commencement of the trial; and except that the charge or instructions may be delivered orally when taken down by the official phonographic reporter of the court, each instruction asked by counsel to be given to the jury shall be given without change or modification, the same as asked, or refused in full. If any judge shall violate any of the foregoing provisions, or make any comments to the jury upon the law or fact on the trial in any action, without the same being reduced to writing or taken down, the judgment rendered upon the verdict found shall be reversed upon appeal or writ of error upon fact appearing. See Sackett on Instructions, 1 (1st ed.)

1. Townsend v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 328; Meredith v. Crawford, 34 Ind. 379; Kenworthy v. Williams, 5 Ind. 375; City Bank v. Kent, 57 Cal. 285.

2. Dixon v. State, 13 Fla. 636; Tolledo etc. R. Co. v. Daniels, 21 Ind. 256; Miller v. Hampton, 37 Ala. 342.

3. Widner v. State, 28 Ind. 394; Strattan v. Paul, 10 Iowa 139.

In Arkansas a rule prescribed by the supreme court for the conduct of judges presiding at trials, requiring all instructions given by the court of its own motion to be given in writing, if so requested by either party, was held directory merely. Some discretion, it was said, was necessarily left to the judge as to the manner in which he would comply with it; when, therefore, instead of writing out the instruction asked, with his own hands he dictated it to counsel who asked it, and the latter took it down, it was held that this was a sufficient compliance with the rule. Barkman v. State, 13 Ark. 705.

4. Head v. Langworthy, 15 Iowa 235. And a party being present and not

c. Statute Must be Complied with.—Where the statute requires the charge to be in writing, it cannot be modified orally;¹ nor will it be sufficient to refer to a certain page in a law book.² But where all remarks made by the court while giving the instruction are to be in writing; it only includes the "charge" proper.³ The objecting to a violation of the statute will be presumed to have waived the right. Head v. Langworthy, 15 Iowa 235.

See Vanwey v. State, 41 Tex. 639.

1. The action of the court in this case, in reducing a part of his charge to writing and in delivering another part without so doing, cannot be justified. The language of the statute is imperative, and a court, after the request has been made, has no discretion to reduce a part of the charge to writing and give the remainder orally. The purpose of the statute was to secure a carefully considered charge from the court, free from misleading words, which are sometimes found in unwritten charges, and to have it in such form that the jury can read it in their retirement, in case they have misapprehended during its reading by the court. Householder v. Granby, 40 Ohio St. 430. See Hardy v. Turney, 9 Ohio St. 400.

2. Feriter v. State, 33 Ind. 283; State v. Cooper, 45 Mo. 64; People v. Sanford, 43 Cal. 29; Gile v. People, 1 Colo. 60; State v. Potter, 15 Kan. 302.

The bill of exceptions shows that the presiding judge, after giving to the jury an instruction requested in writing by the defendant upon the general burden of proof, proceeded of his own motion, and without defendant's consent, to read from a printed book an instruction which was not reduced to writing, nor filed with the other instructions in the case, but was referred to in writing in these words only: "Follow this from Magazine American Law Register, July 1868, p. 559," and that to the instruction so given was excepted to.

This was a clear disregard of the statute. The instruction was not reduced to writing, filed and made a part of the record, as the statute required. If the book was not given to the jury when they retired for deliberation, they did not have with them the whole of the charge as the statute contemplated. If they were permitted to take the book with them without defendant's consent, that would of itself be ground of exception. Hopt v. People, 104 U. S. 635.

3. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 147.

The defendant having requested the court to reduce its charge to writing, and the respective counsel having presented written instructions, which they requested to have given to the jury, the judge addressed the jury orally as follows: "The only instructions I shall give you in this cause are in writing, which I shall read to you, being the three instructions reduced to writing and requested by the plaintiff's counsel, and two of the instructions reduced to writing by the defendant's counsel, one of which I have changed in writing, and shall read to you as it is written. Before reading the instructions to you I desire to say that the trial has been a long and tedious one, occupying one day longer in taking the evidence than any case which has been tried for seven years in the circuit. During the long and fatiguing trial the court may have become impatient at the delay of the counsel, and made remarks that may possibly have influenced some juror. I wish it specially understood that nothing I have said was intended to influence unduly the verdict of the jury, and I do not wish any juror to be influenced in the least by it. In submitting this case to you I will not comment at all on the evidence which has been introduced, leaving you to weigh it all in your own judgment, and bring in your verdict accordingly."

Thereupon addressing himself to the defendant's counsel, and not to the jury, but in the hearing of the jury, the judge said "orally": "Of the thirty-four instructions handed me by you I mark all, except the 26th and 34th, refused, because they assume a state of facts which, whether or not it existed, I cannot assume. The vital points of them are also contained in the three instructions submitted by the plaintiff, which, I shall presently read to the jury." He then read to the jury the written instructions presented by plaintiff's counsel and afterwards gave certain instructions asked by the defendant, altering one of them and refusing others. The defendant's counsel excepted to the instructions given for the plaintiff;

statute must be strictly complied with.¹

d. At What Stage of Trial Request Should be Made to Have Instructions in Writing.—An able judge and author is of the opinion that the request to charge in writing should be made at the commencement of the trial.² It has been held, however, that it will be in sufficient time if the request is made after the evidence is in and before the argument has begun.³

to the refusal of the court to give the instructions asked by the defendant; to the alteration made in the one given at his request, and also "to the remarks made by the judge to the jury." The judge then said, in the presence and hearing of the jury, "I have given no instructions whatever to the jury, except the five written instructions which I have read, and they are expressly so informed and charged and cannot misunderstand me."

The jury found for the plaintiff and the defendant appealed. It was held by the supreme court that the oral remarks by the judge were not within the prohibition of the statute, because they constituted no part of his charge to the jury. In giving the judgment of the court on this point, COLK, J., said: "As we understand the record, the charge of the court, that is, everything which the court said to the jury to guide them in their examination of the evidence, and which related to any questions of law involved in the case, was reduced to writing before it was given. We do not suppose that remarks of the character of those added orally by the judge, which really have nothing to do with the case—no bearing upon any question of law or fact involved—can be said to be a part of the 'charge to the jury,' within the meaning of our statute. It is very clear to our minds that what the court may say in regard to the principles of law applicable to the case on trial, and the evidence adduced, must be in writing if requested, because it constitutes the 'charge of the jury.' But we do not think the remarks made by the judge in this case, as set forth in the bill of exceptions, constitute any part of his charge to the jury." Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 21 Wis. 238. See Thompson's Charging the Jury, 149.

1. Dixon v. State, 13 Fla. 636; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Daniels, 21 Ind. 256; Townshend v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 328; Miller v. Hampton, 37 Ala. 342; Strattan v. Paul, 10 Iowa 139.

2. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 153.

3. Patterson v. Ball, 19 Wis. 246.

In courts of record instructions are ordinarily presented to the court after the evidence is in, and before summing up the cause to the jury, and frequently just before the court charges the jury. Until the testimony is closed the judge could not well begin to reduce his charge to writing, for his charge is presumed to be based upon the evidence in the case. Up to this point of time counsel may not know that it is desirable to have the instructions reduced to writing. In plain and simple cases the request would not ordinarily be made. But where there is a conflict of testimony, or doubtful questions of law arise upon it, it is often very important that the exact instructions given should be preserved. There is frequently great difficulty in embodying in bills of exceptions oral charges. Opposing counsel understand the charge differently, and the judge is not able always to recollect exactly his own expressions. To avoid this difficulty and uncertainty the statute was enacted and should be construed so as to give the desired remedy. We have been referred to several decisions of the supreme court of Indiana made under a similar statute. They are to the effect that the statute must be so construed as to require the party who desires a written charge to notify the court, in a reasonable time before it may be called on to charge the jury, of his desire that such charge be in writing. The request in this case was made immediately after all the testimony was in, and must be regarded as in time. It was the earliest moment that it could be of any practical advantage to the judge to know of this request. The rule, therefore, requiring it to be made at or before the commencement of the trial is in conflict with the statute and void. Patterson v. Ball, 19 Wis. 246.

JUDGE THOMPSON, however, believes that it would be of great advantage if

8. Exceptions to Instructions—a. When Must be Taken.—For misdirection or nondirection, exceptions must be taken at the time the charge is given.¹

Objection to the charge being oral instead of written, must also be made at the time the instructions are given; if not, the error will be regarded as waived.²

the request was made at the commencement of the trial, so that as the trial progressed the judge could draw up those portions of his charge which are applicable to the evidence as successively presented. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 153.

1. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 155; Winchell v. Hicks, 18 N. Y. 558; Dows v. Rush, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 157; Clark v. New York, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 333; Jenks v. Smith, 1 N. Y. 90.

It is a general rule, says JUDGE THOMPSON (Charging the Jury, 156), that a party losing loses his right to complain in an appellate court of an interlocutory error committed by the court in the trial of the case, unless he makes his objection and reserves his exception at the time. The reason is that the court is entitled to an opportunity to correct any error inadvertently committed in the progress of the trial, and a party ought not to be permitted to put the other party to the expense of an appeal to correct an omission which he might have prevented by objecting at the proper time. If, therefore, no objection is made to the misdirection at the time it is given, it cannot be assigned for error in a revising court.

2. State v. Sipult, 17 Iowa 575; Vanway v. State, 41 Tex. 639.

Exceptions.—Where an instruction is correct, as far as it goes, the remedy for omissions therein is not an exception thereto, but a request for a further instruction, and, if such request is refused, an exception to such refusal. Du Souchet v. Dutcher (Ind.), 114 N. E. Rep. 459.

If the court's charge is not as full and specific as parties desire, they must call the court's attention thereto; otherwise they cannot assign his omissions as error. Rutledge v. Hudson (Ga.), 5 S. E. Rep. 93.

Where a general exception is taken to the refusal of the court to charge a series of propositions, such exception is bad if one of the series is objectionable. Union Ins. Co. v. Smith, 8 S. Ct. Rep. (U. S.) 534.

Where counsel do not avail themselves of an opportunity, given at the close of the charge, to look over the requests previously handed to the judge, and to see if there is anything they desire to be further charged, no exception will lie to the judge's refusal to charge them without a further request. Sudlow v. Warshing, 108 N. Y. 520.

Exceptions to conclusions of law should be taken at the time the decision is made; and where they are not so taken, the mere fact that the attorneys for the other party were present in court, and made no objection when exceptions were taken and noted, several days after the decision, does not amount to a waiver. Hull v. Louth, 109 Ind. 315.

Where the court gives a general charge to the jury, and the charge contains various propositions of law, and a general exception only is taken, such exception is not sufficient. Black v. Lewiston (Idaho), 13 Pac. Rep. 80.

When counsel want every detail of the law applicable to the facts of the case gone over by the court, they should call attention to such minute matters. Unless they do so, the court may instruct, in general terms, on broad and controlling principles and then stop. Moore v. Brown (Ga.), 6 S. E. Rep. 833.

A general exception to instructions given is insufficient. Each specific instruction which is claimed to be erroneous must be pointed out and excepted to. Brooks v. Dutcher, 22 Neb. 644.

Where a party desires a more specific charge upon any question, it is his duty to ask therefor; and an exception to a general charge, which appears upon the whole to be correct, where no specific error is assigned, will be overruled. Poullain v. Poullain (Ga.), 4 S. E. Rep. 92.

Exceptions to instructions given by the trial court to a jury in a cause, made after trial and verdict, are ineffectual, and are not available on a motion for a new trial or upon appeal. Barker v. Todd, 37 Minn. 370.

Failure to give a more specific charge is not error where no request for such

b. Must be Taken to the Instructions Separately, and Not en Masse.—It is well settled that if a series of propositions be embodied in instructions, and the instructions be excepted to as a whole, if any of the propositions be correct, the exception must be overruled.¹

9. Misdirection, When Error or Ground for New Trial.—Misdirection is no ground for a new trial where the jury has not been misled;² nor where the verdict is right;³ nor where substantial justice has been done;⁴ nor where a new trial would lead to the same results;⁵ nor because the judge gave wrong reasons for a correct decision;⁶ nor where erroneous instructions were not injurious to the party complaining;⁷ nor where they were given at his request;⁸ nor because the instructions were merely obnoxious to verbal criticism;⁹ nor because they were incomplete, unless more specific instructions were asked for.¹⁰ charge was made at the trial. Neyland v. Bendy (Tex.), 7 S. W. Rep. 497.

1. Johnson v. Jones, 1 Black (U. S.) 209; Rogers v. The Marshall, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 654; Harvey v. Tyler, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 328; Hunt v. Maybee, 7 N. Y. 273; Decker v. Mathews, 12 N. Y. 313.

2. Thompson's Charging the Jury, 158; Smith v. Carr, 16 Conn. 450; Benham v. Carey, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 83; Doe v. Paine, 4 Hawks (N. Car.) 64; Hoitt v. Holcomb, 32 N. H. 186; Ochiltree v. Carl, 23 Iowa 394; Chicago v. Hesing, 83 Ill. 204; Washington etc. Co. v. Merchant etc. Co., 5 Ohio St. 450; State v. Donovan, 10 Nev. 36; Planters' Bank v. Richardson, 15 Ga. 277; Hart v. Girard, 56 Pa. St. 23; Mercer Academy v. Rusk, 8 W. Va. 382; United States v. Wright, 1 McLean (U. S.) 509; Cummings v. Chandler, 26 Me. 453; Cane v. People, 3 Neb. 357; Phila. R. Co. v. Larkin, 47 Md. 156; Burton v. Merrick, 21 Ark. 357; Carrington v. Pac. Mail etc. Co., 1 Cal. 475; Mead v. Boxborough, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 362; Davis v. Brown, 67 Mo. 313.

3. Fore v. Williams, 35 Miss. 533; Phillips v. Ocmulgee Mills, 55 Ga. 633; Copeland v. Copeland, 28 Me. 543; Wilkinson v. Griswold, 12 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 669; Ettling v. Bank, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 59; Woodbury v. Larned, 5 Minn. 339; Wilkinson v. Payne, 4 T. R. 468; Vanuxen v. Rose, 7 Ind. 222; Duke of New Castle v. Broxtowe, 4 Barn. & Ad. 273. See West v. Anderson, 9 Conn. 107.

4. Princeton etc. Co. v. Gulick, 16 N. J. L. 161; Branch v. Doane, 17 Conn. 403; Arrington v. Cherry, 10 Ga. 429;

Wood v. Wylds, 11 Ark. 754; Prescott v. Johnson, 8 Fla. 391; Ducket v. Cridder, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 195; Harris v. Doe, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 370; Depeyster v. Columbia, 8 East 348; Graham v. Bradley, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 476; Mirick v. Hemphill, 1 Hempst. (U. S.) 179; Seare v. Prentice, 8 East 348; Hewitt v. Jones, 72 Ill. 218.

5. Graham v. Bradley, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 476; Sheldon v. School District, 24 Conn. 88; Foster v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 84 Ill. 164; Noyes v. Shepherd, 30 Me. 173; Brown v. Bowen, 30 N. Y. 520; Morton v. Lawson, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 46.

6. Ellis v. Jameson, 17 Me. 235; Carpenter v. Pierce, 13 N. H. 408; Thompson's Charging the Jury, 165.

7. Sinard v. Patterson, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 353; Welborn v. Spears, 32 Miss. 138; Graham v. Houston, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) L. 236; Dever v. Aiken, 41 Ga. 423; Freeman v. Rankins, 21 Me. 446; Gardner v. Clark, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 538; Hook v. Craghead, 35 Mo. 380; Price v. Evans, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 388; Holly v. Brown, 14 Conn. 256; McKay v. Leonard, 17 Iowa 569; Cross v. Hall, 4 Md. 426; Salmons v. Roundtree, 24 Ala. 458; People v. Wiley, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 214.

8. Flowers v. Helm, 29 Mo. 324; Foote v. Silsby, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 445; Silsby v. Foote, 14 How. (U. S.) 218; Thompson's Charging the Jury, 163.

9. Galpin v. Wilson, 40 Iowa 90.

10. Marshall v. Hann, 17 N. J. L. 425; Moore v. Ross, 11 N. H. 547; Pennock v. Dialogue, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 15; Calbreath v. Gracy, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 198; Walker v. Humbert, 55 Pa. St. 407; Durand v. Grimes, 18 Ga. 613; Keohler v. Wilson, 40 Iowa 183.

Collection of Cases.—In many of the following cases there will be found precedents of instruction, and in others discussion of various principles applied in the instruction of juries. The list of cases might be extended to an almost illimitable extent, and it is not claimed to be complete, but is believed to contain a case on almost every question likely to arise.

Alabama.—Assault, etc.—Mooney v. State, 33 Ala. 419.

Carrier of Goods—Montgomery v. Moore, 51 Ala. 304.

Drunkenness—Beasley v. State, 50 Ala. 145.

Factors—Schiffer v. Feagan, 51 Ala. 335.

Fraud, Representations—Townsend v. Cowles, 31 Ala. 428.

Malicious Prosecutions—Ewing v. Sanford, 19 Ala. 605.

Negligence Railroad Companies—Gov. St. R. Co. v. Hanlon, 53 Ala. 70.

Perjury—Taylor v. State, 48 Ala. 157.

Usury—Gray v. Brown, 22 Ala. 262.

Wills—Cotton v. Ulmer, 45 Ala. 378.

Arkansas.—Municipal Corporation—Mayor v. Thompson, 29 Ark. 569.

Carriers—Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Atkins, 46 Ark. 431.

Principal and Agent—Pike v. Douglass, 28 Ark. 59.

California.—Adverse Possession—Brumagim v. Bradshaw, 39 Cal. 24.

Carriers of Passengers—Boyce v. California Stage Co., 25 Cal. 460.

Carriers of Goods—Bohannon v. Hammond, 42 Cal. 227.

Contract Sunday—Moore v. Murdock, 26 Cal. 514.

Degree of Certainty, etc.—People v. Padillia, 42 Cal. 535.

Ejectment—San Felipe v. Belshaw, 49 Cal. 655.

Forcible Entry, etc.—Jones v. Shay, 50 Cal. 508; Goodrich v. Van Landingham, 46 Cal. 601.

Fraud, Proof—Daniel v. Baca, 2 Cal. 326.

Fraud Representations—People v. Supervisors, 27 Cal. 655.

Fraudulent Conveyance—Cartright v. Phoenix, 7 Cal. 281; Tulley v. Harlow, 35 Cal. 302.

Insanity—People v. Coffman, 24 Cal. 230.

Landlord and Tenant—Skaggs v. Emerson, 50 Cal. 3.

Malicious Prosecution—Harkrader v. Moore, 44 Cal. 144.

Negligence—Richmond v. Sacramento Valley R. Co., 18 Cal. 351.

Negligence Railroad Companies—Needham v. Railroad, 37 Cal. 409;

Flynn v. San Francisco, 40 Cal. 14; Hearne v. Southern R. Co., 50 Cal. 482; Baxter v. Roberts, 44 Cal. 187.

Principal and Agent—Miller v. Board etc., 44 Cal. 166.

Slander—Lick v. Owen, 47 Cal. 252.

Trespass—McCarty v. Fremont, 23 Cal. 196.

Warranty—Polhemus v. Herman, 45 Cal. 573; Byrne v. Jansen, 50 Cal. 624.

Colorado.—Assault—May v. People, 8 Colo. 224.

Drunkenness—May v. People, 8 Colo. 220.

Murder—May v. People, 8 Colo. 217.

Manslaughter—Solander v. People, 2 Colo. 54.

Connecticut.—Adverse Possession—Russell v. Davidson, 38 Conn. 562.

Conspiracy—State v. Rowley, 12 Conn. 101.

Factors—Weed v. Adams, 37 Conn. 378.

Larceny—State v. Ellis, 3 Conn. 186.

Measure of Damages—Dibble v. Morris, 26 Conn. 416; Swift v. Dickerman, 31 Conn. 285.

Negligence—Beers v. Housatonic R. Co., 19 Conn. 566; Isbell v. New York etc. R. Co., 27 Conn. 393.

Notice—Farmers' Bank v. Payne, 25 Conn. 444.

Perjury—State v. Fassett, 16 Conn. 457.

Warranty—Chadsey v. Green, 24 Conn. 562.

Georgia.—Adverse Possession—Franklin v. Newsome, 53 Ga. 580.

Assault, etc.—King v. State, 21 Ga. 220.

Carrier of Goods—Wallace v. Matthews, 39 Ga. 617.

Contract, Sunday—Meriwether v. Smith, 44 Ga. 541.

Circumstantial Evidence—Houser v. State, 58 Ga. 78.

Drunkenness—Estes v. State, 55 Ga. 31.

Estoppel—Carroll v. Turner, 54 Ga. 177.

Factors—Tison v. Howard, 57 Ga. 410.

Fraud, Representation—Payne v. Smith, 20 Ga. 654.

Insanity—Anderson v. State, 42 Ga. 11.

Landlord and Tenant—Morrill v. Barnes, 57 Ga. 404.

Negligence, Municipal Corporation—Mayor v. Dodds, 58 Ga. 238.

Payment—Stewart v. Parker, 55 Ga. 656.

Partnership—Barnett v. Blackman, 53 Ga. 98.

Principal and Agent—Southern Ex. Co. v. Palmer, 48 Ga. 85.

Self-defence—Thompson v. State, 55 Ga. 47.

Tender—Cothran v. Scanlon, 34 Ga. 555.

Trespass—Suggs v. Anderson, 12 Ga. 461.

Wills—Terry v. Buffington, 11 Ga. 337.

Illinois. — Adultery, Criminal—Searles v. People, 13 Ill. 597.

Adverse Possession—Ambrose v. Raley, 58 Ill. 506.

Aiders and Abettors—Smith v. People, 74 Ill. 144.

Account Stated—Strauber v. Mohler, 80 Ill. 21; Bayley v. Bensley, 87 Ill. 556.

Altering Written Instrument—Montag v. Linn, 23 Ill. 551.

Application of Payments—Bonnell v. Wilder, 67 Ill. 327.

Conspiracy—Smith v. People, 25 Ill. 21.

Carriers of Passengers—P. C. & A. L. R. Co. v. Thompson, 56 Ill. 138; P. P. & J. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 88 Ill. 418.

Carriers of Goods—Merchants etc. v. Smith, 76 Ill. 542; Milwaukee R. Co. v. Smith, 74 Ill. 197.

Carriers of Live Stock—Toledo R. Co. v. Thompson, 71 Ill. 434.

Contract, Capacity—McCarty v. Keamon, 86 Ill. 291.

Contract, Drunkenness—Bates v. Ball, 72 Ill. 108.

Contract, Marriage—Rockafeller v. Newcomb, 57 Ill. 186; Sprague v. Craig, 51 Ill. 288.

Contract, Subscription—Wilson v. Mc Clure, 50 Ill. 336.

Confessions—Jackson v. People, 18 Ill. 269.

Custom—Coffman v. Campbell, 87 Ill. 98.

Damages, Exemplary—Bates v. Davis, 76 Ill. 222.

Demand—Ingalls v. Bulkley, 13 Ill. 315.

Debt—City of Chicago v. Gage, 95 Ill. 593.

Deeds, Delivery—Gunnell v. Cocke-rill, 79 Ill. 79.

Drunkenness—Rafferty v. People, 66 Ill. 118.

Ejectment—Kilgour v. Gorkley, 83 Ill. 109.

Estoppel—Kinnear v. Mackey, 85 Ill. 96.

Factors—Phillips v. Moir, 69 Ill. 155.

Forcible Entry—Huftalin v. Misner, 70 Ill. 205.

Fraud Proof—Strauss v. Kranert, 56 Ill. 254.

Fraud, Intent—Bowen v. Schuler, 41 Ill. 192.

Fraudulent Conveyance—Nelson v. Smith, 28 Ill. 495.

Highways—Grube v. Nichols, 36 Ill. 96.

Intoxicating Liquor—Phillips v. Dickerson, 85 Ill. 11.

Landlord and Tenant—Strobie v. Dills, 62 Ill. 432.

Malicious Prosecution—Ames v. Snider, 69 Ill. 376; Brown v. Smith, 83 Ill. 291; Skidmore v. Bricker, 77 Ill. 165.

Malpractice—McNevin v. Lowe, 40 Ill. 209; Barnes v. Means, 82 Ill. 379.

Measure of Damages—C. B. & Q. R. Co. v. Payne Admrs., 59 Ill. 534; Graham v. Fulford, 93 Ill. 596; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Reed, 37 Ill. 484; Thorne v. McVeagh, 75 Ill. 81.

Murder, at Common Law—Jackson v. People, 18 Ill. 270.

Manslaughter—State v. Greschia, 53 Ill. 296.

Negligence—Chicago R. Co. v. Elmore, 67 Ill. 177; Keokuk etc. v. True, 88 Ill. 608; Hale v. Johnson, 80 Ill. 185.

Negligence, Municipal Corporation—People v. Mayor, 63 Ill. 207; City of Chicago v. McGiven, 78 Ill. 347.

Negligence Railroad Companies—C. B. & Q. R. Co. v. Dickson, 63 Ill. 151; Noble v. Cunningham, 74 Ill. 51; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Lavery, 71 Ill. 522; P. P. & J. R. Co. v. Champ, 75 Ill. 577; Ind. & St. Louis R. Co. v. Stables, 62 Ill. 313; Chicago R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Austin, 69 Ill. 426; Chicago & Alton R. Co. v. Munroe, 85 Ill. 25.

Negotiable Instruments—Palmer v. Marshall, 60 Ill. 289; Holbrook v. Vibbard, 2 Scam. (Ill.) 465; Roberts v. Haskell, 20 Ill. 59; Dupey v. Schuyler, 45 Ill. 306.

Notice—City of Chicago v. Witt, 75 Ill. 211; Heaton v. Prather, 84 Ill. 330.

Payment—Ryan v. The Trustees, 14 Ill. 20; Glickauf v. Kaufmann, 73 Ill. 37.

Perjury—Johnson v. People, 94 Ill. 505.

- Partnership*—Smith v. Knight, 71 Ill. 148; McNair v. Platt, 46 Ill. 211.
- Principal and Agent*—Murphy v. Ottenheimer, 84 Ill. 39; McMillan v. Lee, 78 Ill. 443; Rea v. Durkee, 25 Ill. 504.
- Replevin*—Reynolds v. McCormick, 62 Ill. 412; Whisler v. Roberts, 19 Ill. 274.
- Reasonable Doubt*—May v. People, 60 Ill. 119.
- Slander*—Rearick v. Wilcox, 81 Ill. 77; Miller v. Johnson, 79 Ill. 58; Flinn v. Barlow, 16 Ill. 39; Wallace v. Dixon, 82 Ill. 202.
- Self-defence*—Steimeyer v. People, 95 Ill. 383.
- Tender*—Pulsifer v. Shephard, 36 Ill. 513; Jenks v. Burr, 56 Ill. 451.
- Trespass*—Paxton v. Boyer, 67 Ill. 132; Snyder v. Brosse, 51 Ill. 357; Linbloom v. Ramsey, 75 Ill. 246.
- Usury*—Reinback v. Crabtree, 77 Ill. 182; House v. Davis, 60 Ill. 362.
- Warranty*—Hawkins v. Berry, 5 Gilm. (Ill.) 36; Chicago etc. Co. v. Tilton, 87 Ill. 547; Maltman v. Williamson, 69 Ill. 423.
- Wills*—Dixie v. Carter, 42 Ill. 375; Ambre v. Weishaar, 76 Ill. 109; Yeo v. McCord, 74 Ill. 33.
- Indiana*.—Adverse Possession—Petterson v. McCullough, 50 Ind. 35.
- Adultery, Criminal*—State v. Gartrell, 14 Ind. 280.
- Alibi*—Howard v. State, 50 Ind. 190.
- Assault*—McCulley v. State, 62 Ind. 433.
- Altering Written Instrument*—Schnewind v. Hackett, 54 Ind. 248.
- Carrier of Goods*—Thayer v. St. Louis, 22 Ind. 26; Ind. R. Co. v. Allen, 31 Ind. 394.
- Circumstantial Evidence*—Jarrell v. State, 58 Ind. 293.
- Debt*—Pepper v. State, 22 Ind. 399.
- Embezzlement*—State v. Wingo, 89 Ind. 206; Keeley v. State, 14 Ind. 36; Hart v. State, 57 Ind. 102; Starch v. State, 63 Ind. 285.
- Ejectment*—Lotz v. Briggs, 50 Ind. 346.
- Fraud, Representation*—Reed v. Sidener, 32 Ind. 373.
- Fraudulent Conveyance*—Harrison v. Jaquess, 29 Ind. 208.
- Intoxicating Liquor*—Fountain v. Draper, 49 Ind. 441.
- Malicious Prosecution*—Smith v. Zeret, 59 Ind. 362.
- Measure of Damages*—Indianapolis v. Gaston, 5 Ind. 224; Yates v. Mullen, 24 Ind. 277; McAvoy v. Wright, 25 Ind. 22.
- Murder, at Common Law*—Galloway v. State, 29 Ind. 442; McDermott v. State, 89 Ind. 192.
- Second Degree*—State v. Achey, 64 Ind. 59.
- Malice*—Binns v. State, 66 Ind. 433.
- Negligence, Municipal Corporations*—Centerville v. Woods, 57 Ind. 192; Indianapolis v. Gaston, 58 Ind. 224.
- Negligence Generally*—Jeffersonville v. Lyon, 55 Ind. 477; Lafayette R. Co. v. Adams, 26 Ind. 76.
- Negligence, R. Companies*—St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Valerious, 56 Ind. 511; Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. Truitt, 24 Ind. 112; Bellefontaine R. Co. v. Hunter, 33 Ind. 353; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Shuckman, 50 Ind. 42; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Talvey, 104 Ind. 424.
- Negotiable Instruments*—Riley v. Shamacker, 50 Ind. 592.
- Payment*—White v. Whitney, 51 Ind. 124; Parsons v. Pendleton, 59 Ind. 36.
- Perjury*—Hitesman v. ———— 48 Ind. 473.
- Principal and Agent*—Howe v. Linder, 59 Ind. 307; Oinson v. Heritage, 45 Ind. 73.
- Replevin*—Noble v. Epperly, 6 Ind. 414; Lewis v. Masters, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 244.
- Slander*—Indianapolis v. Horrell, 53 Ind. 527; Janch v. Janch, 50 Ind. 135.
- Tender*—Rose v. Duncan, 49 Ind. 269.
- Trespass*—Adams v. Waggoner, 33 Ind. 531; Cook v. Morea, 33 Ind. 497.
- Warranty*—Humphreys v. Comline, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 508; Mann v. Everston, 32 Ind. 355.
- Wills*—Turner v. Cook, 36 Ind. 129.
- Iowa*.—Alibi—State v. Harden, 46 Iowa 623.
- Assault, etc.*—State v. Malcomb, 8 Iowa 413.
- Adverse Possession*—Spitler v. Schofield, 43 Iowa 571.
- Adultery, Criminal*—State v. Maroin, 12 Iowa 499.
- Aiders and Abettors*—State v. Malloy, 44 Iowa 113.
- Altering Written Instrument*—Dickerman v. Minor, 43 Iowa 508.
- Application of Payments*—Allen v. Brown, 39 Iowa 330.
- Conspiracy*—State v. Shelledy, 8 Iowa 484.
- Carriers of Passengers*—Sales v. Stage Co., 4 Iowa 547.
- Carriers of Goods*—Francis v. D. &

S. City R. Co., 25 Iowa 60; McCoy v. K. & D. M. R. Co., 44 Iowa 424.

Carriers of Live Stock—McDaniel v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 24 Iowa 412.

Contract, Capacity—Harris v. Wamsley, 41 Iowa 671.

Contract, Sunday—Peake v. Conlan, 43 Iowa 297.

Contract, Marriage—Royal v. Smith, 40 Iowa 615.

Custom—Hughes v. Stanley, 45 Iowa 522.

Circumstantial Evidence—State v. Hayden, 45 Iowa 11.

Deeds, Delivery—Steele v. Miller, 40 Iowa 402.

Ejectment—Morrison v. Wilkerson, 27 Iowa 374.

Factors—Howe v. Sutherland, 39 Iowa 484.

Fraudulent Conveyance—Chappel v. Clapp, 29 Iowa 191.

Highways—Fisher v. Beard, 32 Iowa 346.

Insanity—State v. Newherter, 46 Iowa 88.

Intoxicating Liquor—Worley v. Spurgeon, 48 Iowa 465.

Larceny—State v. Dean, 49 Iowa 74; State v. Wood, 46 Iowa 116.

Malicious Prosecution—Smith v. Howard, 28 Iowa 51.

Murder, at Common Law—State v. Shelledy, 8 Iowa 485.

Manslaughter—State v. Hardie, 47 Iowa 648.

Measure of Damages—Rafferty v. Buckman, 46 Iowa 195; Collins v. The City, 32 Iowa 324.

Negligence—Cooper v. Central R. Co., 44 Iowa 138; Muldowny v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39 Iowa 618; Walter v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 39 Iowa 36.

Negligence, Municipal Corporation—Rowell v. Williams, 29 Iowa 210; Van Pelt v. Davenport, 42 Iowa 311; German Theological School v. Dubuque, 64 Iowa 739.

Negligence, Railroad Companies—Parker v. Railroad Co., 34 Iowa 399; Davis v. Chicago R. Co., 40 Iowa 292; Kesee v. C. & N. W. R. Co., 30 Iowa 78; Farley v. The C. & R. I. R. Co., 42 Iowa 234; Walters v. C. R. I. & P. R. Co., 41 Iowa 71.

Negotiable Instruments—Kelley v. Ford, 4 Iowa 140; Stoddard v. Burton, 41 Iowa 582; Crosby v. Tanner, 40 Iowa 136.

Notice—Keenan v. Dubuque, 13 Iowa 375.

Payment, Guarantor—Hughes v. Bowen, 15 Iowa 446; Tucker v. Rank, 42 Iowa 80.

Partnership—First National Bank v. Carpenter, 41 Iowa 518; Boardman v. Adams, 5 Iowa 224.

Perjury—State p. Raymon, 20 Iowa 583.

Principal and Agent—Murray v. Brooks, 41 Iowa 45; Eadie v. Eshbaugh, 44 Iowa 519.

Replevin—Campbell v. Williams, 39 Iowa 646; Smith v. McLean, 24 Iowa 322; Crum v. Hill, 40 Iowa 506.

Self-defence—State v. Traunberg, 40 Iowa 555.

Tender—Eastman v. Rapids, 21 Iowa 570; Barnes v. Greene, 30 Iowa 114.

Trespass—Turner v. Hitchcock, 20 Iowa 310.

Warranty—McClung v. Kelley, 21 Iowa 508.

Wills—In re Coffman, 12 Iowa 491; Leighton v. Orr, 44 Iowa 679.

Kansas.—Measure of Damages—Kansas, Pac. R. Co. v. Cutter, 19 Kan. 83.

Murder, at Common Law—State v. Dickson, 6 Kan. 213.

Negligence—Sawyer v. Sauer, 10 Kan. 470; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Rollins, 5 Kan. 167.

Municipal Corp.—City of Emporia v. Schmidling, 33 Kan. 488.

Larceny—Ferrill v. Com., 1 Duv. (Kentucky) 154.

Malicious Prosecution—Wood v. Weir, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 544.

Murder, Manslaughter—Sparks v. Com., 3 Bush (Ky.) 113.

Negligence Generally—Robinson v. Webb, 11 Bush (Ky.) 464; Norfolk etc. R. Co. v. Armsby, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 455.

Negligence Railroad Companies, Carriers—Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Fox, 11 Bush (Ky.) 507.

Louisiana.—Drunkness—State v. Colman, 27 La. Ann. 691.

Malicious Prosecution—Hayes v. Hayman, 20 La. Ann. 336; York v. Chilton, 4 La. Ann. 377.

Maine.—Burglary—State v. Alexander, 56 Me. 131.

Conspiracy—State v. Ripley, 31 Me. 386.

Custom—Randall v. Smith, 63 Me. 105.

Debt—Inhabitants of Berwick v. Huntres, 53 Me. 89.

Fraudulent Conveyance—Furgeson v. Spear, 65 Me. 277.

Highways—Bartlett v. Bangor, 67 Me. 460.

Insanity—State v. Lawrence, 57 Me. 574.

- Landlord and Tenant*—Withers v. Larrabee, 48 Me. 570.
- Malicious Prosecution*—Humphries v. Parker, 52 Me. 506.
- Malpractice*—Simonds v. Henry, 39 Me. 155.
- Malice*—State v. Goodenow, 65 Me. 30.
- Measure of Damages*—Gilmore v. Matthews, 67 Me. 517; Pike v. Dilling, 48 Me. 539; Humphries v. Parker, 52 Me. 502.
- Negligence Generally*—Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me. 202.
- Negligence Railroad Companies*—Hervey v. Nourse, 54 Me. 256; Buzzell v. Laconia Co., 48 Me. 113.
- Negotiable Instruments*—Warren v. Gilman, 15 Me. 70.
- Payment*—Ware v. Adams, 24 Me. 177.
- Replevin*—Newman v. Jeune, 47 Me. 520; Adams v. Goddard, 48 Me. 212.
- Slander*—Orr v. Skofield, 56 Me. 483; Knowles v. Scribner, 57 Me. 495.
- Tender*—Pillsbury v. Willoughby, 61 Me. 274.
- Trespass*—Lord v. Wormwood, 29 Me. 282; Bradbury v. Gilford, 53 Me. 99.
- Warranty*—Hillman v. Wilcox, 30 Me. 170; Bishop v. Small, 63 Me. 12; Bryant v. Crosby, 40 Me. 9.
- Wills*—Barnes v. Barnes, 66 Me. 285.
- Maryland.—Malicious Prosecution—McWilliams v. Hoben, 42 Md. 56.
- Negligence, Railroads*—Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Strickler, 51 Md. 47-69.
- Principal and Agent*—Barmon v. Warfield, 42 Md. 22.
- Massachusetts.—Account Stated—Hayes v. Kelley, 116 Mass. 300.
- Carrier of Goods*—Banan v. Eldridge, 100 Mass. 455; School District v. Boston R. Co., 102 Mass. 552.
- Carrier of Live Stock*—Smith v. New Haven R. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.) 531.
- Contract, Drunkenness*—Mitchell v. Kingham, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 431.
- Custom*—Page v. Cole, 120 Mass. 37.
- Conspiracy*—Com. v. Crowninshield, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 497.
- Debt*—Smith v. Crooker, 5 Mass. 538.
- Deeds, Delivery*—Concord Bank v. Bellis, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 276.
- Fraud*—Litchfield v. Hutchinson, 117 Mass. 195.
- Fraudulent Conveyance*—Allen v. Smith, 10 Mass. 308.
- Insanity*—Com. v. Rodgers, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 500; Cone v. McKie, 1 Gray (Mass.) 61.
- Landlord and Tenant*—Colburn v. Morrill, 117 Mass. 262.
- Larceny*—Com. v. Cullins, 1 Mass. 116.
- Murder—Manslaughter*—Com. v. Fox, 7 Gray (Mass.) 585; Com. v. McAfee, 108 Mass. 585.
- Malicious Prosecution*—Cardinal v. Smith, 109 Mass. 159.
- Negligence Generally*—Bryant v. Rich, 106 Mass. 180.
- Negligence, Railroad Companies*—Eames v. S. & L. R. Co., 98 Mass. 560; Ingersoll v. Stockbridge, 8 Allen (Mass.) 438; Allyn v. Railroad, 105 Mass. 77; Ackerson v. Dennison, 117 Mass. 407; Ladd v. New Bedford R. Co., 110 Mass. 412.
- Negligence, Carriers*—Christie v. Griggs, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 106.
- Negotiable Instruments*—Pettee v. Prout, 3 Gray (Mass.) 502.
- Notice*—Housatonic Bank v. Martin, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 294; Forbes v. How, 102 Mass. 427.
- Perjury*—Com. v. Grant, 116 Mass. 17.
- Principal and Agent*—Thayer v. White, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 343.
- Replevin*—Esson v. Tarbell, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 407.
- Reasonable Doubt*—Com. v. Webster, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 320.
- Trespass*—Barden v. Felch, 109 Mass. 154; Purrington v. Loring, 7 Mass. 388.
- Usury*—Bridge v. Hubbard, 15 Mass. 96.
- Warranty*—Vincint v. Leland, 100 Mass. 432; Bradford v. Manby, 13 Mass. 139; Brown v. Bigelow, 10 Allen (Mass.) 242.
- Wills*—Brooks v. Barrett, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 94.
- Michigan.—Altering Written Instrument—Bradley v. Mann, 37 Mich. 1.
- Assault, etc.*—Roberts v. People, 19 Mich. 401.
- Conspiracy*—People v. Clark, 10 Mich. 317.
- Carrier of Goods*—McMillin v. Michigan R. Co., 16 Mich. 79.
- Carrier of Live Stock*—Great Western R. Co. v. Hawkins, 18 Mich. 427.
- Debt*—McCormick v. Bay City, 23 Mich. 447.
- Ejectment*—Gustin v. Barnham, 34 Mich. 511.
- Estoppel*—Sebright v. Moore, 33 Mich. 92.

- Fraud, Proof*—Watkins v. Wallace, 19 Mich. 57.
- Fraudulent Conveyance*—Hill v. Bowman, 35 Mich. 191.
- Landlord and Tenant*—Day v. Watson, 8 Mich. 535.
- Larceny*—People v. Crawford, 48 Mich. 500.
- Malicious Prosecution*—Livingston v. Burroughs, 33 Mich. 511.
- Measure of Damages*—Ripley v. Davis, 15 Mich. 75.
- Negligence, Municipal Corporation*—Detroit v. Beckman, 34 Mich. 125; Ashley v. Ft. Huron, 35 Mich. 296.
- Negotiable Instruments*—Outwaite v. Porter, 13 Mich. 533.
- Negligence, Railroad Companies*—Fort Wayne R. Co. v. Geldersleeve, 33 Mich. 137; Robinson v. The Grand Trunk R. Co., 32 Mich. 322.
- Principal and Agent*—Widner v. Lane, 14 Mich. 124.
- Replevin*—Eggleston v. Mundy, 4 Mich. 295.
- Slander*—Elliott v. Van Buren, 33 Mich. 49.
- Trespass*—Brushaber v. Stagemann, 22 Mich. 266; Van Auken v. Munroe, 38 Mich. 725; Aylesworth v. Herrington, 17 Mich. 417.
- Minnesota*.—Assault, etc.—State v. Garvey, 11 Minn. 154.
- Conspiracy*—State v. Pulle, 12 Minn. 164.
- Deb*—State v. Young, 23 Minn. 551.
- Embezzlement*—State v. Baumhager, 28 Minn. 229.
- Ejectment*—Williams v. Murphy, 21 Minn. 534.
- Fraud*—Cochran v. Stewart, 21 Minn. 435.
- Fraudulent Conveyance*—Hicks v. Stone, 13 Minn. 434.
- Highways*—Kennedy v. Le Vau, 23 Minn. 513.
- Landlord and Tenant*—Nelson v. Thompson, 23 Minn. 508.
- Negligence*—Derosia v. Winona, 18 Minn. 149; Hocum v. Weitherick, 22 Minn. 154.
- Negligence, Municipal Corporation*—Kobs v. Minnea, 22 Minn. 159; Alden v. City of Minneapolis, 24 Minn. 257.
- Negligence, Railroad Companies*—Locke v. St. Paul R. Co., 15 Minn. 350.
- Principal and Agent*—Hawkins v. Lange, 22 Minn. 557.
- Slander*—Shull v. Raymond, 23 Minn. 66; Burr v. Wilson, 22 Minn. 206.
- Mississippi*.—Adverse Possession—Wilson v. Williams, 52 Miss. 487.
- Ejectment*—Lum v. Reed, 53 Miss. 73.
- Factors*—Cotton v. Hiller, 52 Miss. 7.
- Principal and Agent*—Meyer v. Morgan, 51 Miss. 21.
- Self-defence*—State v. Stockton, 61 Miss. 382.
- Missouri*.—Adverse Possession—Bradley v. West, 60 Mo. 33.
- Adultery, Criminal*—State v. Crouner, 56 Mo. 149; Dameron v. State, 8 Mo. 494.
- Aiders and Abettors*—State v. Butterfield, 75 Mo. 301.
- Account Stated*—Powell v. P. R. R., 65 Mo. 658.
- Altering Written Instrument*—Evans v. Foreman, 60 Mo. 449.
- Burglary*—State v. Butterfield, 75 Mo. 301; State v. Hecox, 83 Mo. 538.
- Contract Rescinding*—Parker v. Marquis, 64 Mo. 38.
- Embezzlement*—State v. Ware, 62 Mo. 602.
- Ejectment*—Miller v. Hardin, 64 Mo. 545.
- Forcible Entry, etc.*—McCurtney v. Auer, 50 Mo. 395.
- Fraud, Proof*—Waddington v. Loker, 44 Mo. 132.
- Insanity*—State v. Huting, 21 Mo. 464.
- Landlord and Tenant*—Finney v. St Louis, 39 Mo. 117.
- Larceny*—State v. Conway, 18 Mo. 321.
- Murder, at Common Law*—State v. Gee, 85 Mo. 647; State v. Thomas, 78 Mo. 280.
- Malice*—State v. Jones, 78 Mo. 278.
- Accidental*—State v. Wisdom, 84 Mo. 190.
- Malicious Prosecution*—Holliday v. Sterling, 62 Mo. 321; Hill v. Palm, 38 Mo. 15.
- Measure of Damages*—Polk v. Allen, 19 Mo. 467; Whalen v. St. Louis, 60 Mo. 323; Davis v. Slagle, 27 Mo. 600.
- Negligence*—Jackson v. St. Louis R. Co., 87 Mo. 428; Neilon v. Kansas, 85 Mo. 607; Brown v. Hannibal R. Co., 50 Mo. 46.
- Negligence, Municipal Corporations*—Craig v. Sedalia, 63 Mo. 417.
- Negligence, Railroad Companies*—Porter v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 60 Mo. 160; Brown v. Hannibal R. Co., 66 Mo. 588; Isabel v. Hannibal R. Co., 60 Mo. 475; Fletcher v. Atlantic R. Co., 64 Mo. 484.
- Payment*—Franklin v. Heinsman, 1 Mo. App. 336.
- Principal and Agent*—Summerville

v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 62 Mo. 391; Menkins v. Watson, 27 Mo. 163.

Slander—Pennington v. Meeks, 46 Mo. 217; Rothchild v. Am. Cent. Ins.
 Co., 62 Mo. 356.

Self-defence—Wall v. State, 51 Mo.
 453.

Tender—Whelan v. Reilley, 61 Mo.
 565.

Trespass—Page v. Freeman, 19 Mo.
 421.

Nebraska.—Motive—Clough v. State,
 7 Neb. 320.

Negligence, Municipal Corporation—Lincoln v. Walker, 18 Neb. 259.

Negligence, Carriers—Post v. Chicago & Co., 14 Neb. 112.

Nevada.—Ejectment—Phillipotts v.
 Blasdell, 8 Nev. 61.

New Hampshire.—Altering Written Instrument—Burnham v. Ayer, 35 N.
 H. 351.

Contract Subscription—Cong. Society v. Perry, 6 N. H. 164.

Conspiracy—State v. Straw, 42 N.
 H. 393.

Larceny—State v. Hodge, 50 N. H.
 510.

Measure of Damages—Knight v.
 Foster, 39 N. H. 576; Page v. Parker,
 40 N. H. 47.

Negligence, Municipal Corporation—Winship v. Enfield, 42 N. H.
 202.

Negligence, Carriers—Murch v.
 Concord R. Co., 29 N. H. 9.

Slander—Smart v. Blanchard, 42 N.
 H. 137.

Trespass—Lawrence v. Combs, 37
 N. H. 331.

Wills—Perkins v. Perkins, 39 N. H.
 163.

New Jersey.—Conspiracy—State v.
 Norton, 23 N. J. Law 33.

New York.—Burglary—People v.
 Fellingier, 24 How. (N. Y.) 341; People
v. Bush, 3 Parker's Cr. (N. Y.) 553.

Carriers of Baggage—Dexter v.
 Syracuse R. Co., 42 N. Y. 326.

Carriers of Goods—Coyle v. Western, etc., 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 152.

Contract Payment—Kellogg v. Richards, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 116; Boyd v.
 Hitchcock, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 76.

Conspiracy—People v. Mather, 4
 Wend. (N. Y.) 229.

Estoppel—Blair v. Wait, 69 N. Y.
 113.

Factors—White v. Smith, 54 N. Y.
 522.

Fraud, Opinion—Ellis v. Andrews, 56 N. Y. 83; Simar v. Canaday, 53 N.
 Y. 298.

Insanity—Ferris v. People, 35 N.
 Y. 125.

Landlord and Tenant—Morgan v.
 Smith, 70 N. Y. 537.

Larceny—People v. Cogdell, 1 Hill
 (N. Y.) 94; People v. Anderson, 14
 Johns. (N. Y.) 294; Wilson v. People, 39 N. Y. 459; Abrams v. People, 6
 Hun. (N. Y.) 491.

Murder, Manslaughter—People v.
 Enoch, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 163; People
v. Rector, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 592.

Malicious Prosecution—Fagman v.
 Knox, 66 N. Y. 525; Farman v. Feeley,
 56 N. Y. 451.

Measure of Damages—Tilley v.
 Hudson R. Co., 29 N. Y. 252; Holbrook v. The U. & S. R. Co., 2 Kern.
 (N. Y.) 236; Kniffin v. McConnell, 30
 N. Y. 285.

Negligence—Ernest v. Hudson R.
 Co., 35 N. Y. 9.

Negligence, Municipal Corporation—Wendell v. Troy, 39 Barb. (N.
 Y.) 329.

Negligence, Railroad Companies—
 Sandford v. Eighth Ave. R. Co., 23 N.
 Y. 343; Shepherd v. Railroad, 35 N.
 Y. 641; Wright v. N. Y. Cen. R. Co., 25 N. Y. 562; O'Mara v. Hudson R.
 Co., 38 N. Y. 445.

Negotiable Instruments—Stalker v.
 McDonald, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 93.

Notice—Fulton Bank v. New York, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 127; Bank of U. S. v.
 Davis, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 451.

Payment—Tebbetts v. Dowd, 23
 Wend. (N. Y.) 379.

Perjury—People v. Warner, 5 Wend.
 (N. Y.) 271.

Principal and Agent—Barkley v.
 Rennsalaer, 71 N. Y. 205; Hamilton v.
 Third Ave. R. Co., 53 N. Y. 25.

Replevin—Stillman v. Squire, 1
 Denio (N. Y.) 327; Smith v. Benson,
 1 Hill (N. Y.) 176.

Slander—Fitzgerald v. Redfield, 51
 Barb. (N. Y.) 484.

Tender—Wood v. Hitchcock, 20
 Wend. (N. Y.) 47.

Trespass—Keyes v. Devlin, 3 E. D.
 Smith (N. Y.) 518; Avrill v. Williams,
 4 Denio (N. Y.) 295.

Usury—Walker v. Bank, 3 How. (N.
 Y.) 62; Powell v. Waters, 8 Cowan 685.

Warranty—Hawkins v. Pemberton,
 51 N. Y. 198; Chapmen v. Murch, 19
 Johns. (N. Y.) 290; Wilmot v. Hurd, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 584; Vandewalker
v. Osmer, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 556.

Wills—Gardner v. Gardner, 22
 Wend. (N. Y.) 526; Brick v. Brick, 66
 N. Y. 144.

North Carolina.—Alibi—State v. Jaynes, 78 N. Car. 504.

Measure of Damages.—Howell v. Howell, 10 Ired. (N. Car.) 84.

Ohio.—Assault, etc.—Sharp v. State, 19 Ohio St. 379.

Burglary—Ducher v. State, 18 Ohio 308; Mulrooney v. State, 26 Ohio St. 327.

Carriers of Goods—U. M. S. Co. v. Ind. R. Co., 1 Disney (Ohio) 480.

Contract, Rescinding—Parmlee v. Adolph, 28 Ohio St. 10; Byers v. Chapin, 28 Ohio St. 300.

Drunkenness—Macconnehey v. State, 5 Ohio St. 77.

Fraud, Insolvency—Talcott v. Henderson, 31 Ohio St. 162.

Fraudulent Conveyance—Kemp v. Walker, 16 Ohio 118.

Intoxicating Liquor—Boyd v. Watt, 27 Ohio St. 259.

Insanity—Loeffner v. State, 10 Ohio St. 599.

Larceny—Hamilton v. State, 11 Ohio 436.

Malpractice—Geiselman v. Scott, 25 Ohio St. 86.

Measure of Damages—Jennings v. Johnson, 17 Ohio 154.

Negligence, Railroad Companies—Shelton v. Lake Shore R. Co., 29 Ohio St. 214; Cleveland & R. Co. v. Terry, 8 Ohio St. 570; Cleveland & R. Co. v. Elliott, 28 Ohio St. 340; Cleveland & R. Co. v. Manson, 31 Ohio St. 451; Lake Shore & R. Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 31 Ohio St. 479.

Negotiable Instruments—Carlisle v. Wishart, 11 Ohio 172; Johnson v. Way, 27 Ohio St. 374.

Payment, Guarantor, etc.—Faucett v. Freshwater, 31 Ohio St. 637; DeCamp v. Hammer, 29 Ohio St. 467; Ross v. Doland, 29 Ohio St. 473.

Perjury—Montgomery v. State, 10 Ohio St. 220.

Replevin—Phillips, 14 Ohio St. 240.

Slander—Jones v. Graves, 26 Ohio St. 2; Fowler v. Chichester, 26 Ohio St. 9.

Trespass—Wright v. Lathrop, 2 Ohio 33.

Oregon.—Ejectment—Whyte v. Smith, 4 Sawyer (Oreg.) 17.

Landlord and Tenant—Ladd v. Smith, 6 Oreg. 316.

Payment, Guarantor—O. & C. R. Co. v. Potter, 5 Oreg. 228.

Pennsylvania.—Adverse Possession—Ege v. Medlar, 82 Pa. St. 86.

Carriers of Passengers—Meier v. Penn. R. Co., 64 Pa. St. 225.

Carriers of Goods—Morrison v. Davis, 20 Pa. St. 171; Penn. R. Co. v. Benz, 68 Pa. St. 272.

Fraud—Pearsoll v. Chapin, 44 Pa. St. 9.

Fraudulent Conveyance—Chase v. Ralston, 30 Pa. St. 539.

Landlord and Tenant—Haslett v. Powell, 30 Pa. St. 293.

Larceny—Simmons v. Com., 5 Binn. (Pa.) 617.

Malpractice—McCandless v. McWha, 22 Pa. St. 261.

Measure of Damages—Oakland v. Fielding, 48 Pa. St. 320; Thompson v. Burgey, 36 Pa. St. 403.

Negligence Generally—Hoag v. Lake Shore R. Co., 85 Pa. St. 293; Mulheim v. Delaware R. Co., 81 Pa. St. 366.

Negligence, Railroad Companies—Penn. R. Co. v. Heilman, 49 Pa. St. 60; Penn. R. Co. v. Beale, 73 Pa. St. 504.

Negotiable Instruments—Twitchell v. McMutrie, 77 Pa. St. 383; Moosehead v. Gilmore, 77 Pa. St. 118.

Slander—Phillips v. Hoefer, 1 Pa. St. 62.

Self Defence—Murray v. Com., 79 Pa. St. 311.

Wills—Thompson v. Kyner, 65 Pa. St. 368; Dean v. Negley, 41 Pa. St. 312; Eckert v. Flowry, 43 Pa. St. 46.

Tennessee.—Larceny—Wright v. State, Yerg. (Tenn.) 154.

Texas.—Aiders and Abettors—Cotton v. State, 32 Tex. 627; Pierce v. State, 17 Tex. App. 239; Jackson v. State, 20 Tex. App. 192.

Conspiracy—Lowry v. State, 30 Tex. 402; Hardin v. State, 4 Tex. App. 364; Circumstantial Evidence—Law v. State, 33 Tex. 37.

Drunkenness—Carter v. State, 12 Tex. 500.

Fraudulent Conveyance—Castro v. Illies, 22 Tex. 479.

Murder, at Common Law—Cotton v. State, 32 Tex. 626.

Malice—Kemp v. State, 13 Tex. App. 562.

Negligence—Houston R. v. Randall, 50 Tex. 257.

Negligence, Carriers—International R. Co. v. Ormond, 64 Tex. 488; Houston, etc. R. v. Gorbett, 49 Tex. 576.

Principal and Agent—Folkes v. Baker, 27 Tex. 135.

Rape—Pefferling v. State, 40 Tex. 486.

Vermont.—Adverse Possession—Soule v. Barlow, 49 Vt. 329.

INSTRUMENT.—See note 1.

Contract, Subscription—State v. Cross, 9 Vt. 289.

Negligence, Railroad Companies—Noyes v. Smith, 28 Vt. 59.

Negligence, Municipal Corporations—Hunt v. Paronall, 9 Vt. 411.

Payment, Guarantor—White v. White, 30 Vt. 338.

Principal and Agent—Swain v. Tyler, 26 Vt. 9.

Rape—State v. Niles, 47 Vt. 82.

Replevin—Barnes v. Barnes, 6 Vt. 388.

Tender—Preston v. Grant, 34 Vt. 201.

Trespass—Harrison v. Harrison, 43 Vt. 417; Abbott v. Kimball, 19 Vt. 551; Austin v. Bailey, 37 Vt. 219.

West Virginia.—Drunkennes—Bales v. State, 3 W. Va. 685.

Larceny—State v. Heaton, 23 W. Va. 776.

Malicious Prosecution—Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1-74.

Murder, Malice—State v. Cain, 20 W. Va. 709.

Negligence—Riley v. West Va. R. Co. 27 W. Va. 145; Snyder v. Railway Co., 11 W. Va. 14-20; Cooper v. Pittsburg & Co., 24 W. Va. 37-43.

Wisconsin.—Deeds, Delivery—McPherson v. Featherston, 37 Wis. 632.

Embezzlement—State v. Leicham, 41 Wis. 582.

Estoppel—Knox v. Clifford, 38 Wis. 651.

Forcible Entry, etc.—Steinlein v. Halstead, 42 Wis. 422.

Fraudulent Conveyance—Gardiner v. Otis, 13 Wis. 460.

Measure of Damages—Costello v. Landwehr, 28 Wis. 522; McWilliams v. Biagg, 3 Wis. 424; Terney v. State Bank, 20 Wis. 152.

Negligence, Municipal Corporations—Prideaux v. Mineral Point, 43 Wis. 513; Guffin v. Town of Willow, 43 Wis. 509.

Negligence, Generally—Hoyt v. Hudson, 27 Wis. 656; Hammond v. Town of, etc., 40 Wis. 35.

Negligence, Railroad Companies—Wedgewood v. Chicago R. Co., 41 Wis. 478; Bass v. Chicago R. Co., 36 Wis. 450; Jones v. The Sheboygan & R. Co., 42 Wis. 306.

Negotiable Instruments—Cook v. Helms, 5 Wis. 107; Stevens v. Campbell, 13 Wis. 375.

Notice—Pringle v. Dunn, 37 Wis. 449.

Payment—Weed, etc. v. Oberreich, 38 Wis. 325; Griffiths v. Kellogg, 39 Wis. 290.

Principal and Agent—Saveland v. Green, 40 Wis. 431.

Slander—Wilson v. Noonan, 35 Wis. 321; Blaeser v. Milwaukee, 37 Wis. 31.

Tender—Hunter v. Warner, 1 Wis. 141.

Trespass—Bonesteel v. Bonesteel, 28 Wis. 245.

Warranty—Hahn v. Doolittle, 18 Wis. 197; Conger v. Chamberlain, 14 Wis. 258; Merriam v. Field, 39 Wis. 578.

Authorities.—Thornton on Instructions (Ind.); Thompson on Trials; Thompson on Charging the Jury; Sackett on Instructions; Proffatt on Jury Trials.

1. "Abbott, in his law dictionary, defines the word instrument as 'something reduced to writing as a means of evidence,' and Webster describes it as a writing expressive of 'some act, contract, process or proceeding, as a deed, contract, writ, etc.'" State v. Kelsey, 15 Vroom (N. J.) 34.

A will is an instrument in writing within the meaning of a power to appoint by an "instrument in writing." Sugden on Powers, p. 214; Smith v. Adkins, L. R., 14 Eq. Cas. 402.

A judgment is not a written instrument within the meaning of the Indiana statute, which provides as follows: "When any pleading is founded on a written instrument, or on account, the original, or a copy thereof, must be filed with the pleading. . . . Such copy of a written instrument, when not copied in the pleadings, shall be taken as part of the record." Said the court: "Deeds, mortgages, bonds, written contracts, promissory notes, bills of exchange, etc., are written instruments. Judgments are in writing, but are not usually called written instruments. The legislature, in framing and enacting the section, evidently had in view only instruments of which 'the original, or a copy,' might be filed, as the party might elect." Lytle v. Lytle, 37 Ind. 281. See also Wilson v. Vance, 55 Ind. 584; Morrison v. Tishel, 64 Ind. 177.

A writ of attachment is not an instrument within the meaning of section 1107 of the California Code of Civil Proc., which provides as follows:

INSUFFICIENCY—INSUFFICIENT.—See note 1.

"Every grant of an estate in real property is conclusive against the grantor, also every one subsequently claiming under him, except a purchaser or incumbrance, who in good faith, and for a valuable consideration, acquires a title or lien by an instrument that is first duly recorded." Hoag v. Howard, 55 Cal. 564.

A sheriff's certificate of sale under § 700 of the Cal. Code of Civil Proc. is an instrument within the meaning of § 1107 of the said code. (See preceding paragraph.) Said the court: "The question recurs, was the sheriff's certificate of sale, issued to the respondent and recorded, good as against an unrecorded deed? Appellant contends that a sheriff's certificate is not an instrument whereby a title or lien is acquired within the purview of section 1107, Civil Code. An instrument is a writing which contains some agreement, and is said to be so called because it has been prepared as a memorial of what has taken place or been agreed upon. It includes conveyances, leases, mortgages, bills, bonds, promissory notes, wills, etc. Bouv. Law Dict. In Hoag v. Howard, 55 Cal. 564 [see above] it was held that a writ of attachment was not an instrument within the sense of that term as used in section 1107, Civil Code, and therefore a deed executed prior to a levy of the attachment upon the property conveyed, though not recorded until after the levy, would prevail over the attachment. A writ of attachment, an execution, or other writ, is not the record or memorial of any agreement, but simply the mandate of the law commanding something to be done, or not to be done, and is quite independent of the will of the party against whom it runs, and is in no sense an embodiment of the agreement, will, or wishes, and we fully concur in the view taken by the court in that case of the writ of attachment. The court in the same case defined the word 'instrument,' as used in the Civil Code, to mean 'some written paper or instrument signed and delivered by one person to another, transferring the title to or creating a lien on property, or giving a right to a debt or duty.' The sheriff, under a proper writ, is clothed by law with the power to sell and convey the property of a judgment debtor.

This can only be done in the cases and in the manner and subject to the limitations provided by law, but when this is accomplished the process is as effective in passing the title as a conveyance by the debtor himself. When real estate is thus sold by a sheriff, 'the purchaser is substituted to and acquires all the right, title, interest and claim of the judgment debtor thereto; and, when the real estate is less than a leasehold of two years' unexpired term, the sale is absolute,' etc. Code Civil Proc., § 700. The sheriff is required to give the purchaser a certificate of sale, containing a specification of the facts enumerated in the statute, and a duplicate of this certificate must be filed in the office of the county recorder. The certificate is a memorial signed by the sheriff, in which whatever has taken place at the sale is set forth. It is the evidence of a sale, whereby subject to the right of redemption, and of possession in the judgment debtor for the time allowed therefor, the entire equitable title is conditionally vested in the purchaser, subject to be defeated by a redemption; but if not so redeemed the certificate is evidence of his right to a deed which shall vest in him the dry, legal title which remained in the judgment debtor. The transfer is not perfect until the execution and delivery of the sheriff's deed, but by the doctrine of relation, the deed, when thus executed, is to be deemed and taken as though executed at the date when the lien of which it is the sequence originated. The sheriff's certificate to the purchaser is the evidence of the equitable interest which the purchaser has in the land, and is an instrument whereby an interest or title is created, within the meaning of section 1107, supra. Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 310." Torman v. Wallace, 19 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 680.

1. Insufficiency in Pleading.—"In common law pleadings the word [insufficiency] was sometimes used. A pleading was said to be defective, uncertain, or bad, but it was not generally called insufficient. In chancery, however, the word was extensively used in connection with answers which were called insufficient when they did not distinctly and fully respond to the allegations or interrogatories in the bill. But it was always applied to those answers which did not explicitly respond, either by admitting or denying specifically the matters charged or enquired of by the complaint, and was not deemed applicable to the statement of new matter. (1 Hoff. Ch. [N. Y.] 272; 1 Paige [N. Y.] 556.)" Salinger v. Lusk, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 430. The word is used in the same sense in section 153 of the New York Code, which provides that the plaintiff may demur to the answer for "insufficiency." Salinger v. Lusk, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 430.

INSULTING.—See note 1.

Insufficient Evidence.—By section 804 of the Rev. Sts. of the U. S., which relates to the administration of justice in the District of Columbia, it is provided as follows: "The justice who tries the cause may, in his discretion, entertain a motion, to be made on his minutes, to set aside a verdict and grant a new trial upon exceptions, or for insufficient evidence, or for excessive damages." By section 805, it is provided that "when such motion is made and heard upon the minutes, an appeal to the general term may be taken from the decision." It has been held that the phrase "insufficient evidence," as thus used, includes evidence that is insufficient in fact as well as that which is insufficient in law, and that, therefore, an appeal lies on a motion to set aside a verdict as being against the weight of the evidence. Says the court: "We see no reason for supposing that the language in section 804, 'for insufficient evidence,' is to be limited to evidence insufficient in point of law. The words themselves do not import any distinction. It is admitted that according to established rules of procedure in such cases, it is customary and proper for courts of justice, sitting in the trial of causes by jury, to set aside verdicts and grant new trials in both classes of cases; that is, where the verdict rests upon evidence which is either insufficient in law or insufficient in fact. Strictly speaking, evidence is said to be insufficient in law only in those cases where there is a total absence of such proof, either in its quantity or kind, as in the particular case some rule of law requires as essential to the establishment of the fact. Such, for instance, would be the case where a fact was attested by one witness only, when the law required two; or when the alleged evidence was proven to be verbal, when the law required it to be in writing. In such cases, a verdict might be said to be against law, because founded on insufficient evidence. Insufficiency in point of fact may exist in cases where there is no insufficiency in point of law; that is, there may be some evidence to sustain every element of the case, competent both in quantity and quality in law to sustain to it, and yet it may be met by countervailing proof so potent as to leave no reasonable doubt of the opposing conclusion." Metropolitan R. R. Co. v. Moore, 15 Wash. L. Rep. (U. S. S. C.) 405. For a similar construction of the phrase as used in the New York Code, see Algeo v. Duncan, 39 N. Y. 313; McDonald v. Walter, 40 N. Y. 551.

Under section 16, ch. 132, of the Rev. Sts. of Wisconsin, which provides that a verdict may be set aside "for insufficient evidence," it has been held that where the plaintiff, if entitled to recover at all, is clearly entitled to a larger amount than that allowed by the jury, the verdict may be set aside as being found on "insufficient evidence," within the meaning of the section. Say the court: "In the case of Moore v. Wood, 19 How. Pr. 405, the court held that a party could not move on the minutes to set aside a verdict in his own favor, on the ground that the damages found by the jury were too small. 'By insufficient evidence,' the court say, 'is intended a case where the verdict is contrary to the evidence, not where the jury have found a verdict upon evidence, but have ignorantly or perversely found too small damages.' [But] it seems to us, if a jury ignorantly or perversely finds for a plaintiff five dollars damages, when the evidence shows that he should recover a thousand dollars damages, that such a verdict is clearly contrary to evidence, and found upon insufficient evidence. See McDonald v. Walter, 40 N. Y. 551." Emmons v. Sheldon, 26 Wis. 648.

1. Insulting Language.—The Alabama Criminal Code, section 4031, provides for the punishment of "any person who enters into or goes sufficiently near to the dwelling house of another and, in the presence or hearing of the family of the occupant thereof, or any member of his family, or any person who in the presence or hearing, of any female, uses abusive, insulting or obscene language." In Benson v. State,

INSURABLE INTEREST.—See INSURANCE.

INSURANCE—(See also ACCIDENT INSURANCE, vol. 1, p. 87; BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATION, vol. 2, p. 171; FIRE INSURANCE, vol. 7, p. 1007; GUARANTY INSURANCE, vol. 9, p. 65; LIFE INSURANCE; MARINE INSURANCE; MUTUAL INSURANCE).

- I. Definitions, 280.
- II. The Contract, 280.
 - 1. Need Not be in Writing, 280.
 - 2. Form, 281.
 - 3. Parties, 281.
 - 4. Consummation, 281.
 - 5. Construction, 286.
- III. Warranties, 290.
 - 1. Definition, 290.
 - 2. Form, 291.
 - 3. Effect of Warranty, 291.
 - 4. Warranties Affirmative and Promissory, 293.
 - 5. A Part of Policy, 293.
 - 6. Warranty of Correct and Temperate Habits, 296.
- IV. Representations, 296.
 - 1. Definition and Explanation, 296.
 - 2. Affirmative and Promissory, 299.
 - 3. False in Part, 299.
 - 4. Change of Facts Represented, 300.
 - 5. Oral Representations, 300.
 - 6. Fraud or False Swearing, 301.
- V. Concealment, 302.
 - 1. Definition, etc., 302.
 - 2. Facts Within Knowledge of Insurers, 302. [303.]
 - 3. Knowledge of Facts by Insured.
 - 4. Instances of Facts that Must be Stated, 303.
 - 5. Character of Answers, 304.
- VI. Premium, 304.
 - 1. What Is, 304.
 - 2. Payment, 304.
 - 3. Nonforfeitable or Paid Up Policies, 306.
 - 4. Mode of Payment, 307.
 - 5. Waiver with Respect to the Premium, 308.
 - 6. Excuses for Nonpayment, 310.
- VII. Insurable Interests, 312.
 - 1. Generally, 312.
 - 2. Of Equitable Owner, 313.
 - 3. Of Different Parties Having Different Interests, 313.
 - 4. Of Vendor and Vendee, 313.
 - 5. Of Lessor and Lessee, 314.
 - 6. Of Mortgagor and Mortgagee, 314.
 - 7. Of Lien Holder, 315.
 - 8. Of Assignor, 315.
 - 9. Of Assignee, 315.

68 Ala. 513, the defendant went into the dwelling house of his niece, and speaking to her said, "If you don't give up my pistol I'll knock your brains out, by God," and speaking to a man there with her said, "Do you take it up." It was held that the language was insulting. Said the court: "If the same language had been used to a male it would doubtless have been construed as insulting, and would have tended to provoke a breach of the peace. Indeed the defendant himself seems to have considered it insulting, for he turned immediately to a gentleman present and enquired if he 'took it up.' Why make this enquiry if there was no insult to be resented, or taken up? We would be loth to hold that language which would insult a man would not be insulting to a female, because, by reason of her sex and gentler nature, she would not resent it with blows."

Insulting Words Towards a Female.—By the Texas Penal Code, article 593.

manslaughter is defined as "voluntary homicide committed under the immediate influence of sudden passion arising from an adequate cause, but neither justified nor excused by law." Inter alia, the use of "insulting words . . . by the person killed towards a female relative of the party guilty of the homicide" is specified as an "adequate cause." In Simmons v. State, 23 Tex. App., in which Simmons, the defendant was charged with murder by stabbing, there was evidence showing that just before the defendant stabbed the deceased the latter applied to the former the words "damned son of a bitch." It was held that the use of these words did not make the homicide manslaughter. Said the court: "We do not think this language comes within the meaning of the statute upon this subject; the term used is rather a sudden expression of anger and contempt, and, when used, no one understands it to be directed at the mother of the person to whom used."

10. Of Executors and Administrators, 315.
11. Of Trustee, 316.
12. Of Cestui que Trust, 316.
13. Of Tenant by the Curtesy, 316.
14. Of Husband in Wife's Property, 316.
15. Of a Partner, 316.
16. Of Stockholders in Corporate Property, 316.
17. Of Agent or Consignee, 316.
18. Of Common Carrier, 317.
19. Of Builder, 317.
20. Of Creditor in Property of Debtor, 317.
21. In the Profits of a Voyage or Enterprise, 317.
22. Of Bottomry Interest, 317.
23. Of Master of Vessel, 317.
24. Insurable Interest in Human Lives, 318. [318.]
25. Of Sister in Life of Brother, 318.
26. Of Parent in Life of Child, 318. [319.]
27. Of Child in Life of Parent, 319.
28. Of Husband and Wife, 319.
29. Of Uncle and Nephew, 319.
30. Of Employer and Employee, 319.
31. Of Partner in Life of Copartner, 319. [319.]
32. Of Creditor in Life of Debtor, 320.
33. Of Assignee of Policy, 320.
34. Interest of Insured Need Not be Disclosed, 320.

VIII. Insurance Agents—Their Power and Authority, 320.

1. Generally, 320.
2. Provisions of the Policy Respecting, 322.
3. Construction of Authority, 323.
4. General Agent, 323.
5. Notice to Agent, 323.
6. Representations of Agent, 329.
7. Mistakes and Omissions of Agent, 331. [331.]
8. Waiver of Terms of Policy, 331.
9. Authority of Agent with Regard to Premiums, 333.
10. Provision that Agent Shall be Deemed Agent of Insured, 334.
1. Agent Cannot Underwrite Policy on His Own Property, 335.
12. Powers of Agent with Reference to Contracts Made, 335.
13. Territorial Limit of Authority, 336.
14. Authority to Adjust and Pay Losses, 336.
15. Neglect of Agent in Forwarding Premium, 336.

IX. Waiver and Estoppel, 336.

1. Generally, 336.

2. Effect of Conduct of Insurer with Knowledge of Facts, 336.
3. Knowledge by Insured of Fraudulent Statements, 338.
4. Powers of Agent with Respect to Waiver, 338.
5. Examples of Waiver and Estoppel, 339.
6. Effect of Conduct of Insurers Subsequent to Loss, 340.
7. Failure to Cancel Evidence of Waiver, 342.
8. Waiver in Writing, 342.
9. Waiver Endorsed on Policy, 342.
10. Waiver of Provision as to Waiver, 343.

X. Risks. See Accident, Fire, Life, and the other classes of Insurance, 343.

XI. Reinsurance, 343.

1. What Is, 343.
2. Obligations of Reinsurer, 343.
3. Within Statute of Frauds, 344.
4. Duty of Insurer in Obtaining Reinsurance, 344.
5. Commencement and Termination of Risk, 344.
6. Waiver, 345.

XII. Loss and Its Adjustment. See Accident, Fire, Life and the other classes of Insurance, 345.

XIII. Remedies, 345.

1. Where Terms Agreed on but Policy Not Issued, 345.
2. Where Premium Paid but Policy of No Effect, 345.
3. Where Policy Wrongfully Forfeited, 346.
4. Reformation of Policy, 346.
5. Liability Where Company Fails to Keep Required Fund, 347.
6. Effect of Adjustment, 347.
7. Fraud, 347.
8. Liability of Officers for False Statements, 347.
9. Remedies Forfeited in Case of Loss by Design, 348.
10. No Trust Relation, 348.
11. Decree for Redelivery and Cancellation, 348.
12. Right of Insurer to Terminate Policy, 348.
13. Recovery of Loss Paid, 349.
14. Liability of Agent for Failure to Cancel, 349.
15. Refusal of Insured to Separate Damaged from Undamaged Goods, etc., Repairs, 349.
16. Limitation of Action, 349.
17. Limitation as to Forum, 352.
18. Limitation as to Execution, 353.
19. Arbitration Stipulations, 353.

I. DEFINITIONS.—Insurance, in its most general sense, is a contract whereby one party agrees to indemnify another in case he shall suffer loss in respect of a specified subject by a specified peril.¹

The party who agrees to indemnify or insure is called the insurer or underwriter. The person to whom indemnity is promised is called the insured or assured.

II. THE CONTRACT—1. Need Not be in Writing.—The written contract between the parties expressing the terms of the insurance is called the policy. But in the absence of positive law or a charter provision to the contrary, there is nothing requiring the contract to be in writing.² It is, however, the universal practice

1. "Insurance is a contract whereby one, for a consideration, undertakes to compensate another if he shall suffer loss." May on Insurance, 1.

"Insurance is a contract by which the one party, in consideration of a price paid to him, adequate to the risk, becomes security to the other, that he shall not suffer loss, prejudice, or damage by the happening of the perils specified to certain things which may be exposed to them." Lucena v. Crawford, 2 Bos. & Pul. New Rep. 300.

"A contract whereby, for a stipulated consideration, one party undertakes to indemnify the other against certain risks." 1 Phillips on Insurance, § 1.

"A contract by which a person, in consideration of a gross sum, or of a periodical payment, undertakes to pay a larger sum on the happening of a particular event." Smith's Common Law, 299.

A contract by which, for a consideration, one promises to make a certain payment on the destruction or injury of something in which the other party has an interest, whatever the terms of payment of the consideration or the mode of estimating or securing payment of the sum to become due in case of loss. State v. Farmers' etc. Assoc., 18 Neb. 276.

A corporation organized to provide for its members during life, and their families after death, provided, in its constitution and by-laws, for the payment at death of a certain sum in consideration of a membership fee and certain future assessments. The member was obliged to be examined by a physician before becoming a member. The officers and agents of the corporation received good salaries. Held, that it was not a corporation for benevolent purposes within the meaning of Rev.

St. Tex. tit. 20, but an insurance company. Farmer v. State, 69 Tex. 561.

It is called fire, life, accident, marine, or other insurance, according to the character of the subject matter or the peril insured against.

2. May on Insurance, § 14; Taylor v. Merchant's F. Ins. Co., 9 How. (U.S.) 390; Commercial Mut. Ins. Co. v. Union etc. Ins. Co., 19 How. (U.S.) 318; Relief Fire Ins. Co. v. Shaw, 4 Otto (U.S.) 574; Mobile Marine etc. Ins. Co. v. McMillan, 31 Ala. 711; Home Ins. Co. v. Adler, 77 Ala. 242; First Baptist Church v. Brooklyn etc. Ins. Co., 19 N. Y. 305; Wood v. Rutland etc. Ins. Co., 31 Vt. 552, 562; Blanchard v. Waite, 28 Me. 51; Warren v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Me. 439; Campbell v. American F. Ins. Co. (Wis.), 40 N. W. Rep. 661; North Western Iron Co. v. Etna Ins. Co., 26 Wis. 78; Taylor v. Germania Ins. Co., 2 Dill. (U.S.) 282; Ide v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 2 Biss. (U.S.) 333; McCulloch v. Eagle Ins. Co., 1 Pick. (Mass.) 278; Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Earle, 33 Mich. 143; Henning v. U. S. Ins. Co., 47 Mo. 425; Lingenfelter v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 19 Mo. App. 252; Northrup v. Miss. Ins. Co., 47 Mo. 435; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Farrish, 73 Ill. 166; People's Ins. Co. v. Paddon, 8 Ill. App. 447; Palm v. Medina Co. etc. F. Ins. Co., 20 Ohio 529; Dayton Ins. Co. v. Kelly, 24 Ohio St. 345; Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 52 Miss. 441. These cases have mostly been where a loss occurred before the issuance of the policy.

Where There Is No Stamp Act.—West Mass. Ins. Co. v. Duffy, 2 Kan. 347; Ellis v. Albany City F. Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 402; Angell v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 59 N. Y. 171; American Horse Ins. Co. v. Patterson, 28 Ind. 17; Sanborn v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 16 Gray to reduce the contract to a generally accepted form, and where a statute or the charter requires it to be in writing, or requires a formality which implies it, it is necessary.¹

It being within the power of an insurer to obligate himself as such by a mere verbal agreement, so a verbal agreement enlarging or otherwise modifying an existing policy is valid and binding.² And this, though it be provided that "the use of general terms or anything less than a distinct, specific agreement, clearly expressed or endorsed on this policy shall not be construed as a waiver of any printed or written condition or restriction herein contained."³

2. Form.—The form of the policy is immaterial as a matter of law,⁴ unless some form be prescribed by statute;⁵ but, as a matter of practice, is of much importance. One form alone in each of the several classes of insurance is now substantially concurred in by all insurance companies, the different provisions of which forms have received judicial construction in a great number of cases, so that to now adopt a new form would be to open wide the flood-gates of litigation.

3. Parties.—The business of insurance is carried on by companies chartered for such purpose; but unless a statute or public policy forbids, an individual, otherwise capable of contracting, or a partnership, as well as a corporation, may enter into the undertaking.⁶

4. Consummation.—When the policy is issued by the company and accepted by the insured, its terms fix the rights and determine the obligations between the parties.⁷ But, unless it is otherwise agreed or provided, it is not essential to the liability of the insurer that a policy should have been issued. It is merely the evidence of the contract into which the parties have entered.⁸

(Mass.) 448; Kennebeck Co. v. Augusta Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 204; Franklin Ins. Co. v. Hewitt, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 231; Hamilton v. Lycoming Ins. Co., 5 Barr. (Pa.) 339.

There may be a parol contract of insurance to protect the insured between the time of taking the risk and issuing the policy. Patterson v. Benjamin Franklin Ins. Co., 81 Pa. St. 454.

1. Cockerell v. Cincinnati etc. Ins. Co., 16 Ohio 148; Henning v. U. S. Ins. Co., 47 Mo. 425; Train v. Holland etc. Ins. Co., 62 N. Y. 598; Simonton v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co., 51 Ga. 76; Croghan v. Underwriters' Agency, 53 Ga. 109.

2. Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Earle, 33 Mich. 143; Wood v. Cutland etc. Ins. Co., 31 Vt. 552.

3. Day v. Mechanics & Traders' Ins. Co., 88 Mo. 325.

4. Pullen v. Glover, 12 East 124; Roebuck v. Hammertown, Cowp. 737.

5. See Imperial F. Ins. Co. v. Dunham, 117 Pa. St. 460; New Era Life Ass'n v. Musser, 120 Pa. St. 384; Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Hallock (Pa.), 14 Atl. Rep. 167; Dunbar v. Phoenix Ins. Co. (Wis.), 40 N. W. Rep. 386.

6. Angell on Ins., 43; Park on Ins., 5; Wood on Fire Ins., 2; May on Ins., 34.

In Holbrook v. St. Paul F. etc. Ins. Co., 25 Minn. 229, it was held that the policy was not invalidated by reason of having been taken out as if the insured was a corporation instead of a partnership.

7. McGurk v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (Conn.), 16 Atl. Rep. 263. But this court holds that the applicant in making the application is not bound by the terms of a stipulation in the policy when he does not know that the policy will contain it.

8. Fuller v. Madison Mut. Ins. Co.,

If all the terms of the contract have been agreed upon, and nothing remains to be done but execute them, such liability attaches with all the efficacy of a formal policy.¹

But whether the parties have come to an understanding and agreement so that nothing remains to be done but to execute it, may be a serious question. And here it must be borne in mind that all of the terms of the contract must have been agreed upon. If it be incomplete in any material particular, it is of no binding force.² So all the conditions upon which it is made to depend 36 Wis. 599; Sanborn v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 16 Gray (Mass.), 448; Relief Fire Ins. Co. v. Shaw, 4 Otto (U. S.) 574; Fitton v. Fire Ins. Ass'n, 20 Fed. Rep. 766; Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Earle, 33 Mich. 143; Home Ins. Co. v. Adler, 77 Ala. 242.

1. Akin v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co. (U. S. C. Ct. Ark.), 6 Ins. L. J. 341; Hallock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 268; s. c., 3 Dutch. (N. J.) 645; Kohne v. Ins. Co. of N. A., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 93; Goodall v. New Eng. etc. F. Ins. Co., 5 Post. (N. H.) 169; Mead v. Davidson, 4 Ad. & Ell. 303; Excelsior F. Ins. Co. v. Royal Ins. Co., 55 N. Y. 343; Lightboy v. N. A. Ins. Co., 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 18; Davenport v. Peoria Fire Ins. Co., 17 Iowa 276; Home Ins. Co. v. Adler, 77 Ala. 242; Lingenfelter v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 19 Mo. App. 252; Gausser v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 38 Minn. 74. See also Baldwin v. Chouteau Ins. Co., 56 Mo. 151; Keim v. Home Mut. Ins. Co., 42 Mo. 38; Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Colt, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 560.

A valid parol agreement with an insurance company, made in October, that a policy for twelve months should be issued in the early part of November, would, by its terms, cover a loss occurring November 19th. Home Ins. Co. v. Adler, 77 Ala. 516.

Plaintiff testified to an agreement with defendant's agent to write a policy for $500 for six months, to take effect at a certain time, for a certain premium to be paid. Defendant's agent testified to the same facts, except as to the time the policy was to take effect; but insisted that he suggested to plaintiff that the company might be unwilling to take risk when reported. The agent never wrote the policy, nor did the company refuse to carry the risk until after loss and the plaintiff had demanded the policy. Held, that though no premium was paid, there was a valid contract.

Campbell v. American F. Ins. Co. (Wis.), 40 N. W. Rep. 661.

Where a parol agreement is made for insurance, to begin at once, and the policy to be subsequently issued, the conditions of the policy ordinarily employed govern. Smith v. State Ins. Co., 64 Iowa 716; Salisbury v. Hekla F. Ins. Co., 32 Minn. 458.

2. Piedmont etc. Life Ins. Co. v. Ewing, 92 U. S. 377; Earnes v. Home Ins. Co., 94 U. S. 621; Strohn v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 37 Wis. 625; Ocean Ins. Co. v. Carrington, 3 Conn. 357; Clark v. Brand, 62 Ga. 23; Delaware State F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Shaw, 54 Md. 546; O'Reilly v. London Ass'n Corp., 101 N. Y. 575.

A applied to an insurance agent, who was the agent of several companies for insurance, paid part of the premium, and, after the property was burned, paid the rest, demanded a policy, and, failing to get it, sued one of the companies which the agent represented. There was no evidence of a contract with any particular company, and it was held that the action could not be maintained. New Orleans Ins. Ass'n v. Boniel, 20 Fla. 815. To the same effect, Sheldon v. Hekla F. Ins. Co., 65 Wis. 436. Otherwise where the company or companies are designated. Filton v. Fire Ins. Ass'n, 20 Fed. Rep. 766; and if there are more than one, and the amount in each has not been agreed upon, the amounts will be presumed to be equal. Filton v. Phoenix Ass'n Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 880.

S's agent applied to a mutual company for insurance, and said he would pay the premium and fees when he received the policy; whereupon a policy was drawn without S's signature, and S was enrolled as a member on the books of the company. On the next day the property was destroyed by fire. S's agent at once tendered the premium and demanded the policy.

must have been complied with.¹ Thus, if it be stipulated that the agreement shall not take effect until the premium is paid,² or the policy delivered,³ it will have no effect until this stipulation is complied with. Indeed, whether or not there is a completed contract of insurance is mainly to be tested by the principles applicable to the making of contracts in general. Thus, if an offer be made, and be accepted with qualifying terms or conditions which are not approved by the party making the offer, applying the familiar rule that, to constitute a contract there must be an exact meeting of minds, readily determines that no contract has been consummated.⁴

Where the contract is made by correspondence through the mails, consummation occurs when an unqualified acceptance of which the company refused. Held, that the contract was not completed, S's liability to contribute for losses not being fixed, and he could not maintain a suit for the amount named in the policy. Schaffer v. Lehigh Co. etc. Ins. Co., 89 Pa. St. 296.

A applied to an insurance agent for a policy on his life. His application was made out, he was examined, and he gave the agent his note for the amount of the first premium. Before it was paid, or the application forwarded to the company, A was killed. Upon this state of facts it was held that the company was not liable. Covenant Mut. Ben. Ass'n v. Conway, 10 Ill. App. 348.

An oral agreement by an insurance agent to take a certain sum upon mill property is not a completed contract of insurance, if there was to be an apportionment between real and personal property, and none had been made when the property was destroyed. Kimball v. Lion Ins. Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 625.

Showing that the agent's clerk called his attention to a renewal which was sought, and asked him to renew, and that he made no reply and did nothing indicating that he intended to comply with the request, does not establish a renewal. Royal Ins. Co. v. Beatty, 119 Pa. St. 6.

Withdrawal of Application.—An application for insurance may be withdrawn at any time before the policy is issued. Globe etc. L. Ins. Co. v. Snell, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 560.

1. Flint v. Ohio Ins. Co., 8 Ohio 501; Rogers v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co., 41 Conn. 97.

2. Flint v. Ohio Ins. Co., 8 Ohio 501; Markey v. Mut. Ben. Ins. Co., 126

Mass. 158; Hubbell v. Pac. etc. Ins. Co., 100 N. Y. 41.

But delivery of a policy to an agent authorized to deliver it to the insured and receive the premium, and his delivery of the policy to the insured, and acceptance of a note for the premium, and procuring a discount of the same for his own account, without paying the premium to the principal, constitutes a valid insurance, in spite of a provision in the policy that such agent shall be deemed the agent of the insured, and that the insurer shall not be liable until he actually receives the premium. Carson v. Jersey City F. Ins. Co., 43 N. J. L. 300; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 594.

3. McCully v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 18 W. Va. 782; Kohen v. Mut. Reserve Fund L. Ass'n, 28 Fed. Rep. 705.

4. Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Young, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 106; Chase v. Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co., 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 527; Ocean Ins. Co. v. Carrington, 3 Conn. 357.

Where a proposal was made for insurance, nothing being said as to the premium, and the company wrote to its agent accepting the same with a statement that a policy would be issued on the payment of a premium named, which letter the agent did not make known to the party applying, on account of his failing health, it was held that no contract had been consummated. Wemyss v. Med. Ins. & Gen. Life Ins. So., 11 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (Scotch), 2d O. series, 151, 345; s. c., 20 Scotch Jur. 534. See also Piedmont etc. L. Ins. Co. v. Ewing, 92 U. S. 377; Neville v. Merchants' etc. Ins. Co., 19 Ohio 452; Wallingford v. Home Mut. F. & M. Ins. Co., 30 Mo. 46.

the offer is mailed,¹ the offer being deemed to continue a reasonable length of time after its receipt for acceptance, unless sooner withdrawn. What is such reasonable time will be determined from all the circumstances of the case, but unless it is otherwise indicated it will not usually be considered as extending beyond the next mail, where ample time intervenes for acceptance.²

Payment of the premium and delivery of the policy are presumed by the law to be concurrent. Therefore, where the premium has not been paid, nor the policy delivered, the contract is prima facie incomplete.³ And where the one has been paid and the other delivered, it is prima facie complete.⁴ But this presumption may be rebutted, and it be shown that it was intended as a complete contract when the premium has not been paid, nor the policy delivered, or that it was deemed to be incomplete when the premium has been paid and the policy delivered.⁵

Sometimes it is provided that the agent may write policies subject to the right of the company to reject the risk in case it shall be unsatisfactory, from the rate of the premium or otherwise. In such event the company cannot reject it merely because a fire has intervened,⁶ or because the agent has neglected to forward the

1. Tayloe v. Merchants' F. Ins. Co., 9 How. (U. S.) 390; Eames v. Home Ins. Co., 94 U. S. 621; Mactier v. Frith, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 103; Western v. Genesee Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Kern. (N. Y.) 258; Hamilton v. Lycoming Mut. Ins. Co., 5 Barr. (Pa.) 339; Adams v. Lindsell, 1 Barn. & Ald. 681; Palm v. Medina Co. etc. F. Ins. Co., 20 Ohio 529.

Contra, McCulloch v. Eagle Ins. Co., 1 Pick. (Mass.) 278, where it is held that the contract does not take effect until the letter of acceptance is received, or until knowledge of the acceptance has in some way come to the insurers. See CONTRACTS, 2 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 856 et seq. Upon this principle it has been decided that a policy issued under an agreement that the agent shall pay the first quarter's premium and take the applicant's note therefor, takes effect when mailed from the home office to the local agent. Yonge v. Equitable L. Ass'n Soc., 30 Fed. Rep. 902.

2. Thayer v. Middlesex Mut. F. Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 326; Insurance Co. v. Johnson, 23 Pa. St. 72.

3. Markey v. Mut. Ben. Ins. Co., 126 Mass. 158; Schaffer v. Lehigh Co. etc. Ins. Co., 89 Pa. St. 296.

4. Davis v. Mass. etc. L. Ins. Co., 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 462; May v. Western Assurance Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 260.

The delivery of the policy and receipt of the premium estops the insurers from denying that a contract has been made. Re State of Pennsylvania Ins. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 109.

5. Myers v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co., 121 Mass. 338; Markey v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co., 103 Mass. 78; Faunce v. State Mut. L. Assur. Co., 101 Mass. 279; Godard v. Monitor Ins. Co., 108 Mass. 57; Dinning v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 68 Ill. 415; Heiman v. Phoenix etc. L. Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 153; Cooper v. Pacific etc. L. Ins. Co., 7 Nev. 116; Berthoud v. Atl. F. Ins. Co., 13 La. 539; Decamp v. N. J. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 3 Ins. L. J. 89; Collins v. Ins. Co., 7 Phila. (Pa.) 201; St. Louis etc. L. Ins. Co. v. Kennedy, 6 Bush. (Ky.) 450; Bidwell v. St. Louis Floating Dock and Ins. Co., 40 Mo. 42.

6. Ætna Ins. Co. v. Webster, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 129; Perkins v. Washington Ins. Co., 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 645; Baile v. St. Joseph F. & M. Ins. Co., 73 Mo. 371.

But in Pickett v. German F. Ins. Co., 39 Kan. 697, it was held that where a written application for insurance was made out on one of the regular blanks of an insurance company, which provides that no liability shall attach until the application has been approved by the home office, and the application, with the premium, is delivered to the company's agent, and before such approval the property is destroyed, the company is not liable.

application in due time.¹ Nor can it refuse to issue a policy or respond in damages merely because a loss has occurred between the time of making the application and its receipt, where the agent is authorized to receive and forward such application for the acceptance or rejection of the company, and it is provided that if issued, the policy shall take effect from the date of the application.²

Where interim receipts are issued by the agent, the parties are bound by the terms of the policy ordinarily issued by the company.³ But it has been held, where the insurance was for only a month, and the company refused to issue a policy for so short a time, that the insured was not bound by a stipulation in the ordinary policy of the company of which he had no notice.⁴ So it has been held that where the description in the policy does not correspond with the description in the receipt, the insured may recover according to the terms of the latter.⁵

It is sometimes a question whether or not delivery of the policy has been made. But of this the manual possession of the policy is not decisive. It depends rather upon the intention of the parties as manifested by their acts or agreements, for whatever the parties have agreed to as regards delivery, or whatever their conduct shows to have been considered as a delivery by them, controls.⁶

1. Fish v. Cottenet, 5 Hand. (Ohio) 538.

2. Palm v. Medina Co. etc. F. Ins. Co., 20 Ohio 529. And see Walker v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 51 Iowa 679.

But compare N. Y. etc. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 23 Pa. St. 72. And see Medina Co. etc. F. Ins. Co. v. Bollmeyer, 5 Ohio St. 107; Bennett v. City Ins. Co., 115 Mass. 241; Myers v. Keystone Mut. L. Ins. Co., 27 Pa. St. 268.

An application for fire insurance was made to a mutual company August 7th, the application being subject to the approval of the directors, and was delivered to one of the directors August 9th. On the 19th of August the directors had a meeting for the transaction of special business, and no action was at that time taken on the application. August 30th the house was burned. September 25th, at the first regular meeting of the executive committee, the application was rejected, and the committee's action was approved by the directors. Held, that there was no such negligence on the part of the company as would entitle the plaintiff to recover. Harp v. Grangers' etc. F. Ins. Co., 49 Md. 307. To the same effect, in case of a life policy, see Ala. Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Mayes, 61 Ala. 163.

A company is not bound by contract by its agent retaining the premium note after a rejection of the risk, and while endeavoring to induce it to change its action. Otterbein v. Iowa State Ins. Co., 57 Iowa 274.

3. Home Ins. Co. v. Favorite, 46 Ill. 263; Grant v. Reliance Ins. Co., 44 U. C. (Q. B.) 229; Hawke v. Niagara Dist. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 23 U. C. (Ch.) 139; Gauthier v. Waterloo Ins. Co., U. C. (Q. B.) 490.

4. Lafleur v. Citizens' Ins. Co. (Q. B.), 22 L. C. Jur. 247; Woody v. Old Dominion Ins. Co., 9 Ins. L. J. 276.

5. Wyld v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co., 23 U. C. (Ch.) 442.

6. New Eng. F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 25 Ind. 537; Kentucky Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jenks, 5 Ind. 96; Southern L. Ins. Co. v. Kempton, 56 Ga. 339; Whitaker v. Farmers' Union Ins. Co., 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 312; Hallock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 268; Home Ins. Co. v. Curtis, 32 Mich. 402; Ala. Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Herron, (Miss.) 10 Ins. L. J. 68; McLachlin v. Aetna Ins. Co., 4 Allen (N. B.) 173; Gloucester Man. Co. v. Howard Ins. Co., 5 Gray (Mass.) 497; Real Estate etc. F. Ins. Co. v. Roessle, 1 Gray (Mass.) 336.

The charter or by-laws of the company may determine when and by what means the contract shall be consummated. At all events, it has been frequently, though not unanimously,¹ held especially as it concerns mutual companies, that the contract cannot be made except in conformity with the terms of the charter and by-laws.²

It is commonly provided in the policy that it shall be countersigned by the agent. And where this is the case, it is usually considered to be invalid without it,³ even where it is in favor of the agent.⁴ It has been held, however, that other evidence of the completion of the contract may be supplied in the place of this,⁵ and that such a provision, either in the policy or charter, does not prevent the company from agreeing, without the signature of the agent, to issue a policy.⁶

5. Construction.—The construction of policies of insurance does not differ in principle from that of other contracts. The object is always to ascertain the true intention of the parties.⁷ But in determining this, stipulations are construed strictly against the party in whose favor they are made,⁸ and if possible, so as to

Where a proposal for insurance stipulates that the company's agent who forwards it shall act for both parties, delivery of the policy to him consummates the contract. Ala. Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Herron, 56 Miss. 643.

Evidence that the amount of the premium on a policy was paid to the company by the agent who took the risk, although he received from the assured only a part thereof, and retained the policy in his hands until the time of the loss, warrants a finding that it was duly issued and delivered. Wheeler v. Watertown F. Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 1. But where an agent made out a policy and placed it in the hands of a third party until it could be ascertained whether the company would accept the risk, and the company refused it, it was held that there was no delivery, although the agent had provisionally received the premium. Brown v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 70 Iowa 390.

1. Bragdon v. Appleton Mut. Ins. Co., 42 Me. 259; New Eng. F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Schettler, 38 Ill. 167; Pino v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 19 La. Ann. 214.

2. Belleville Mut. Ins. Co. v. Van Winkle, 1 Beas. (N. J.) 333; Mound City Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Curran, 42 Mo. 374; Barrett v. Union etc. F. Ins. Co., 7 Cush. (Mass.) 175; Real Estate etc. F. Ins. Co. v. Roessle, 1 Gray (Mass.) 336; Buffum v. Fayette etc. F. Ins. Co., 3 Allen (Mass.) 360; Spitzer

v. St. Mark's Ins. Co., 6 Duer (N. Y.) 6; Montreal Ins. Co. v. McGilvray, L. C. (Q. B.) 488; Flint v. Ohio Ins. Co., 8 Ohio 501.

3. Hardie v. St. Louis etc. L. Ins. Co., 26 La. Ann. 242; Lynn v. Burgoyne, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 400; McCull v. Phoenix etc. L. Ins. Co., 18 W. Va. 782.

4. Badger v. American etc. L. Ins. Co., 103 Mass. 244; compare Norton v. Phoenix etc. L. Ins. Co., 36 Conn. 503.

5. Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Earle, 33 Mich. 143; Myers v. Keystone Mut. L. Ins. Co., 27 Pa. St. 268; Hibernia Ins. Co. v. O'Connor, 29 Mich. 241; United L. F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Ins. Co., 42 Ind. 588.

6. Ellis v. Albany City F. Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 402; Walker v. Metropolitan Ins. Co., 56 Me. 371.

7. Where the terms are explicit, of course the courts cannot depart from them. Fuchs v. Germantown Farmer Mut. Ins. Co., 60 Wis. 286; Werner v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 11 Daly (N. Y.) 176. And in such cases it is the duty of the court to interpret the contract. Home Mut. Ins. Co. v. Roe, 7 Wis. 33.

8. Catlin v. Springfield F. Ins. Co., 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 434; Dow v. Hope Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 174; Hoffman v. Ætna F. Ins. Co., 32 N. Y. 405; Western Ins. Co. v. Cropper, 32 Pa. St. 35. For instance, the policy provided that in case of loss the company should pay to the mortgagee "such proportion prevent a forfeiture.¹

Where possible, such a construction should be adopted as will give to all parts of the contract equal effect.²

the sum insured as the damages by fire to the premises mortgaged or charged shall bear to the value immediately before the fire." Held, that the words "premises mortgaged" should be construed to mean so much of the mortgaged premises as was insured at the time of the fire; in this case the value of the building insured, and not merely the proportion of the sum insured, which the value of the building bore to the value of the whole lot mortgaged, with the building thereon. Teutonia F. Ins. Co. v. Mund, 102 Pa. St. 89.

A clause against the keeping of certain articles cannot be extended to such articles in a building other than the one mentioned. Sperry v. North America Ins. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 516; Allemania F. Ins. Co. v. Pitts, Ex. Soc. (Pa.) 11 Atl. Rep. 572.

1. Ripley v. Aetna Ins. Co., 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 552; Westfall v. Hudson River F. Ins. Co., 2 Duer (N. Y.) 490; Loud v. Citizens' Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Gray (Mass.) 221; Gloucester Mfg. Co. v. Howard F. Ins. Co., 5 Gray (Mass.) 497; Albion Lead Works v. Williamsburgh etc. Ins. Co., 2 Fed. Rep. 479; Sayles v. N. W. Ins. Co., 2 Curt. (U. S.) 612. And see also Gilliat v. Pawtucket Mut. F. Ins. Co., 8 R. I. 282; Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 18 Ill. 553.

Where it is provided that the application shall be a part of the contract, and also that it shall be void if the insured is not the owner in fee, and the application shows that he is not, the contract is binding. Lamb v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 70 Iowa 238.

2. Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Edmond, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 138; Grattan v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 80 N. Y. 281; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 617.

Words and figures on the margin of a policy which relate to the mode of paying premiums and their amounts, are a part of the policy. Pierce v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co., 138 Mass. 151.

The insurance clause on a general stock of merchandise was in the written portion of the policy. The prohibitory clause was in the printed portion. The jury were instructed that the latter was repugnant to the former, and could not be interpreted so as to prevent a recovery, if they found that "turpentine and benzine" were part of all kinds of merchandise usually kept in a country store. This was held to be error. Lancaster F. Ins. Co. v. Lenheim, 89 Pa. St. 497.

A policy covering both real and personal property is not a divisible contract, part of which may remain in force though the rest be invalid, where it is not perfectly clear that the insurer would have assumed both risks separately. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Resh, 44 Mich. 55. Nor is it a divisible contract where the premium is a gross sum. Garver v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 69 Iowa 202.

Where the constitution of a society requires each member to procure a certificate from the subordinate medical examiner, after examination, and provides that, if the medical examination is approved by the supreme medical examiner, the applicant shall be entitled to the relief fund, otherwise not; and the certificate requires the insured to comply with all the requirements of the society. The representations by the insured in his medical examination are made the basis of the contract, though the certificate does not refer to them. Momrich v. Supreme Lodge K. & L. of H., 3 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 552.

The prospectus is no part of the contract, and statements therein are not made so by a statement on the back of the policy that the prospectus may be had gratis upon application to the agent of the company. Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Heidel, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 488. Nor are representations of the officers of the company, without a new consideration subsequent to the making of the contract, a part thereof, or binding on the company. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Heidel, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 488. Nor is an endorsement on the back of a fire policy to the effect that, in case of a proposed alteration, the insured shall make application and the insurer shall examine the property and certify whether the alteration will increase the risk, the same not being referred to in the policy. Planters' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Rowland, 66 Md. 236. Nor a letter from the insured to the insurers respecting the risk. Mace v. Provident Life Ins. Ass'n (N. Car.), 7 S. E. Rep. 674.

It is often necessary to consider surrounding circumstances to arrive at the real meaning of the parties.¹

The written and printed portions of a policy are given equal effect where they are not in conflict; but where they conflict, the written portion controls.²

In case of a special clause conflicting with a general one, the former governs.³

Where a portion of the description is false, that portion will be disregarded if enough remains to identify the property.⁴

It is ordinarily provided that the application shall form a part of the contract. Such provisions are given their stipulated effect and the application and policy are to be construed together.⁵

A policy containing a stipulation which has been violated will

Where the insured by a life policy purposely allows it to lapse for the purpose of substituting another beneficiary by taking out a new policy, the second policy will not be construed to be a mere continuation of the first, even though this be by collusion with the company. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Stevens, 19 Fed. Rep. 671.

1. In Fuller v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 163, the defendant issued a life policy, reciting that it was on the "reserve dividend plan," and that if the premiums were paid for ten years, the company would pay to the assignee of the policy its equitable proportion of the "reserve dividend fund." Held, that the meaning of the parties must be ascertained by recourse to contemporaneous insurance literature; and, it appearing that the only reserve dividend plan known was the one by W. P. Stewart, and that defendant company had engaged him as actuary, secured the right to use his plan, and used his "key" in explaining to policyholders the meaning of the plan the liability must be ascertained by that plan.

2. Chadsey v. Guion, 97 N. Y. 333; Kratzenstein v. Western Assurance Co., 53 N. Y. Supr. Ct. 505. Thus, in Grandin v. Rochester German Ins. Co., 107 Pa. St. 26, where the insured took out a policy on property, "his own, or held by him in trust for others," in which it was provided that it should be void if the insured was not "the sole, absolute and unconditional owner of the property insured," it was held that this provision was not applicable, but that the insured was entitled to recover for any of the property in which he had any interest.

So where the provisions of the policy and mortgage clause are inconsistent the latter will control. German Ins. Co. v. Churchill, 26 Ill. App. 206.

3. Mitchell Furniture Co. v. Imperial F. Ins. Co., 17 Mo. App. 627; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Hazelett, 105 Ind. 212; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 192.

4. Hatch v. New Zealand Ins. Co., 67 Cal. 122.

5. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Benton, 89 Ind. 132; Chrisman v. State Ins. Co. (Oreg.), 18 Pac. Rep. 466.

Where a policy declares that the representations made in the application are warranted to be true, and that the policy shall be void if they are untrue, the falsity of these representations will defeat the insurance. Gluting v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. (N. J.), 13 Atl. Rep. 4; State Ins. Co. v. Jordan (Neb.), 3 N. W. Rep. 839.

Pennsylvania and Wisconsin Acts.—But under act Pennsylvania, May 11, 1881, declaring the application inadmissible in evidence, when referred to in the policy, unless a copy be attached, the application cannot be received where a copy is not attached to the policy. Imperial Fire Ins. Co. v. Dunham, 117 Pa. St. 460. The act does not, as to policies issued since its passage, impair the obligation of contracts. New Era Life Ass'n v. Musser, 120 Pa. St. 384. A statement written at the end of a policy, entitled "Copy of Application," not containing any signature, does not satisfy the act. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Hallock (Pa.), 14 Atl. Rep. 167. The same decision was reached in Dunbar v. Phoenix Ins. Co. (Wis.), 40 N. W. Rep. 386, in construing similar statute of Wisconsin. The Pennsylvania act does not, however, prevent the intro-not be construed to be forfeited unless it also contains a stipulation that such shall be the effect.¹

Cases involving the construction of particular clauses are cited in the notes.²

duction of the application to show fraud. Carrigan v. Mass. Ben. Ass'n, 26 Fed. Rep. 230.

1. Nat. Bank v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 95 U. S. 673; Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Coatesville Shoe Factory, 80 Pa. St. 467; Dwelling House Ins. Co. v. Hardie, 37 Kan. 674.

Where the contract of insurance on a steamboat stipulates for its continuance for one year, "unless it is terminated or made void by conditions hereinafter expressed," and contains a "permission to navigate the Ohio and Mississippi rivers below Cairo," but contains no condition expressly avoiding the policy for navigating the boat outside of the permitted waters, and the boat made a trip outside of these permitted waters and returned in safety where she was afterwards destroyed by fire, in no way caused or contributed to by such departure. Held, that the only effect of such deviation was to relieve the insurer from any loss happening outside of the permitted waters, and that said policy was not avoided thereby, and that after a temporary departure and return in safety to the permitted waters the insurers are liable for a subsequent loss covered by the policy, not caused or contributed to by such deviation. Wilkins v. Tobacco Ins. Co., 30 Ohio St. 317.

2. Kerosene Permit.—A policy containing a clause that kerosene shall not be stored on the premises, except to use for lights, and to be drawn and the lamps filled by daylight only, to which is attached two riders granting permission to keep five barrels of kerosene and to use it for lights on the premises, provided the lamps are trimmed and filled by daylight, is avoided by drawing kerosene by lamplight, when an explosion is caused. Gunther v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co., 34 Fed. Rep. 501.

Explosion.—The clause "occasioned by explosion of any kind, by means of invasion," is not limited to explosions occasioned by invasion. Smiley v. Citizens' F. etc. Ins. Co., 14 W. Va. 33.

Combustion is to be distinguished from explosion. Smiley v. Citizens' F. etc. Ins. Co., 14 W. Va. 33.

Wearing apparel is covered when in ordinary use elsewhere than on the premises described. Longueville v. Western Assurance Co., 51 Iowa 553.

Benzine.—The policy forbade the insured to "keep or have" on the premises "petroleum, naphtha, benzine, benzole, gasoline, benzine-varnish," etc., or to "keep, have or use camphene, spirit-gas, or any burning fluid or chemical oils," etc. Held, that this did not prohibit the temporary taking of benzine on the premises for the cleaning of machinery, and the use of the same therefor. Mears v. Humboldt Ins. Co., 92 Pa. St. 15.

Gasoline included under "petroleum" and "kerosene." Kings Co. F. Ins. Co. v. Swigert, 11 Ill. App. 590.

Location.—A policy insured two barns and personal property "contained therein." Also a horse "in barn or in fields." Held, that the horse was so contained, though in another barn than either of those mentioned. Trade Ins. Co. v. Barraciff, 45 N. J. L. 543.

Livestock "on the property described, in the places herein set forth and not elsewhere," is descriptive only, and the insurers are liable under such description for a mare at the time in a certain barn, but removed to another 300 feet away, where burned. De Graff v. Queen Ins. Co., 38 Minn. 501. Similar holding in Holbrook v. St. Paul F. Ins. Co., 25 Minn. 229.

The policy was against fire and lightning, and was on barn and contents. Horses were mentioned among other things. The policy provided that the company should not be liable for the loss of property while removed from the barn. Held, that horses killed in field were not included, three judges dissenting. Haws v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. (Pa.), 15 Atl. Rep. 915.

A policy on "frame stable building, occupied by insured as a hack, livery and boarding stable," and on "his carriages, sleighs, hacks, horses, harnesses, blankets, robes, and whips contained therein," does not cover a hack in a shop for repairs an eighth of a mile away. Bradbury v. Fire Ins. Ass'n, 80 Me. 396.

Held in Trust.—A policy on a stock

III. WARRANTIES—1. Definition.—A warranty, in the law of insurance, is a statement or stipulation inserted or referred to in, of musical instruments, "his own or held by him in trust or on commission," also provided that goods held on storage must be separately and specifically insured. The insured received a piano to be forwarded. Held, that the piano was covered. Lucas v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co., 23 W. Va. 258; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 383.

Held on Storage.—An exception of goods held on storage does not apply to furniture not in use and stored away. Continental Ins. Co. v. Pruite, 65 Tex. 125.

Fences, etc.—An exception of "fences and other yard fixtures, side-walks, store furniture and fixtures," does not apply to a wooden awning in front, supported on pillars sunk in the ground, with rafters extending into the brick wall; but does apply to shelving and an office enclosed with a railing in the interior of the building. Commercial F. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 80 Ala. 571.

When Loss Covered.—A policy on a "hop-house while drying hops," from August 15th to October 15th, 1875, does not cover a loss happening within the specified time but not while drying hops. Langworthy v. Oswego etc. Ins. Co., 85 N. Y. 632.

Fixtures in a factory are not covered by "store fixtures." Thurston v. Union Ins. Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 127.

"Premises" does not apply to personal property. Carr v. Roger Williams Ins. Co., 60 N. H. 513.

Transfer Fraudulent as to Creditors.—Consent was given to an assignment of a policy, on representation that the assignor had sold his interest in the property to the assignee, the local agent of the company. In fact the transfer was fraudulent as to creditors. Held, that the company, under a provision in the policy for forfeiture in case of misrepresentation of interest in the property, was not liable for loss happening after the transfer, notwithstanding its agent was a party to the fraud. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Willis (Tex.), 6 S. W. Rep. 825.

Watchman.—One condition of a policy on premises, a part of which was a mill, required the insured, during all the time the mill was idle, to employ a watchman to be in and upon the premises insured, day and night. A watchman was employed, but at the time of the fire was about 65 feet away from the premises insured, though engaged in watching the same, and was upon higher ground, from which he had a better view of the insured premises than if he had been in the mill. Held, that the condition had been complied with. Sierra M., S. & M. Co. v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (Cal.), 18 Pac. Rep. 267.

Further cases construing particular provisions of fire policies, with the subject of such provisions, are:

Ownership—Planters' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Engle, 52 Md. 468.

Carpenters' risk—Alkan v. N. H. Ins. Co., 53 Wis. 136.

Term of renewal—Scott v. Home Ins. Co., 53 Wis. 238.

Location—N. Y. etc. Despatch Ex. Co. v. Traders' etc. Ins. Co., 132 Mass. 377; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 440.

Participating policy does not create a trust relation between the holder and the company. Taylor v. Charter Oak Life Ins. Co., 9 Daly (N. Y.) 489.

Amount.—Where one-third of the amount of the policy is payable if death occurs after three and within six months; two-thirds if after six months and within a year, and the whole if after a year, the whole amount is payable if the insured dies within three months. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. Drach, 101 Pa. St. 278.

Paid-up Policy.—A life policy endorsed "non-forfeitable" and containing a provision entitling the insured, in case of forfeiture, to a new policy for as many tenths of the original insurance as there have been premiums paid, does not obligate the company to insert a similar provision in the new policy, but they may make it forfeitable. People v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 103 N. Y. 480.

Further cases construing particular provisions of life policies, with the subject of such provisions, are:

Substitution of beneficiary—Eiseman v. Judah, 1 Flip. (U. S.) 627; Packard v. Com. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 9 Mo. App. 469; Pilcher v. N. Y. L. Ins. Co., 3 La. An. 322; Pingrey v. Nat. L. Ins. Co., 144 Mass. 374; Nally v. Nally, 7 Ga. 669.

Time of demand of policy—Mich. Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Bowes, 4 Mich. 19.

Beneficiary—Tennes v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., 26 Minn. 271; Hu-

and made a part of, the policy, upon the truth or performance of which, on the part of the insured, the validity of the contract depends.¹

A statement or stipulation incorporated into a policy or referred to therein and made a part thereof may not be a warranty, but it usually is. This is the chief characteristic of a warranty, and if there be nothing to indicate the contrary, such it will be construed to be.²

2. Form.—No particular form or set of words is essential to constitute a warranty. However, if it clearly appears from the instrument that a statement or stipulation inserted was not intended to operate as a warranty, it will not be given that effect.³

3. Effect of Warranty.—The effect of a warranty is to make void the policy if the statements made are not literally true, or if the stipulations adopted are not fully observed,⁴ without regard to

v. Hull, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 100; Batty's Estate, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 29; McDermott v. Centennial Mut. L. Ass'n, 24 Mo. App. 73.

1. "An express warranty is a stipulation inserted in writing on the face of the policy, on the literal truth or fulfillment of which the validity of the entire contract depends." Arnould Ins. 577. See also May on Ins. 179.

It was held a warranty where the insured made statements regarding his age in the application, and it was provided in the policy that it should be void if statements were in any respect untrue. Linz v. Mass. Ins. Co., 8 Mo. App. 363.

A policy of fire insurance stated that the property insured was contained in their frame storehouse, with slate roof, situate "detached at least one hundred feet" on the east side of Lake Champlain. Held, that the words quoted were not mere description of the building, but related to the character of the risk and amounted to a warranty that no other building of such size and character as to constitute an exposure and increase the risk stood within the distance specified. Burleigh v. Gebhard F. Ins. Co., 90 N. Y. 220.

2. Kentucky etc. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Southard, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 634.

The statement of an applicant that he is married when he is single is a warranty. Jeffries v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 114.

3. Fitch v. American etc. L. Ins. Co., 59 N. Y. 587; Kingsley v. New Eng. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 8 Cush. (Mass.) 393; Howard etc. Ins. Co. v. Cormick, 24 Ill. 455.

4. Hartford L. etc. Ins. Co. v. Gray, 91 Ill. 159; Bennett v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 50 Conn. 420; Bloomington Grove Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. McAnerney, 102 Pa. St. 335; Ala. Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Garner, 77 Ala. 210; Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Pyle, 44 Ohio St. 19.

The applicant warranted that the building insured was a dwelling occupied by himself. In fact it was an unfinished building and never had been occupied. Held, a breach of the warranty. Pottsville Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Fromm, 100 Pa. St. 347.

In Brooks v. Standard F. Ins. Co., 11 Mo. App. 349, the insured warranted that he would keep a watchman on the premises nights. This was not complied with by requiring one to sleep there.

Where the building insured was described as "two stories high" and the main part was so, but a small rear addition was only one story high, it was held that this was not a breach of the warranty. Wilkins v. Germania F. Ins. Co., 57 Iowa 529. Similar holding where building described as a boarding house was partly occupied as a bar and billiard room. Martin v. State Ins. Co., 44 N. J. L. 485; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 397.

A denial by the applicant in his application that he had any of the specified diseases, though he had had one or two temporary attacks of one of them, does not avoid the policy. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Heimann, 93 Ind. 24; Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Union Trust Co., 112 U. S. 250; Dreier v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 670.

their actual materiality,¹ the wilfulness of the falsity or non-observance,² or the cause of the loss. By them the parties have seen fit to settle conclusively the materiality of the matters involved,³ so that their absolute observance is essential to recovery on the policy.⁴

One may have dyspepsia in its milder form and say that his health is sound without misrepresentation. Morrison v. Wis. Odd Fellows Mut. L. Ins. Co., 59 Wis. 162.

A warranty that a person is in good health means to ordinary observation and in outward appearance. Grattan v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 92 N. Y. 274. Or freedom from any conscious derangement of important organic functions. Goucher v. Northwestern Traveling Men's Ass'n, 20 Fed. Rep. 594; Schwarzbach v. Ohio Val. Prot. Union, 25 W. Va. 622.

"Severe illness" means such as has a permanent detrimental effect on the system. Goucher v. Northwestern Traveling Men's Ass'n, 29 Fed. Rep. 596.

Where the statements made are warranted to be true "so far as the applicant knows," there is no absolute covenant that all answers or statements are true, but only so far as known. Redman v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 47 Wis. 89; Wilkins v. Germania F. Ins. Co., 57 Iowa 529.

The case of Hansen v. American Ins. Co., 57 Iowa 741, holds that it is no excuse for false representations that the agent knows the facts.

1. Witherell v. Maine Ins. Co., 49 Me. 200; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Cooper, 50 Pa. St. 331; Sayles v. N. W. Ins. Co., 2 Curtis (U. S.) 612; Thomas v. Fame Ins. Co., 108 Ill. 91; Duckett v. Williams, 2 C. & M. 348; Anderson v. Fitzgerald, 24 Eng. L. & Eq. 1; 4 H. of L. Cas. 484.

2. Fisher v. Crescent Ins. Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 544; Glade v. Germania F. Ins. Co., 56 Iowa 400; Commonwealth Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Huntzinger, 98 Pa. St. 41.

3. Ala. Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Garner, 77 Ala. 210.

4. Daniels v. Hudson River F. Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 416; Campbell v. New Eng. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 381; Dwight v. Germania L. Ins. Co., 103 N. Y. 341; Dowd v. American F. Ins. Co., 41 Hun (N. Y.) 139; Ripley v. Aetna F. Ins. Co., 30 N. Y. 136; Mayer v. Eq. Reserve Fund L. Ass'n,

2 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 79; State Ins. Co. v. Jordan (Neb.), 38 N. W. Rep. 839; Hoffman v. Supreme Council Am. L. of H., 35 Fed. Rep. 252; Mullin v. Vermont Mut. F. Ins. Co., 54 Vt. 223; Cuthbertson v. N. Car. Home Ins. Co., 96 N. Car. 480; Scottish Union etc. Ins. Co. v. Petty, 21 Fla. 399; Mount Leonard Milling Co. v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co., 25 Mo. App. 259; Roberts v. State Ins. Co., 26 Mo. App. 92; Garver v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 69 Iowa 202.

A breach of a warranty is not established, however, by showing the records of several unsatisfied judgments against a former owner, rendered while he owned the premises, where it appears that two had been collected by execution before the date of the application, and that the debtor held receipts in full in the other cases; nor that there was pending at the time an action by a judgment creditor of a former owner to subject the property to his judgment on the ground that the conveyance by the debtor to an intermediate grantee, and by that grantee to the applicant, was for the purpose of delaying the plaintiff in the collection of his judgment, which judgment had not been obtained at the time of the conveyance, there being no allegation that the former owner retained any interest in the land, or that full ownership did not pass by the conveyance to the applicant. Lang v. Hawkeye Ins. Co. (Iowa), 39 N. W. Rep. 86.

But a breach of warranty was established where it was shown that the insured gave birth to a child in November, 1887, and was sick with typhoid fever in January, 1888, from which she got up in March following, and that application was made the first of that month, and that on May 12th, 1888, her physician found her weak with a cough, and sick with consumption, of which she died July 21st, 1888, and she stated in the application that she was at that date in good health, and had usually had good health. Maine Ben. Ass'n v. Parks (Me.), 16 Atl. Rep. 339.

So in Edington v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 77 N. Y. 564, the applicant warranted that he usually enjoyed good health,

4. Warranties, Affirmative and Promissory.—Warranties are affirmative or promissory. An affirmative warranty is one which affirms the existence of certain facts at the time of the insurance. A promissory warranty is one which requires the performance or omission of certain things, or the existence of certain facts after the taking out of the insurance.¹

5. A Part of Policy.—It has been stated that to be a warranty the statement or stipulation must be made in some way a part of the policy, but whether or not this is the case may sometimes be a question. If they are incorporated into the instrument itself, or are therein expressly referred to and made a part thereof, there can be no doubt of their character;² but where this has not been done, the question may be less certain. Upon this feature of warranties the following decisions of interest have been made: It is a warranty where the matter is written on the margin of the policy,³ or in several papers, each referring to the others as a part of the contract;⁴ where certain rules and regulations are referred to as the "accompanying articles,"⁵ or are printed upon the same sheet without any reference thereto.⁶ It is not a warranty where by-laws are printed upon the back of the policy with no reference thereto in the body of the same;⁷ or where another paper is referred to with no indication that it was the intention to make it a part of the policy,⁸ or a war-and had not had any severe disease for seven years. He died within three years thereafter of nervous apoplexy. The defendant was not allowed to show that his disease was of long standing, but this was held to be error. And in Goucher v. Northwestern Travelling Men's Ass'n, 20 Fed. Rep. 596, "severe illness" was construed to mean such as has permanent detrimental effect on the physical system, and "good health," freedom from any conscious derangement of important organic functions. So where the applicant stated that he was a laborer, when he had not labored for years, the policy was void. United Brethren Mut. Aid Soc. v. White, 100 Pa. St. 12.

1. Stout v. City F. Ins. Co., 12 Iowa 371; Jennings v. Chenango Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Denio (N. Y.) 78.

In the application plaintiff said in answer to the question, "Is smoking or drinking of spirituous liquors allowed on the premises?" "No." The statements in the application were made warranties. During the life of the policy the insured smoked on the premises, but the fire did not have that source. Held, that the question and answer referred merely to the rule on the subject at the time of the application, and not to the question whether that rule might be kept or broken in the future. Hosford v. Germania Fire Ins. Co., 127 U. S. 399.

The applicant was asked if there was a watchman in the mill at night, and if the mill was ever left alone. He replied, "No regular watchman, but one or two hands sleep in the mill." Held, a continuing warranty. Blumer v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 48 Wis. 535; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 830.

2. Cushman v. U. S. L. Ins. Co., 70 N. Y. 72.

3. Patch v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co. (Vt.), 2 Ins. L. J. 36; Bean v. Stupart, Doug. 11.

4. Babbitt v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co., 66 N. Car. 70.

5. Hill v. Equitable Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 6 Ins. L. J. 312.

6. Roberts v. Chenango Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Hill (N. Y.) 501; Murdock v. Chenango Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Comst. (N. Y.) 210; Kensington Bank v. Yerkes, 86 Pa. St. 227.

7. Kingsley v. New Eng. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 8 Cush. (Mass.) 393.

8. Houghton v. Mfg. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 8 Met. (Mass.) 114; Snyder v. Farmers' Ins. & Loan Co., 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 481; Le Roy v. Market F. Ins.

ranty;¹ or where another paper to which no reference is made in the policy is attached thereto,² or folded therein.³

Statements contained in the application are not warranties unless made a part of the policy.⁴

In case of doubt as to whether a statement or stipulation is a warranty, or merely a representation, the latter construction will be given. To be given the former, it must be clear that it was so intended.⁵

Co., 39 N. Y. 90; Delonguemere v. Tradesmen's Ins. Co., 2 Hall (N. Y.) 589; Wall v. Howard Ins. Co., 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 383; Commonwealth Ins. Co. v. Monninger, 18 Ind. 352; Sheldon v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 22 Conn. 235; Aetna Ins. Co. v. Grube, 6 Minn. 82. And see Edington v. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 67 N. Y. 185.

1. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Grube, 6 Minn. 82; Redman v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 47 Wis. 89; Elliott v. Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co., 13 Gray (Mass.) 139; Fitch v. American etc. Ins. Co., 59 N. Y. 557.

2. Bize v. Fetcher, Doug. 13, N. B. see Sillem v. Thornton, 3 E. & B. 868.

3. Pawson v. Barnevelt, Doug. 13, N.

4. Dunny v. Conway S. & M. Ins. Co., 13 Gray (Mass.) 492; Columbia Ins. Co. v. Cooper, 50 Pa. St. 331; Shoemaker v. Glens Falls Ins. Co., 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 84.

5. Campbell v. New Eng. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 381; Blood v. Howard F. Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 472; Daniels v. Hudson River F. Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 426; Sayles v. N. W. Ins. Co., 2 Curt. (U. S.) 610; Conover v. Mass. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 3 Dill. (U. S.) 217; Nat. Bank v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 95 U. S. 673; Towne v. Fitchburg etc. Ins. Co., 7 Allen (Mass.) 51; Clinnton v. Hope Ins. Co., 45 N. Y. 454; Trench v. Chenango Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 7 Hill (N. Y.) 122; Westfall v. Hudson River F. Ins. Co., 2 Duer (N. Y.) 490; Wheelton v. Hardesty, 8 El. & B. 232; Stokes v. Cox, 1 H. & N. Exch. 320; Miller v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co., 31 Iowa 216; Watertown Fire Ins. Co. v. Simons, 96 Pa. St. 520; Ala. Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Johnston, 80 Ala. 467; American Popular Life Ins. Co. v. Day, 39 N. J. L. 89; Anders v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor (N. J.), 17 Atl. Rep. 119. And see Lindsey v. Union Mut. Ins. Co., 3 R. I. 157; Wilson v. Conway Ins. Co., 4 R. I. 141; Howard F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Cormick,

24 Ill. 455; Woodruff v. Imperial F. Ins. Co., 83 N. Y. 133. In a Kentucky case illustrating this subject, MARSHALL, C. J., said: "Whatever might be the doctrine in case of marine policies, in making which the insurer is in general wholly dependent upon the statements of the insured, with regard to the property and the risk, it has been seriously doubted, and, so far as we know, has not been established by judicial decisions, whether the principle of construing every matter of mere description contained in the body of the policy into a warranty, should be applied with the same strictness to fire policies, where the misdescription is not generally the mistake of the underwriter's own surveyor. These warranties being conditions precedent, which must be performed or be true, however immaterial, there is an obvious propriety that they should be contained in the policy, which is to be kept by the insured, not only that he may be enabled to make the proper averments when he comes to declare, but that he may be fully apprised of the effect intended to be given to his statements. Since if they are considered merely as representations, it is sufficient that they were made without fraud, and are substantially true in every point material to the risk. Under these considerations we are of opinion that it is at least safe to conclude that the reference in this policy to the application and survey as a part thereof, being a part of the clause which vacates the policy if the premises should, at the time of any fire, be occupied for purposes more hazardous than at the date of the instrument, should be understood as merely identifying the description and condition of the property at that time, for the standard of comparison in case of fire; that no other force or effect was intended to be given the writings referred to, than as being a description of the nature or purposes of the occupation of the building at the time; and that as the clause points

As stated, a statement or stipulation in the policy may not be a warranty, as where, from the words employed, it appears that it was not intended that it should have such effect.¹ Thus, where the application is made a part of the policy, but the statements there made are called representations, they will be so treated.²

If a statute provides that the conditions of insurance shall be stated in the body of the policy, and they are there stated in substance, with a reference to them on another page, where they are printed in full, it is sufficient; but where they are only referred to with the stipulation that they shall constitute a part of the contract, and it is declared that the policy is made with reference thereto, it is not sufficient to constitute them a part of the contract.³

An application is not essential to the validity of a policy by reason of one being referred to.⁴

When a policy is accepted by the insured, it is binding upon both parties according to the terms therein contained.

The omission of the applicant to answer certain questions in the application is not a warranty that there is no answer to make, expressly to the sort of variance against which it intends to guard, viz., a more hazardous occupation, and declares expressly the consequence of such variance, these declarations should be regarded as expressing the entire scope and object of the reference beyond which it cannot be carried without violating the apparent intention of the parties. The entire clause, including the reference to the application and the survey, was intended to secure the insurers from loss by a change in the occupancy of the premises which should increase the risk, and not to bind the other party to the truth of immaterial statements not affecting the risk, nor to preclude him from changes either in the plan or occupation of the premises, unless the hazard should be thereby increased. And the written application and survey were referred to as fixing the standard of comparison, and not for the purpose of creating or evidencing any covenant or warranty on the part of the insured, as to the condition or occupation of the premises at the time the insurance was made. The only covenant or warranty on this subject is contained in that part of the policy which describes the building as a mansion house, situated, etc., and states that it was then occupied as a dwelling-house. The facts alleged in these pleas, that one room was occupied as a kitchen, cannot be taken as a breach of this warranty." Kentucky etc. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Southard, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 634.

1. Moulor v. American L. Ins. Co., 111 U. S. 335; Conover v. Mass. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 3 Dill. (U. S.) 217; Miller v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co., 31 Iowa 216; Campbell v. New Eng. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 381; Price v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 497; Schwarzbach v. Ohio Val. Prot. Union, 25 W. Va. 622; Lebanon Mut. Ins. Co. v. Losch, 109 Pa. St. 100.

A circumstance can be included by implication only when it is manifestly material to the risk. Appleton Iron Co. v. British Am. Ins. Co., 46 Wis. 23; O'Neill v. Buffalo Fire Ins. Co., 3 Comst. (N. Y.) 122; Swick v. Home L. Ins. Co., 2 Dill. (U. S.) 160.

A paper was pasted to a policy containing a requirement that the insured should keep a record of sales "warranted to be kept in an iron safe at night." Held, a representation, and not a warranty. Goddard v. East Tex. F. Ins. Co., 67 Tex. 69.

2. Houghton v. Mfrs. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 8 Met. (Mass.) 114. See also Boardman v. N. H. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 20 N. H. 557; Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Kloeber, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 749.

3. Mullany v. Nat. etc. Ins. Co., 118 Mass. 393; Eastern R. Co. v. Relief F. Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 420.

4. Newman v. Springfield F. & M.

nor is a partial answer a warranty beyond what is stated.¹ The issuance of a policy on such an application is a waiver of a failure to answer, or to answer fully.²

If the questions in the application be indefinite, and an answer is truly made in some proper sense, it is sufficient.³

6. Warranty of Correct and Temperate Habits.—It is usually warranted by the applicant for life insurance that he is of correct and temperate habits. This refers to the habits of the insured as to the use of intoxicating liquors, and not to occasional practices; and if his usual and general habits were to abstain, or to use in moderation, an occasional indulgence to excess would not be a breach.⁴

But it is not necessary to the existence of intemperate habits that the excessive use of intoxicating liquor should be continuous and daily.⁵

IV. REPRESENTATIONS—1. Definition and Explanation.—A representation, in the law of insurance, is an incidental statement or Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 123; Blake v. Exch. Mut. Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 265; Commonwealth v. Hide etc. Ins. Co., 112 Mass. 136.

1. Dilleber v. Home L. Ins. Co., 69 N. Y. 256; Phoenix L. Ins. Co. v. Raddin, 120 U. S. 183.

2. Liberty Hall Ass'n v. Housatonic Mut. F. Ins. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 261; Bardwell v. Conway Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 122 Mass. 90; Lorillard F. Ins. Co. v. McCulloch, 21 Ohio St. 176; Dayton Ins. Co. v. Kelly, 24 Ohio St. 345; Newman v. Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 123.

An application for life insurance contained the following questions: "(28) Has any application been made to this or any other company for assurance on the life of the party? If so, with what result? What amounts are now assured on the life of the party, and in what companies? If already insured in this company, state the number of the policy?" The answer was as follows: "$10,000, Equitable Life Assurance Society." Held, that the answer only purported to be to the third question, and that being answered truly, and the policy having been issued without requiring the other three questions to be answered, it was no defence that the insured had made other applications and been refused, even though his omission to state this was intentional. Phoenix L. Ins. Co. v. Raddin, 120 U. S. 183.

3. Wilson v. Hampden F. Ins. Co., 4 R. I. 159; Wilson v. Conway Ins.

Co., 4 R. I. 141; Cumberland Val. Mut. Prot. Co. v. Schell, 29 Pa. St. 31; Western Ins. Co. v. Cropper, 32 Pa. St. 351; Campbell v. Merchants' etc. F. Ins. Co., 37 N. H. 35; Aetna Ins. Co. v. Jackson, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 242; Bartlett v. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co., 46 Me. 500.

In Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 120 Pa. St. 504, the warranty was as follows: "The assured . . . hereby warrants that any application, survey, plan, statement, or description connected with procuring this insurance . . . is true, and shall be a part of this policy; that the assured has not overvalued the property herein described, nor omitted to state to this company information material to the risk." At the time of such warranty the property, though never removed from the applicant's possession, was the subject of a levy, which the applicant failed to state. But it was held that, as there was nothing in the policy to warn the assured that the company regarded a levy as an increase of risk, he was under no obligation to report it.

If true answers are given, it cannot be objected in an action on the policy that the answers were not full enough. Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wiler, 100 Ind. 92.

4. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Reif, 36 Ohio St. 596; Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Foley, 105 U. S. 350.

5. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Reif, 36 Ohio St. 596.

representation made by the insured with regard to some feature of the risk upon the faith of which the contract is entered into.¹ It is not a part of the contract,² and need not be literally, though it must be substantially, true.³ It differs further from a war-

1. Campbell v. New Eng. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 381; Nicol v. American Ins. Co., 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 529; Northwestern etc. Aid Ass'n v. Cain, 21 Ill. App. 471.

"Misrepresentation is the statement of something as fact, which is untrue in fact, and which the assured states, knowing it to be not true, with an intent to deceive the underwriter, or which he states positively as true without knowing it to be true, and which has a tendency to mislead, such fact in either case being material to the risk." SHAW, C. J., in Daniels v. Hudson River F. Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 416.

If the applicant makes answers not called for by the questions, they are representations. Buell v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 2 Flip. (U. S.) 9.

2. "There is undoubtedly some difficulty in determining by any simple and certain test what propositions in a contract constitute warranties, and what representations. One general rule is, that a warranty must be embraced in the policy itself. If by any words of reference the stipulation in another instrument, such as the proposal or application, can be construed as a warranty, they must be such as make it in legal effect a part of the policy." SHAW, C. J., in Daniels v. Hudson River F. Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 416.

3. Horn v. Amicable Mut. L. Ins. Co., 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 81; Lueders v. Hartford etc. Ins. Co., 4 McCrary (U. S.) 149.

Whether there has been a substantial compliance is a question for the jury. Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Faunce, 2 Ins. L. J. 657.

Cases illustrating the application of this rule are: Naughton v. Agl. Ins. Co., 4 U. C. (Q. B.) 121; Moulton v. American Life Ins. Co., 101 U. S. 708; Rockford Ins. Co. v. Nelson, 65 Ill. 415; World Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Schultz, 73 Ill. 586; Aurora Fire Ins. Co. v. Eddy, 49 Ill. 106; Wilson v. Hampden F. Ins. Co., 4 R. I. 159; Price v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 497; Gerhauser v. North British Ins. Co., 6 Nev. 15; Campbell v. New Eng. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 381; Hough- ton v. Mfrs. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 8 Met. (Mass.) 114; Daniels v. Hudson River F. Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 416; Commercial F. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 80 Ala. 571; Lamb v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 70 Iowa 238; Mut. Benefit Life Ins. Co. v. Wise, 34 Md. 583; Md. Fire Ins. Co. v. Whitford, 31 Md. 219; Swift v. Mass. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 63 N. Y. 186; Jackson v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 33 Hun (N. Y.) 60; Le Roy v. Park Ins. Co., 39 N. Y. 56; Power v. City Fire Ins. Co., 8 Phila. (Pa.) 566; Pittsburgh Ins. Co. v. Frazee, 107 Pa. St. 521.

Where ashes are stated to be kept in brick, it is a substantial compliance if they are kept in some other mode equally safe. Underhill v. Agawam Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Cush. (Mass.) 440.

It is substantially true if the applicant for a life policy states that he has made no other application on which a policy was not issued, when he has made another, not acted upon. Langdon v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 272.

So if he represents that the property is his when the title is in another but he is in possession under an agreement for a conveyance. Martin v. Jersey City Ins. Co., 44 N. J. L. 273, and the purchase price has been paid. Lewis v. New Eng. F. Ins. Co., 29 Fed. Rep. 496.

So if he states that he is in sound health, though he has dyspepsia in a mild form. Morrison v. Wis. Odd Fellows Mut. L. Ins. Co. 59 Wis. 162.

But it is a false statement where the applicant for life insurance states that former applications have been accepted or successful when a medical examiner has declined to pass him. Edington v. Ætna L. Ins. Co., 100 N. Y. 536. So in Story v. United Life & Accident Ins. Association, 4 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 373, the insured stated in his application that his health was then and usually good. He showed the medical examiner a pimple on his tongue, stating that it was not serious. The physician made only a cursory examination and discovered no indications of disease. For two or three years there had been symptoms of cancer, and the insured consulted two physicians before ranty in that to avoid the policy in case of its falsity it must be of facts material to the risk,¹ and applying for the policy. Shortly after it was issued he procured medical treatment, underwent an operation and died. Held, in an action on the policy, that the policy was void.

1. Mosley v. Vermont Mut. F. Ins. Co., 55 Vt. 142; Daniels v. Hudson River F. Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 416. SHAW, C. J., in this case, said: "If any statement of fact, however unimportant it may have been regarded by both parties to the contract, is a warranty, and it happens to be untrue, it avoids the policy; if it be construed a representation, and is untrue, it does not avoid the contract if not wilful, or if not material. To illustrate this, the application in answer to an interrogatory is this: 'Ashes are taken up and removed in iron hods,' whereas it should turn out in evidence that ashes were taken up and removed in copper hods, perhaps a set recently obtained, and unknown to the owner. If this was a warranty, the policy is gone; but if a representation, it would not, we presume, affect the policy, because not wilful or designed to deceive, but more especially because it would be utterly immaterial, and would not have influenced the mind of either party in making the contract, or in fixing its terms."

If the defendant defends on the ground of misrepresentations, the same must be alleged and proved, together with their materiality. Campbell v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 381; Price v. Phoenix L. Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 497; N. Y. Life Ins. Co. v. Graham, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 506; Miller v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co., 31 Iowa 216. The materiality of the facts is a question for the jury. Keeler v. Niagara F. Ins. Co., 16 Wis. 523; Garcelon v. Hampden F. Ins. Co., 50 Me. 580; Mut. Ins. Co. v. Deale, 18 Md. 26; Franklin Ins. Co. v. Coates, 14 Md. 285; Farmers' Ins. & Loan Co. v. Snyder, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 481; Catlin v. Springfield F. Ins. Co., 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 434; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Lawrence, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 507; Campbell v. New Eng. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 381; Hartman v. Keystone Ins. Co., 21 Pa. St. 466; Washington L. Ins. Co. v. Haney, 10 Kan. 525; Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 39 Ind. 475; Morrison v.

Muspratt, 4 Bing. 60; Huguenin v. Riley, 6 Taunt. 186.

The test has been said to be the influence of the representation upon the insurer in accepting the risk and fixing the premium. Ryan v. Springfield etc. Ins. Co., 46 Wis. 671; Merriam v. Middlesex Mut. F. Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 162; Valton v. Nat. Fund L. Ass'n Co., 20 N. Y. 32; Higbie v. Guardian Mut. L. Ins. Co., 53 N. Y. 603; Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans Ins. Co., 13 La. Ann. 246; Canada Ins. Co. v. Northern Ins. Co., 2 Ont. App. 373; Mulville v. Adams, 19 Fed. Rep. 887; Hardman v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 2 Fed. Rep. 594.

But the parties may settle for themselves what shall be deemed material as by a provision to that effect in the policy, or that the policy shall be void in case any of the answers in the application are false, or even by the putting and answering in writing of specific questions. Wilson v. Conway Ins. Co., 4 R. I. 141; Campbell v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 381; Locke v. N. A. F. Ins. Co., 1 Mass. 68; Draper v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 2 Allen (Mass.) 573; Towne v. Fitchburg etc. Ins. Co., 7 Allen (Mass.) 53; Strong v. Mfg. Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 45; Fletcher v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 421; Chaffee v. Cattaraugus Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 18 N. Y. 376; Le Roy v. Market F. Ins. Co., 39 N. Y. 90; Fitch v. American etc. L. Ins. Co., 59 N. Y. 557; Graham v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 9 Daly (N. Y.) 341; Miller v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co., 3 Iowa 216; Price v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 497; N. A. Fire Ins. Co. v. Throop, 22 Mich. 146; Blumer v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 45 Wis. 622; Jeffries v. Economical L. Ins. Co., 22 Wall. (U. S.) 47; Æetna L. Ins. Co. v. France, 91 U. S. 512; Moulou v. American etc. L. Ins. Co., 101 U. S. 708; Conover v. Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co., 3 Dill. (U. S.) 217; Co-operative L. Ass'n v. Leflore, 53 Miss. 1; Gerhauser v. North British Ins. Co., Nev. 15; Byers v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 3 Ohio St. 606.

A statement by the applicant that he has not been attended by a physician for nine years is material to the risk and it appearing that he had been at must be either wilfully false or grossly negligent in character.¹

2. Affirmative and Promissory.—Representations are affirmative and promissory. Affirmative representations are those which affirm the existence of certain facts pertaining to the risk at the time the contract is entered into. Promissory representations are those with regard to the existence of certain facts after the making of the contract. As stated, the falsity of a material affirmative representation, whether written or oral, vitiates the policy; but the falsity of an oral promissory representation, even though material, does not have such effect, unless it be made with a fraudulent purpose, when it does. But where the promissory representation is carried into the contract, it is available as a defence if it be material and false.²

3. False in Part.—A representation, to vitiate the policy, need tended by several physicians within a few months preceding, and that he died within three months afterwards, the policy is void, whether the statement is a warranty or representation. Munrich v. Supreme Lodge K. & L. of H., 3 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 552.

In Bvers v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 35 Ohio St. 606, the question in the application was: "Is the property incumbered? If so, state to what amount, and the value of the premises." Ans. "Yes; mortgage, $2,000—$10,000." The fact was, this mortgage, which was made by the insured, was $3,200 principal, and $240 accrued interest. Held, that this was a false representation, material to the risk, which avoided the policy.

Applicant stated that he was a widower when he was married. Held, material and policy void. United Brethren Mut. Aid Society v. White, 100 Pa. St. 12.

Age of house and amount of incumbrance held not material in Eddy v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 70 Iowa 472.

The applicant stated that he was insured in another company. when he was not; that he was born in 1817, when, in fact, he was born in 1816; that his father died of old age, aged ninety-three years, when, in fact, he died of apoplexy at eighty-two; and that his mother died of old age, aged seventy-two years, when, in fact, she died of paralysis at sixty-five. Held, immaterial, and, if made in good faith, not to avoid the policy. Germania Ins. Co. v. Rudwig, 80 Ky. 223.

The Kentucky act, February 4th, 1874, makes all statements in an application for insurance "representations and not warranties," and provides that "no misrepresentation, unless material or fraudulent, shall prevent a recovery on the policy." This has been construed to prevent the insured from losing his indemnity either upon representation or warranty, not fraudulent or material. Germania Ins. Co. v. Rudwig, 80 Ky. 223; overruling Farmers & Drovers' Ins. Co. v. Curry, 13 Bush (Ky.) 312.

If a representation is material, it matters not that it is not fraudulent. If false it will avoid the policy. Aicher v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 13 Phila. (Pa.) 139.

1. Fisher v. Crescent Ins. Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 544; Buell v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 2 Flip. (U. S.) 9; Schwartzbach v. Ohio Val. Prot. Union, 25 W. Va. 622; Wood v. Firemen's F. Ins. Co., 126 Mass. 316.

But see Hartwell v. Ala. Gold L. Ins. Co., 33 La. Ann. 1353; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 294; Armour v. Transatlantic F. Ins. Co., 90 N. Y. 450; Aicher v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 13 Phila. (Pa.) 139.

If the insured, at the time of applying for the insurance, was in apprehension of an incendiary fire, and represented that he had no such apprehensions, he cannot recover. Whittle v. Farmville Ins. etc. Co., 3 Hughes (U. S.) 421.

Where the provision was that if the representations by the insured should prove false or fraudulent the policy should be void, it was held that, to have this effect, the representations need not be both false and fraudulent. Tex. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Davidge, 51 Tex. 244.

2. Kimball v. Aetna Ins. Co., 9 Allen (Mass.) 540.

not be false in toto. If untrue in a material part it will have the effect where the contract is entire and indivisible.¹

4. Change of Facts Represented.—The representation is deemed to be made at the time the contract is consummated, so that if the facts represented are, without notice, so changed between the time the representation is actually made and the moment of the consummation of the contract as to make the representation untrue and prejudicial to the insurers, the policy is avoided.² But when the contract is consummated, no subsequent change of the facts represented will avail to defeat the insurance, though the policy be not delivered nor the premium paid.³ Thus, should it be stated in the application that a building on which insurance is sought is occupied in a certain way, it would constitute no warranty that it should continue to be so occupied, in the absence of stipulations of that import;⁴ nor would a representation of the occupation and habits of an applicant for life insurance constitute a warranty of their continuance.⁵

5. Oral Representations.—Where the application for insurance is made in writing, oral representations cannot be shown; for in that case it is presumed that all such were incorporated into the

1. See Day v. Charter Oak F. & M. Ins. Co., 51 Me. 91; Lovejoy v. Augusta Mut. F. Ins. Co., 45 Me. 472; Plath v. Minnesota etc. Ins. Co., 23 Minn. 479; Hinman v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 36 Wis. 159; Moore v. Virginia etc. Ins. Co., 28 Gratt. (Va.) 508; Gottsmann v. Pennsylvania Ins. Co., 56 Pa. St. 210; Bowman v. Franklin F. Ins. Co., 40 Md. 620; Friesmouth v. Agawam Mut. Ins. Co., 10 Cush. (Mass.) 587; Smith v. Empire Ins. Co., 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 497.

Thus where a policy includes real and also personal property situated therein, the risk being distributed, a misrepresentation as to the realty, avoiding the insurance thereon, avoids the whole policy, the contract being entire. Schumitsch v. American Ins. Co., 48 Wis. 26.

Contra, Schuster v. Dutchess Co. Ins. Co., 102 N. Y. 260.

And the contrary was also held in Woodward v. Republic F. Ins. Co., 32 Hun (N. Y.) 365, where the real and personal property was separately valued.

2. Whitley v. Piedmont etc. Ins. Co., 71 N. Car. 480; Trail v. Baring, 4 Giff. 485; s. c., 10 L. T., N. S. 215; Blumer v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 45 Wis. 622; Calvert v. Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 308; Piedmont etc. L. Ins. Co. v. Ewing, 92 U. S. 380.

This rule does not necessitate a new statement when a new company assumes the risks of the old and issues a new policy. Cahen v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 69 N. Y. 308; Cheever v. Union etc. Ins. Co., 4 Am. L. Rec. 15; s. c., 5 Big. Life & Acc. Ins. Rep. 45. Or where a lapsed policy is reinstated. Day v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co., 1 Mo. Arthur (D. C.) 41. Or when it is provided that the policy shall not take effect until the premium is paid, and this is not done until some time after the contract is made. Fourdrinier v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 15 Upp. Cal. (C. P.) 403.

3. Ellis v. Albany etc. F. Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 402; Davenport v. Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co., 17 Iowa 276; Southern L. Ins. Co. v. Kempton, 56 Ga. 33; Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Colt, 20 Wa. (U. S.) 560.

4. Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago Ice Co., 36 Md. 102; Hough v. City Fire Ins. Co., 27 Conn. 10; Billings v. Tolland Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 20 Conn. 139; Frisbie v. Fayette Ins. Co., 27 P. St. 325; Blood v. Harvard F. Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 472; Forbush v. Western Mass. Ins. Co., 4 Gray (Mass.) 338; O'Neil v. Buffalo F. Ins. Co., 1 Comst. (N. Y.) 122; Herrick v. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co., 48 Me. 558.

5. Horton v. Equitable Life Assn. Soc., 2 Big. L. & A. Ins. Rep.; Belham v. United G. & L. Ass. Co., 1 Exch. 744; Reichard v. Manhattan Life Ins. Co., 31 Mo. 518.

writing.¹ However, it is otherwise where parol statements are referred to in the application or policy without incorporating them into the contract.²

6. Fraud or False Swearing.—A frequent provision is that any fraud or false swearing by the insured shall forfeit the insurance. This means intentional fraud and false swearing,³ regarding a material matter.⁴

The question of intention is for the jury.⁵

No legal inference of intentional fraud is to be derived from the mere fact that the insured overstates a value,⁶ even though the policy provides that an overvaluation shall avoid it,⁷ though, of course, if it be done with a fraudulent purpose it will vitiate the policy.⁸ Nor again does the fact that the risk had been but recently rejected, show fraud in procuring the insurance.⁹ But whether or not there is a provision avoiding the policy for fraud perpetrated upon the insurers for the purpose of obtaining the insurance or insurance money, such will be its effect.¹⁰

1. Lamotte v. Hudson etc. Ins. Co., 17 N. Y. 199; Pindar v. Resolute F. Ins. Co., 47 N. Y. 114; Rawls v. American L. Ins. Co., 27 N. Y. 282; Howell v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 44 N. Y. 276; Boggs v. Am. Ins. Co., 30 Mo. 63; Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Martin, 40 N. J. L. 568; Schmidt v. Peoria etc. Ins. Co., 41 Ill. 295; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Davenport, 37 Mich. 609; Kimball v. Aetna Ins. Co., 9 Allen (Mass.) 540; Dolliver v. St. Joseph F. etc. Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 39; Union etc. L. Ins. Co. v. Mowry, 96 U. S. 544; Candee v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 4 Fed. Rep. 143.

2. Clark v. Mfrs. Ins. Co., 2 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 472.

3. Titus v. Glens Falls Ins. Co., 81 N. Y. 410; Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Gargett, 42 Mich. 289; Dogge v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co., 49 Wis. 501; Watertown F. Ins. Co. v. Grehan, 74 Ga. 642; Carson v. Jersey City Fire Ins. Co., 43 N. J. L. 300; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 584; Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Rogers, 119 Ill. 474.

Under it the policy becomes void by a demand under oath for the whole amount of the loss, where a part is payable to a mortgagee. Lewis v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 63 Iowa 193. But in Bennett v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 70 Iowa 600, it was held that where one has insurance in two companies, but there is doubt about recovery from either, he may claim the full amount of the loss from each without violating a provision of one of the policies that any attempt at fraud should forfeit it.

4. Oshkosh Packing etc. Co. v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 200.

5. Dolan v. Aetna Ins. Co., 22 Hun (N. Y.) 396.

6. Dolan v. Aetna Ins. Co., 22 Hun (N. Y.) 396; Merchants & Mechanics' Ins. Co. v. Schroeder, 18 Ill. App. 216; Helbing v. Svea Ins. Co., 54 Cal. 156; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 72; Miller v. Alliance Ins. Co., 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 308; Lynchburg F. Ins. Co. v. West, 76 Va. 575; Behrens v. Germania F. Ins. Co., 64 Iowa 19; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Moog, 78 Ala. 284.

7. Miller v. Alliance Ins. Co., 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 308. But see Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Moog, 78 Ala. 284; Nassauer v. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co., 109 Pa. St. 507. And see, where valuation a warranty, Bennett v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 50 Conn. 420.

8. Sibley v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 9 Biss. (U. S.) 31.

9. Body v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 63 Wis. 157.

10. Monaghan v. Agricultural F. Ins. Co., 53 Mich. 238.

A policy is forfeited where one takes out a policy on another's life and murders him to obtain the insurance money. N. Y. Life Ins. Co. v. Fletcher, 117 U. S. 519.

The fraudulent conversion or withholding of part of the goods insured does not, however, avoid the policy. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Moog, 78 Ala. 284.

However, it was held in Wright v. Mut. Ben. L. Assoc., 43 Hun (N. Y.) 61, that where a policy stipulates that no question as to the validity of an application or certificate of membership can be raised after two years or after the death of the member, the company is precluded, in a suit on the policy after the death of the member, from setting up that at the time of the application there were fraudulent representations concerning the health of the insured.

V. CONCEALMENT—1. Definition, etc.—A concealment is the intentional withholding by the insured from the insurers of facts material and prejudicial to the risk which ought in good faith to be made known, and its effect is to vitiate the policy. It is the opposite of a representation. It is, not stating facts which ought to be stated, and of which the insured has knowledge. The element of knowledge on the part of the insured is important, for concealment cannot be intentional without it.¹

2. Facts Within Knowledge of Insurers.—But where the facts undisclosed are within the knowledge of the insurers, or ought to be, or where they better the risk, it is not a concealment to fail to mention them, although the insured may know of them, unless it is otherwise provided in the policy.² But where it is stipulated that the insured warrants that his statement is a just, full and true statement of all facts material to the risk,³ or where a particular enquiry is made respecting the facts in question,⁴ and any material fact remains undisclosed, whether from accident, inadvertence or ignorance, it has the effect of avoiding the policy.⁵

1. Hall v. People's Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 185; Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Robertson, 59 Ill. 123; Swift v. Mass. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 63 N. Y. 186; Merchants' etc. Ins. Co. v. Washington Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Hand. (Ohio) 408; Spratt v. Ross, 16 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (Scotch) 1145; s. c., 3 Big. L. & A. Ins. Rep. 421; Boggs v. American Ins. Co., 30 Mo. 63.

It has, however, been held that an innocent failure to communicate facts about which the applicant is not asked will not avoid the policy. Washington etc. Manuf. Co. v. Weymouth etc. Ins. Co., 135 Mass. 503; Buck v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 76 Me. 586.

2. Lightbody v. North Am. Ins. Co., 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 18; Boggs v. Am. Ins. Co., 30 Mo. 63; Haley v. Dorchester Mut. F. Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 545; Merchants' etc. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Washington Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Hand. (Ohio) 408; Benson v. Ottawa Agr. Ins. Co., 42 U. C. (Q. B.) 282; Goodwin v. Lancashire Ins. Co., 18 C. L. J. 1; Leach v. Republic F. Ins. Co., 58 N. H. 245.

3. Hardy v. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 217; Abbott v. Shaw- mut Mut. F. Ins. Co., 3 Allen (Mass.) 214; Shawmut Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Stevens, 9 Allen (Mass.) 332; Chaffee v. Cattaraugus Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 1 N. Y. 376; Kennedy v. St. Lawrence Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 285; Baker v. Home Life Ins. Co., 4 Hun (N. Y.) 402; s. c., 64 N. Y. 648; Barteau v. Phoenix Mut. Ins. Co., 6 N. Y. 595; Columbia Ins. Co. v. Cooper, 50 Pa. St. 331; Beck v. Hibernian Ins. Co., 44 Md. 95; Teutonia L. Ins. Co. v. Beck, 74 Ill. 165; Jeffries v. Economical Life Ins. Co., 22 Wal. (U. S.) 44.

4. Horn v. Amicable Mut. L. Ins. Co., 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 81; N. A. Fire Ins. Co. v. Throop, 22 Mich. 147; Fame Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 10 Ill. App. 545.

A general answer to a general question is sufficient, if in good faith. Bebe v. Hartford Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 2 Conn. 51.

5. Bowditch Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Winslow, 3 Gray (Mass.) 415.

But in Campbell v. American Fire Ins. Co. (Wis.), 40 N. W. Rep. 661, an action for breach of contract to insure, it appearing that defendant's agent had never questioned plaintiff as to what the building contained besides the property to be insured, it was held that defendant could not show that plaintiff did not disclose that it contained other property, in the absence of allegation of fraudulent concealment.

Whether the facts have been dis-

3. Knowledge of Facts by Insured.—It has been stated that the insured must have had knowledge of the facts to constitute the withholding of them a concealment. Whether or not he has such knowledge is a question for the jury;¹ but he must be presumed to have such knowledge as a reasonable man or one of ordinary capacity would or ought to possess under the circumstances.²

Whether or not he must have a knowledge of the materiality of the facts as well as of their existence is a question; some courts holding that when called for, all known material facts must be given, whether they are so in the mind of the insured or not;³ while others hold that only such facts need be stated as may be fairly presumed to have been material in the belief of the insured.⁴

4. Instances of Facts That Must be Stated.—It has been held that the following are facts which must be stated, whether the insured's statement is warranted to be full and true or not, if they are within his knowledge: in fire insurance, attempts or threats to burn contiguous property;⁵ or the property on which the insurance is placed;⁶ the fact that the insured holds the property under a contract of purchase providing that the title shall not pass until full payment is made, and such payment has not been made. In life insurance, threats to assault the insured;⁷ the pregnancy of the insured;⁸ and, under some circumstances, the prior insanity of the insured.⁹

On the other hand, it has been held that the following facts are not required to be stated unless some special provision or enquiry exacts it: Pending litigation;¹⁰ the character or occupation of tenants;¹¹ the manner of heating or lighting, unless unusual;¹² the insolvency of the insured or judgments against him;¹³ the offensiveness of the insured in the community;¹⁴ closed is for the jury. Tex. Banking & Ins. Co. v. Hutchins, 53 Tex. 61; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 750.

1. Houghton v. Manuf. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 8 Met. (Mass.) 114.

2. Dennison v. Thomaston Mut. Ins. Co., 20 Me. 125.

3. Vose v. Eagle Life & Health Ins. Co., 6 Cush. (Mass.) 42; Miles v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 3 Gray (Mass.) 580; Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 39 Ind. 475; Lindeneau v. Desborough, 3 M. & R. 45; Price v. Phoenix L. Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 497.

4. Mallory v. Travellers' Ins. Co., 47 N. Y. 52; Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Wise, 34 Md. 582; Dennison v. Thomaston Mut. Ins. Co., 20 Me. 125.

5. Walden v. Louisiana Ins. Co., 12 La. 134; Buffe v. Turner, 6 Taunt. 338.

6. Bebee v. Hartford Mut. F. Ins. Co., 25 Conn. 51; Curry v. Common- wealth Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 535; N. A. Fire Ins. Co. v. Throop, 22 Mich. 146; N. Y. Bowery F. Ins. Co. v. N. Y. Ins. Co., 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 359.

7. Campbell v. Victoria Mut. Ins. Co., 17 Can. L. J. 40.

8. Lefavour v. Ins. Co., 1 Phila. (Pa.) 558.

9. Mallory v. Travellers' Ins. Co., 47 N. Y. 52.

10. Hill v. Lafayette Ins. Co., 2 Mich. 476.

11. Lyon v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Rob. (La.) 266.

12. Clark v. Mfrs. Ins. Co., 8 How. (U. S.) 235; Girard F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Stephenson, 37 Pa. St. 293.

13. Delahay v. Memphis Ins. Co., 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 684; City F. Ins. Co. v. Carrugi, 41 Ga. 660.

14. Keith v. Globe Ins. Co., 52 Ill. 518.

the character of the adjoining building;¹ or the erection of contiguous structures.²

5. Character of Answers.—If the answers of the insured to the questions put to him are full and fair, as he understands them, and has a right to understand them, it is sufficient. Or if they in some sense call for his opinion, and it is honestly given, it is enough, though it be erroneous.³ But if his answers are equivocal or evasive, when he is in possession of all the facts which the questions call for, although true in a sense, it may amount to a concealment.⁴

VI. PREMIUM.—1. What Is.—The premium is the consideration paid for insurance.

2. Payment.—Its payment and delivery of the policy are usually concurrent acts. But while there must be a promise to pay a sum of money or some other consideration to support an undertaking to insure, still the efficacy of the contract does not depend upon the payment of the premium at the time of the delivery of the policy or other time agreed upon, unless it be otherwise manifested.⁵ However, it is now ordinarily provided that the policy shall not be binding until the premium is paid, though the policy may be delivered; and where this is the case the policy does not take effect, even though delivered, until the provision is complied with.⁶

So where the premium is payable in instalments, and it is pro

1. Satterthwaite v. Mut. Ben. Ins. Assoc., 14 Pa. St. 393.

2. Gates v. Madison Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Seld. (N. Y.) 469.

3. Haley v. Dorchester Mut. F. Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 545; Dennison v. Thomaston Mut. Ins. Co., 20 Me. 125; Higbie v. Guardian L. Ins. Co., 53 N. Y. 603; Fitch v. American etc. L. Ins. Co., 59 N. Y. 557; Moulton v. American L. Ins. Co., 101 U. S. 708; Hill v. Lafayette Ins. Co., 2 Mich. 476.

The answer to an enquiry as to the distance of other buildings stated, "East side of the block, small one story sheds, and could not endanger the building if they should burn." Held, that if this opinion was honestly entertained, it would not be a misrepresentation avoiding the policy, although the fire was in fact communicated through one of the sheds. Dennison v. Thomaston Mut. Ins. Co., 20 Me. 125.

4. Smith v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 49 N. Y. 211; Hartman v. Keystone Ins. Co., 21 Pa. St. 466; Lyon v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Rob. (La.) 266; N. A. Fire Ins. Co. v. Throop, 22 Mich. 146; Morrison v. Muspratt, 4 Bing. 60; Huckman v. Fernie, Mees. & W., 505; Hutton v. Waterloo Life Ass. Soc., 1 F.

& F. 735; London Ass. Soc. v. Muns, 48 L. J., Ch. 338.

5. Woodfin v. Asheville Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Jones (N. Car.) 558; Dwelling House Ins. Co. v. Hardie, 37 Kan. 67.

A life policy taken out by a father in favor of his children is not ipso facto extinguished by the failure of the assured to pay the first maturing premium not taken by the insurers in place of the cash payment required by the policy, merely because of a verbal agreement on the part of the assured, not referred to either in the note or policy, made without the assent of the beneficiary, and after the delivery of the policy to him, that he would surrender the policy on failure to pay the said premium not at its maturity. Trager v. La. E. Life Ins. Co., 31 La. Ann. 235.

6. Bodine v. Exchange F. Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. 117; Flint v. Ohio Ins. Co., Ohio 301; Schwartz v. Germania L. Ins. Co., 18 Minn. 448; Bradley v. Potomac F. Ins. Co., 32 Md. 108; Giddings v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., 10 U. S. 108; Klein v. N. Y. Life Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 884; Ormond v. Fidelity L. Assoc., 96 N. Car. 158; Taylor v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 47 Wis. 365.

Provision that Policy Shall Not vided that the policy shall not be binding while an instalment remains due and unpaid; the nonpayment of an instalment when Binding While Premium Overdue.—So if it be provided that the policy shall not be binding while the premium or any note given for a premium is overdue, nonpayment of the premium or note when due renders the policy of no effect until paid. Wall v. Home Ins. Co., 36 N. Y. 157; Baker v. Union L. Ins. Co., 43 N. Y. 283; How v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co., 80 N. Y. 32; Atty. Gen. v. North American Ins. Co., 80 N. Y. 152; Williams v. Washington L. Ins. Co., 31 Iowa 541; Nedrow v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 43 Iowa 24; Greeley v. Iowa State Ins. Co., 50 Iowa 86; Pitt v. Berkshire L. Ins. Co., 100 Mass. 500; Shaw v. Berkshire L. Ins. Co., 103 Mass. 254; Bigelow v. State etc. Ins. Co., 123 Mass. 113; Robert v. New Eng. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 1 Disney (Ohio) 355; Lewis v. Phoenix etc. Ins. Co., 44 Conn. 72; Patch v. Phoenix L. Ins. Co., 44 Vt. 487; Catoir v. American L. Ins. & Tr. Co., 33 N. J. L. 487; Mason v. Citizens' etc. Ins. Co., 10 W. Va. 572; Moser v. Phoenix etc. Ins. Co., 2 Mo. App. 408; Russum v. St. Louis etc. Ins. Co., 1 Mo. App. 228; Security L. Ins. Co. v. Gober, 50 Ga. 404; Howard v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 48 Cal. 229; Forest City Ins. Co. v. School Directors, 4 Ill. App. 145.

Provision that Policy Shall Be Void When Premium Overdue.—Where the provision is that the policy shall be void if not paid when due or within a certain time thereafter, the policy becomes absolutely void after nonpayment without any action upon the part of the company. Atty. Gen. v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 93 N. Y. 70.

And this though the provision be in the application, where it is stated in the policy that it was issued and accepted in consideration of the agreements made in the application. Mandego v. Centennial Mut. L. Assoc., 64 Iowa 134.

But a policy conditioned to be void on the nonpayment of the premium when due is not made void by the nonpayment at maturity of a promissory note given for the premium, unless such be the provision of the policy. McAllister v. New Eng. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 101 Mass. 558; New Eng. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Hasbrook, 32 Ind. 447; Kan. Prot. Union v. Whitt, 36 Kan. 760, when it is. Continental Ins. Co. v. Daly, 33 Kan. 601.

A policy of life insurance contained the usual clause of forfeiture for nonpayment of premiums. The agent had allowed the cash part of the premium to be paid one half cash, the other half by a short note. Upon the 6th of July, 1867, the day the premium was due, the agent received the check of assured for the half cash due, and a six months note, giving the renewal receipt for a year. The note contained the clause "if not paid at maturity said policy is to be null and void." Neither check nor note was paid. Held, the mere fact that the note was not paid at maturity did not of itself avoid the policy. It gave the insurance company the option of declaring a forfeiture, but this option must be asserted by clear and unequivocal acts. The clause of forfeiture being inserted in the note for the benefit of the company, may be waived by failure to act, or other circumstances evincing an intention not to claim the benefit of the stipulation. Whether the company has exercised such option or waived their rights is a question of fact for the jury, under all the circumstances of the case. Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. French, 30 Ohio St. 240.

Forfeiture for Nonpayment of Interest.—It was held in the cases second above cited, where the question was raised, that the nonpayment of the interest when due on a note for the premium forfeits the policy, when the provision is that such shall be the effect of nonpayment of a premium note, but this is denied in St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Grigsby, 10 Bush (Ky.) 310. And see Ohde v. Northwestern etc. Ins. Co., 40 Iowa 357.

Where the policy is conditioned to depend upon the prompt payment of interest, a failure to so pay forfeits the policy. Knickerbocker etc. Ins. Co. v. Harlan, 56 Miss. 512; Knickerbocker etc. Ins. Co. v. Dietz, 52 Md. 16; Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Miller Lodge, 58 Md. 463.

By Whom Premium Must be Paid.—The premium must be paid by the insured or by some one by his authority. Whiting v. Mass. etc. Ins. Co., 129 Mass. 240; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 317; Miller v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co., 110 Ill. 102.

And it is paid, for instance, when it is delivered to a carrier designated by the due suspends the policy until paid, and a loss occurring in the meantime is not therefore covered.¹

In the latter event it is generally considered that the company may sue for and recover the instalments in arrear,² though not where the provision is that the policy shall be void on the nonpayment of a matured instalment, even though it be further provided that it shall reattach on payment being made.³

3. Nonforfeitable or Paid Up Policies.—What are termed nonforfeitable or paid up policies are frequently issued, particularly in life insurance. They are usually endorsed “nonforfeiting policy,” and commonly provide that if on the payment of a specified number of premiums, the policy shall cease by reason of the nonpayment of subsequent premiums, a new paid up policy will be issued for such sum as is proportionate with the annual payments which have been made, on compliance with certain conditions by the assured, usually that he shall return the original policy within a fixed time for such purpose; also that if the premiums shall not be paid, the insurers will be liable for so much of the loss as is proportionate with the annual payments made. But it has been held that the surrender of the original policy is not necessary,⁴ company. Currier v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 53 N. H. 538; Whitley v. Piedmont etc. L. Ins. Co., 71 N. Car. 480.

1. Garlick v. Miss. etc. Ins. Co., 44 Iowa 553; How v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co., 80 N. Y. 32.

Assessment.—The same is true of an assessment. Southern Mut. Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 743; Lycoming F. Ins. Co. v. Storrs, 97 Pa. St. 354.

Where Optional with Insurers to Annul Policy.—Though where the company may “at their option annul the policy,” it does not have the effect to ipso facto annul the policy, but the company must give notice of the exercise of the option. Supple v. Iowa State Ins. Co., 58 Iowa 29.

Part Payment.—Payment of a part of a premium due will not prevent a forfeiture. Willcuts v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., 81 Ind. 300.

Effect of Suspension.—When the effect of the provision is merely to suspend the policy while the premium or an instalment remains due and unpaid, and not to make it void, payment of what is due revives the policy, whether such payment be voluntary or otherwise. American Ins. Co. v. Klink, 65 Mo. 78; American Ins. Co. v. Henley, 60 Ind. 515.

No premium is earned while the policy is suspended. Matthews v. Insurance Co., 40 Ohio St. 135.

2. American Ins. Co. v. Henley, 60 Ind. 515.

This is especially true where it is provided that all the instalments shall at once fall due in case of the nonpayment of one. American Ins. Co. v. Klink, 65 Mo. 78; Williams v. Alban City Ins. Co., 19 Mich. 451.

3. Yost v. American Ins. Co., 3 Mich. 531; American Ins. Co. v. Congle, 39 Mich. 536; American Ins. Co. v. Stoy, 41 Mich. 385; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Statham, 5 Big. L. & Acc. Ins. Rep. 607.

4. Dorr v. Phoenix etc. Ins. Co., 6 Me. 438; Coffey v. Universal etc. Ins. Co., 10 Ins. L. J. 525. See also Winchell v. John Hancock L. Ins. Co., 1 Ins. L. J. 652; Sheerer v. Manhattan L. Ins. Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 720; Coffey v. Universal L. Ins. Co., 10 Biss. (U. S.) 354. Contra, Smith v. Continental Ins. Co., 3 Ins. L. J. 63; Schumacher v. Manhattan L. Ins. Co., 3 Ins. L. J. 455; Sheerer v. Manhattan L. Ins. Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 886; Knapp v. Homœopathic Mut. L. Ins. Co., 117 U. S. 411.

Nonpayment of Interest on Premium Notes.—So it has been held that nonpayment of the interest on the premium notes does not avoid the policy, notwithstanding a provision of that sort, but that it remains good for a proportionate part; that a policy cannot be declared to be forfeited that has been and that the assured is entitled to recover where death occurs after default in the payment of the premium, and within the time limited for taking out a paid up policy, though none has been taken out.¹

4. Mode of Payment.—The mode of payment of the premium is immaterial if it be accepted by the company or its agent, and no special mode be provided for.² Thus it has been held that it may be by note;³ bank check;⁴ order on a third person;⁵ or to the agent in depreciated funds, it being according to the stipulated to be nonforfeitable. Hull v. Northwestern etc. L. Ins. Co., 39 Wis. 397; Northwestern etc. Ins. Co. v. Little, 56 Ind. 504; Symonds v. Northwestern etc. Ins. Co., 23 Minn. 491; Kirkpatrick v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 6 Ins. L. J. 368; Mound City etc. Ins. Co. v. Twining, 12 Kan. 475; Watts v. Atlantic etc. Ins. Co., 16 Can. L. J. 215; Nettleton v. St. Louis etc. Ins. Co., 6 Ins. L. J. 426; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Ross, 63 Ga. 199; Cowles v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 63 N. H. 300; Bruce v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 58 Vt. 253.

See also Franklin L. Ins. Co. v. Wallace, 93 Ind. 7; Tutt v. Covenant Mut. L. Ins. Co., 19 Mo. App. 677.

Contra, Holman v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 54 Conn. 195.

Where Premiums Required to be Paid for Certain Time.—But where the provision is that if the premiums shall be paid for a stated time the insured shall be entitled to a paid up policy, and there are further stipulations to the effect that the policy shall be void if the premiums are not paid when due, the right to a paid up policy is forfeited by a default in the payment of a premium. Smith v. Nat. L. Ins. Co., 103 Pa. St. 177; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 121; Atty. Gen. v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 93 N. Y. 70; Holly v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 105 N. Y. 437; Ashbrook v. Phoenix Mut. Ins. Co., 94 Mo. 72.

Defendant issued to C, a married woman, a policy on the life of A, her husband. In case of her death before A, the insurance was payable to their children. Upon a surrender of the policy after two annual premiums had been paid she would be entitled to a paid up policy. She died before A, and before two annual premiums had been paid, without children. A paid the premiums for nine years, when he offered to surrender the policy, and demanded a paid up policy, which was refused. Held, that as C died before the second premium was paid, her administrator had no right to a paid up policy, and the company having treated A as the beneficiary of the policy, he was entitled to a paid up policy. Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, 41 Ohio St. 274.

A nonforfeitable policy provided that if any premiums were not paid the company should only be liable for an amount proportionate to the number of premiums paid. The insured paid twenty-seven quarterly premiums, when he made default. Subsequent to this four others matured before his death, which were not paid. Held, that the beneficiary could recover 27-31 of the amount of the policy with interest. Baltimore Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Pratt, 55 Md. 200.

For What Sum Paid Up Policy Issued.

—A paid up policy should not be issued for the aggregate amount of premiums paid, subject to the amount due, but should be for the equivalent of the present value of the policy. Farley v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co., 41 Hun (N. Y.) 303.

1. Wheeler v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 82 N. Y. 543.

2. Currier v. Continental etc. Ins. Co., 53 N. H. 539; Taylor v. Merchants' F. Ins. Co., 9 How. (U. S.) 390.

3. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. French, 30 Ohio St. 240; Mowry v. Home Ins. Co., 9 R. I. 346; Pitt v. Berkshire L. Ins. Co., 100 Mass. 500; Carey v. Nagle, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 156; Mobile L. Ins. Co. v. Pruett, 74 Ala. 487.

And a Kentucky case is to the effect that payment with a note, duly accepted as such, suffices, though there be a provision to the contrary in the policy. Inman v. Globe Ins. Co., 4 Ins. L. J. 719.

4. Taylor v. Merchants' F. Ins. Co., 9 How. (U. S.) 390.

5. National Ben. Assoc. v. Jackson, 114 Ill. 533.

course of business of the agent known to the company,¹ or in advertising,² board, or whatever else may be agreed upon.³ As it is generally considered that where the insured has money to his credit with the insurers that that must be exhausted before a policy can be declared forfeited for nonpayment.⁴ Thus, if dividends are due the insured, they should be applied to the liquidation of his maturing premiums⁵ in the absence of a contrary arrangement.⁶

The premium must be paid promptly on the day named, unless the policy promises indulgence. But where the day of payment falls on Sunday, it may be made on Monday, even though a loss has intervened;⁷ and where it falls on a weekday it may be made at any hour of that day up to midnight.⁸

5. Waiver with Respect to Premium.—Payment of the premium at the time agreed may be waived by the insurers after the policy takes effect,⁹ and this either expressly or impliedly, and hence

1. Sands v. N. Y. L. Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 626; Robinson v. International Assoc., 42 N. Y. 54; Martin v. International L. Assur. Soc., 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 181.

See also, as to tender in such currency, N. Y. L. Ins. Co. v. Clapton, 7 Bush (Ky.) 179; N. Y. Cent. Ins. Co. v. Nat. Prot. Ins. Co., 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 469.

2. Kentucky Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jenks, 5 Ind. 96. And it was here held that where the agreement is to take advertising for the premium, the policy cannot be avoided by a failure to furnish sufficient advertising matter.

3. Pendleton v. Knickerbocker etc. Ins. Co., 5 Fed. Rep. 238; Schwartz v. Germania L. Ins. Co., 18 Minn. 448.

4. Train v. Holland etc. Ins. Co., 62 N. Y. 598; Home Ins. Co. v. Curtis, 23 Mich. 402; Thompson v. American etc. Ins. Co., 46 N. Y. 674; Union Ins. Co. v. Grant, 68 Me. 229; Staunton v. West. Assur. Co., 23 U. C. (Ch.) 81; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Fort, 82 Ky. 269. But consult Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Miller Lodge, 58 Md. 463.

5. Girard etc. Ins. Co. v. N. Y. Mut. etc. Ins. Co., 97 Pa. St. 15; Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Hoelzle, 8 Ins. L. J. 226; Bulger v. Washington L. Ins. Co., 63 Ga. 328. But custom between the parties may control. Anderson v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co., 1 Flip. (U. S.) 559.

6. Ohde v. Northwestern etc. Ins. Co., 40 Iowa 357; Patch v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 44 Vt. 487; Russum v. St. Louis etc. Ins. Co., 1 Mo. App. 228;

Anderson v. St. Louis etc. Ins. Co., 5 Big. L. & A. Ins. Rep. 527.

The insurers should in such case give notice to the insured of the amount is called upon to pay. Home L. Ins. Co. v. Pierce, 75 Ill. 426, though where it is specially provided what shall be done with the accrued dividends or profits, such provision governs. Hull v. Northwestern etc. L. Ins. Co., 39 Vt. 397.

7. Hammond v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 306; Holland v. Continental etc. Ins. Co., 4 Mass. 499; Taylor v. Germania Ins. Co., 2 Dill. (U. S.) 282; Campbell v. International L. Ass'n, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 298.

8. Och v. Homestead etc. Ins. Co., 21 Pitts. Leg. Jour. 98.

9. Not at the time it is made. Franklin L. Ins. Co. v. Sefton, 53 Ind. 21; Howell v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 44 N. Y. 279; Lewis v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 44 Conn. 72; Bushy v. American etc. Ins. Co., 40 Md. 143; Candee v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 4 Fed. Rep. 143.

Where the company takes a foreign bill of exchange drawn by the insured for the premium due, with an agreement that the same is not paid at maturity, the policy shall lapse, the company is bound to present the bill at maturity, although the drawee has refused acceptance, although he has in his hands no funds to pay it. Protest is not, however, necessary. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Pendleton, 112 U. S. 696.

In Piedmont etc. L. Ins. Co. v. Lean, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 517, it was held by parol as well as by writing.¹ Thus, where the agent delivers the policy and charges the premium to the insured,² especially where there is an agreement between the insured and the agent that this shall be done and that the latter shall be bound to the company for the premium,³ there is such a waiver. So it is a waiver of the provision if the insured be told that payment on delivery of the policy makes no difference,⁴ or be given time,⁵ or where he offers payment and its acceptance is deferred;⁶ or where a note is accepted instead of cash, and a renewal receipt is issued;⁷ or where the premium is habitually paid and received at other times than the days fixed;⁸ or where payment accord-that the assistant secretary had authority for such purpose.

1. Bodine v. Exchange F. Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. 117; Baptist Church v. Brooklyn F. Ins. Co., 19 N. Y. 305; Howell v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 44 N. Y. 277; Miesell v. Globe Mut. L. Ins. Co., 76 N. Y. 115; Lyon v. Travellers' Ins. Co., 55 Mich. 141; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 354; Hanley v. L. Assoc. etc., 69 Mo. 380; Johnson v. Southern Mut. Ins. Co., 79 Ky. 403; Smith v. St. Paul F. etc. Ins. Co., 3 Dak. 80.

Levying a subsequent assessment does not, however, waive payment. Crawford Co. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cochran, 88 Pa. St. 230.

The insured made default, but the company offered to overlook it if payment was made at once. It was not paid for two weeks, at which time he was sick, and he died the next day. Held, that the company was not bound. Servoss v. Western Mut. Aid Soc., 67 Iowa 86.

See also cases cited, infra, this title, WAIVER AND ESTOPPEL.

2. Miller v. Brooklyn L. Ins. Co., 12 Wall. (U. S.) 288; Tennant v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 322; Boehen v. Williamsburg etc. Ins. Co., 35 N. Y. 131; Wood v. Poughkeepsie etc. Ins. Co., 32 N. Y. 619; Sheldon v. Atl. F. & M. Ins. Co., 26 N. Y. 460; Re Booth, 11 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 145; Bouton v. American Mut. L. Ins. Co., 25 Conn. 542; Equitable Ins. Co. v. McCrea, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 541; Lebanon Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hoover, 113 Pa. St. 591; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 511.

Plaintiff obtained insurance through a broker, who received the premium from him, and offered it to the defendant company's agent. The agent, having directed the broker to hold the premium for a time, charged him and credited the company with the amount, and afterwards remitted it to the company. Held, that the question of payment of the premium was for the jury, and an instruction to find for the defendant was error. Pittsburgh Boat Yard Co. v. Western Assur. Co., 118 Pa. St. 415.

3. Sheldon v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 25 Conn. 207; Southern L. Ins. Co. v. Booker, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 606. But this is denied in Greene v. Lycoming F. Ins. Co., 91 Pa. St. 387, where there is a provision that the agent shall have no authority to waive payment.

4. Bodine v. Exchange F. Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. 117; Bragdon v. Appleton Mut. Ins. Co., 42 Me. 259.

5. Alexander v. Continental Ins. Co., 67 Wis. 422; s. c., 58 Am. Rep. 869.

6. N. Y. Cent. Ins. Co. v. Nat. Protection Ins. Co., 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 469; Hallock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 268.

7. Mich. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bowes, 42 Mich. 19; Thompson v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 252; Little v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 38 Ohio St. 110.

But the acceptance of a note does not waive future payments according to the terms of the policy. Mobile L. Ins. Co. v. Pruett, 74 Ala. 487.

8. Cotton States L. Ins. Co. v. Lester, 62 Ga. 247; Ala. Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Garmany, 74 Ga. 51; Tripp v. Vermont L. Ins. Co., 55 Vt. 100; Western Horse etc. Ins. Co. v. Scheidle, 18 Neb. 495.

And in Girard L. Ins. etc. Co. v. N. Y. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 97 Pa. St. 15, it was held that a stipulation in an obscure part of a policy, printed in small type, to the effect that the receipt of overdue premiums was to be deemed to constitute no precedent as regards the payment of future premiums, nor to be considered as a waiver of a forfeiture of ing to the terms of the policy is prevented by the insurer or is attempted to be enforced.²

Indeed, any acts of the insurers which reasonably indicate that they do not mean to insist upon compliance will imply a waiver. But a demand for an overdue premium without receiving it is not a waiver of a forfeiture.⁴

And the prompt payment of an instalment may be waived as well as where the whole premium is due at one time. Acceptance of an instalment or a part thereof,⁵ after it is due, or extension of the time of payment,⁶ is such a waiver,⁷ unless there also be a provision to the effect that acceptance of an overdue premium or an agreement to the extension of the time of payment shall not constitute a waiver, when that governs.⁸

6. Excuses for Nonpayment.—So there may be excuses for nonpayment at the stipulated time. War breaking out between a State or country of the insurer and insured is generally held to be one,⁹ it being considered by the courts that have held so that the policy is suspended during hostilities, and revived the policy, is not to be regarded as a condition of the policy, but rather as a qualification of the receipt of premiums. The acceptance of occasional payments after due will not, however, amount to a waiver. Marston v. Mass. L. Ins. Co., 59 N. H. 92.

1. Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Warwick, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 614; Hamilton v. Mut. Ins. Co., 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 234.

2. Robinson v. Pac. F. Ins. Co., 18 Hun (N. Y.) 395.

3. Appleton v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 59 N. H. 541; Goit v. Nat. etc. Ins. Co., 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 189; Heaton v. Manhattan F. Ins. Co., 7 R. I. 502; Pittsburgh Boat Yard Co. v. Western Assur. Co., 118 Pa. St. 415; Winindger v. Globe Mut. L. Ins. Co., 3 Hughes (U. S.) 257; Home Prot. Ins. Co. etc. v. Avery (Ala.), 5 So. Rep. 143.

Where, by the terms of a policy of life insurance, the nonpayment of the required annual premium at the designated time, is declared to be a ground of forfeiture, but the uniform custom of the insurance company has been to give notice of the time when the premiums fall due, and to collect the same at the residence of the policy holder, through a local agent residing in his neighborhood, good faith requires that this mode of collection should not be discontinued, and payment required at the company's office, without notice to the insured. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Pottker, 33 Ohio St. 459. Cases of the same character are

Thompson v. St. Louis etc. Ins. Co. Mo. 469; Buckbee v. U. S. etc. Co. Barb. (N. Y.) 541; Mayer v. Mut. Ins. Co., 38 Iowa 304; Helme v. P. L. Ins. Co., 61 Pa. St. 107. In the case it was said that "forfeitures odious, and enforced only where there is the clearest evidence that that was what was meant by stipulation of the parties. There must be no cast of management or trick to entrap a party into a forfeiture."

4. Cohen v. Continental F. Ins. Co., 67 Tex. 325; Ware v. Mill Mut. M. & F. Ins. Co., 45 N. J. L. 5.

5. Hodsdon v. Guardian L. Co., 97 Mass. 144.

6. Homer v. Guardian etc. Co., 67 N. Y. 478; Kan. Prot. Union Whitt, 36 Kan. 760.

7. But see Busby v. North American F. Ins. Co., 40 Md. 572, where it was said that the unauthorized receipt of an overdue premium by an agent of the company after the death of the insured is not a waiver, even though the agent was not disclaimed by the company.

Also see Mowry v. Home Ins. Co., 9 R. I. 346, where it is held that the insured must show that he was in good health at the time of the acceptance of the premium. But compare with it Rockwell v. L. Ins. Co., 20 Wis. 335.

8. Bissell v. American etc. Ins. Co., 2 Big. L. & A. Ins. Rep. 150.

9. Sands v. N. Y. L. Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 626; Cohen v. N. Y. L. Co., 50 N. Y. 610, and many cases their close.¹ There is a class of cases, however, opposed to this view, the doctrine of which is that such policies become void, and hence not susceptible of enforcement by either party, even when peace is declared.² So it is a sufficient excuse for delay in payment where the policy has been declared by the company to be forfeited, or has otherwise been treated as forfeited;³ or where the agency at which the premium is to be paid is changed, and the insured is unable to find the new one.⁴ But the physical inability of the insured is not a sufficient excuse;⁵ nor is a statement in the company's prospectus, not made a part of the contract, that premiums need not be paid for a given number of days after the nominal date of maturity.⁶ Nor is an injunction restraining the company from doing business pending an examination of its condition;⁷ nor a claim of the insolvency of the company and that payment, therefore, would be unsafe;⁸ nor a failure to give the insured notice, according to usage, of the day on which a note given for premiums will mature,⁹ unless the notice be and discussed. Contra, Abell v. Penn. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 18 W. Va. 400.

1. See also Odlin v. Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 312; Francis v. Ocean Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 404; Semmes v. Hartford Ins. Co., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 158; Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Warwick, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 614; N. Y. L. Ins. Co. v. Clopton, 7 Bush (Ky.) 179; Hamilton v. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 234.

A tender of the premium, as it falls due, must be made where possible, in order to make the excuse available. Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Le Pert, 52 Tex. 504. See also Attorney General v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 519.

2. Worthington v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 41 Conn. 372; Dillard v. Manhattan etc. Ins. Co., 44 Ga. 119; N. Y. L. Ins. Co. v. Statham, 93 U. S. 24; Tait v. N. Y. L. Ins. Co. (C. Ct. Tenn.), 2 Ins. L. J. 863; s. c., 4 Big. L. & A. Ins. Rep. 479.

3. Pilcher v. N. Y. L. Ins. Co., 10 Ins. L. J. 312; Attorney General v. Guardian Mut. L. Ins. Co., 82 N. Y. 336.

4. Southerp L. Ins. Co. v. McCain, 96 U. S. 84; Seamans v. N. W. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 3 Fed. Rep. 325; s. c., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 508; Barwell v. Am. L. Ins. Co., 75 N. Car. 8.

DEATH OF THE LOCAL AGENT at the place of residence of the assured is no excuse where premiums are payable at the home office. Bulger v. Washington L. Ins. Co., 63 Ga. 328.

5. Howell v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 44 N. Y. 277; Evans v. U. S. L.

Ins. Co., 64 N. Y. 304; Carpenter v. Centennial Mut. L. Association, 68 Iowa 453.

As where the insured is insane. Wheeler v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 82 N. Y. 543; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 594.

6. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Ruse, 8 Ga. 534; Ruse v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co., 23 N. Y. 516; Day v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co., 1 McCa. (D. C.) 41; s. c., 4 Big. L. & A. Ins. Rep. 15.

See, however, Collett v. Morrison, 9 Hare 173; Wood v. Dwarria, 11 Exch. 493; Wheelton v. Hardisty, 92 E. C. L. 231; Salvin v. James, 6 East 571; Wheelton v. Hardisty, 8 E. & B. 282; Cent. Ry. Co. v. Kesch, 2 H. L. Cas. 99; Ruse v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co., 23 N. Y. 516; Fowler v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 41 Hun (N. Y.) 357; Walsh v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 30 Iowa 133.

7. Universal L. Ins. Co. v. Whitehead, 10 Ins. L. J. 337. However see Coffey v. Universal L. Ins. Co., 10 Ins. L. J. 525.

8. Taylor v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co., 9 Daly (N. Y.) 489.

Otherwise where the company is actually insolvent and has quit business. People v. Empire Mut. L. Ins. Co., 92 N. Y. 105. Though a readiness and willingness to pay, had the company been solvent, must be shown. People v. Globe Mut. L. Ins. Co., 32 Hun (N. Y.) 147.

9. (Distinguishing N. Y. L. Ins. Co. v. Eggleston, 96 U. S. 572;) Thompson v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 252; Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Miller Lodge, 58 Md. 463; Mandego v. Centennial purposely omitted with the design of working a forfeiture; nor a custom of receiving overdue premiums;² nor an absence of demand on a premium note.³

VII. INSURABLE INTERESTS—1. Generally.—The insured must have an interest in the subject matter of the insurance. A policy of insurance obtained upon a subject in which the insured has no interest is void, whether or not it be so stipulated therein. No action can be maintained upon it; and notes given for premium upon such insurance are void for want of consideration.⁴ But just what amounts to an insurable interest has been a matter of much discussion, and cannot be definitely stated for all cases. It is, however, certain that the interest need not be the largest which may be had in the subject matter, nor need it be an absolute or vested interest; indeed, it does not seem to be essential that the insured should have any property in the subject of insurance. Probably it may be safely said that if pecuniary loss would be suffered by the insured by a loss of the subject matter, his interest therein is an insurable one.⁶ The interest must not, however,

Mut. L. Association, 64 Iowa 134. Contra, Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Daster, 106 U. S. 30; People v. Globe Mut. L. Ins. Co., 65 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 239; Atty. Gen. v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 33 Hun (N. Y.) 138; Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Smith, 44 Ohio St. 156.

Laws New York, ch. 341, provide that no life insurance company shall declare forfeited any policy thereafter issued or renewed for nonpayment of any premium, unless written notice of the time of payment shall have been mailed to the insured at his last known address. This notice may be given in advance of the time when the premium will become due, and need not be in the words of the statute if it fairly gives notice that a forfeiture will be declared. Phelan v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., 42 Hun (N. Y.) 419. Payment of the annual premium constitutes a renewal within the meaning of the statute, and the holder of a policy, issued before passage of the act, who subsequently pays a premium, is entitled to its benefits. Carter v. Brooklyn L. Ins. Co., 110 N. Y. 15. Notice to an unauthorized address does not satisfy the act, and the company takes the risk of delivery, even though previous notices to the same address have been received by the assured, and payments accordingly made. Carter v. Brooklyn L. Ins. Co., 110 N. Y. 15.

It has been held in Iowa, under a similar statute, that the assured does not waive his right to such notice by applying for an extension of the premium note. Boyd v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co., 70 Iowa 325. The Iowa statute provides that the notice "may be served by registered letter, addressed to the insured." It has been held upon this that service is complete when the registered letter is mailed. McKenna v. State Ins. Co., 73 Iowa 453.

1. Girard L. Ins. etc. Co. v. N. Y. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 97 Pa. St. 15.

2. Mutual Ins. Co. v. Girard L. Ins. etc. Co., 100 Pa. St. 172. Compare Girard L. Ins. etc. Co. v. N. Y. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 97 Pa. St. 15.

3. McIntyre v. Michigan State Ins. Co., 52 Mich. 188.

4. Bersch v. Sinnissippi Ins. Co., 28 Ind. 64; Fowler v. N. Y. etc. Ins. Co., 26 N. Y. 422; Peabody v. Washington Ins. Co., 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 33; Freeman v. Fulton Ins. Co., 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 247; Talman v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 29 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 71; Sawyer v. Mahew, 51 Me. 398; Sweeney v. Franklin Ins. Co., 20 Pa. St. 337. See Trenton etc. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, N. J. L. 576; Mawry v. Home Ins. Co., 9 R. I. 346.

5. Buck v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., Pet. (U. S.) 151, 163.

6. Rohrback v. Germania F. Ins. Co., 62 N. Y. 47; Fenn v. New Orleans Mut. Ins. Co., 53 Ga. 578; Merritt v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 42 Iowa 11; Agicultural Ins. Co. v. Clancey, 9 Ill. App. 137.

JUDGE FOLGER, in Rohrback v. G.

be an immoral or illegal one. Such interests cannot be thus protected.¹

2. Of Equitable Owner.—One may, for instance, insure his equitable interest in property, the legal title to which is in another.²

3. Of Different Parties Having Different Interests.—So different parties having different interests in the same subject matter may severally procure insurance on their several interests;³ but the mere fact of a person being a part owner of property does not give him an insurable interest in that portion which he does not own.⁴

4. Of Vendor and Vendee.—A person has an insurable interest in property, real or personal, which he has contracted to sell⁵ to the full value of the property, regardless of the price he has contracted to sell for.⁶

So a vendee in possession, under a contract for title on payment of the purchase money, has an insurable interest to the full value of the property,⁷ even though he could not enforce the mania F. Ins. Co., 62 N. Y. 47, says, after citing Arnold, Bunyon, Hughes, Marshall, Phillips, Sherman, Parsons, Angell, Flanders and May: "The result of a comparison of the text writers above cited is that there need not be a legal or equitable title to the property insured. If there be a right in or against the property, which some court will enforce upon the property, a right so closely connected with it, and so much dependent for value upon the continued existence of it alone, as that a loss of the property will cause pecuniary damage to the holder of the right against it, he has an insurable interest."

A married woman, who has purchased personal property on credit, and has not paid for it, and refuses to pay, may still have an insurable interest. Queen Ins. Co. v. Young (Ala.), 5 So. Rep. 116.

In Stambaugh v. Blake (Pa.), 15 Atl. Rep. 705, it is held that a turnpike company, which voluntarily contributes to the construction of a public bridge, over which those using its road, as well as the general public, pass, but which has no other interest therein, has no insurable interest in the bridge.

1. Lord v. Dall, 12 Mass. 118; Mount v. Waite, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 434.

2. Oliver v. Greene, 3 Mass. 133; Coursin v. Pa. Ins. Co., 46 Pa. St. 323.

After a policy has been assigned with the consent of the company, it cannot object that the assignee has only an equitable interest in the property insured. Home Prot. etc. Ins. Co. v. Caldwell (Ala.), 5 So. Rep. 338.

3. Higginson v. Dall, 13 Mass. 96; Locke v. N. A. Ins. Co., 13 Mass. 61; Garrell v. Hanna, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 412.

4. Reed v. Pac. Ins. Co., 1 Met. (Mass.) 166; Foster v. U. S. Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 86; Murray v. Columbian Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 302; Turner v. Burrows, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 541.

5. Ins. Co. v. Updegraff, 21 Pa. St. 513; Wood v. N. W. Ins. Co., 46 N. Y. 421; Tallman v. Atl. F. & M. Ins. Co., 4 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 345; McCutcheon v. Ingraham (W. Va.), 9 S. E. Rep. 260.

6. Stuart v. Columbian Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 442.

7. Shotwell v. Jefferson Ins. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 247; Southern Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 42 Ga. 587; Tuckerman v. Home Ins. Co., 9 R. I. 414; Rumsey v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 527; Amsinck v. American Ins. Co., 129 Mass. 185; Reed v. Williamsburg City F. Ins. Co., 74 Me. 537. And see Ayers v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 17 Iowa 176; Simmes v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 618; Rider v. Ocean Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 259; McGivney v. Phoenix F. etc. Ins. Co., 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 85; Kenny v. Clarkson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 385; Redfield v. Holland Purchase Ins. Co., 56 N. Y. 354; Shotwell v. Jefferson Ins. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 247; Imperial F. Ins. Co. etc. v. Dunham, 117 Pa. St. 460; Elliott v.

contract if resisted.¹ Likewise it has been held that one who has bid off property at an execution sale, though he pays no money and takes no deed, has an insurable interest.² And it was adjudged in another case that a purchaser at sheriff's sale may truly declare himself to be the owner of the property, though the sheriff's deed has not, at the time of such declaration been acknowledged.³

5. Of Lessor and Lessee.—A lessor has an insurable interest in property which he has leased.⁴ It has also been held that, for his better security for the rent, he has an insurable interest in structures erected by the lessee, and which the latter has the right to remove,⁵ as well as in those which the lessee has not the right to remove.⁶

The lessee also has an insurable interest in structures which he has leased;⁷ but a mere intruder upon land has no such interest in buildings thereon, even though he may have erected them. A lessee's interest is at an end when he surrenders possession under a notice to quit, or otherwise yields up the premises.⁹

6. Of Mortgagor and Mortgagee.—The interest of both mortgagor and mortgagee in the mortgaged property is insurable.¹⁰ This is true of the interest of the mortgagor, though the property be mortgaged to its full value;¹¹ or after a sale of the property by him, where his personal bond accompanies the mortgage.¹² And where there are several mortgages of the same property, the interest of each mortgagee is an insurable interest, and this although the mortgage note may have been transferred by endorsement.

Ashland Mut. F. Ins. Co., 117 Pa. St. 548.

1. Ætna Ins. Co. v. Tyler, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 385; Smith v. Bowditch etc. F. Ins. Co., 6 Cush. (Mass.) 448; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Lawrence, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 25.

2. Ætna Ins. Co. v. Miers, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 139.

3. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Staats, 102 Pa. St. 529.

4. Mayor of N. Y. v. Brooklyn F. Ins. Co., 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 231; Ely v. Ely, 80 Ill. 532.

5. New York v. Exchange F. Ins. Co., 9 Bosw. (N. Y.) 424; Miltenberger v. Beacon, 9 Pa. St. 198.

6. New York v. Hamilton F. Ins. Co., 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 537.

7. Allen v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 36 La. Ann. 767; Niblo v. N. A. F. Ins. Co., 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 551; Lawrence v. St. Mark's Ins. Co., 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 479; Fletcher v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 42.

8. Sweeny v. Franklin Ins. Co., 20 419 749; Tongue v. Nutwell, 31 Md. 302; Mitchell v. Home Ins. Co., 32 Iowa

Pa. St. 337. And see Oliver v. Green, 3 Mass. 133.

9. Birmingham v. Empire Ins. Co., 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 457.

10. Honore v. Lamar F. Ins. Co., Ill. 409; Lycoming F. Ins. Co. v. Jackson, 83 Ill. 302; Washington etc. Ins. Co. v. Kelley, 32 Md. 421; Traders' Ins. Co. v. Robert, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 40; Excelsior Ins. Co. v. Royal Ins. Co., 55 N. Y. 343; Tellon v. Kingston etc. Ins. Co., 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 570; Kemmerly v. N. Y. etc. Ins. Co., 5 Duer (N. Y.) 1; McDonald v. Black, 20 Oh. 185; Strong v. Mfrs. Ins. Co., 1 Pick. (Mass.) 40; Curry v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 53; King v. State etc. F. Ins. Co., 7 Cush. (Mass.) 1; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Lawrence, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 25; Swift v. Mfrs. Ins. Co., 18 Vt. 305; Kellar v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 7 La. Ann. 29; Phoenix etc. Ins. Co., 52 Me. 333.

11. Higginson v. Dall, 13 Mass. 6; Gordon v. Mass. etc. Ins. Co., 2 Pick. (Mass.) 249.

12. Waring v. Loder, 53 N. Y. 581; Williams v. Roger Williams Ins. Co., 107 Mass. 377.

Likewise one who holds a mortgage as collateral security for a debt has an insurable interest in the mortgaged property so long as the debt remains unpaid.¹

The insurable interest of the mortgagor extends to the full value of the property, equally whether the mortgage was made before or after the policy.² But he ceases to have an insurable interest in the property mortgaged after a sale by a master in chancery under a decree of foreclosure, and payment of a part of the purchase money, and this though the decree is not enrolled, nor the deed executed at the time of sale.³ From the time of sale, the property is at the risk of the purchaser, and the deed relates to that time. However, where a foreclosure sale is vacated for irregularity, and the order of confirmation is set aside, the insurable interest of the mortgagor remains, and continues precisely as though no sale had been attempted;⁴ and in Wisconsin it has been held that this insurable interest continues until the time of redemption expires.⁵

7. Of Lien Holder.—A person entitled to a lien on a building under a lien statute,⁶ or on personal property by virtue of either a statute or the common law, has an interest in the same which is insurable,⁷ as has the owner.⁸

8. Of Assignor.—A debtor has an interest in property which he has assigned for the benefit of his creditors where there is an excess over his liabilities.⁹

9. Of Assignee.—So the assignee of an insolvent debtor,¹⁰ or an assignee for security,¹¹ has an insurable interest in the property assigned.

10. Of Executors and Administrators.—Executors have an insurable interest in real estate devised by the will;¹² and the same is true of administrators where the personal estate is insufficient to pay the debts.¹³

1. Sussex Co. etc. Ins. Co. v. Woodruff, 26 N. J. L. 541.

2. French v. Rogers, 16 N. H. 177; Strong v. Mfrs. Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 40; Curry v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 535; Allen v. Franklin F. Ins. Co., 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 501.

3. McLaren v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 5 N. Y. 151; contra, Marts v. Cumberland Mut. F. Ins. Co., 44 N. J. L. 478.

4. Richland Co. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Simpson, 38 Ohio St. 672.

5. Mechler v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 38 Wis. 665.

6. Royal Ins. Co. v. Stinson, 103 U. S. 25; Carter v. Humboldt F. Ins. Co., 12 Iowa 287.

7. Hancox v. Fishing Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 132; Russel v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 409; Donath

v. Ins. Co., 4 Dall. (U. S.) 463; Seamans v. Loring, 1 Mason (U. S.) 127; Murray v. Columbian Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 302.

8. Nussbaum v. Northern Ins. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 524.

9. Lazarus v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 81.

10. Herkimer v. Rice, 27 N. Y. 163; Marks v. Hamilton, 7 Exch. 323; Goulstone v. Royal Ins. Co., 1 F. & F. 276.

11. Wells v. Phila. Ins. Co., 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 103.

12. Phelps v. Gebhard F. Ins. Co., 9 Bosw. (N. Y.) 404; Herkimer v. Rice, 27 N. Y. 163; Howard F. Ins. Co. v. Chase, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 509.

13. Sheppard v. Peabody Ins. Co., 21 W. Va. 368. But see Beach v. Bowery F. Ins. Co., 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 261 n.

11. Of Trustee.—A trustee holding the legal title to property may insure it for the use of the beneficiary;¹ and in the case of a trust deed, even though there be a conveyance by the grantor of his interest.²

12. Of Cestui que Trust.—A cestui que trust may also insure his interest in the trust property.³

13. Of Tenant by the Curtesy.—Insurance on property in which husband is tenant by the curtesy is valid;⁴ and it has been held that a husband in possession and enjoyment with his wife of his real and personal property, with an inchoate right of curtesy, has an insurable interest in both.⁵

14. Of Husband in Wife's Property.—But it has also been held that a husband must specifically insure the right of using the property of his wife in order to entitle him to recover damages for the loss of it.⁶

15. Of a Partner.—A partner has an interest in the partnership property which he may insure for his own benefit;⁷ and the rule would extend to the case of a building erected with partnership funds on the land of a single partner.⁸ Even a retiring partner has this interest while any liability remains.⁹

16. Of Stockholders in Corporate Property.—But with regard to the interest of a stockholder in a corporation in the corporate property, the cases are at issue as to whether it is insurable.¹⁰

17. Of Agent or Consignee.—An agent or consignee, having the principal's property in his possession, and having a special interest in it to the amount of his commission, may insure it in his own name, and, in case of loss, recover the full amount of the policy holding all beyond his own interest in trust for his principal.

1. Young v. Union Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 279; Savage v. Howard Ins. Co., 52 N. Y. 502; Hughes v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 44 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 351.

2. Dick v. Franklin F. Ins. Co., 81 Mo. 103; Graham v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 2 Disney (Ohio) 255.

3. Gordon v. Mass. etc. Ins. Co., 2 Pick. (Mass.) 249.

4. Franklin etc. Ins. Co. v. Drake, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 47; Harris v. York etc. Ins. Co., 50 Pa. St. 341; Abbott v. Hampden Ins. Co., 30 Me. 414.

5. Trade Ins. Co. v. Baracliff, 45 N. J. L. 543; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 792. But see Clark v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. (Me.), 17 Atl. Rep. 303, where it is held that under Rev. St. Maine, ch. 61, § 1, rendering the real estate of a married woman, however acquired, her separate estate, with absolute power of disposition, regardless of her husband's consent, only requiring his joinder with her in a conveyance of property derived from him, he has no insurable interest in a house after conveying it to her.

6. Cohn v. Va. F. etc. Ins. Co. Hughes (U. S.) 272.

7. Manhattan Ins. Co. v. Webster, 59 Pa. St. 227.

8. Converse v. Citizens' Mut. Ins. Co., 10 Cush. (Mass.) 37.

9. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, Wall. (U. S.) 504.

10. Affirming: Seaman v. Enterprise etc. Ins. Co., 18 Fed. Rep. 250. A. see Warren v. Davenport etc. Ins. Co., 31 Iowa 464. Denying: Riggs v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. St. Ct. 466.

11. Ætna Ins. Co. v. Jackson, 16 Mon. (Ky.) 242; Hough v. People's Ins. Co., 36 Md. 398; Baxter v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 11 Biss. (U. S.) 30; Williams v. Crescent etc. Ins. Co., 151 Ann. 651; De Forest v. Fulton Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 84; Sturm v. Atl. Mut. Ins. Co., 63 N. Y. 77; Graham v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 2 Disney (Ohio) 2

Indeed, it has been held that a commission merchant, to whom the cargo of a vessel has been consigned for sale, has an insurable interest in his expected commissions, and may insure the same while the vessel is on her voyage.¹ And it may be said, generally, that a person charged by law, custom or contract with the property of others, or having the right to protect the property, even though not bound to do so, or who will receive benefit from its continued existence, may insure it in his own name.²

Thus,

18. Of Common Carrier.—A common carrier may insure goods entrusted to him for carriage.³ And,

19. Of Builder.—Again, a builder engaged in the construction of a building for which he is not to be paid until after its completion, has an insurable interest therein.⁴

20. Of Creditor in Property of Debtor.—A simple contract creditor has no insurable interest in the real estate of his debtor,⁵ but otherwise with a judgment creditor having a judgment lien.⁶

21. In the Profits of a Voyage or Enterprise.—An interest in the profits of a voyage, whether as owner of the vessel and cargo,⁷ or otherwise, is a lawful subject of insurance,⁸ as are the profits expected to accrue from other property in which the insured has an interest,⁹ or other business in which he is concerned.¹⁰

So,

22. Of Bottomry Interest.—An interest in the freight of a vessel is an insurable one.¹¹ But no other interest is covered by an insurance on freight than freight strictly so-called (that is, an interest accruing to the insured for the use of a vessel of which he is the owner), unless the assured has disclosed the peculiar nature of his interest.¹²

23. Of Master of Vessel.—The master of a vessel, on board which Compare Parks v. General Interest Assn. Co., 5 Pick. (Mass.) 34. And see Aldrich v. Equitable etc. Ins. Co., 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 272; Shaw v. Aetna Ins. Co., 49 Mo. 578.

1. Putnam v. Mercantile M. Ins. Co., 5 Metc. (Mass.) 386.

2. Eastern R. Co. v. Relief F. Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 420.

3. Savage v. Corn Exchange etc. Ins. Co., 36 N. Y. 655; Chase v. Washington etc. Ins. Co., 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 595; The Sidney, 23 Fed. Rep. 88.

4. Protection Ins. Co. v. Hall, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 411; Franklin etc. Ins. Co. v. Coates, 14 Md. 285.

5. Foster v. Van Reed, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 322.

6. Spure v. Home Mut. Ins. Co., 8 Sawyer (U. S.) 618; s. c., 15 Fed. Rep. 707. Contra, Grevenmeyer v. Southern Mut. Ins. Co., 62 Pa. St. 340.

7. Fosdick v. Norwich M. Ins. Co., 3 Day (Conn.) 108.

8. French v. Hope Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 397; Locke v. N. A. Ins. Co., 13 Mass. 61.

9. Sun Fire Office v. Wright, 3 N. & M. (S. Car.) 819; Putnam v. Mercantile M. Ins. Co., 5 Metc. (Mass.) 386; Loomis v. Shaw, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 36; Niblo v. N. A. F. Ins. Co., 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 551; Leonarda v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 2 Rob. (La.) 131.

10. Sawyer v. Dodge Co. etc. Ins. Co., 37 Wis. 503.

11. McGaw v. Ocean Ins. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 405; Stone v. Nat. Ins. Co., 19 Pick. (Mass.) 34; Lockwood v. Atlantic etc. Ins. Co., 47 Mo. 50; Griswold v. New York Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 321.

12. Riley v. Delafield, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 522.

there is property consigned to him, has an insurable interest therein.¹ His commission is also insurable.²

24. Insurable Interest in Human Lives.—As the assured in other kinds of insurance must have an interest in the subject matter, in life insurance the assured must have an interest in the life insured. Any person may insure his own life for the benefit of another,³ even a stranger;⁴ and it does not seem to affect the validity of the insurance that that other pays the premiums; but if insurance be effected by one person on the life of another, the assured must show himself to have possessed an interest in the life of that other,⁵ at any rate, at the time the insurance was effected, though it does not seem to be necessary to show that the interest existed at the time of death, unless it be required by the terms of the policy.⁷ Otherwise the insurance would be a mere wager and void.⁸ But this interest need not be strictly legal or definite one. Any substantial pecuniary interest is sufficient.⁹ Thus,

25. Of Sister in Life of Brother.—A sister dependent upon brother for support has an interest in his life which she may insure;¹⁰ and probably this principle would extend to the interest of all persons in the lives of those upon whom they are dependent for comfort and support.

26. Of Parent in Life of Child.—A parent, according to very good authorities, has an insurable interest in the life of a child by reason of such relationship merely;¹¹ but whether this be so or not, as the father is entitled to the services of the child until he

1. Buck v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 151, 163.

2. Holbrook v. Brown, 2 Mass. 280.

3. Gilbert v. Moore, 104 Pa. St. 74; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 570; American etc. Ins. Co. v. Robertshaw, 26 Pa. St. 189; Campbell v. New Eng. etc. Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 381; Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. France, 94 U. S. 561; Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Schaefer, 94 U. S. 457; Tucker v. Mut. Ben. Life Co. (Wis.), 41 N. W. Rep. 968. And compare Franklin L. Ins. Co. v. Sefton, 53 Ind. 380.

4. Johnson v. Van Epps, 110 Ill. 551; Succession of Hearing, 26 La. Ann. 326; Langdon v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 272; Valton v. Nat. Fund L. Ass'n Co., 20 N. Y. 32.

5. Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. France, 94 U. S. 561; St. John v. American Mut. L. Ins. Co., 13 N. Y. 31.

6. Bevin v. Conn. etc. Ins. Co., 23 Conn. 244; Ruse v. Mut. etc. Ins. Co., 23 N. Y. 516; Guardian Ins. Co. v. Hogan, 80 Ill. 36; Franklin Ins. Co. v. Sefton, 53 Ind. 380. But see Trenton etc. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 24 N. T. L. 576.

7. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Schaefer, 94 U. S. 457; Sides v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 65; Trenton etc. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 24 J. L. 576.

8. Mut. Benefit Ass'n v. Hoyt, Mich. 473.

9. Hoyt v. N. Y. etc. Ins. Co., Bosw. (N. Y.) 440.

10. Lord v. Dall, 12 Mass. 118.

11. Grattan v. Nat. L. Ins. Co., Hun (N. Y.) 74.

In this case it is said that if such relation of consanguinity or affinity shown as warrants the conclusion that the beneficiary had an interest, whether pecuniary or arising from dependence or natural affection, in the life of the person insured, such interest will uphold the policy. And in Loomis v. Eagle etc. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 399, the court say: "We cannot doubt that a parent has an interest in the life of a child, and vice versa a child in the life of a parent, not merely because they are bound to support their lineal kindred when in need of relief, but upon considerations of strong morals and the majority, he has, beyond dispute, an insurable interest in until he reaches that age.¹

Child in Life of Parent.—The relation of parent and child is held sufficient to establish an insurable interest of the life of the parent;² but this principle is also denied, of course, a son in law, as such, has no insurable interest in the life of the mother in law.⁴

Husband and Wife.—Husband⁵ and wife⁶ have each an interest in the life of the other by reason of the relation and it is deemed as coming within this principle where a woman live together as husband and wife for a long term without any marriage ceremony ever having been performed. Indeed, the Missouri court goes still further, holding a man engaged to be married has an insurable interest in the prospective husband's life.⁸

Uncle and Nephew.—The mere relation of uncle and nephew does not constitute an insurable interest to enable either to insure the life of the other.⁹

Employer and Employee.—An employer has an insurable interest in the life of his employee;¹⁰ and an employee, hired for a term, has an insurable interest in the life of his employer.¹¹

Partner in Life of Copartner.—A partner has an insurable interest in the life of his copartner;¹² at any rate, it was so held where one of two copartners advanced the capital of the partnership agreement being that each should contribute an equal share.

Creditor in Life of Debtor.—Though the existence of the relation of debtor and creditor is not essential to an insurable interest, the interest of a creditor in the life of a debtor is insurable.

mutual affections between near relatives operating more efficaciously than the force of positive law."

Ell v. Union etc. Ins. Co.,

etc. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Kane,

154. And see Loomis v.

Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 396.

etc. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v.

Ill. 35.

person, who is neither a creditor of his father nor responsible for him nor in any way dependent on him has no insurable interest in his life. United Brethren

Loc. v. McDonald (Pa.), 15

39.

etc. v. Piedmont etc. Ins.

Ann. 233; s. c., 48 Am. Rep.

though she lives with him and rests upon him for support.

v. Blake (Pa.), 15 Atl. Rep.

5. Currier v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 57 Vt. 496; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 134.

6. McKee v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 28 Mo. 383.

7. Watson v. Centennial Mut. L. Ass'n, 21 Fed. Rep. 698; Equitable etc. Assur. Soc. v. Paterson, 41 Ga. 338.

8. Chisholm v. Nat. etc. L. Ins. Co., 52 Mo. 213.

9. Singleton v. St. Louis Mut. Ins. Co., 66 Mo. 63.

10. Miller v. Eagle etc. Ins. Co., 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 268.

11. Hebdon v. West, 3 Best & Sn. 578.

12. See Valton v. Nat. Fund L. Ass'n Co., 20 N. Y. 32.

13. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Luchs, 108 U. S. 498.

14. Hoyt v. N. Y. etc. Ins. Co., 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 440.

15. Succession of hearing, 26 La. Ann. 326; Bevin v. Conn. etc. Ins. Co.,

even though the debtor be an infant.¹ And this insurance interest of the creditor continues, although the statute of limitations would have barred his action before the debtor's death had been pleaded.²

This principle, too, gives a creditor of a firm the right to insure the life of one of the partners thereof, even though another partner may be entirely able to pay the debt, and the estate of the insured perfectly solvent.³ But the policy should be limited to an amount consistent with the amount of the debt, and it has been said, to the amount of the debt with interest, and the amount of premiums, with interest thereon, during the expected life of the life insured, according to the Carlisle tables.⁴

33. Of Assignee of Policy.—An assignee of a life policy, as well as the original beneficiary, must have an interest in the life insured.

34. Interest of Insured Need Not be Disclosed.—It is now almost invariably stipulated that if the interest of the insured or beneficiary in the subject matter be not truly stated in the policy, the same shall be void; but in the absence of such a stipulation it is in general, sufficient that the subject matter of insurance and the nature of the risk are set forth in the policy, without any representation of the nature or extent of the interest of the insured, and in case of loss he will be entitled to recover, upon proof of any insurable interest in the property, or life, covered by the policy.⁶

VIII. INSURANCE AGENTS—THEIR POWER AND AUTHORITY Generally.—The general principles of the law of agency are applicable to insurance as well as other agents, and they need not be restated here. But the business of insurance is carried on almost exclusively, and to a greater extent, perhaps, than any other business through such mediums. This has given rise to doctrines of law, either peculiarly applicable to insurance agents, or sufficiently important to be set out in this connection. In determining the authority of the agent in any matter connected with his business, reference must be had to the manner in which he is held out by the 23 Conn. 244; Morrell v. Trenton etc. Ins. Co., 10 Cush. (Mass.) 282.

1. Rivers v. Gregg, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 274.

2. Rowls v. American etc. Ins. Co., 27 N. Y. 282; Mowry v. Home Ins. Co., 9 R. I. 346.

3. Morrell v. Trenton etc. Ins. Co., 10 Cush. (Mass.) 282.

4. Cooper v. Shaeffer (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 548.

This case holds that where the disproportion between the amount of the policy and the debt is great, as where the insurance is $3,000 and the debt $100, it is the duty of the court to declare the transaction a wager, as a matter of law. And it is further held in Cooper v. Weaver's Admr. (11 Atl. Rep. 780, that where a debtor signs a policy of similar amount ($3,000) to secure a debt of $100, the transaction is a wager, and if the company pays the loss the assignee cannot retain more than the amount of his debt, with premiums paid, and interest.

5. Mo. Val. L. Ins. Co. v. S. Kan., 18 Kan. 93; Franklin Ins. Co. v. Ind., 53 Ind. 380.

6. Hartford Protection Ins. Co. v. Harmer, 2 Ohio St. 452; Str. Mfrs. Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 40; Fletcher v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 419; Smith v. Fitch etc. F. Ins. Co., 6 Cush. (Mass.) 282.

the usual mode of doing business, and scope of his employment;² the character of the authority known to have been

v. N. A. Ins. Co., 13 Mass. 546; Etna Ins. Co., 12 Wend. 7; Turner v. Burrows, 5 Y. 546.

on Ins. Co. v. Kelly, 24 65; Gloucester Mfg. Co. v. re Ins. Co., 5 Gray (Mass.) 146; Mass. Ben. Ass'n, 146; Warner v. Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co., 36 N. Y. 550; St. Louis Ins. Co., 68 N. Malleable Iron Works v. s. Co., 25 Conn. 465; Combs et al. v. Ins. Co., 43 Mo. 148; Ottawa Agr. Ins. Co., 42 U. 82; Millville Mut. M. & F. Mechanics etc. Ass'n, 43 party represented himself and conducted himself as if he was an agent of a certain company, exclusively for the purpose of executing the policy, and in good faith paid the premium to the party, never, was in fact a mere agent, and never paid over the money to the company, it was held that the party had a right to treat the party as an agent of the company, and that the company was protected against the nonpayment of the premium. Fire Ins. Co. v. Ward, 90 But compare Germania F. Ins. Co. v. McKee, 94 Ill. 494.

that of a life insurance company to act as its agent in reinsurance of death. The company, and in its correspondence, recognized the agency, and did not delay in permitting by such the company was held to be its agent. Travellers' Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, 122 U. S. 457.

is evidence that an insurance company addressed a circular to a person, referring to the "agent" as "your care," containing instructions in regard to the business of the company, and signed by the agent of the company. The company as agent and after a loss claimed by the general agent, and the company's reply and instructions from the company, sufficient to support the finding of a jury that there was no agency. Hamilton v. Home Ins. Co., 353.

C. of L.—21

An enquirer as to the validity of a policy was referred by the secretary and general manager to a clerk. Held, that information respecting the policy given by the enquirer to the clerk was notice to the company. Clapp v. Mass. Ben. Ass'n, 146 Mass. 519.

2. Imperial F. Ins. Co. v. Murray, 73 Pa. St. 13; Mentz v. Lancaster Fire Ins. Co., 79 Pa. St. 475; Lycoming Ins. Co. v. Woodworth, 83 Pa. St. 223; Wass v. Maine etc. Ins. Co., 61 Me. 537; Dayton Ins. Co. v. Kelly, 24 Ohio St. 345; Emery v. Boston M. Ins. Co., 138 Mass. 398; Putnam v. Home Ins. Co., 123 Mass. 324; Millville Mut. M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics etc. Ass'n, 43 N. J. L. 652; Boice v. Thames etc. Ins. Co., 38 Hun (N. Y.) 246; Lingenfelter v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 19 Mo. App. 252; Cleaver v. Traders' Ins. Co. (Mich.), 39 N. W. Rep. 571.

An appointment as agent and surveyor carries with it the presumption, if uncontradicted by the circumstances of the case, that the appointee has all the powers incident to both capacities. Lycoming F. Ins. Co. v. Woodworth, 83 Pa. St. 223.

An officer may sometimes bind the company when acting outside of his authority as limited by the charter or by-laws. Baker v. Colter, 45 Me. 236.

An agent may act through his clerks. Eclectic Ins. Co. v. Tahrenkrug, 68 Ill. 463; Bodine v. Exchange F. Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. 117; Davis v. Lamar Ins. Co., 18 Hun (N. Y.) 230; Continental Life Ins. Co. v. Goodhall, 5 Big. L. & A. Ins. Rep. 422; Mayers v. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 38 Iowa 304; Bennett v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 70 Iowa 600; Planters' Ins. Co. v. Myers, 55 Miss. 479. Or sub-agents by him appointed. Krumm v. Jefferson F. Ins. Co., 40 Ohio St. 225. See, however, Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Spiers (Ky.), 8 S. W. Rep. 453.

An insurance agent who, under an arrangement with another to exchange risks that either cannot place, forwards to him an application, on which the other, being a recording agent, issues a policy, occupies as to the company whose policy is issued the position of a soliciting agent under acts 18th Gen. Assem. Iowa, ch. 211, § 1, providing that anyone who shall solicit insurance, or procure applications therefor, granted;¹ and the particular circumstances of the parties transaction.²

2. Provisions of the Policy Respecting.—The provisions of the policy respecting his authority are, however, usually held to be binding;³ but as the cases cited show, where he is not so limited and is entrusted with the execution of policies, his acts in behalf of the company, even to the extent of changing the terms of the printed portion of the policy, are binding upon the company where they fall within the authority which he is held out as having.

shall be held the soliciting agent of the company issuing a policy on such application, and this though he did not actually solicit the application, but simply received it and asked for a policy upon it. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Shaver (Iowa), 41 N. W. Rep. 19. The company is bound by a contract made by the agent's chief clerk for repairing an insured house injured by fire. Hilton v. Newman, 6 Mo. App. 304.

In Dibble v. Northern Assur. Co. (Mich.), 37 N. W. Rep. 704, the plaintiff had for several years placed his insurance with defendant's agent, and had given him authority to keep his property insured in companies of the agent's selection, including authority to renew policies when necessary. On a verbal application by plaintiff for insurance on certain buildings defendant's agent placed the risks in the S. company, one of those which he represented. But this was cancelled by the company, when the agent at once wrote a policy in the defendant company and placed it in his safe for the plaintiff. He also entered it in his daily register, and reported it to the company, with the premium, at the same time notifying the plaintiff. After the evening of the second day after this, loss occurred, and it was held that the defendant was bound.

An agent is without authority, by giving an antedated receipt for premium, to revive a policy which was forfeited for the nonpayment of the premium. Diball v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 32 La. Ann. 179.

1. Southern L. Ins. Co. v. McCain, 96 U. S. 84.

The insured cannot be bound by secret instructions to the agent. U. S. Life Ins. Co. v. Advance Co., 80 Ill. 549; Alman v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 27 Iowa 203; Queens Ins. Co. v. Young (Ala.), 5 So. Rep. 116; Gloucester Mfg. Co. v. Howard F. Ins. Co., 5 Gray (Mass.) 497; Rivara v. Queens Ins. Co., 62 Miss. 720. But see Wilson v. N. F. Ins. Co., 140 Mass. 210.

The powers of the agent are prima facie co-extensive with the business entrusted to his care, and will not be narrowed by limitations not communicated to the persons with whom he deals. Lycoming Ins. Co. v. Schollerberger, 8 Wright (Pa.) 259; Bebee v. Hartford etc. F. Ins. Co., 25 Conn. 3; Davenport v. Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co., 17 Iowa 276; Beal v. Park F. Ins. Co., 16 Wis. 241; Equitable Assur. Co. v. Brobst, 18 Neb. 526.

An unrestricted authority to negotiate a contract of insurance by issuing a policy includes authority to make a valid preliminary contract for such issue. Humphry v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 35.

2. U. S. Life Ins. Co. v. Advance Co., 80 Ill. 549. The distance of the agent from the principal may have an important bearing, the ease of communication with the principal arguing for or against the authority claimed, according as it is difficult or otherwise. Eames v. Home Ins. Co., 94 U. S. 62; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkins, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 222.

3. Catoir v. American L. Ins. Co., 33 N. J. L. 487; Merserau v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 66 N. H. 274; Chase v. Hamilton Ins. Co., 20 N. Y. 52; Shawmut Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Stevens, 9 Allen (Mass.) 332; Loehr v. Home Mut. Ins. Co., 17 Mo. 2; Bleakley v. Niagara Dist. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 16 Gr. Ch. (U. C.) 198; Brown v. Am. F. & L. Ins. Co., 101 Mass. 2; Big F. & L. Ins. Rep. 150; Brown v. Mass. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 59 N. H. 2; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 205; Lycoming Ins. Co. v. Langley, 62 Md. 1; Gladding v. California Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co., 66 Cal. 6; Enos v. Sun Ins. Co., 67 Cal. 621.

But see Bartlett v. Fireman's F. Ins. Co. (Iowa), 41 N. W. Rep. 6; Miaghan v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., be justified by the usual mode of transacting such business within the scope of his employment, or the particular circumstances of the case.¹

Construction of Authority.—In the construction of the authorities, the policy of the law is to give a liberal interpretation in favor of their competency in the matter.²

General Agent.—An agent authorized to issue and renew policies to transact the business of the company in the particular, is a general agent;³ and possession of blank policies and receipt receipts is evidence of this.⁴ A general agent of an insurance company in a State is presumed to have authority to appoint sub-agents.⁵ Indeed, a general agent for a particular vicinity has been held to have this power.⁶

Notice to Agent.—Notice to a general agent is notice to the company.⁷ And this comprehends knowledge acquired of facts

(N. Y.) 58; Haight v. Continental Ins. Co., 92 N. Y. 51; McGurk v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. (Conn.), 16 Conn. 263; Carson v. Jersey City F. Ins. Co., 43 N. J. L. 300; s. c., 39 N. J. 584; American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Crea, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 513; Am. Rep. 647; Shafer v. F. Ins. Co., 53 Wis. 361; Ind. Ins. Co. v. Dehart, 108 Ind. 270. The charter of an insurance company provided that "if the premises insured, the policy shall be void, and the title of the assured and the insurance on the premises be extinguished," it was held that no agent of the company could bind it by such provision. Leonard v. F. Ins. Co., 97 Ind. 299.

A policy, for instance, procured without the consent of the company, and that the agent has no authority to modify its conditions, and that he procures additional insurance without the representation of the company, it will be all right, the company is not estopped to deny its liability, and the insured, through no fault of the company or its agent, had never been insured, and though the agent was acting in a certain way to conditionally insure, and had no authority in other cases, he not having authority in this case within the line of his authority, or in the manner prescribed by the policy. Cleaver v. F. Ins. Co. (Mich.), 39 N. W. 23. But notices on the back of a policy are not binding. McNeilly v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 23. It, however, Hartford F. Ins.

Co. v. Webster, 69 Ill. 392; Linford v. Provincial Horse & Cattle Ins. Co., 10 Jur. N. S. 1066.

It is also held that the agent may bind the company by a parol agreement to issue a policy. Angell v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 59 N. Y. 171; Boice v. Thames etc. Ins. Co., 38 Hun (N. Y.) 246. Or to renew. Baubie v. Aetna Ins. Co., 2 Dill. (U. S.) 156.

2. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 222.

3. Pitney v. Glens Falls Ins. Co., 65 N. Y. 6; Post v. Aetna Ins. Co., 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 351; Continental Ins. Co. v. Ruckman (Ill.), 20 N. E. Rep. 77.

Where a policy is written for and delivered to the insured by one whose name was endorsed upon the policy as agent, the policy containing no limitation upon the agent's authority, and no intimation being given to the insured of the existence of any restriction thereon, such agent is to be regarded as the general agent of the company so far as to bind it for any act by him done within the apparent range of his employment. Millville etc. M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' etc. Assoc., 43 N. J. L. 652.

4. Carroll v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 292; Continental Ins. Co. v. Ruckman (Ill.), 20 N. E. Rep. 77.

5. Kuney v. Amazon Ins. Co., 36 Hun (N. Y.) 66.

6. Krumm v. Jefferson F. Ins. Co., 40 Ohio St. 225.

7. Peck v. New London Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 22 Conn. 575; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 222; Deebold v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 33

after the execution of the policy, which, unless waived, would avoid it,¹ as well as of inaccuracies of statement by the applicant,² and of the existence of other facts prior to the execution

Fed. Rep. 807; New Eng. F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Schettler, 38 Ill. 166; Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Thoenes, 26 Ill. App. 495; North British etc. Ins. Co. v. Crutchfield, 108 Ind. 518; Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Hinesley, 75 Ind. 1; Bennett v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 15 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 234; Hamilton v. Home Ins. Co., 94 Mo. 353; Key v. Des Moines Ins. Co. (Iowa), 41 N. W. Rep. 614.

But not to a broker. Ben. Franklin Ins. Co. v. Weary, 4 Ill. App. 74; Kings Co. F. Ins. Co. v. Swigert, 11 Ill. App. 590; Arff v. Star F. Ins. Co., 2 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 188.

Canvassing or Soliciting Agent.—Notice to canvassing or soliciting agents of the company bind it. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co. v. Van Os, 63 Miss. 431; Heath v. Springfield F. Ins. Co., 58 N. H. 414; Hamilton v. Aurora F. Ins. Co., 15 Mo. App. 59; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Spiers (Ky.), 8 S. W. Rep. 453; Arff v. Star F. Ins. Co., 2 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 188; Shimp v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co., 26 Ill. App. 254.

Contra, American Ins. Co. v. Luttrell, 89 Ill. 314; Jordan v. State Ins. Co., 64 Iowa 216; Donnelly v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co., 70 Iowa 693; Mullin v. Vermont Mut. F. Ins. Co., 58 Vt. 113.

Agent of Mutual Company.—Notice to the agent of a mutual company binds his principal. Redstrake v. Cumberland Mut. F. Ins. Co., 44 N. J. L. 294.

Miscellaneous Agents.—In Iowa it is held that notice to the agent's clerk is the same as notice to the agent. Bennett v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 70 Iowa 600.

So in Kentucky it is held that a local agent of a company in a distant state, who solicits insurance, takes the application, receives the premium and delivers the policy, is to be regarded as the agent of the company for the purpose of receiving notice of an additional insurance, no particular notice being required in the policy. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Spiers (Ky.), 8 S. W. Rep. 453. The same case, however, holds that conversations with a subagent, appointed without the knowledge or authority of the company, are not admissible in evidence against it.

Where a party is specially referred to a clerk by the secretary, notice to him respecting the matter referred to notice to the company. Clapp v. Mass. Ben. Assoc., 146 Mass. 519.

1. Manhattan Fire Ins. Co. v. Weill, 29 Gratt (Va.) 389; Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Hall, 12 Mich. 20; Mobile etc. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 58 G. 420; Peck v. New London etc. Ins. Co., 22 Conn. 575; McGurk v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. (Conn.), 16 Atl. Rep. 263.

Where an agent has knowledge of other insurance, in violation of the terms of the policy, and does not cancel it, the company is estopped from claiming a forfeiture on that account. Hamilton v. Home Ins. Co., 94 Mo. 353.

See also cases cited, infra, this title. WAIVER AND ESTOPPEL.

2. Peck v. New London etc. Ins. Co., 22 Conn. 575; Marshall v. Columbia Mut. Ins. Co., 7 Post (N. H.) 15; Hadlay v. N. H. Fire Ins. Co., 55 N. H. 110; Clark v. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co., 40 N. H. 333; Patten v. Merchants' etc. Ins. Co., 40 N. H. 375; Campbell v. Merchants' etc. Ins. Co., 37 N. H. 35; Hartford Pr. Ins. Co. v. Harmer, 2 Ohio St. 4; Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Williams, 39 Ohio St. 584; Miller v. Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co., 31 Iowa 216; Eggleston v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 65 Iowa 308; Stone v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 68 Iowa 70; Key v. Des Moines Ins. Co. (Iowa), 41 N. W. Rep. 614; Ayers v. Home Ins. Co., 21 Iowa 185; Poughkeepsie Sav. Bank v. Manhattan F. Ins. Co., 30 Hun (N. Y.) 473; Hodgkins v. Montgomery Co. Mut. Ins. Co., Barb. (N. Y.) 213; Plumb v. Cataraugus Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 18 N. Y. 3; Pechner v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 65 N. Y. 195; Cone v. Niagara Falls Ins. Co., 60 N. Y. 619; Mowry v. Rosendin, 74 N. Y. 360; O'Brien v. Home B. Soc., 4 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 275; Pitt v. Glens Falls Ins. Co., 65 N. Y. 1; Flynn v. Equitable Life Ins. Co., N. Y. 568; Landers v. Watertown Fire Ins. Co., 19 Hun (N. Y.) 1; Howard F. Ins. Co. v. Bruner, 23 St. 50; Commercial Union Ass'n v. Elliott (Pa.), 13 Atl. Rep. 970; Sw. v. Watertown F. Ins. Co., 96 Pa. 37; Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Cusick, 109 Pa. St. 157; Farm Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 73 Pa.

 Kelley v. Troy F. Ins. Co.,
 1; Winans v. Allemanie
 Co., 38 Wis. 342; Dunbar v.
 Ins. Co. (Wis.), 40 N. W.
 Dodge Co. Mut. Ins. Co. v.
 Wis. 337; Baker v. Ohio
 Ins. Co. (Mich.), 38 N. W.
 North American Fire Ins.
 Co., 22 Mich. 146; McGraw
 v. F. Ins. Co., 54 (Mich.)
 Sink v. Metropolitan L.
 (Mich.), 40 N. W. Rep. 469;
 F. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 62
 American Ins. Co. v. Luttrell, Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Tucker, Germania Fire Ins. Co. v.
 17 N. E. Rep. 792; Germania
 v. McKee, 94 Ill. 494; Phœ-
 v. Allen, 109 Ind. 273;
 Mut. Ins. Co. v. Deford, 38 planters' Ins. Co. v. Sorrells, enn.) 352; Williamson v.
 Ins. Co. (Ala.), 4 So.
 Hayward v. National Ins.
 181; Continental Ins. Co.
 39 Kan. 396; American
 Co. v. M'Lanathan, 11
 Sullivan v. Phoenix Ins.
 ann. 170; Nat. Mut. F. Ins.
 nes (Kan.), 21 Pac. Rep.
 n v. Ottawa Agr. Ins. Co.,
 (Q. B.) 282; Hartford Fire
 Haas (Ky.), 9 S. W. Rep.
 ack v. Phoenix Ins. Co.
 ep. 218; Menk v. Home Mut.
 (Cal.), 18 Pac. Rep. 117;
 v. North British etc. Ins.
 18 Pac. Rep. 758; Geib v.
 Ins. Co., 1 Dill. (U. S.)
 s v. Home Ins. Co., 94
 Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v.
 13 Wall. (U. S.) 222;
 Ins. Co. v. Mahone, 21
 S.) 152; Langdon v. Union
 Ins. Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 272; Phoenix Ins. Co., 33 Fed.
 Schwarzbach v. Ohio Val.
 n, 25 W. Va. 622; Deitz v.
 Washington Ins. Co. (W.
 E. Rep. 616; Ring v. Wind-
 c. Ins. Co., 51 Vt. 563. See cited under heading of and Estoppel, this article.
 Rowley v. Empire Ins. Co.,
 550; Kennedy v. St. Law-Mut. Ins. Co., 10 Barb. (N. nings v. Chenango Co. Mut.
 2 Den. (N. Y.) 75; Perry
 Co. v. Stewart, 19 Pa. St. 45;
 v. Atlantic F. Ins. Co., 42
 Michael v. Mut. Ins. Co., 10
 737; Beal v. Park F. Ins.

Co., 16 Wis. 241; Roth v. City Ins.
 Co., 6 McLean (U. S.) 324; Davis v.
 Scottish Prov. Ins. Co., 16 U. C. (C.
 P.) 176; N. Y. Life Ins. Co. v.
 Fletcher, 117 U. S. 519.

In most of these cases the fact was that the inaccuracy of statement occurred in the application, which, though signed by the applicant, was prepared by the agent of the company; and one of the principal points contended for by the companies has been that to receive parol evidence of this, and that a statement made is rather the statement of the agent than the applicant, would be to violate the rule which excludes evidence to vary or contradict the terms of a written contract. Upon this point The Union Mut. L. Ins. Co.
 v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 222, is one of the leading cases. JUSTICE MIL-LER, delivering the opinion, says:
 "The great value of the rule here invoked cannot be easily overestimated.
 As a means of protecting those who are honest, accurate and prudent in making their contracts, against fraud and false swearing, against carelessness and inaccuracy, by furnishing evidence of what was intended by the parties, which can always be produced without fear of change or liability of misconstruction, the rule merits the eulogies it has received. But experience has shown that in reference to these very matters the rule is not perfect. The written instrument does not always represent the intention of both parties, and sometimes it fails to do so as to either; and where this has been the result of accident or mistake, or fraud, the principle has been long recognized that under proper circumstances, and in an appropriate proceeding, the instrument may be set aside or reformed, as best suits the purposes of justice.
 A rule of evidence adopted by the courts as a protection against fraud and false swearing would, as was said in regard to the analogous rule known as the Statute of Frauds, become the instrument of the very fraud it was intended to prevent, if there did not exist some authority to correct the universality of its application. It is upon this principle that courts of equity proceed in giving the relief just indicated; and though the courts in a common law action may be more circumscribed in the freedom with which they enquire into the origin of written agreements, such an enquiry is not always forbidden by the mere fact that the party's name has been signed to the writing offered in evidence against him.

"In the case before us a paper is offered in evidence against the plaintiff containing a representation concerning a matter material to the contract on which the suit is brought, and it is not denied that he signed the instrument and that the representation is untrue. But the parol testimony makes it clear beyond a question that this party did not intend to make that representation when he signed the paper, and did not know he was doing so, and in fact had refused to make any statements on that subject. If the writing containing this representation had been prepared and signed by the plaintiff in his application for a policy of insurance on the life of his wife, and if the representation complained of had been inserted by himself, or by someone who was his agent alone in the matter, and forwarded to the principal office of the defendant corporation, and acted upon as true by the officers of the company, it is easy to see that justice would authorize them to hold him to the truth of the statement, and that as they had no part in the mistake which he made, or in the making of the instrument which did not truly represent what he intended, he should not, after the event, be permitted to show his own mistake or carelessness to the prejudice of the corporation.

"If however, we suppose the party making the insurance to have been an individual, and to have been present when the application was signed, and soliciting the assured to make the contract of insurance, and that the insurer himself wrote out all these representations, and was told by the plaintiff and his wife that they knew nothing at all of this particular subject of enquiry, and that they refused to make any statement about it, and yet knowing all this, wrote the representation to suit himself, it is equally clear that for the insurer to insist that the policy is void because it contains this statement, would be an act of bad faith and of the grossest injustice and dishonesty. And the reason for this is that the representation was not the statement of the plaintiff, and that the defendant knew it was not when he made the contract; and that it was made by the defendant, who procured the plaintiff's signature thereto.

"It is in precisely such cases as this that courts of law in modern times have introduced the doctrine of equitable estoppels, or, as it is sometimes called, estoppels in pais. The principle is, that where one party has by his representations or his conduct induced another party to a transaction to give him an advantage which it would be against equity and good conscience for him to assert, he would not in a court of justice be permitted to avail himself of that advantage. And although the cases to which this principle is to be applied are not as well defined as could be wished, the general doctrine is well understood and is applied by courts of law as well as equity, where the technical advantage thus obtained is set aside and relied on to defeat the ends of justice or establish a dishonest claim.

"It has been applied to the present class of cases of the one before us in numerous well considered judgments. Indeed, the doctrine is so well understood and so often enforced that, if in the transaction we are now considering Ball, the insurance agent, who made the application, had been in fact the underwriter of the policy, no one would doubt its applicability to the present case. Yet the proposition admits of little doubt that if Ball was the agent of the insurance company and not of the plaintiff, in what he did in filling up the application, the company must be held to stand just as he would if he were principal.

"Although the very well considered brief of counsel for plaintiff in error takes no issue on this point, it is obvious that the soundness of the court's instructions must be tested mainly by answer to be given to the question, 'Whose agent was Ball in filling up the application?'

"This question has been decided differently by courts of the highest respectability in cases precisely analogous to the present. It is not to be denied that the application, logically considered, is the work of the assured and if left to himself or to such assistance as he might select, the person selected would be his agent, and alone would be responsible. On the other hand, it is well known, so well that no court would be justified in shutting its eyes to it, that insurance companies organized under the laws of a State, and having in that State their principal business office, send their agents all over the land, with directions to solicit and procure applications frnishing them with printed in favor of the value and life insurance, and of the advantages of the corporation agent represents. They pay large commissions on the policy obtained, and the policy is delivered at their hands to the agents who are stimulated by instructions to activity in contracts, and the party who is induced to take out a policy sees or knows anything of the company or its officers by the agent issued, but looks to and trusts the agent who has permitted to effect insurance as the complete representative of the company, all that is said or done in connection with the contract. Has he not a right to regard him? It is quite true that the reports of judicial decisions with the efforts of these companies and their counsel, to establish the right that they can do all this and shift their responsibility for the acts of their agents to the simple receipt of premium and delivery of the policy, the argument being that, as the agent is assured, this proposition has support in some of the decisions on the subject; and, at times when insurance companies are parties to come to them to receive, or to forward applications on their own motion, the doctrine is a reasonable foundation to rest upon to apply such a doctrine, in fact, to the system of selling through agents, which we have seen to be a snare and a delusion, as it has done in numerous cases, to the grossest frauds, of insurance corporations renegeing, and the parties supposing themselves insured are the victims. The tendency of the modern system in this country is steadily in this direction. The powers of the agent, prima facie, co-extensive with the business entrusted to his care, cannot be narrowed by limitations imputed to the person with whom the business is dealt. An insurance company, in establishing a local agency, must be responsible to the parties with whom it transacts business for the declarations of the agent, and the scope of his employment, as determined by the principal. The fifth edition of American Insurance, 917, after a full consideration of the authorities, it is said: 'By the interested or officious zeal of the agents employed by the insurance companies in the wish to outbid each other and procure customers, they not unfrequently mislead the insured by a false or erroneous statement of what the application should contain; or, taking the preparation of it into their own hands, procure his signature by an assurance that it is properly drawn and will meet the requirements of the policy. The better opinion seems to be that, when this course is pursued, the description of the risk should, though nominally proceeding from the insured, be regarded as the act of the insurers.' (Rowley v. Empire Ins. Co., 36 N. Y. 550.)

"The modern decisions fully sustain this proposition, and they seem to us founded in reason and justice, and meet our entire approval. This principle does not admit oral testimony to vary or contradict that which is in writing, but it goes upon the idea that the writing offered in evidence was not the instrument of the party whose name is signed to it; that it was procured under such circumstances by the other side as estops that side from using it or relying on its contents; not that it may be contradicted by oral testimony, but that it may be shown by such testimony that it cannot be lawfully used against the party whose name is signed to it."

The courts of Massachusetts, and a few others, have held contrary to this case, even under extreme circumstances, their view being that to receive evidence that a statement is not of the person that it purports to be would violate the rule indicated. See Lee v. Howard F. Ins. Co., 3 Gray (Mass.) 583; Barrett v. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co., 7 Cush. (Mass.) 175; Kibbe v. Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co., 11 Gray (Mass.) 163; Holmes v. Charlestown Mut. F. Ins. Co., 10 Met. (Mass.) 211; Barrett v. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co., 7 Cush. (Mass.) 175; Abbott v. Shawmut Mut. F. Ins. Co., 3 Allen (Mass.) 213; McCoy v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 133 Mass. 82; Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Martin (N. J.), 8 Ins. L. J. 134; Smith v. Cash etc. F. Ins. Co., 24 Pa. St. 320; Protection Ins. Co. v. Hall, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 411. And in Pennsylvania it is held that where an agent of an insurance company examines and inspects the building on which insurance is sought, and afterwards fills up of the policy, the omission to state which would otherwise vitiate it.¹

This knowledge may come to the agent at any time, even while not acting in the principal's business, or in such capacity, and it will be binding if present to his mind at the time of the transaction.²

Of course, if fraud be perpetrated by the collusion of the agent and applicant, the latter has no remedy on the contract thus procured.³ And it has been held, too, that the knowledge of the application, which he reads and explains to the owner, who signs it, the agent is to be regarded, as to the application, as the agent of the owner and not of the company, and hence that the company may set up, by way of defence to a suit on the policy, the falsehood of statements in the application as to the condition and use of the building. Pottsville Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Fromm, 100 Pa. St. 347. See also Ala. Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Garner, 77 Ala. 210; Cuthbertson v. N. Car. Home Ins. Co., 96 N. Car. 480.

Where an agent of the insurer had cheated the insured into signing the warranty and paying the premium, and the policy was issued upon the false statements of the agent himself, held that the insured might prove the fact, and hold the principal to the contract as if he had committed the wrong. Eilenberger v. Protective Mut. F. Ins. Co., 89 Pa. St. 464; Rivara v. Queens Ins. Co., 62 Miss. 720. See also Swan v. Watertown F. Ins. Co., 96 Pa. St. 37, where it is further held that the insured should make the false statements known within a reasonable time after discovering them.

Medical Examiner, Agent.—The medical examiner is to be treated as the agent of the company for the purpose of reporting the answers of the applicant. Grattan v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 80 N. Y. 281; Grattan v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 92 N. Y. 274; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 372.

1. People's Ins. Co. v. Spencer, 53 Pa. St. 353; Cumberland etc. Ins. Co. v. Schell, 29 Pa. St. 31; Beal v. Park F. Ins. Co., 16 Wis. 241; Kelley v. Troy F. Ins. Co., 3 Wis. 254; May v. Buckeye Mut. Ins. Co., 25 Wis. 291; Plumb v. Cattaraugus Mut. Ins. Co., 18 N. Y. 392; Ames v. N. Y. Union Ins. Co., 14 N. Y. 253; Liddle v. Market F. Ins. Co., 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 179; Woodward v. Republic F. Ins. Co., 32 Hun (N. Y.) 365; Brothers v. California Ins.

Co., 3 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 89; Houghton City F. Ins. Co., 29 Conn. 10; Jordan State Ins. Co., 64 Iowa 216; Keenan Mo. etc. Ins. Co., 12 Iowa 126; Conover v. Hannibal etc. Ins. Co., 43 Mo. 1; Breckinridge v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 87 Mo. 62; Commercial Ins. Co. v. Ives, 56 Ill. 402; German F. Ins. Co. v. Carrow, 21 Ill. App. 631; Ashford v. Victoria Mut. Ins. Co., 20 U. C. (Ct.) 434; Campbell v. Merchants etc. Ins. Co., 37 N. H. 35; Rivara v. Queens Ins. Co., 62 Miss. 720; Liverpool Ins. Co. v. Ende, 65 Tex. 118.

Notice of other insurance is notice to the company. Fishbeck v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 54 Cal. 422; Combs v. Shrewsbury Mut. F. Ins. Co., 34 N. J. Eq. 42; Brandup v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 27 Minn. 393; Redstrake v. Cumberland Mut. F. Ins. Co., 44 N. J. L. 1; Rivara v. Queens Ins. Co., 62 Mo. 720; Goldwater v. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co., 39 Hun (N. Y.) 176; Kitchener v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 57 Mich. 1; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Spiers (Ky.), 1 W. Rep. 453; Baile v. St. Joseph L. Ins. Co., 73 Mo. 371.

Where the policy provides that no notice of additional insurance, or of change in existing insurance, shall be given to the company by the insured in writing, and be acknowledged in writing by the secretary, the mere knowledge of the company's agent, as to subsequent insurance, or change in existing insurance, is not such notice as the company as will bind it. Commonwealth Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Huntzinger, 98 Pa. St. 41. See also Stennett v. Penn. F. Ins. Co., 68 Iowa 674. Combs v. Redstrake v. Cumberland Mut. F. Ins. Co., 44 N. J. L. 294. See also cited under heading WAIVER AND FORFEITURE, this article.

2. Shafer v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 1 Wis. 361.

3. Ryan v. World Mut. L. Ins. Co., 41 Conn. 168; Smith v. Cash Mut. Ins. Co., 24 Pa. St. 320. And see to make it chargeable to the company, must at any rate be made not earlier than the negotiations; that notice acquired at such time is not binding.¹

Agent only having authority to receive applications and issue certificates of insurance subject to approval of the company, cannot bind the same by the receipt of notice or of a policy obtained outside of such sphere of action;² nor by a policy not approved;³ nor by an assignment, when the blank policy shows that the consent of an officer of the company is required;⁴ nor by receiving notice and fixing the additional premium under a provision that in case the premises shall be vacated, the policy shall be void, unless immediate notice be given to the company and an additional premium paid.⁵ Nor by a promise to deliver up the premium note on the delivering up and cancellation of the policy.⁶ Indeed it has been held that where the agent is not a special one, it is the duty of the applicant to inform himself of the actual authority which he possesses.⁷

Representations of Agent.—Representations of the agent, even if made in good faith, are not binding on the company, unless the sufficiency of the description or statements in the application is shown.⁸

Am. Life Ins. Co., 5 Big. L. & C. 18.

Boys v. American Ins. Co., 30

Ch. v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins.

Ohio St. 287; Mitchell v. Ly-

mut. Ins. Co., 51 Pa. St. 402;

Mechanics' etc. Ins. Co., 83

8. Contra, Sexton v. Mont-go. Mut. Ins. Co., 9 Barb. (N.

McEwen v. Montgomery

Ins. Co., 5 Hill (N. Y.) 101;

v. Mercer Co. Mut. Ins. Co.,

(N. J.) 447.

See v. St. Paul's F. & M. Ins.

inn. 407; New York etc. Ins.

Johnson, 23 Pa. St. 72; Arm-

State Ins. Co., 61 Iowa 212.

Agent merely authorized to redications cannot accept them.

v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 33 La.

ingham v. St. Nicholas Ins.

eyes (N. Y.) 280. See, however, Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 31 St. 342.

Johnson v. City F. Ins. Co., 9

Mass. 231.

Bluehead Mut. F. Ins. Co. v.

Wood, 3 Gray (Mass.) 210.

Table L. Ins. Co. v. Poe

Ins. L. J. 871.

When the agent is authorized to issues, he cannot waive a forfeiture. Tate v. Citizens' Mut. Ins.

Co. (Mass.) 79; Phoenix Ins.

Co. v. Lawrence, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 9;

Bartholomew v. Merchants' Ins. Co.,

25 Iowa 507. Or the requirements of the policy as to proofs of loss. Mer-serau v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 274;

Van Allen v. Farmers' etc. Ins. Co.,

64 N. Y. 469; Bush v. Westchester

Ins. Co., 63 N. Y. 531.

8. Boehen v. Williamsburg etc. Ins.

Co., 35 N. Y. 131; Columbia Ins. Co. v.

Cooper, 50 Pa. St. 331; Keeler v.

Niagara Ins. Co., 16 Wis. 523; May v.

Buckeye Mut. Ins. Co., 25 Wis. 291;

Franklin v. Atl. F. Ins. Co., 42 Mo.

456; American Ins. Co. v. Neiberger,

74 Mo. 167; Viele v. Germania Ins. Co.,

26 Iowa 9; Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v.

Hall, 12 Mich. 202; Mut. Ben. L. Ins.

Co. v. Daviess' Exr. (Ky.), 9 S. W.

Rep. 812; Deitz v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. (W. Va.), 8 S. E. Rep.

616.

Telling the applicant that it is not necessary that he should state a sunstroke, Boos v. World Mut. L. Ins.

Co., 64 N. Y. 236, or that he occasionally had swimming in the head,

Mut. Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Daviess' Exr.

(Ky.), 9 S. W. Rep. 812; or that purchase money due from a party holding a bond for a deed, or that a judgment and lease do not constitute encum-brances, Columbian Ins. Co. v. Cooper, 50 Pa. St. 331; Key v. Des Moines

Ins. Co. (Iowa), 41 N. W. Rep. 614; or that an accidental omission makes and the binding force or scope of the policy,¹ unless the power to the knowledge of the insured,² are binding upon the company.³ Even agents merely authorized to no difference, F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Chesnut, 50 Ill. 111, estops the company from taking any advantage of omissions in those regards.

It does not matter that the agent represents a mutual company. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Cooper, 50 Pa. St. 331; Devendorf v. Beardsley, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 656; Combs v. Shrewsbury Mut. F. Ins. Co., 34 N. J. Eq. 403. See, however, Evans v. Trimountain Mut. F. Ins. Co., 9 Allen (Mass.) 329; Baxter v. Chelsea Mut. F. Ins. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 294; Priest v. Citizens' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 3 Allen (Mass.) 602; Smith v. Haverhill Mut. F. Ins. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 297; Hale v. Mechanics' Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 169; Brewer v. Chelsea Mut. F. Ins. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 293; Belleville Mut. Ins. Co. v. Van Winkle, 1 Beas. (N. J.) 333; Hackney v. Alleghany Mut. Ins. Co., 4 Barr. (Pa.) 185; Smith v. Cash Mut. F. Ins. Co., 24 Pa. St. 320.

Where a policy was issued upon a dwelling occupied by a tenant, and the agent assured the owner that it would not matter if the premises should become vacant; but the policy contained a clause to the effect that, if the building should become vacant at any time, the policy should become void; and the agent kept the policy in his possession until after a loss, which occurred when the building was unoccupied. The owner having no knowledge of the existence of such a clause, it was held that the insured had a right to suppose that the policy would conform to the contract as he made it with the agent, and that the company, having failed to notify the insured of the change, so that he might either repudiate or ratify it was bound by the contract as made with the agent. St. Paul F. etc. Ins. Co. v. Wells, 89 Ill. 82.

Where the agent of a mutual company was notified of other insurance, and he subsequently told the insured that his insurance was all right, it was held to be binding on the company. Combs v. Shrewsbury Mut. F. Ins. Co., 34 N. J. Eq. 403.

The company is liable for any material and injurious statements of the agent, in the course of his employment, concerning the condition and standing of the company. Fogg v. Gray, 1 Allen (Mass.) 1; Devendorf v. E. E. E. Ins. Co., 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 656; Johnson v. Dana, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 395; Berger v. Protection Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Pa. St. 464; New York L. Ins. Co. v. McGowan, 18 Kan. 300; American Ins. Co. v. Capps, 4 Mo. App. 571; Devendorf v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 4 Ins. L. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. M. 29 Vt. 23. And the insured may introduce this defence in a suit for the premium money. Sunbury F. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 100 Pa. St. 495.

The company is not liable for an agent's statements concerning the company within which it operates. Hale v. Alleghany Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 14 Pa. St. 185.

The agent cannot bind the company by a promise that the insured should be required to pay assessments on premium notes, otherwise assessed. Keller v. Equitable F. Ins. Co., 21 Pa. St. 170. But compare Michigan L. Ins. Co. v. Beaver, 26 Ill. App. 349. by representations as to the amount of profits to be realized from an element policy. Hale v. Continental Ins. Co., 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 51. the merits of the plan. Simons v. New York L. Ins. Co., 38 Hun (N. Y.) 309.

1. Manhattan Ins. Co. v. W. W. Smith, 9 P. F. Smith (Pa.) 227; Ansley v. Winnishiek Ins. Co., 23 Iowa 81; Peoria F. Ins. Co. v. Eddy, 55 Ill. 51; Keith v. Globe Ins. Co., 52 Ill. 51.

But see Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Hall, 12 Mich. 202.

He may bind the company by a statement of the construction of the policy as to when the premium is payable. Campbell v. International L. Society, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 298.

He may orally extend the time for the subsequent to its execution, to provide for not originally covered, but of the same character. Kennebec Co. v. A. A. Ins. etc. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 204.

He may correct errors after the fact. Warnen v. Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co., 38 Wis. 318.

2. Shawmut Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Stevens, 9 Allen (Mass.) 332; Chambers v. Hamilton Ins. Co., 20 N. Y. 52.

3. Woodbury Savings Bank v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 31 Conn.

ward applications may bind the company by suggestions as description or otherwise within such limits.¹ They can never, bind the company by a statement as to the time y attached.² company is not liable to the insured for false representa- the agent concerning the validity of the policy by which red is induced to settle a loss for less than his claim.³ gent who knowingly makes false representations to the concerning the insurance is liable for the damages result-

Mistakes and Omissions of Agent.—Likewise the mistakes and s of the agent in preparing the description, or otherwise, ed as those of the company.⁵

Waiver of Terms of Policy.—Unless forbidden by the express the policy or otherwise to the knowledge of the insured, acting within the scope of his employment may waive ns of the policy,⁶ Hartford F. Ins. Co., 17 Iowa vitz v. Equitable Ins. Co., 40 Howard Ins. Co. v. Bruner, Pa.) 50; Union Mut. L. Ins. e, 110 Ill. 35.

agent has no implied power e company by his representa- ecting the purchase of the f a local agency, such as right of the local agent y the good will thereof to sell s should relinquish his agency, s been and would be recog- rber v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. d. Rep. 312.

s v. Hannibal etc. Ins. Co., s. ton v. Fireman's Ins. Co., n. 577; s. c., 39 Am. Rep.

pson v. Phœnix Ins. Co., s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 357. en v. Griffin, 136 Mass. 229; m. Rep. 25.

insurance agent procured, at his ation, for A a policy upon g. The policy contained a hibiing the keeping of pe n the premises, and providing s should be done the policy void. A called the attention nt to this clause, and told him s obliged to keep a little pe n the premises. The agent his would make no difference; more than a barrel was kept ver taken notice of. The was burned and A was de- suit on the policy by reason kept petroleum on the premises: Held, that he could maintain an action against the agent for the misrep- resentation. Kroeger v. Pitcairn, 101 Pa. St. 311; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 718.

5. Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Wright, 22 Ill. 462; New Eng. F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Schettler, 38 Ill. 166; Campbell v. International L. Assur. Soc., 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 298; Plumb v. Cattaraugus Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 18 N. Y. 392; O'Brien v. Home Ben. Soc., 4 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 275; Howard Ins. Co. v. Bruner, 23 Pa. St. 50; Meadowcraft v. Standard F. Ins. Co., 61 Pa. St. 91; Nassauer v. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co., 109 Pa. St. 507; Dayton Union Ins. Co. v. McGookey, 33 Ohio St. 555; Ayers v. Home Ins. Co., 21 Iowa 185; Ætna Live Stock etc. Ins. Co. v. Olmstead, 21 Mich. 246; Emery v. Piscataqua F. & M. Ins. Co., 52 Me. 322.

6. Silverberg v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 67 Cal. 36; Mattocks v. Des Moines Ins. Co. (Iowa), 37 N. W. Rep. 174; Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Brown, 123 Ill. 356. But see Kyte v. Commercial Union Assur. Co., 144 Mass. 43, where it was held that a local agent, with authority to receive premiums and issue policies, has no authority, as such, to waive the condition of a policy requiring assent of the company to any change in the situation or circumstances affecting the risk. See also Queens Ins. Co. v. Young (Ala.), 5 So. Rep. 116, to the same effect.

Evidence that the insured's claim was placed in the hands of the company's agent for adjustment raises the presumption that he had authority to make as those regarding payment;¹ change of residence;² tit certain demands, in the course of the adjustment, which constituted a waiver of a condition in the policy. Brown v. State Ins. Co. (Iowa), 38 N. W. Rep. 135.

Where the by-laws of an insurance company provide that there shall be no waiver of the terms of the policy without the concurrence of the secretary endorsed or specifically acknowledged, if the secretary signs orders for payment, on the adjustment of the loss, it is a conclusive waiver in writing, if he knew all the facts. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Gargett, 42 Mich. 289. And in McGurk v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. (Conn.), 16 Atl. Rep. 263, it was held that the company was affected by knowledge of the agent of a violation of the terms of the policy, and that by afterwards collecting premiums on the policy the forfeiture was waived, though the policy expressly stated that agents had no authority to waive forfeitures.

A clause in the blank policies that "it is fully understood and made a part of this contract that the agent of this company has no authority to waive, modify or strike from this policy any of its printed conditions," is not a limitation on the powers of the agent to make a contract of insurance, but only on his powers to waive the conditions contained in the executed policy, and the delivery of a policy containing such clause cannot be set up as notice to the insured of the agent's limited powers, especially where the agreement to insure was made the day before the policy was issued, and when the insured had no notice that the blank policies contained any such clause. Continental Ins. Co. v. Ruckman (Ill.), 20 N. E. Rep. 77.

C, the commissioned agent of an insurance company, employed H to assist in obtaining risks, making surveys, collecting premiums, and delivering policies. C gave H, therefore, part of the earnings, accepted H's acts, and adopted his judgment. Held, that H had power to bind the company and waive the conditions of a policy delivered by himself. Davis v. Lamar Ins. Co., 18 Hun (N. Y.) 230.

Showing that the company has sanctioned a similar waiver of the agent in the past, does not establish a custom to such effect. Clevenger v. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 2 Dak. 114.

Rev. Stat. Maine, ch. 49, §§ 21, providing that the agents of insurance companies shall be regarded as in place of the company in all respects regarding any insurance effected by them, and that all provisions in any policy conflict with such statute shall be null and void, a provision of a policy that no act of any agent of the company other than the secretary or president shall be held to be a waiver of a strict compliance with all conditions of the policy, is void. Day v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. (Me.), 16 Atl. R. 894.

See further cases cited, infra, under title, WAIVER AND ESTOPPEL.

1. Bodine v. Exchange F. Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. 117; Dilliber v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 76 N. Y. 567; Marvin v. St. Louis F. Ins. Co., 68 N. Y. 61; Sheldon v. Atl. F. Ins. Co., 26 N. Y. 460; N. Y. Cent. Ins. Co. v. Nat. F. Ins. Co., 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 468; Gottschalk v. Nat. etc. Ins. Co., 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 11; Southern L. Ins. Co. v. Booker Heisk. (Tenn.) 607; Hallock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 21; Ball & Sage Wagon Co. v. Aurora & M. Ins. Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 232.

But it was held in Marvin v. Universal L. Ins. Co., 85 N. Y. 278, that where a policy provides for forfeiture in case of nonpayment of premium at the stipulated time, and that no alteration or waiver of any condition shall be valid "unless made at the head office and signed by an officer of the company," an oral extension of the time of payment, by a general agent, at another place, is invalid.

So in Willcuts v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., 81 Ind. 300, it was held that a mere local agent of an insurance company cannot waive a condition of the policy that the premium shall be paid in money.

See also Brown v. Mass. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 59 N. H. 298; s. c., 47 N. H. Rep. 205.

2. Wing v. Harvey, 27 Eng. L. & Eq. 141; Hodsdon v. Guard L. Ins. Co., 97 Mass. 144; Gloucester Manuf. Co. v. Howard F. Ins. Co., 5 Gray (Mass.) 497; North Berwick Co. v. New F. & M. Ins. Co., 52 Me. 336; Mine Phœnix Ins. Co., 27 Wis. 693; Wells v. Ætna L. Ins. Co., 30 Iowa 114. But see Acie v. Fernie, 2 Mees. & Wels. 151.

insured;¹ assignment;² proofs of loss;³ alteration of the property insured;⁴ other insurance;⁵ counting;⁶ repairs and vacancy;⁷ and limitations of action.⁸ He may stipulate with regard to occupancy,⁹ and may give permission to remove property insured to another location; to change the title;¹¹ mortgage it;¹² or procure other insurance.¹³ But a mere soliciting agent cannot bind the company without assent to an assignment of a policy or otherwise beyond the scope of his employment.¹⁴

Authority of Agent with Regard to Premiums.—An insurance agent, in the absence of any other knowledge, is presumed to be authorized to receive premiums in any usual mode, and to make any necessary arrangement with regard thereto. He may receive premiums;¹⁵ depreciated funds;¹⁶ or the credit of the insured, be responsible for the premium himself;¹⁷

See Ins. Co. v. Duke, 84 Ind. 101; Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. Kinnier, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 88; Wheeler v. Watertown F. Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 1. 8. Brady v. Western Assur. Co., 17 U. C. (C. P.) 597. 9. Continental Ins. Co. v. Ruckman (Ill.), 20 N. E. Rep. 77. 10. New Eng. F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Schettler, 33 Ill. 166. 11. Ill. Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Stanton, 57 Ill. 354. 12. Mattocks v. Des Moines Ins. Co. (Iowa), 37 N. W. Rep. 174. 13. Schoener v. Hekla F. Ins. Co., 10 Ins. L. J. 306; Mattocks v. Des Moines Ins. Co. (Iowa), 37 N. W. Rep. 174. This last case decides that the consent need not be on the policy, though it be required to be in writing. But not against a provision in the by-laws of a mutual company. Behler v. German Mut. F. Ins. Co., 68 Ind. 347. 14. Strickland v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 66 Iowa 466. 15. Tayloe v. Merchants' F. Ins. Co., 9 How. (U. S.) 390. 16. Confederate notes. Robinson v. International L. Assur. Soc., 42 N. Y. 54. 17. Sheldon v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 25 Conn. 207; Bouton v. Am. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 25 Conn. 542; Angell v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 59 N. Y. 171; Post v. Aetna Ins. Co., 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 351; Winne v. Niagara F. Ins. Co., 91 N. Y. 185; Gerlach v. Amazon Ins. Co. (Ct.), 4 Ins. L. J. 239; Miss. L. Ins. Co. v. Myland, 9 Bush (Ky.) 431; Home Ins. Co. v. Curtis, 32 Mich. 402; Agricultural Ins. Co. v. Montague, 33 Mich. 548; Chickering v. Globe Mut.

See Ins. Co. v. Duke, 84 Ind. 101; Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. Kinnier, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 88; Wheeler v. Watertown F. Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 1. 8. Brady v. Western Assur. Co., 17 U. C. (C. P.) 597. 9. Continental Ins. Co. v. Ruckman (Ill.), 20 N. E. Rep. 77. 10. New Eng. F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Schettler, 33 Ill. 166. 11. Ill. Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Stanton, 57 Ill. 354. 12. Mattocks v. Des Moines Ins. Co. (Iowa), 37 N. W. Rep. 174. 13. Schoener v. Hekla F. Ins. Co., 10 Ins. L. J. 306; Mattocks v. Des Moines Ins. Co. (Iowa), 37 N. W. Rep. 174. This last case decides that the consent need not be on the policy, though it be required to be in writing. But not against a provision in the by-laws of a mutual company. Behler v. German Mut. F. Ins. Co., 68 Ind. 347. 14. Strickland v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 66 Iowa 466. 15. Tayloe v. Merchants' F. Ins. Co., 9 How. (U. S.) 390. 16. Confederate notes. Robinson v. International L. Assur. Soc., 42 N. Y. 54. 17. Sheldon v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 25 Conn. 207; Bouton v. Am. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 25 Conn. 542; Angell v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 59 N. Y. 171; Post v. Aetna Ins. Co., 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 351; Winne v. Niagara F. Ins. Co., 91 N. Y. 185; Gerlach v. Amazon Ins. Co. (Ct.), 4 Ins. L. J. 239; Miss. L. Ins. Co. v. Myland, 9 Bush (Ky.) 431; Home Ins. Co. v. Curtis, 32 Mich. 402; Agricultural Ins. Co. v. Montague, 33 Mich. 548; Chickering v. Globe Mut.

but not a horse.¹ An agent authorized to receive applications and collect premiums, but not authorized to issue policies, cannot extend the time of payment of renewal premiums.² But it is held that the general agent of a foreign insurance company has the power of this character.³

A party authorized to deliver a policy, though not an agent of the company, is also authorized to receive the premium.⁴

10. Provision that Agent Shall be Deemed Agent of Insured.—Sometimes, perhaps usually now, it is provided in the policy that a person other than the insured who procures the insurance to be taken by the company shall be deemed to be the agent of the insured, and not of the company. But such stipulations cannot change the facts, and where a duly appointed agent of the company acts in its behalf, within the scope of his authority as otherwise determined, his acts are binding upon the company.⁵

L. Ins. Co., 116 Mass. 321. See also Pittsburgh Boatyard Co. v. Western Assur. Co., 118 Pa. St. 415. Contra, Belville Mut. Ins. Co. v. Van Winkle, 1 Beas. (N. J.) 331; Catoir v. American etc. Co., 33 N. J. L. 487.

Otherwise where the insured is required to remit direct. Co-operative L. Ass'n v. McConnico, 53 Miss. 233.

After the terms of the insurance had been agreed upon between the applicant and the agent, the former tendered to the latter the premium money; but the agent living in the house, and being indebted to the applicant for rent, told him he had in his hands money belonging to him for rent, and would credit him for the amount. Held, that this was a valid payment of the premium. Woody v. Old Dominion Ins. Co., 31 Gratt. (Va.) 362.

1. Hoffman v. Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co., 92 U. S. 161.

2. Critchett v. American Ins. Co., 53 Iowa 404; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 230. But see the dissenting opinion of Beck, J.

3. He may waive a provision printed in the policy and application that the policy shall not attach until the premium is paid. O'Brien v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 586.

4. Lebanon Mut. Ins. Co. v. Erb, 112 Pa. St. 149.

5. Commercial Ins. Co. v. Ives, 56 Ill. 402; Lycoming F. Ins. Co. v. Ward, 90 Ill. 545; Union Ins. Co. v. Chipp, 93 Ill. 96; Newark F. Ins. Co. v. Summons, 110 Ill. 166; Planters' Ins. Co. v. Myers, 55 Miss. 479; Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Cusick, 109 Pa. St. 157; Nassauer v. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins.

Co., 109 Pa. St. 507; Eilenberger Protection Ins. Co., 89 Pa. St. 4; Bussell v. American F. Ins. Co., 109 Pa. St. 415; Hughes (U. S.), 531; Putnam v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 18 Blatchf. (S.) 368; Andes Ins. Co. v. Loehr (N. Y.), 4 Ins. L. J. 465; Whited v. Germania etc. Ins. Co., 76 N. Y. 415; Marrison v. Ins. Co., 69 Tex. 353; Sullivan v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 34 Kan. 170; Cason v. Jersey City F. Ins. Co., 43 N. J. L. 300; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 584; Davis v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. (W. Va.), 8 S. E. Rep. 616.

But see Rohrback v. Germania F. Ins. Co., 62 N. Y. 47; Alexander v. Germania F. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 4; Shawmut Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Stevens, 9 Allen (Mass.) 332; Mulrey v. Shawmut Mut. F. Ins. Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 116; Wood v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 116 Mass. 316; Moore v. Conn. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 41 U. C. (Q. B.) 282.

And this is true of a subagent or solicitor appointed by the local agent. Commercial Ins. Co. v. Ives, 56 Pa. St. 402; Woodbury Savings Bank v. Chatter Oak Ins. Co., 31 Conn. 517.

Giving notice of loss and rendering the particular account required by the policy to the agent, is notice to the company. Nor does it matter that the policy contains a provision that the person procuring the insurance shall be deemed the agent of the assured, not of the company, where the validity of the policy is made to depend on the counter signature of such agent. North British etc. Ins. Co. v. Crutchfield, 10 Ind. 518.

The provision must be deemed to apply to matters immediately connected with the insurance.

if the applicant make certain facts known to the agent the latter fails to communicate to the insurers, the fault is imputable to them, not the applicant.¹

Agent Cannot Underwrite Policy on His Own Property.—An agent cannot underwrite a policy on his own property which will be on the company.² Nor can he consent for the company's assignment of his own policy.³

Powers of Agent with Reference to Contracts Made.—The powers of an agent with respect to contracts which are made are as extensive as in negotiations prior to their consummation.⁴

With the procurement of the policy, the agent cannot be deemed the agent of the insured in such a sense as to give notice to him that the company has an option reserved to terminate the policy a notice to the insured is evidence of a usage that the insured agent make a notice on such agent in the insured admissible. American Cent. Ins. Co., 109 of a mutual company, fill an application, is the agent of the company notwithstanding a stipulation to the contrary in the policy. Kansal v. Ins. Co., 31 Minn. 17; Ins. Rep. 776.

A stipulation that the insurance will be afterwards deemed the insurance of the insured is not binding. Ins. Co., 23 Fed. Rep.

A provision is applicable where the insured procures the insurance through an agent, but who is not the agent of the insurers. Atlantic Ins. Co., 58 Md. 336.

A stipulation of whose the agent is, in a contract. Ind. Ins. Co. v. Hartford, 566; Commercial Union Ins. Co. v. Elliot (Pa.), 13 Atl. Rep. 185. And in Pennsylvania it is held that where the agent of an insurance company examines the building on which the insurance is wanted, and afterwards fills an application, which he reads and shows to the owner, who signs it, the agent is to be regarded, as to the application, as the agent of the owner and not of the company. Pottsville Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Fromm, 100 Pa. St. 347.

An insured whose policy provided that it should be void should the premises become and remain vacant more than ten days, deposited it for safe keeping with the insurance agent, and was afterwards informed by him that the time was thirty days. Held, that he thus made the agent his own, whose misstatement would avail him nothing. Harrison v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 862.

So an agent receiving an application from the insured for a change in the policy and undertaking to procure such change, is to be treated as the agent of the insured. Duluth Bank v. Knoxville F. Ins. Co., 85 Tenn. 76.

1. Bebee v. Hartford Mut. F. Ins. Co., 25 Conn. 51; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Cooper, 50 Pa. St. 331; Masters v. Madison etc. Ins. Co., 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 624; Naughton v. Ottawa Agr. Ins. Co., 43 U. C. (Q. B.) 121.

A valuation made by such an agent alone cannot be taken advantage of by the company. Cumberland Val. etc. Co. v. Schell, 29 Pa. St. 31.

2. Bentley v. Columbia Ins. Co., 17 N. Y. 421.

But a person employed as a watchman of property is not, by such employment, incapacitated to issue a valid policy upon it in behalf of a company of which he is the agent. Northrup v. Germania Fire Ins. Co., 48 Wis. 420; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 815.

Nor if the agent be specially authorized to countersign a policy on his own property, can he bind the company by one dated before the loss but signed afterwards. Glens Falls Ins. Co. v. Hopkins, 16 Ill. App. 220.

3. Ex parte Hennessy, 1 Con. & Law. 559.

4. Healey v. Imperial F. Ins. Co., 5 Nev. 268.

His power to change, modify or waive any of their terms is limited.¹

13. Territorial Limit of Authority.—Insurance agents are generally authorized to act within a specified territory, but a policy on a subject matter beyond such limits is binding, unless knowledge of the want of authority on the part of the agent is brought home to the insured.²

14. Authority to Adjust and Pay Losses.—Authority to an agent to adjust and pay losses is authority to endorse notes belonging to the company in payment;³ or to extend the time of proof, but there is no presumption that he has authority to waive the forfeiture of a policy.⁵

15. Neglect of Agent in Forwarding Premium.—Neglect of the agent in forwarding the premium is chargeable to the company. And this notwithstanding a provision that the agent shall be treated as that of the insured.⁷

IX. WAIVER AND ESTOPPEL—1. Generally.—The general rules of the law of waiver and estoppel are applicable to the parties to contracts of insurance, at the foundation of which is the rule that where one party has by his representations or conduct induced the other party to a transaction to give him an advantage which it would be against equity and good conscience for him to assert, he will not, in a court of justice, be permitted to avail himself of that advantage.⁸ The doctrine will be considered here only in its most general features. Its particular application will be stated in connection with the various subjects wherein it has been applied.

2. Effect of Conduct with Knowledge of Facts.—If the insured with full knowledge of facts which would avoid the policy, nevertheless execute and deliver it,⁹ or if, after its delivery, they

1. Bush v. Westchester F. Ins. Co., 63 N. Y. 531; Wilson v. Genesee Mut. Ins. Co., 14 N. Y. 418; Lohnes v. Ins. Co., 121 Mass. 439; Reynolds v. Continental Ins. Co., 36 Mich. 131.

2. Lightboy v. North American Ins. Co., 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 18.

3. Baker v. Cotter, 45 Me. 236.

4. Lycoming Co. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Schallenberger, 44 Pa. St. 259.

5. Hollis v. State Ins. Co., 65 Iowa 454.

See, however, case cited, infra, this title, WAIVER AND ESTOPPEL.

6. Perkins v. Washington Ins. Co., 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 645.

7. Lycoming F. Ins. Co. v. Ward, 90 Ill. 545.

8. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 222.

Knowledge of Facts.—There must be knowledge of the facts. Wheaton v. North British etc. Ins. Co. (Cal.), 18

Pac. Rep. 758. Finley v. Lycoming etc. Ins. Co., 30 Pa. St. 311; Allen v. Vermont Mut. F. Ins. Co., 12 Vt. 3; Forbes v. Agawam Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Cush. (Mass.) 470; Robertson v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 88 N. Y. 5; Queens Ins. Co. v. Young (Ala.), 5 Rep. 116.

Insured Must be Prejudiced.—The insured must be prejudiced. Jewett v. Home Ins. Co., 29 Iowa 562; Securities Ins. Co. v. Fay, 22 Mich. 467; Wheaton v. North British etc. Ins. Co. (Cal.) Pac. Rep. 758.

The Act of Waiver Must be Done Knowingly.—Diehl v. Adams Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 58 Pa. St. 443; Beatty v. Lycoming etc. Ins. Co., 66 Pa. St. 9.

The course of dealing between parties may be shown. Peoria Sugar Refinery v. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 480.

9. North British etc. Ins. Co. v. St.

wledge of such facts and subsequently treat it as valid ing, by any acts, words or conduct which might reason-the insured to suppose himself to be still insured,¹

p. 228; Commercial Ins. Co.
ll. 402; Union Ins. Co. v.
ll. 96; Germania F. Ins. Co.
4 Ill. 494; Continental L.
Thoenä, 26 Ill. App. 495;
v. Niagara F. Ins. Co., 79
ennett v. North British etc.
N. Y. 273; Van Schoick v.
Co., 68 N. Y. 134; Miagtford F. Ins. Co., 24 Hun
Smith v. Commonwealth 9 Wis. 322; Mich. etc. Ins.
s, 30 Mich. 41; Peoria M.
o. v. Perkins, 16 Mich. 380;
ottish Commercial Ins. Co.,
p. 761; Diebold v. Phoenix
Fed. Rep. 807; Geib v. En-
Co., 1 Dill. (U. S.) 449;
Commonwealth Ins. Co., 18
S.) 368; American Ins. Co.
21 Wall. (U. S.) 152; Baile v.
F. & M. Ins. Co., 73 Mo. urg-Bremen F. Ins. Co. v.
66 Tex. 103; Crescent Ins.
p (Tex.), 9 S. W. Rep. 473;
ns. Co. v. Griffin, 59 Tex.
v. Des Moines Ins. Co.
N. W. Rep. 614; Morrison etc. Ins. Co., 8 L. R. (Ex.) can Cent. Ins. Co. v.
Lea (Tenn.) 513; s. c., 41
47; Oakes v. Manufactur-Ins. Co., 135 Mass. 248.
Key v. Des Moines Ins. Co.
N. W. Rep. 614, the ated in his application the sole owner of the prop-at it was not encumbered.
only had a bond for a deed,
d no part of the purchase all the facts were disclosed
, who told him that the un-use money did not constitutance, and it was held pany could not avail itself in the policy that the appli-d form a part of it, and that statement as to encumbrances the policy.
erpool & London etc. Ins.
de, 65 Tex. 118, where the ered the policy with full of the state of the title, pany took the premium, it at the company could not right of recovery on the n ownership other than the
C. of L.—22

entire, unconditional and sole ownership.

Unanswered Questions.—Where a policy is issued upon a written application containing questions which are left unanswered by the applicant, the under-writer thereby waives the answers to such questions. Lorillard F. Ins. Co. v.
McCulloch, 21 Ohio St. 176; Dayton
Ins. Co. v. Kelly, 24 Ohio St. 345;
Armenia Ins. Co. v. Paul, 91 Pa. St.
520; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 676; Hall v.
People's Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.)
185; Blake v. Exchange Mut. Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 265; Nichols v. Fayette Mut. F. Ins. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 63; Geib v. Enterprise Ins. Co., 1 Dill.
(U. S.) 449; Phoenix L. Ins. Co. v.
Ruddin, 120 U. S. 183; Tiefenthal v.
Citizens' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 53 Mich. 306;
Carson v. Jersey City F. Ins. Co., 43 N.
J. L. 300; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 584; American L. Ins. Co. v. Mahone, 56 Miss.
180; Schwarzbach v. Ohio Val. Prot.
Union, 25 W. Va. 622.

Impossible Conditions.—So if there are conditions which the insurers know to be impossible of performance.
Young v. Mut. L. Ins. Co. (C. Ct.
Cal.), 2 Ins. L. J. 289; Andes Ins. Co.
v. Shipman, 77 Ill. 189.

Where Insurer Should Have Knowledge.—Some of the cases seem to hold that if the insurers should have knowledge of the facts, whether or not they do have it, they waive any advantage that they might otherwise take of such facts. Sibley v. Prescott Ins. Co., 57 Mich. 14; Broadwater v. Lion F. Ins.
Co., 34 Minn. 465.

Delivery Waives Premium Clause.— Delivery of the policy is a waiver of a condition requiring the premium note to be delivered before the policy takes effect. Behler v. German Mut. F. Ins.
Co., 68 Ind. 347.

1. Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. Kinnier, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 88; Pa. F. Ins. Co.
v. Kittle, 39 Mich. 51; Eddy v. Merchants' etc. Ins. Co. (Mich.), 40 N. W.
Rep. 775; Titus v. Glens Falls Ins. Co., 81 N. Y. 410; Carroll v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 402; Haas
v. Montauk F. Ins. Co. (N. Y.), 1 N.
Y. S. Nat. Rep. 895; Lycoming Mut.
Ins. Co. v. Stockbower, 26 Pa. St. 199; Elliott v. Ashland Mut. F. Ins. Co.,

they will have waived the defect, and be estopped to ass

3. Knowledge of Insured of Fraudulent Statements by Insurers. rule works both ways. If the insured knows that the insured have made fraudulent statements for the purpose of inducing to enter into the contract, and he, nevertheless, does enter into it, and gives his premium note therefor, he will be estopped to make this defence against the note.²

4. Powers of Agent with Respect to Waiver.—The knowledge of the company may be acquired through its agent. Independent knowledge of the agent of matters within the scope of his employment is, in this as in other matters, the knowledge of the company.³ And it is held that the waiver of an agent oth

117 Pa. St. 548; Cumberland etc. Ins. Co. v. Mitchell, 48 Pa. St. 374, 384; Home Mut. L. Ass'n v. Riel (Pa.), 17 Atl. Rep. 36; Keenan v. Dubuque Mut. F. Ins. Co., 13 Iowa 375; Hallis v. State Ins. Co., 65 Iowa 454; Anson v. Winnisheik Ins. Co., 23 Iowa 84; Lewis v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 63 Iowa 193; North Berwick Co. v. New Eng. F. & M. Ins. Co., 52 Me. 336; Wetherell v. Maine Ins. Co., 49 Me. 200; Hodsdon v. Guardian L. Ins. Co., 97 Mass. 144; Bevin v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 23 Conn. 244; Rathbone v. City F. Ins. Co., 31 Conn. 193; Gilliat v. Pawtucket etc. F. Ins. Co., 8 R. I. 282; Md. F. Ins. Co. v. Gusdorf, 43 Md. 506; Southern L. Ins. Co. v. McCain, 96 U. S. 84; Hale v. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co., 32 N. H. 295; New Eng. etc. Ins. Co. v. Wetmore, 32 Ill. 221; Keeler v. Niagara F. Ins. Co., 16 Wis. 523; Wing v. Harvey, 2 De G., M. & G. 265; s. c., 27 Eng. L. & Eq. 140; Law v. Hand-in-Hand Ins. Co., 29 U. C. (C. P.) 1; Hamilton v. Home Ins. Co., 94 Mo. 353.

A policy conditioned to be void if assigned without the company's assent endorsed thereon was assigned on March 29th, and on April 17th the company's agent, authorized to assent to assignments, with knowledge of such assignment, endorsed the company's assent thereto on the policy, and reported the same to the company, which made no objection, as was usual when the agent's acts were disapproved. Held, that the forfeiture was waived. Imperial F. Ins. Co. v. Dunham, 117 Pa. St. 460.

Where payment of an assessment was accepted after the time limited, "on condition that member is in good health," but nothing was said by the member, and no enquiries were made relative thereto at that time, the subsequent levy and unconditional acceptance by the company of six assessments from a member operated as a waiver of forfeiture, although the member was in ill health. Rice v. New Eng. Aid Soc., 146 Mass. 248.

A company waives a provision requiring the insured to keep his property of invoice secure from fire by reporting the insured, after a fire, to incur the expense and trouble of obtaining receipts and vouchers of all his goods received several years prior thereto. B. State Ins. Co. (Iowa), 38 N. H. 135.

1. Consideration and Estoppel. There need be no new consideration, nor need there be a technical consideration. Prentice v. Knickerbocker L. Co., 77 N. Y. 483; Titus v. Glenns F. Co., 81 N. Y. 410.

2. Lycoming Ins. Co. v. Worth, 83 Pa. St. 223.

3. Plumb v. Cattaraugus L. Ins. Co., 18 N. Y. 392; Rowley v. Empire L. Co., 36 N. Y. 550; Bodine v. Exchange Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. 117; Bennett v. North British etc. Ins. Co., 8 N. Y. 273; Miaghan v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.) 58; Couch v. German F. Ins. Co., 25 Hun 469; Dilliber v. Knickerbocker L. Co., 76 N. Y. 56; Security Ins. Co. v. Fay, 22 Mich. 473; North American Ins. Co. v. Throop, 22 Mich. 1; na etc. Ins. Co. v. Olmstead, 2 Mich. 246; Southern L. Ins. Co. v. B. Heisk. (Tenn.), 607; Hallock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Dutch (N. H.) 144; Hodsdon v. Guardian L. Ins. Co., 97 Mass. 144; North Berwick Co. v. New Eng. F. & M. Ins. Co., 52 Me. 336; Phoenix Ins. Co., 27 Wis. 60; Bride v. Republic F. Ins. Co., 562; Walsh v. Ætna L. Ins.

true,¹ or that the risk is prohibited by the by-laws of the company;² or that there is other insurance in contravention of its terms;³ or that the premises are vacant in violation of the provisions of the policy.⁴

Examples of waiver or estoppel by acts of the insurers after knowledge of some infirmity respecting the policy acquired subsequent to its delivery, are, saying to the insured, after knowledge of other insurance in violation of its terms, that it makes no difference.⁵ Accepting an assessment or payment of a premium after knowledge of the infirmity;⁶ consenting to an assignment after knowledge of the vacancy of the premises, or other ground of forfeiture;⁷ or paying a dividend after knowledge of the alienation of an interest.⁸

6. Effect of Conduct of Insurers Subsequent to Loss.—The insurer may even be estopped to deny their obligation by acts or conduct subsequent to the loss.⁹ Such is the effect of a statement that it is only the quantity and value of the property that is disputed;¹⁰ or the absence of objections to the proofs of loss,¹¹

502; Equitable Ins. Co. v. McCrea, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 541; Hanley v. L. Ass'n etc., 69 Mo. 380; Behler v. German Mut. F. Ins. Co., 68 Ind. 347; Little v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co., 38 Ohio St. 110; Universal F. Ins. Co. v. Block, 109 Pa. St. 535; Elkins v. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co., 113 Pa. St. 386.

1. Home Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Garfield, 60 Ill. 124; Witherell v. Maine Ins. Co., 49 Me. 200.

Or where it has abundant evidence of such fact. Morrison v. Wis. Odd Fellows' Mut. L. Ins. Co., 59 Wis. 162.

2. Merchants & Mfrs. Ins. Co. v. Curran, 45 Mo. 142.

3. Carroll v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 402; Hamilton v. Home Ins. Co., 94 Mo. 353.

4. Short v. Home Ins. Co., 90 N. Y. 16; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 138; Haight v. Continental Ins. Co., 92 N. Y. 51.

5. Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Earle, 33 Mich. 143.

6. Osterloh v. New Denmark etc. Ins. Co., 60 Wis. 126; Story v. Hope Ins. Co., 37 La. Ann. 254; Phoenix L. Ins. Co. v. Raddin, 120 U. S. 183; Smith v. St. Paul F. etc. Ins. Co., 3 Dakota 80; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Amerman, 16 Ill. App. 528; Frost v. Saratoga Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 5 Denio (N. Y.) 154; Clapp v. Mass. Ben. Ass'n, 146 Mass. 519; Germania Ins. Co. v. Rudwig, 80 Ky. 223; National L. Ins. Co. v. Tullidge, 39 Ohio St. 240; Schwarzbach v. Ohio Val. Prot. Union, 25 W. Va. 622. But see Shimp v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co. (Ill.), 16 N. E. Rep. 229; Palmer Factors' etc. Ins. Co., 33 La. Ann. 1336.

7. Garland v. North American Ins. Co., 9 Ill. App. 571; Pomeroy v. Rock Mountain Ins. etc. Inst., 9 Colo. 20; Ellis v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 10 Iowa 507; Gilliat v. Pawtucket Mut. Ins. Co., 8 R. I. 282.

8. Combs v. Shrewsbury Mut. Ins. Co., 34 N. J. Eq. 403.

9. Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 1 Pa. St. 504; Lycoming etc. Ins. Co. v. Schreffler, 42 Pa. St. 188; Franklin Ins. Co. v. Updegraff, 43 Pa. St. 3; Underhill v. Agawam Mut. Ins. Co., 10 Cush. (Mass.) 440; Priest v. Citizen Mut. F. Ins. Co., 3 Allen (Mass.) 60; Baxter v. Chelsea Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 204; Kernochan v. New York etc. Ins. Co., 17 N. Y. 428; Miller v. Eagle etc. Ins. Co., 2 E. Smith (N. Y.) 268; Turley v. North American Fire Ins. Co., 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 374; Connell v. Milwaukee Mut. F. Ins. Co., 18 Wis. 387; Lewis v. Monmouth Mut. F. Ins. Co., 52 Mo. 402; Bartlett v. Union M. & F. Ins. Co., 46 Me. 500; Noyes v. Washington Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 30 Vt. 659; Farmer Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Gargett, 42 Mich. 289; Erwin v. Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co., 24 Mo. App. 145.

10. Rathbone v. City F. Ins. Co., 10 Conn. 193.

11. City Planing etc. Co. v. Merchants' etc. Ins. Co. (Mich.), 40 N. Y.

Where, after proof of loss, an adjuster, knowing of a breach of condition by the assured, continues to recognize ments after knowledge of loss and facts which would avoid policy.¹

But the right to declare a forfeiture after knowledge of loss therefor and loss, is not necessarily waived by a failure to give immediate notice of such intention, where the delay does not induce the insured to change his condition.²

7. Failure to Cancel Evidence of Waiver.—The fact that the insurers do not cancel the policy under a provision therefor, with knowledge comes to them of its violation, is evidence of an intention to waive such violation.³

8. Waiver in Writing.—Where it is provided that any waiver of a forfeiture under the policy must be in writing, and it becomes subject to forfeiture by reason of a violation of its terms after the transfer of the title during the period specified, and, after expiration, another policy extending the old one is issued, with knowledge of the transfer, it is a waiver in writing which satisfies the provision.⁴

9. Waiver Endorsed on Policy.—It is often provided in insurance policies that anything less than a distinct, specific agreement clearly expressed and endorsed on the policy, shall not be construed as a waiver of any condition or restriction therein; but does not refer to the stipulations that are to be performed in case of loss, but only to those conditions which enter into and form a part of the contract, and are essential to make it binding; and a provision of this sort has been held to be invalid.⁶

the policy as valid, and attempts to adjust the loss, thereby causing the insured expense and trouble, the forfeiture is waived. Oshkosh Gas Light Co. v. Germania Fire Ins. Co., 71 Wis. 454; Cannon v. Home Ins. Co., 53 Wis. 585; Key v. Des Moines Ins. Co. (Iowa), 41 N. W. Rep. 614; Pennsylvania F. Ins. Co. v. Kittles, 39 Mich. 51; Argall v. Old North State Ins. Co., 84 N. Car. 355; Smith v. St. Paul F. etc. Ins. Co., 3 Dak. 80. But see Fitchpatrick v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 53 Iowa 335; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Stevenson, 78 Ky. 150.

1. Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Beck, 77 Ind. 203; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 295; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Lansing, 15 Neb. 494; Schoneman v. Western Horse etc. Co., 16 Neb. 404.

2. McCormick v. Springfield F. etc. Ins. Co., 66 Cal. 361.

3. Teutonia L. Ins. Co. v. Anderson, 77 Ill. 384; Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. French, 30 Ohio St. 240; Joliffe v. Madison etc. Ins. Co., 39 Wis. 111; Georgia Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Gibson, 52 Ga. 640; Guernsey v. American Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 104; Potter v. Ontario etc. Ins. Co., 5 Hill (N. Y.) 147; Allen v.

Massasoit Mut. Ins. Co., 99 Mass. 353; Hamilton v. Home Ins. Co., 93 N. Y. 353; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Spiers, 8 S. W. Rep. 453.

4. Elliott v. Ashland Mut. F. Ins. Co., 117 Pa. St. 548; Whited v. Germania F. Ins. Co., 76 N. Y. 415; pare Bell v. Lycoming F. Ins. Co., 19 Hun (N. Y.) 238.

In Haas v. Montauk F. Ins. Co., 19 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 895, where the discovery by the company that the building insured was used as a beer saloon, they granted oral permission to make improvements, and the policy denominated such a sale as extra hazardous, and provided that the extra hazardous building should not be insured; it was held that this was a waiver of the forfeiture, although it was provided that the permission should be in writing.

5. Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. C. Ice Co., 36 Md. 102; New Orleans Ass'n v. Matthews (Miss.), 4 So. 62.

6. Lamberton v. Conn. F. Ins. Co. (Minn.), 39 N. W. Rep. 76. In this case the provision was that "no

Waiver of Provision as to Waiver.—So, too, it has been held that a provision as to mode of waiver may be waived.¹ However it was provided that an alteration or waiver could be made at the head office by an officer of the company, it is held that an agent was powerless to exercise such authority.²

See ACCIDENT, FIRE, LIFE and the other classes of insurance.

REINSURANCE—1. What Is.—Reinsurance is where the insurer insures its risks in another company.³

Obligations of Reinsurer.—The obligations of the reinsurer to the insured are the same as those of the insurer to the insured. If the policy be void as against the insurer, it will also be "representative" of the company. It is held to be held to have waived its objection of the policy unless such objection could be endorsed thereon; and where assigned for the holding was such provision was not a limitation of the authority of any particular class of agents, it was, in an attempted limitation on the part of the corporation for future reference also Bartlett v. Fireman's Ins. Co. (Iowa), 41 N. W. Rep.

Continental Ins. Co., 151; Whited v. Germania F. Ins. Co., 6 N. Y. 415; American Cent. Ins. Co., 8 Lea (Tenn.) 513; McCrea, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 513; Am. Rep. 647; Carr v. Roger Ins. Co., 60 N. H. 513; Story Ins. Co., 37 La. Ann. 254; Elshland Mut. F. Ins. Co., 117; Shaffer v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 61; Md. F. Ins. Co. v. Gus- also Globe Mut. L. Ins. Co., 5 U. S. 326; Mich. State Ins. Co., 30 Mich. 41; Carroll v. Oak Ins. Co., 1 Abb. Dec. 316; Day v. Mechanics & F. Ins. Co., 88 Mo. 325. And Mersereau v. Phoenix L. Ins. Co., 274; Catoir v. American Ins. Co., 33 N. J. L. 487; Union Ins. Co. v. Mowry, 96 U. S. 7. Universal Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Pa. St. 20.

Union v. Universal L. Ins. Co., 1 Repr. 780.

insured is not a party to and concerned in the contract, unless to him, when he may have an interest in it. Lee v. Fraternal Mut. Ins. Co., 62 Mo. 289.

held in Johannes v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 50, where one company sold its business to another, and the purchaser reinsured the seller's risks, and agreed to pay, satisfy and discharge the losses; that this was more than mere reinsurance, and that there was sufficient privity between a policy holder and the purchaser and reinsurer to enable the former to maintain an action against the latter for the loss.

4. Commonwealth Ins. Co. v. Globe Mut. Ins. Co., 35 Pa. St. 475; Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans Ins. Co., 24 La. Ann. 305; Eagle Ins. Co. v. La Fayette Ins. Co., 9 Ind. 443.

Even though a new policy of the reinsurer is substituted for the original, and the new would have been void for a breach of warranty by the insured had the original application on which it is based been made at the same time, but which was true when made. Cahen v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 69 N. Y. 300.

But in Jackson v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. 124, it was held that in an action on a contract of reinsurance the reinsurer cannot defend on the ground of a misrepresentation made while obtaining the original policy.

A judgment against the original insurer is binding upon the reinsuring company, who had notice of the suit and an opportunity to defend. Strong v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 4 Mo. App. 7.

Where a company, after having obtained reinsurance of a risk in another company, discharges its liability by the payment of a less sum than that for which the original insurance was effected, the sum so paid by it will be taken as the amount of damage sustained, and the measure of indemnity to be recovered from the reinsuring company, provided such sum is within the amount of the reinsurance policy, be void as against the reinsurer;¹ and to recover of the reinsurer the insurer must make such proof as the insured is compelled to make to establish his claim.² The reinsured need not show that the loss has been paid, nor that it can or will be paid.³

Where the reinsurance is for only a part of the original insurance, and a partial loss occurs, the reinsurer is responsible for the whole of such loss within the limits of the reinsurance, for a proportionate share of it, where there is no provision to the contrary.⁴ But where there is, liability attaches only for the proportionate part.⁵

Further than stated, the reinsurer is liable to the reinsured for all costs and expenses, bona fide, incurred in defending the claim (if a plain one) of the first insurer, with interest on all he has expended.⁶

3. Within Statute of Frauds.—Reinsurance contracts come within the statute of frauds as being promises to pay the debt of another, and cannot be enforced unless in writing.⁷

4. Duty of Insurer in Obtaining Reinsurance.—The insurer, in obtaining reinsurance, must, like the original applicant, make known the facts within his knowledge material to the risk, and otherwise charge the obligations of good faith imposed upon him.

5. Commencement and Termination of Risk.—Where the exact time of commencement and termination of the risk are specified, such specification governs. But where no time has been expressed and does not exceed the amount of actual loss, and such policy contains no condition for prorating loss or limiting liability. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co. v. Detroit F. & M. Ins. Co., 38 Ohio St. 11.

But where it was agreed between the reinsurer and the reinsured that a certain claim should be fought, the reinsured to control the defence, and the reinsured compromised it without consulting the reinsurer, it was held that the reinsurer was not liable for any part of the money paid by way of compromise. Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 68 Cal. 430.

1. N. Y. State M. Ins. Co. v. Protection Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 458.

2. Yonkers etc. Ins. Co. v. Hoffman Ins. Co., 6 Rob. (N. Y.) 316. It is however held in Bowery F. Ins. Co. v. N. Y. Fire Ins. Co., 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 359, that furnishing the proofs of the original insured is sufficient.

3. Mut. Safety Ins. Co. v. Hone, 2 N. Y. 235. Ex parte Norwood, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 504; Cashau v. N.

W. Nat. Ins. Co., 5 Biss. (U. S.)

The reinsurer is liable although the reinsured is insolvent. Consolidated Ins. Co. v. Cashow, 41 Md. 59.

4. See Commercial Mut. Ins. Co. v. Detroit F. & M. Ins. Co., 38 Ohio St. 11; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 413.

5. Blackstone v. Alemannia F. Ins. Co., 56 N. Y. 104.

And this liability attaches although the reinsured has become insolvent and so cannot pay the other part. Consolidated F. Ins. Co. v. Cashow, 41 Md. 59; Cashau v. N. W. Nat. Ins. Co., 5 Biss. (U. S.) 476; Blackstone v. Alemannia F. Ins. Co., 56 N. Y. 104. see Ill. Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Andes Ins. Co., 67 Ill. 362.

6. Hastie v. De Peyster, 3 Cai. (U. S.) 190; N. Y. State M. Ins. Co. v. Protection Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 458.

This is especially true where the insured has contested the claim without the advice or acquiescence, and for the benefit of, the reinsurer. Strong v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 62 Mo. 289.

7. Egan v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 1 La. Ann. 368.

ed, the circumstances of the case will be considered for the purpose of determining it.¹

Waiver.—The reinsurer may waive any defences against the insured. Thus, if objections be not made to the proofs furnished, they will be deemed to have been waived.²

LOSS AND ITS ADJUSTMENT—See ACCIDENT, FIRE, LIFE and other classes of insurance.

REMEDIES.—The remedies of the parties in case of a breach of their contract are various, and vary according to the facts.

Where the terms of insurance have been agreed on but the policy has not been issued, the insured may compel its issuance in a court of equity, and if a loss has intervened, have a decree for its payment; or he may, in the latter event, have recovery in a court of law.

Where the premium has been paid but the policy had never taken effect the premium may be recovered,⁵ except Philadelphia L. Ins. Co. v. American Ins. Co., 23 Pa. St. 65.

Case also holds that the reinsurer may be construed to cover a life insured who died prior to the making of the contract.

parte Norwood, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 311.

and v. Royal Ins. Co., 50 N. Y.

odes v. Railway Passengers' Ins. Co., 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 71; Franklin

Ins. Co. v. Hewitt, 3 B. Mon.

Commercial Mut. Ins. Co. v. Ins. Co., 19 How. (U. S.)

St. Joseph F. & M. Ins. Co. v. St. Joseph F. & M. Ins. Co., 371.

must be conclusive proof that the contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio

St. 371.

contract was actually made. Suydam v. Columbus Ins. Co., 18 Ohio part of the amount due by the terms of the policy to one who has not so agreed. Serdall v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co., 51 Wis. 426.

St. 371.

5. Foster v. U. S. Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 85; Rochester Ins. Co. v. Martin, 13 Minn. 59; Delavigne v. U. S. Ins. Co., 1 John. Cas. (N. Y.) 310; Mut. Ass. Co. v. Mahon, 5 Call. (Va.) 517; Clark v. Mfrs. Ins. Co., 2 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 472; Mulvey v. Gore Ins. Co., 28 U. C. (Q. B.) 424; Boland v. Whitman, 33 Ind. 64.

As where the policy is void ab initio by reason of the assured not truly stating his interest as required by the policy. Waller v. Northern Assur. Co., 64 Iowa 101. Or where statements warranted to be true are not true. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Pyle, 44 Ohio St. 19.

So, if the policy be improperly cancelled. Braswell v. American Ins. Co., 75 N. Car. 8.

Where the agent receives the premium but issues no policy, he is liable to the applicant in an action for the premium money. Collier v. Bedell, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 238.

The premium cannot be recovered if the policy has once attached, without a provision to that effect. Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Clapp, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 56; Leonard v. Washburn, 100 Mass. 251. But see Abell v. Penn. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 18 W. Va. 400. Nor without tendering back the policy. Farrow v. Cochran, 72 Me. 309.

where the policy was procured by fraud,¹ or is unlawful.²

3. Where Policy Wrongfully Forfeited.—So where the policy has been wrongfully declared forfeited, the premium paid may be recovered.³ And in Abell v. Penn. Mut. Life Ins. Co.,⁴ it is held that where a policy is forfeited by reason of the nonpayment of the premium when due, the insured may recover the premium paid, with interest, less the actual cost of the insurance during the time the policy was in force.⁵

4. Reformation of Policy, etc.—A policy which does not conform to the agreement of the parties, whether by fraud or mistake, may be reformed in equity, and damages for a loss decreed in the same case.⁶ But such nonconformance must be conclusively proved, and the mistake must be either mutual or made by one by reason of the fraud of the other.⁷

1. Hoyt v. Gilman, 8 Mass. 336; Friesmonth v. Agawam Mut. Ins. Co., 10 Cush. (Mass.) 587.

2. Russell v. De Grand, 15 Mass. 35; Hawson v. Hancock, 8 T. R. 575.

3. Cohen v. N. Y. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 610; McKee v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 28 Mo. 383; American L. Ins. Co. v. McAden, 109 Pa. St. 399; Ala. Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Garmany, 74 Ga. 51.

It is held by the Connecticut court that in such case, where the policy is on a life, that the assured may have one of three remedies, viz: a judgment for its present worth, a tender of the premiums as they fall due, and recovery of the full amount on the death of the insured, or a decree sustaining the policy. Day v. Conn. Gen. L. Ins. Co., 45 Conn. 480. It has also been held in Illinois that an action can be maintained in such case to recover the value of the policy at the time of the forfeiture. Brooklyn Life Ins. Co. v. Weck, 9 Ill. App. 358. So in Virginia, Clemmitt v. N. Y. Life Ins. Co., 76 Va. 355.

And in Ohio it has been held that the insured may have a decree sustaining the policy. National L. Ins. Co. v. Tullidge, 39 Ohio St. 240.

4. 18 W. Va. 400.

5. It is also decided in this case that the court may take judicial notice of the mortality tables.

6. N. Y. Ice Co. v. N. W. Ins. Co., 23 N. Y. 357; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Gurnee, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 278; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Haftheimer, 46 Miss. 645; Stout v. City Fire Ins. Co., 12 Iowa 371; Longhurst v. Star Ins. Co., 19 Iowa 364; Hammel v. Queen Ins. Co., 50 Wis. 240; Oliver v. Mut. etc. Ins. Co., 2 Curt. (U. S.) 277; Perry v. Newcastle etc. Ins. Co., 8 U. C. (Q.

B.) 363; Collett v. Morrison, 12 E. L. & Eq. 161.

Mistake and Fraud.—Where in a written application for a policy of insurance, the applicant committed a mistake in describing the encumbrance on property, in consequence of the representations of the agent of the company who drew up the application, and property insured was afterwards destroyed by fire, it was held that a court of chancery had power to reform the contract and grant relief. Harris v. Columbiana Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 18 O. 116. Courts of law will also generally allow a mistake or fraud to be shown as an action for a loss. Gerrish v. C. Man Ins. Co., 55 N. H. 335; Wilson v. Conway Mut. F. Ins. Co., 4 R. I. 1. However, see Barrett v. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co., 7 Cush. (Mass.) 175; Hobbs v. Charlestown Mut. F. Ins. Co., Met. (Mass.) 211.

But a court of equity will not entertain such a bill when a suit at law has been previously brought and Steinbach v. Relief Ins. Co., 12 L. (N. Y.) 640; Washburn v. Great Western Ins. Co., 114 Mass. 175. Or where the mistake is the result of the negligence of the insured. Pindar v. Resolute F. Ins. Co., 47 N. Y. 168. Ryan v. World L. Ins. Co., 41 Conn. 168.

7. Cooper v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 50 Pa. St. 299; Patterson v. Franklin Ins. Co., 81 Pa. St. 454; M. v. Westchester F. Ins. Co., 64 N. Y. 453; Bryce v. Lorillard F. Ins. Co., N. Y. 240; Van Tuyl v. Westchester Ins. Co., 55 N. Y. 657; Nat. F. Ins. v. Crane, 16 Md. 260; Tesson v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 40 Mo. 33; Herr v. Marine Ins. Co., 20 Wall. (U.

Ability Where Company Fails to Keep Required Funds.—When an insurance company fails to keep on hand funds required by its policy, and becomes insolvent, it becomes liable to its policy holders for each of its engagements.¹ In such case the measure of damages is the value of the policy destroyed, according to the tables of life insurance, showing the average expectancy of life.²

Effect of Adjustment.—Ordinarily, where the claim has been made without fraud, the insured cannot reopen the matter by an action for an additional amount.³

Fraud.—But fraud can always be taken advantage of by the insured, whose prejudice it has been practiced. Hence, if fraud is shown on the part of either party to an adjustment of a loss, whether the other party suffered, such party, if the insurer, may recover what he has paid, and, if the insured, what he has not received, by reason of the fraud.⁴

Liability of Officers for False Statements.—The officers of an insurance company are liable in damages in an action at law for false statements concerning its reliability and assets to one who has been induced to insure in it.⁵

Atl. F. Ins. Co., 98 U. S. 85.
Le v. Security L. Ins. etc.,
Y. 114.

Le v. Security L. Ins. etc.,
Y. 114.

case it was held that, in fixing the value of unmatured life policies, the measure annexed to New York Laws § 623, may be used. It was held that, in determining the present value of a single policy, the present value of the holder's health is to be considered. But this being impracticable in the case of numerous policy holders, in receivership the receiver may estimate the present value the excess of the sum paid during the early years of the policy over the sum required to cover the risk for those years, assuming that there has been no change in the health of the life insured, except that due to the efflux of time. It was further held that the value of an annuity paid-up policy is the unexpired premium called the reserve, and is to be computed in the same manner as the value of a policy upon which annual premiums are paid. See this case as to the rights and obligations of the parties to the dissolution and winding up of a solvent life insurance company. See also People v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 40 Hun (N. Y.) 44.
Le v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 23 N. Y. And see Ætna Ins. Co. v.

Reed, 33 Ohio St. 283; American Ins. Co. v. Crawford, 7 Ill. App. 29.

But it was said to be no defence that the insured agreed upon a compromise with a person representing himself as authorized to act for the several companies in which the property was insured, but who only had authority to act for a part of them, and whose settlement one of the parties did not act upon. Luce v. Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co., 1 Flap. (U. S.) 281.

4. Johnson v. Continental Ins. Co., 39 Mich. 33; Harris v. Equitable L. Ins. Co., 64 N. Y. 196; Rohrschneider v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 76 N. Y. 216; N. W. L. Ins. Co. v. Elliott, 11 Rep. (C. Ct.) 325; Godchaux v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 34 La. Ann. 235.

Where an agent of an insurance company makes representations to one having a claim for a loss against the company, the parties standing in antagonistic relations to each other, that the latter had no claim or rights that he could enforce by legal proceedings, such representations are only opinion—representations upon which he had no right to rely; and if he does so rely, it must be at his own risk, because the truth or falsehood of such representations could be ascertained by ordinary diligence. Ætna Ins. Co. v. Reed, 33 Ohio St. 283. But compare McLean v. Equitable L. Assur. Soc., 100 Ind. 127; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 779.

5. Salmon v. Richardson, 30 Conn.

9. Remedies Forfeited in Case of Loss by Design.—Where a loss caused by the design of the assured, as where the property insured is burned,¹ or otherwise destroyed,² or the life insured taken for the purpose of obtaining the insurance money,³ remedies on the contract are, of course, forfeited.

10. No Trust Relation.—There is no trust relation between policy holder in a mutual company and the company, and an action on such a theory will not lie.⁴

11. Decree for Redelivery and Cancellation.—The insurers may have a decree for the redelivery and cancellation of a policy obtained by fraud or mistake,⁵ unless after a loss, where the defence can be made to an action on the policy.⁶

12. Right of Insurers to Terminate Policy.—Fire policies always contain a clause giving the insurers the right to terminate the insurance at any time at their option, but this does not give the insurer the right to cancel when loss is imminent.⁷ And whenever exercised, it must be within the strict terms of the policy,⁸ and so as not to prejudice the insured where he has complied with the terms of the insurance.⁹

360. See also Tebbetts v. Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Allen (Mass.) 569; Pontifex v. Bignald, 3 M. & G. 42.

1. But where a policy to A and B contained a provision that the loss should be first payable to A, as his interest might appear, B really having no interest, and B caused the building to be burned without A's knowledge or consent, it was held that this could not affect A's right to recover. Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Foster, 90 Ill. 121.

And burning the property while insane does not affect the remedies of the insured, in the absence of a provision to such effect. Karow v. Continental Ins. Co., 57 Wis. 56; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 17.

2. Western Horse etc. Ins. Co. v. O'Neill, 21 Neb. 548.

3. Where one insures his life with intent to commit suicide, and so provide for his family and creditors, and, while sane, carries out that intent, the policy is void, though it does not stipulate for its avoidance by the insured's suicide. Smith v. Nat. Ben. Soc., 4 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 521.

4. Taylor v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co., 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 468.

5. Commercial Ins. Co. v. McLoon, 14 Allen (Mass.) 351; Imperial Ins. Co. v. Gunning, 81 Ill. 236.

Even after an assignment of the policy for value without notice. British Eq. Assur. Co. v. Great Western Ry. Co., 20 L. T. (N. S.) 422.

It has been held in Canada that an action at law may be restrained.

L. Ins. Co. v. Egan, 20 U. C. (Ch.)

But it is incumbent on the insurer to prove the mistake by clear and convincing evidence. Blake v. House Co. v. Home Ins. Co. (Wis.) N. W. Rep. 968.

Judgment against an insurance company in an action to have one of its policies cancelled on the ground that it was obtained by fraud, does not bar the company from setting up after loss a want of insurable interest and a breach of warranty. Ferguson v. Mass. L. Ins. Co., 22 Hun (N. Y.) 320.

All that has been received by way of the policy must be tendered. Harris v. Equitable L. Ins. Co., 6 N. Y. 196.

6. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Bailey Wall (U. S.) 616; Home Ins. Co. v. Stanchfield, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 6; G. etc. Ins. Co. v. Reals, 50 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 237; Hoare v. Brembridge, 8 L. (Ch.) 22.

7. Home Ins. Co. v. Heck, 65 Ill.

8. Chase v. Phoenix etc. Ins. Co. Mo. 85.

If part of the premium is to be returned, that must be paid or tendered. Hathorn v. Germania Ins. Co., 55 L. (N. Y.) 28.

9. Peoria F. & M. Ins. Co. v. B. 47 Ill. 516; International L. Ins. etc. v. Franklin F. Ins. etc. Co., 66 N. Y. 119.

Recovery of Loss Paid.—Where insurers pay a loss in ignorance of facts which vitiate the policy, they may recover the sum paid in such facts come to their knowledge,¹ if they could have known of the same at the time of payment by the use of ordinary diligence.²

Ability of Agent for Failure to Cancel.—Where an agent is authorized by the insurers to cancel a policy under a provision that if he does not do so, and a loss occurs, they may recover damages of such agent. And it will be of no avail in an action for the agent to show that he had directed the broker to cancel the insurance with him to have the policy cancelled.³

Right of Insured to Separate Damaged from Undamaged Goods.—The insured does not lose his remedy on a contract of insurance by a refusal to separate the damaged portion of the goods from that not damaged, and to furnish a detailed statement of damages claimed on each item;⁴ nor by proceeding at once to repair, where that right is reserved to the company, and giving no notice of an intention to avail itself of it.⁵

Limitation of Action.—It is competent for the parties to limit the period within which an action may be brought on the policy to a shorter period than that allowed by the statutes of limitation,⁶ rd Live Stock Ins. Co. v. Walker, 66 Mo. 32; Keim v. Home etc. Ins. Co., 42 Mo. 38; Amesbury v. Bowditch Mut. F. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 596; Fullam v. N. Y. Union Ins. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 61; Brown v. Roger Williams Ins. Co., 7 R. I. 301; N. W. Ins. Co. v. Phoenix Oil etc. Co., 31 Pa. St. 449; Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Barr, 94 Pa. St. 345; Waynesboro Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Conover, 98 Pa. St. 384; Wilson v. Aetna Ins. Co., 27 Vt. 99; Williams v. Vermont Mut. Ins. Co., 20 Vt. 222; Higgins v. Windsor Co. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 54 Vt. 270; Carter v. Humboldt F. Ins. Co., 12 Iowa 287; Stout v. City F. Ins. Co., 12 Iowa 371; Peoria Ins. Co. v. Whitehill, 25 Ill. 466; Johnson v. Humboldt Ins. Co., 91 Ill. 92; Brown v. Savannah Mut. Ins. Co., 24 Ga. 97; Ripley v. Aetna Ins. Co., 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 552; s. c., 30 N. Y. 136; Roach v. New York etc. Ins. Co., 30 N. Y. 546; Portage Co. Mut. Ins. Co. v. West, 6 Ohio St. 599; Tasker v. Kenton Ins. Co., 58 N. H. 469; Patrick v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 43 N. H. 621; Woodbury etc. Savings Bank v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 31 Conn. 518; Hickey v. Anchor Assur. Co., 18 U. C. (Q. B.) 403; Suggs v. Travellers' Ins. Co. (Tex.), 9 S. W. Rep. 676; Edson v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 35 La. Ann. 353. But see Mayor of N. Y. v. Hamilton Ins.

as a year,¹ or six months;² and it may be specified when right shall accrue, as well as when it shall end.³ Thus, it may and often is, provided that a suit shall not be brought until expiration of a specified time after loss,⁴ or after the loss

Co., 39 N. Y. 46; Eagle Ins. Co. v. Lafayette Ins. Co., 9 Ind. 443.

The limitation in case of a mutual company may be in its charter. Portage Co. Mut. Ins. Co. v. West, 6 Ohio St. 599.

Such a stipulation is inflexible. Suit cannot be brought after the time has expired, although one begun within the time has been nonsuited, or discontinued, or a judgment obtained arrested. Brown v. Roger Williams Ins. Co., 7 R. I. 301; Arthur v. Homestead F. Ins. Co., 78 N. Y. 462; Riddlesbarger v. Hartford Ins. Co., 7 Wall. (U. S.) 386; O'Laughlin v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co., 3 McCrary (U. S.) 543; Wilson v. Aetna Ins. Co., 27 Vt. 99. The case of Burton v. Buckeye Ins. Co., 26 Ohio St. 467, is perhaps more liberal. There the policy contained the provision that no suit or action should be brought thereon unless "commenced" within twelve months next after the loss. A loss having occurred, the assured, within the time limited, filed his petition against the company in due form of law, and caused a summons to be issued and served in due time upon the company. But by mistake the name of another company, instead of that of the defendant, was inserted in the body of the summons, although the endorsement and entitling of the summons were correct, and in conformity with the petition. After service of this defective summons upon the defendant and after the expiration of the twelve months limited for bringing the action, the company voluntarily appeared in court, and moved to strike the plaintiff's petition from the files, but made no motion to quash the writ or return. The plaintiff then, on leave of the court, amended the writ so as to make it conform to the petition. Held, that the amendment was authorized by the code and had the effect to make the action one brought within twelve months after the happening of the loss, within the meaning of the policy. And see Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Hall, 12 Mich. 202; Ketchum v. Protection Ins. Co., 1 Allen (N. B.) 136; United States Ins. Co. v. Ludwig, 108 Ill. 514.

The stipulation runs during the minority of the beneficiary, there be no exception in his favor, and the assured having had knowledge that, cause of action should accrue to him, all, it would be during his minority. Suggs v. Travellers' Ins. Co. (Tex. S. W. Rep. 676).

Where an action has been brought within the time limited, a bill for reformation of the policy, in aid thereof, not barred though brought after such time, as such bill is not a suit on the policy, within the meaning of the limitation. Rosenbaum v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 724.

1. Thompson v. Phoenix Ins. Co. Fed. Rep. 266.

2. Fire broke out August 23rd, 1885, and was still burning the next day. There was a six months' limitation clause in the policy, and it was held that a suit commenced February 2, 1885, was too late. Allemania Co. v. Little, 20 Ill. App. 431. But see Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Lebcher, 20 Ill. App. 450.

3. But where there is a general declaration of liability suit may be commenced at once. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Maguire, 111 Ill. 342; Penley v. Beacon Ins. Co., 111 Gr. Ch. (U. S.) 130. But see Hartford v. Provincial Ins. Co., 7 U. S. (Ct.) 555.

If no time be mentioned when loss shall be payable, it will be within a reasonable time. Tooley v. Railroad Passengers Ins. Co., 2 Ins. L. J. 275.

Proofs of loss were required to be furnished within thirty days, and loss was to be paid sixty days after receipt of notice and proofs, and disbursements were to be submitted to arbitration. Held, that it was not premature to bring an action three days after award, but more than sixty days after proofs of loss were served. Clover v. Greenwich Ins. Co., 101 N. Y. 277.

Where no time is specified in the policy during which it shall run, an action may be maintained for a loss happening fourteen days after it was issued. Schroeder v. Trade Ins. Co., 100 Ill. 157.

4. Johnson v. Humboldt Ins. Co. Ill. 92.

It has been held that this refers to becomes due.¹ In the absence of a stipulation as to the time shall begin to run within which suit must be brought, it is at and from the time the proof of loss is made;² in the absence of other provisions, it is at this time, and this is the time the loss becomes due.³

In the absence of the insurers to insist upon the limitation of the time for bringing suit may be waived.⁴ But it is the general rule that no promise on the part of the insurers to pay the loss, or the expiration of the period to which suit is limited by the policy, will not revive the right;⁵ but it is possible that the right might be limited to such an unreasonably short period as to create a presumption of fraud or imposition on the part of the insurers, which would be raised.⁶ A promise to extend the time within which suit may be brought, made before the expiration of the period limited, is good, and will be enforced. So there may be where the loss becomes a fixed debt at the time the property is destroyed. Steen v. Niagara F. Ins. Co., 10 W. Pr. (N. Y.) 144; s. c., 89 N. Y. 42; 42 Am. Rep. 297; Barber v. Merchants' F. Ins. Co., 97 N. Y. 42; Home Mut. Ins. Co. v. Home, 50 Ill. 120; Hatton v. Provincial Ins. Co., 7 U. C. (C. P.) 555; Chandler v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 21 Minn. 85; 30 Fed. Rep. 668; Friezen v. F. Ins. Co., 30 Fed. Rep.

taken with regard to an appraisal, recovery may be had without. Commercial Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 64 Ill. 265.

2. Barber v. F. etc. Ins. Co., 16 W. Va. 658; Hay v. Star F. Ins. Co., 13 Hun (N. Y.) 493; Ins. Co. v. McDowell, 50 Ill. 120; Hatton v. Provincial Ins. Co., 7 U. C. (C. P.) 555; Chandler v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 21 Minn. 85.

3. Chandler v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 21 Minn. 85; Utica Ins. Co. v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 171.

4. Horst v. City of London F. Ins. Co. (Tex.), 11 S. W. Rep. 148. It is waived, for instance, if the company holds out hopes that the matter may be amicably adjusted until after the expiration of the time limited. Martin v. State Ins. Co., 44 N. J. L. 485. But not by mere negotiations for a settlement. Allemania Ins. Co. v. Little, 20 Ill. App. 431.

But where a policy provided that a suit must be brought within six months of the loss, and the amount of the loss was fixed by the company's adjuster, which the company agreed to pay on certain conditions, which failed, and five months before the time elapsed they notified the insured that they would not pay, it was held that they had not waived the provision. Garretson v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 65 Iowa 468.

A provision that the waiver must be in writing is binding. Waynesboro Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Conover, 98 Pa. St. 384; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 618.

5. Williams v. Vermont Mut. Ins. Co., 20 Vt. 222.

6. Brown v. Savannah Mut. Ins. Co., 24 Ga. 97.

1. Barber v. F. & M. Ins. Co., 16 W. Va. 658, where the policy provided that an action should be sustained unless commenced within six months after the loss should occur, and no suit could be maintained unless the amount was fixed by the adjusters. It was held that an action commenced within six months after the loss occurred.

2. Where a policy which provided that a suit should be commenced within six months after loss, and that the company should pay sixty days after notice of loss, it was held that the six months should not begin to run until after sixty days. Ellis v. Council Bluffs F. Ins. Co., 507 Iowa 507. See also, to the same effect, Miller v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 704 N. Y.

3. Chambers v. Atlas Ins. Co., 107 N. Y. 47, where the policy provided that a suit should be commenced within sixty days after proof of loss, and that after a loss should occur, the year was to be reckoned from the day of the fire.

4. Where a loss is made payable by inventory is sent and an appraisal is made, and no steps are valid excuses for not bringing suit within the time limited. The war intervening and preventing has been held to be a sufficient excuse.¹ So, where there are conditions precedent to payment the performance in good faith of which consume more time than that to which suit is limited, it is held that this constitutes a good excuse for not bringing suit within such time.² Again, if the reason of noncommencement of the action within the limited time be the fault of the insurers themselves, it will be maintainable commenced afterwards;³ as it will where delay by the insured fraudulently induced by the insurers;⁴ or the limitation is waived by them otherwise waived.⁵

17. Limitation as to Forum.—Stipulations limiting actions to certain courts are not binding.⁶

1. Semmes v. Hartford Ins. Co., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 159; Hillyard v. Mut. Ben. Life Ins. Co., 6 Vroom (N. J.) 415; N. Y. Life Ins. Co. v. Clapton, 7 Bush. (Ky.) 179. See also Cohen v. N. Y. Life Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 610; Sands v. N. Y. Life Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 626.

2. Martin v. State Ins. Co., 44 N. J. L. 485; Mayor of N. Y. v. Hamilton F. Ins. Co., 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 537; Stout v. City Fire Ins. Co., 12 Iowa 371; Longhurst v. Star Ins. Co., 19 Iowa 364; Chandler v. St. Paul etc. Ins. Co., 21 Minn. 85. And see Woodbury Savings Bank v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 31 Conn. 518. But compare Pennell v. Lamar F. Ins. Co., 73 Ill. 303.

3. Ames v. N. Y. Union Ins. Co., 14 N. Y. 254; Killips v. Putnam F. Ins. Co., 28 Wis. 472; Day v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. (Me.), 16 Atl. Rep. 894; Curtis v. Home Ins. Co., 1 Biss. (U. S.) 485; Brady v. Western Ins. Co., 17 U. C. (C. P.) 597; Davis v. Canada etc. Ins. Co., 39 U. C. (Q. B.) 452.

Thus where proofs of loss are furnished within a reasonable time before the expiration of the time limited for bringing suit, the company cannot defeat the insured by withholding its decision until the time has expired, even though the time allowed for examining the proofs would have consumed it. Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Dodge, 44 Mich. 420.

4. Grant v. Lexington etc. Ins. Co., 5 Ind. 26; Derrick v. Lamar Ins. Co., 74 Ill. 404; Fullam v. N. Y. Union Ins. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 61; Black v. Winnesheik Ins. Co., 31 Wis. 74.

Where the agent of an insurance company, who is authorized to settle a loss, induces the insured to forbear bringing suit within the six months limited in the policy, the company waives the limitation. Bish v. Haweye Ins. Co., 69 Iowa 184.

Repeated promises to pay the loss may waive the limitation. Home etc. Ins. Co. v. Myer, 93 Ill. 271.

5. If the company by its conduct gives the insured reason to believe that the sum found due on an adjustment will be paid without suit, suit may be maintained subsequent to the time specified if the company fails to pay. St. Paul etc. Ins. Co. v. McGregor, 63 Tex. 39.

The strictest proof of waiver will not be required, but there must be substantial evidence of this. Mere refusal to pay, though for special reasons, or negotiations looking to a settlement, do not amount to a waiver. Ripley v. Aetna Ins. Co., 30 N. Y. 136; Blanchard v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 36 La. Ann. 55. Nor is mere silence in itself a waiver. Schroeder v. Keystone Ins. Co., 18 Phila. (Pa.) 286. It may, however, be competent to go to the jury as evidence of waiver. Ripley v. Aetna Ins. Co., 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 552.

6. Reichard v. Manhattan L. Ins. Co., 31 Mo. 518; Amesbury v. Bowditch Mut. F. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 596; Nute v. Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 174; Hall v. People's Mut. F. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 18.

A limitation of this nature in the charter may, however, be binding. Arnet v. Milwaukee etc. Ins. Co., 18 Wis. 516; Sanders v. Hillsborough Ins. Co., 44 N. H. 238; Howard v. Kentucky etc. Ins. Co., 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 28. But even then only so far as may be warranted by a strict construction of the charter.

Williams v. Columbian Mut. Ins. Co., 29 Me. 465; Martin v. Penobscot payment, shall be thus referred, will be upheld and enforced,¹ will an agreement to refer all matters where provision is made in the act of incorporation.² And, moreover, although a stipulation in the policy that all matters in dispute shall be submitted to arbitration is voidable as stated, yet a ratification thereof, such an agreement entered into by the parties after a loss has occurred, and a controversy arisen, is valid and binding.³

A provision for arbitration may be waived.⁴

shall be determined by agreement if possible, and if not, by arbitration, apply when the property is wholly destroyed. Rosenwald v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 3 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 215. Nor, again, does it apply when no difference exists as to the amount of loss, but the dispute is wholly as to whether defendant is liable for the market value, or only the cost of the goods. Rosenwald v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 3 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 215.

When only the question of damages is referred to arbitration, the question of a loss and of the liability of the company must be raised by an action on the policy, not on the award. Soars v. Home Ins. Co., 140 Mass. 343.

1. Davenport v. Long Island Ins. Co., 10 Daly (N. Y.), 535; Trott v. City Ins. Co., 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 439; Scott v. Avery, 20 Eng. L. & Eq. 327; 5 H. L. C. 811; Tredwin v. Holman, 1 H. & C. 72; Braunstein v. Accidental Death Assur. Co., 1 B. & S. 782; Lowndes v. Stamford, 18 Q. B. 425; Goldstone v. Osborne, 2 C. & P. 550.

Contra, German-American Ins. Co. v. Etherton (Neb.), 41 N. W. Rep. 406.

It is not, however, a condition precedent to suit unless there be a stipulation to such effect. Canfield v. Watertown F. Ins. Co., 55 Wis. 419; Crossley v. Connecticut F. Ins. Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 30. But see Adams v. South British etc. Ins. Co., 70 Cal. 198.

But such a stipulation is legal. Liverpool etc. Ins. Co. v. Wolff (N. J.), 14 Atl. Rep. 561. And when inserted is binding. Scottish Union etc. Ins. Co. v. Clancy (Tex.), 8 S. W. Rep. 630.

If the provision be that the dispute shall be submitted to arbitration on the written request of either party, a written request is essential. Wallace v.

German-American Ins. Co., 1 Cray (U. S.) 335; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Badger, 53 Wis. 283; German-American Ins. Co. v. Steiger, 109 Ill. 254. And, in any event, some request. Wallace v. German-American Ins. Co., 4 McC. (U. S.) 123.

2. Reeves v. White, 10 Eng. L. & Eq. 332; Elliott v. Royal Exchange Ins. Co., 2 L. Rep. (Exch.) 237; C. v. Bunbury, 8 Bing. 394.

3. Kill v. Hollister, 1 Wilson 120. 4. It is waived where the insured refuse to pay any sum whatever. Western Horse etc. Ins. Co. v. Putnam, Neb. 331. Or elect to rebuild. W. Cook v. Niagara F. Ins. Co., 91 N. Y. 478; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 686.

In this last case the court say: "The rights of the parties rested altogether in contract, and the defendant assumed the responsibility of performing it according to its terms, subject to the right of the insured to damages in any breach of performance. The defendant, in case of liability arising against it upon its contract, had the option as to the manner in which it would discharge such liability. The mode looked to the compensation of the insured by the payment of damages for his loss, and the other to the restoration of the subject of insurance to its former condition. It could have been contemplated by the parties that both methods of performance were to be pursued. The selection of the defendant of one of these alternatives necessarily constituted an abandonment of the other. The election of the privilege of restoration involved the rejection not only of the right to discharge its liability by the payment of damages to the insured, but also of those provisions of the contract looking reference to that mode of performance."

INSURED.—See note 1.

INSURGENT.—An insurgent is one who is concerned in an insurrection. He differs from a rebel in that the rebel unjustly opposes the constituted authorities, while an insurgent may be justly opposes the tyranny of constituted authorities.²

person intended by the term "insured" in a mutual fire insurance policy is the person who owns the property, applies for the insurance, pays the premium and signs the deposit receipt, and not another person to whom the benefit is payable in case of loss. Though he may have a lease of the property. Sanford v. Mechanics' Fire Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 182. In the erection of certain buildings under lease of one to whom the insurance money was payable, was held to render the policy void as against a by-law which prohibited the insured from altering the building without the consent of the company, anything to increase the risk. Interpreting a policy of insuring to contain a clause that before the insured pays all sums due to the company, the policy "insured" should be first destroyed. TRACY, J., said: "It appears to me that the insured, in the sense of the policy, must mean not the party who is insured, but the party who is to benefit the insurance is made. The only one can properly be said to be insured; for he is ultimately to pay the premium and to have the benefit of the insurance. I do not say that the primary meaning of the words, 'insured,' should be displaced by showing that the insured to the contract have used the word in a different sense, as the design of the person in whose name the insurance is made. But the language of the policy is very clear in its import and would lead to such a result." U. S. v. Pac. Ins. Co., 2 Sumn. (U.

but are responsible solely to the military law, according to the rules of law. 1 Whar. Cr. L., § 283; Com. v. Holland, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 182; Clark v. State, 37 Ga. 19; Hammond v. State, 3 Cold. (Tenn.) 129.

Acts of Insurgents—When Excused.—Acts done in obedience to an insurgent will be excused by the parent government where such insurgent government had the power of enforcing its orders. 1 Whar. Cr. L., §§ 94, 295; Whar. Cr. Pl. & Pr., §§ 435, 439.

Act of War.—The destruction of cotton under the orders of confederate military authorities, for the purpose of preventing it from falling into the hands of the federal army, was an act of war upon the part of the military forces of the rebellion, for which the person executing such order was relieved from civil responsibility at the suit of the owner, voluntarily residing at the time within the lines of the insurrection. Ford v. Sargent, 97 U. S. 594, 24 L. ed. 1018.

Where the armies of the United States were in the enemies' country, the military tribunals under the laws of war, and the authority conferred by statute, had the exclusive jurisdiction to try and punish offences of every kind committed by persons in military service. Coleman v. State of Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509 (24 L. ed. 1118).

Subject of Hostile State—Rules of War Govern.—Where the accused is the subject and resident of the state at war with our own, then, in case of his arrest within our borders, the case is one to be determined by the rules of war. Whar. Confl. L., § 909.

An insurgent is treated by the Lex Julia as a subject who assailed the integrity of the empire; but he was not a hostis or foreign enemy. He was a rebellious child, he was a child still; and the empire haughtily refused to treat him as in any sense an independent power. 2 Whar. Cr. L., § 1801.

Insurgents as Belligerents.—See post, tit. INSURRECTION. Also, Dr. Wharton's article in 33 Alb. L. J. 125-131.

reference to orders sent to carriers to forward goods, it was held in Black v. North Staffordshire Ry. Co., 1 Bl. & El. 979, "The ordinary meaning of 'insured' is that the insurer is to bear the risk, and 'insured,' that the insured is to bear the risk." Douv. L. Dict. (15th ed.) 87; Tracy v. State, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 182. Insurrection.—When insurgents are not recognized as belligerents, their acts done on military duty;

INSURRECTION.

- I. Definition, 356.
- II. Status of Insurgents, 356.
- III. Means Employed to Suppress, 358.
 1. Military Power, 358.
 2. Confiscation of Property, 359.
 3. Restriction of Commercial Intercourse, 361.

4. Denial of Courts of Justice
Insurgents, 363.
5. Legislative Acts of Insurge-Held Void, 364.
- IV. Means Employed to Protect and Enforce Rights in Insurrectionary Districts, 365.

I. DEFINITION.—Insurrection is a rising against civil or political authority; the open and active opposition of a number of persons to the execution of law in a city or State; a rebellion.¹

II. STATUS OF INSURGENTS.—All the people of each State or district in insurrection must be regarded as enemies until by the action of the legislature and the executive, or otherwise, that relation is thoroughly and permanently changed.² In the late w

1. Allegheny Co. v. Gibson, 90 Pa. St. 397; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 670. Anderson's Law Dict. 59.

Insurrection is a rebellion of citizens or subjects of a country against its government (1 Bouv. Law Dict. 817), a rebellion, revolt, sedition, mutiny. Soule's Dict. of Eng. Synonyms, 226.

Distinguished from Popular Commotion and Sedition.—Publicists distinguish between popular commotion (emotion populaire), or tumultuous assemblage, which may be directed against the magistrates or merely against individuals; sedition (sedition) applying to a formal disobedience particularly directed against the magistrates or other depositaries of public authority; insurrection (soulevement), which extends to great numbers in a city or province, so that even the sovereign is no longer obeyed; and civil war. Wheaton's Intern. Law, 522.

Popular commotion, sedition and insurrection are all state crimes, even though arising from just causes of complaint; every violent measure being interdicted in civil society. These cases are always supposed to be susceptible of being suppressed by the sovereign; and it is usual, in doing so, to grant an amnesty in all but exceptional cases. Lawrence's Wheaton's Intern. Law, 522.

When High Treason.—An insurrection by armed men to prevent, by force and intimidation, the execution of an act of congress, is high treason by levying war. United States v. Mitchell, 2 U. S. (2 Dall.) 348; bk. 1, L. ed. 410; United States v. Vigol, 2 U. S. (2 Dall.) 346; bk. 1, L. ed. 409.

When Civil War.—When the regular course of justice is interrupted by rebellion, or insurrection, so that courts of justice cannot be kept open, civil war exists; and hostilities may be prosecuted on the same footing as those opposing the government with foreign enemies invading the land. Prize Cases, 67 U. S. (2 Black) 635; bk. 17, L. ed. 459.

It is not the less a civil war because it is an "insurrection." Prize Cases, 67 U. S. (2 Black) 635; bk. 17, L. ed. 459.

Whether the hostile party be a foreign invader or states organized in rebellion, it is none the less a war, although no declaration of it be unilateral. War may exist without declaration on either side. Prize Cases, 67 U. S. (2 Black) 635; bk. 17, L. ed. 459.

To constitute a levying of war, there must be an assemblage of persons for the purpose of effecting by force a treasonable purpose. Enlistment of men to serve against the government is not sufficient. Ex parte Bollman, 8 U. S. (4 Cranch) 75; bk. 2, L. ed. 554.

2. Mrs. Alexander's Cotton, 69 U. S. (2 Wall.) 404; bk. 17, L. ed. 915.

Persons residing within states in insurrection at any time during the civil war must be considered as enemies without regard to their personal sentiments or disposition. The Peterhoff, 5 U. S. (5 Wall.) 28; bk. 18, L. ed. 51.

The principle that the personal character and disposition of an individual inhabitant of enemy territory cannot be inquired into in questions of capture, applies as well in civil as foreign war. Hence, all the people of any district that was in insurrection against the Uni-rebellion, certain belligerent rights were conceded to the rebels in arms, but the government of the confederacy was not recognized. The intercourse was confined to its military au-

the southern rebellion are to be treated as having been enemies, except as by action of the government that relation may have been changed. S. Dist. of N. Y. 1861, the Blatchf. Pr. Cas. (U. S.) 1, 16; Clinton, Blatchf. Pr. Cas. 15; Gooch v. United States, 15 U. S. 281.

Treated as Enemies.—All persons residing within the territory of the United States whose property may be seized to increase the revenue of the war, are liable to be treated as enemies, though not foreigners. Prize Cases, 12 U. S. (2 Black) 635; bk. 17, L. ed. 409.

Residents of a district in insurrection against the general government, are liable to be treated as enemies, 4 West. L. Month. 437.

The apprehension of any loss of property by waste or fire, or even of personal injury to the person, is no excuse for joining an insurrection. United States v. Vigol, 2 U. S. (2 Dall.) 1, L. ed. 409.

War with the Confederate States.—The rebels are at the same time enemies and traitors, and subject to the laws of each; while the United States maintain the double character of belligerents and sovereign, and have the same rights as belligerents, unimpaired by the fact that the rebels owe allegiance. The Sprague (U. S.) 177; The Sprague (U. S.) 123; Monongahela Ins. Co. v. Chesapeake, 18 U. S. (5 Wheat.) 491; Cochran v. Tucker, 18 U. S. (5 Wheat.) 186; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 334.

War exists whenever the regular government is interrupted by rebellion, or insurrection, so that the government cannot be kept open; and as the rebels the legitimate governments of the rebels both sovereign and belligerents. See The Hiawatha, 18 U. S. (5 Wheat.) 1; United States v. W. F. Johnson, 18 Leg.

War exists when a party State which no longer obeys the government, and is sufficiently strong to maintain itself against him, or when, in a republic, the nation is divided into two opposite factions, and both sides take up arms. Usage applies the term civil war to every war between members of the same political society. Lawrence Wheaton's Intern. Law, 523.

"Enemy Territory."—The district or country declared by the constituted authorities, during the late civil war, to be in insurrection against the government of the United States, was enemy territory, and all the people residing within such district were, according to public law, and for all purposes connected with the prosecution of the war, liable to be treated by the United States, pending the war, and while they remained within the lines of the insurrection, as enemies, without reference to their personal sentiments and dispositions. Ford v. Surget, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 595; bk. 24, L. ed. 1018.

Same—Protection of Property.—The federal court has never gone further, in protecting the property of citizens residing in the insurrectionary States, from judicial sale, than to declare that, where such citizen has been driven from his home by a special military order, and forbidden to return, judicial proceedings against him were void. Washington University of Mo. v. Finch, 85 U. S. (18 Wall.) 106; bk. 21, L. ed. 818.

Same—Change in Status of Country.—Upon the issuing of General Butler's proclamation, the legal status of New Orleans and its inhabitants with respect to the United States became changed; before that time the former was enemy territory and the latter were enemies in all respects as if the pending strife had been a public war between the United States and a foreign belligerent and the city had been a part of the country of the enemy, although the conflict was in fact only a domestic insurrection of large proportions. Desmare v. United States, 93 U. S. (3 Otto) 605; bk. 23, L. ed. 559.

1. Hickman v. Jones, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 197; bk. 19, L. ed. 551; Thornton v. Smith, 75 U. S. (8 Wall.) 1; bk. 19, L. ed. 361; United States v. Keebler, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 83; bk. 19, L. ed. 574; Thomas v. Richmond, 79 U. S. (12 Wall.) 349; bk. 20, L. ed. 453; White v.

III. MEANS EMPLOYED TO SUPPRESS INSURRECTION.—1. Military Power Employed to Suppress Insurrection.—The paramount law common to all countries is that whatever force is necessary for self-defence is lawful. This law, applied nationally, is the martial law, which is an offshoot of the common law, and although ordinarily dormant in peace, may be called forth by insurrection or invasion.¹ The State Hart, 80 U. S. (13 Wall.) 646; bk. 20, L. ed. 685; Spott v. United States, 87 U. S. (20 Wall.) 459; bk. 22, L. ed. 371; Dewing v. Perdicaries, 96 U. S. (6 Otto) 193; bk. 24, L. ed. 654; Keith v. Clark, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 454; bk. 24, L. ed. 1071; Stevens v. Griffith, 111 U. S. 48; bk. 28, L. ed. 348.

Rights of Belligerents.—Until the federal government recognizes a state of war as existing between a foreign government and an insurgent province, the rights of the latter as a belligerent cannot be admitted. A court's action in such case depends entirely on that of the general government. Dimond v. Petit, 2 La. Ann. 537; s. c., 46 Am. Dec. 556.

The recognition of rebel belligerency by other governments clothe insurgents with a quasi sovereignty for war purposes, and makes them in the view of courts lawful combatants. Such recognition is the province of the political and executive departments only. Courts must follow, and cannot lead, the executive. Until recognition, the former order of things in foreign states is considered by the courts as continuing; courts have no authority to institute an original inquiry into the conditions of a foreign strife in order to determine whether it should be deemed mere sedition and rebellion or a technical civil war carrying with it belligerent rights in the rebels. The Ambrose Light, 25 Fed. Rep. 408.

The confederate government was regarded by the courts as simply the military representative of the insurrection against the authority of the United States. Ford v. Surget, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 594; bk. 24, L. ed. 1018.

By its act of secession and rebellion no rebel State ceased to be a State of the Union. The citizens of any such State did not, by such secession and rebellion, cease to be citizens of the Union. Ford v. Surget, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 594; bk. 24, L. ed. 1018.

To the confederate army was, however, conceded, in the interest of humanity, and to prevent the cruelties of reprisals and retaliation, such belligerent rights as belonged, under the law of nations, to the armies of independent governments engaged in war against each other—that concession placing soldiers and officers of the rebel army as to all matters directly connected with the mode of prosecuting the war “on the footing of those engaged in lawful war,” and exempting “them from liability for acts of legitimate warfare.” Ford v. Surget, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 594; bk. 24, L. ed. 1018.

1. 2 Hare's Am. Const. Law 924.
Powers of Congress.—Congress, which is confided the power to make war, to suppress insurrection, to lay taxes, to make rules concerning commerce on land and on sea, is not deprived of these powers when the necessity for their exercise is called out by domestic insurrection and internal civil war. Tyler v. Defrees, 78 U. S. (10 Wall.) 331; bk. 20, L. ed. 161.

The power of regulating the militia and of commanding its services in time of insurrection and invasion, are (as has been emphatically said they are) natural incidents to the duties of superintending the common defence, and watching over the internal peace of the confederacy.” These powers must be construed as to the modes of their exercise as not to defeat the great end in view. Martin v. Mott, 25 U. S. (10 Wheat.) 19; bk. 6, L. ed. 537.

The constitution authorizes martial law proper to be exercised within the limits of the United States in time of invasion or insurrection, or during civil war, within the limits of the States in actual rebellion, when the public danger requires its exercise. It may be called into action by congress, or in case of justifying or excusing peril, by the president, when ordinary law no longer adequately secures public safety and private rights. Ex parte Milligan, 71 U. S. (4 Wall. 2); bk. 18, L. ed. 281.

A state may use its military power to put down an armed insurrection that is strong to be controlled by the ci must determine what degree of force the crisis demands.¹ Confiscation of Property.—Confiscation of property is a means of suppressing insurrection. The acts of congress authorizing Luther v. Borden, 48 U. S. 1; bk. 12, L. ed. 581.

By the President.—The act of congress of February 28th, 1795, authorizes the president to call out the militia to suppress an insurrection against a state on application of the legislative executive of the state. Luther et al., 48 U. S. (7 How.) 1; L. ed. 581.

On the 2nd of May, 1792, the president almost verbatim by the act of February 28th, 1795, the president of the United States, in case of invasion, or of imminent danger of it, or when it may be necessary for executing the laws of the United States, or to suppress insurrection, call forth such number of militia of the states most convenient to the scene of action as he may deem necessary, and to issue his orders for that purpose to such officers of the militia as he shall think proper. L. v. Moore, 18 U. S. (5 Wheat.) L. ed. 22.

The authority to decide whether the insurrection contemplated in the constitution of the United States and the act of 1795, ch. 101, in which the president has the authority to call forth the militia, have arisen, is exclusively of the president, and his decision is binding upon all other persons. Mott, 25 U. S. (12 Wheat.) L. ed. 537. McCall's Case, 5 U. S. (259).

L. v. Borden, 48 U. S. (7 How.) bk. 12, L. ed. 581.

By the President.—There are many instances in which martial law has been declared and enforced in case of rebellion and insurrection, not only in the United States and British colonial possessions, but also in England and Ireland. Ex parte Gould, 2 H. Black 98; Commentaries, vol. 2, p. 602; Parl. Deb., N. S., vol. 11, 3rd ser. 115; 1 Bl. Com. 136; Bowling's Universal Pub. Law 424; Hallock's Law and Laws of War, 375.

By the President.—Under the provisions of the act of July 13th, 1862, providing that the president by proclamation might declare the inhabitants of a State, or any section or part thereof to be in a state of insurrection against the United States, the people of such parts of the insurgent states as came under national occupation and control were treated as if their relations to the national government had not been interrupted; and vessels belonging to citizens residing within such excepted districts, or neutrals residing there and not affected by any attempts to run the blockade, or by any act of hostility against the United States, after the publication of the proclamation, must be regarded as protected by its terms. Cook v. United States, 69 U. S. (2 Wall.) 218; bk. 17, L. ed. 866.

The government had the same power and rights in territory held by it by conquest in the insurrectionary states as if the territory had belonged to a foreign country, and had been subjected in a foreign war. New Orleans v. N. Y. Mail Steamship Co., 87 U. S. (20 Wall.) 387; bk. 22, L. ed. 354.

After martial law is declared by a State in suppressing an insurrection, a military officer may arrest anyone who he has reasonable cause to believe was engaged in the insurrection, or order a house to be forcibly entered; but no more force can be used than is necessary to accomplish the object. And if the power is exercised for the purpose of oppression, or an injury wilfully done to person or property, the person by whom or by whose order it is committed is answerable. Luther v. Borden, 48 U. S. (7 How.) 1; bk. 12, L. ed. 581.

A commanding officer in the ordinary course of a campaign owes no account, save to his own conscience, for denying quarter to a flying enemy. The rule holds good when insurgents take the field against the government, and they may be dealt with in any way which the laws of war permit in the case of a foreign enemy. There is, and from the nature of the case can be, no distinction in this regard between an intestine and a foreign war, because the government would otherwise be at a disadvantage in dealing with rebellion. But the rule is confined to the forces arrayed on either side, and does not extend to the citizens who take no part in the military operations, although they may sympathize with the insurgents. 2 Hare's Am. Const. Law, 922.

confiscation were a legitimate exercise of the war power, and constitutional.¹

1. Miller v. United States, 78 U. S. (11 Wall.) 268; bk. 20, L. ed. 135; United States v. Republican Banner Office, 11 Pittsb. Leg. J. (Pa.) 153.

Sentence of confiscation, if duly rendered, rises superior to all liens and equities. (W. Dist of Pa., 1862). United States v. The Isaac Hammett, 2 Pittsb. (Pa.) 358.

Confiscation—Constitutionality of Law.—The act of July 13th, 1861, providing for the seizure and confiscation of vessels belonging to the citizens of States in insurrection, is within the legislative competency of congress. The Ned, Blatchf. Pr. Cas. (U. S.) 119.

The act of congress of August 6th, 1861, authorizes proceedings in the circuit court for condemnation of property used in aid of rebellion; and where a manufactory of arms for the use of insurgents was established on ground leased with the knowledge and consent of the lessor, the land became lawfully subject to prize and capture. Union Ins. Co. v. United States, 73 U. S. (6 Wall.) 759; bk. 18, L. ed. 879.

A vessel and her cargo owned by residents in an insurrectionary State in the war of 1861-65 are enemy's property, and are subject in the federal courts to condemnation as prize of war. The Sally Magee, Blatchf. Pr. Cas. (U. S.) 382; affd. 70 U. S. (3 Wall.) 451; bk. 18, L. ed. 197; The Crenshaw, Blatchf. Pr. Cas. (U. S.) 2.

The cotton of a citizen of a district in insurrection, taken as maritime prize should be delivered over to or its proceeds paid into the treasury of the United States in order that the claimant may have the opportunity hereafter to assert a claim to it. Mrs. Alexander's Cotton, 69 U. S. (2 Wall.) 404; bk. 17, L. ed. 915.

"Prize and Capture"—Statutory Construction.—The employment of the phrase "prize and capture," in the act of August 6th 1861 (12 St. 319, now Rev. St., § 5308), declaring private property used in promoting insurrection to be "lawful subject of prize and capture wherever found,"—does not limit the operation of the act to property taken at sea. Property found on shore, or even land itself, may be condemned under the act. N. Dist. of Ga., 1868, United States v. The Athens Armory, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 129.

Confiscation of Property—Inform.—After a proceeding has been instituted, under the act of August 6th, 1861, ch. 68, § 3 (12 St. 319, now Rev. St., § 5311), to confiscate property used for insurrectionary purposes by the attorney general alone, wholly for the benefit of the United States, and after issue has been joined and proofs furnished by both parties, no person can come in asserting himself to have been the informant and so share the benefit of the proceeding. Supreme Ct., 1866, Francis v. United States, 72 U. S. (5 Wall.) 372; bk. 18, L. ed. 603.

Same—Condemnation of Vessel.—Where a vessel liable to condemnation under the act of July 13th, 1861, in restricting trade with districts in insurrection, was actually condemned under the principle of international law, the court is not bound to apply the statute as though she had been condemned in a proceeding under it. The Hampshire, 72 U. S. (5 Wall.) 372; bk. 18, L. ed. 659.

The acceptance by a vessel of a claimance under the confederate states during fore open hostilities were set on foot by the insurgent states, will be regarded in a prize court as taking place previous to the recognition by the government of an existing state of civil war between the insurgent portion of the country and the government. Hannah M. Johnson, Blatchf. Pr. Cas. (U. S.) 97.

Same—Consent of Owner to Employment.—The statute of August 6th, 1861, regarded the consent of the owner to the employment of his property in rebellion as an offence, and inflicted forfeiture as a penalty, and the general pardon of the owner relieved him from much of the penalty as accrued to him under the act. Armstrong's Foundry, 73 U. S. (6 Wall.) 766; bk. 18, L. ed. 882.

Giving Aid and Comfort to Rebellion.—It is not giving aid and comfort to the rebellion for an alien, residing abroad, to purchase the products of insurrectionary districts for ordinary business purposes through a commercial house within the rebel lines, and accept and pay drafts abroad drawn for the purchase price of the products. Nor does such a transaction violate any statute of the United States.

Restraint of Commercial Intercourse.—Restraint of commercial intercourse is a means of suppressing insurrection. In the late rebellion, commercial intercourse between the inhabitants of territory in insurrection and those of territory not in insurrection, except under the license of the president, and according to regulations prescribed by the secretary of the treasury, was not lawfully prohibited.¹ Where intercourse between the inhabitants of two belligerent sections is prohibited by proclamation of the president as provided by the statute, a contract of sale with the inhabitants of such sections is void, and a suit cannot be maintained thereon for the benefit of the vendee.² public law. Ct. of Claims, Johnson v. United States, 6 Ct. Cl. 533.

Act of July 13th, 1861, which provides for forfeiture of goods upon violation of trade between the territories and interdicted ports, to wit: the vessel or vehicle containing the same,—goods forming the cargo of a vessel proceeding to a point in an insurrectionary State are liable for seizure only while in transit, and not only while the contraband is on board. Dist. of Md., 1864, United States v. Hatch, 4 Am. L. Reg.

Special informer in proceedings for confiscation of property of those in insurrection against the United States is liable for costs and damages. United States v. Francis, 5 Wall. 338; bk. 18, L. ed.

Penbury v. United States (Schuta Cotton"), 73 U. S. (6 Wall.) 18, L. ed. 935; Hamilton v. United States, 21 U. S. (21 Wall.) 73; bk. 22, of congress of July 13th, 1861, prohibiting of commercial intercourse with insurrectionary districts as a temporary act, nor provision limiting the restrictions therein established in relation of hostilities give it effect. The Reform, 70 U. S. (17 Wall.) 17; bk. 18, L. ed. 105.

Not until the proclamation of July, 1861, that commercial intercourse in general between the States was in insurrection and those States became unlawful. Sumner v. Matthews, 1875, Matthews v. McSteen, 1875, Otto 7; bk. 23, L. ed. 188. The Confederate States.—It is regarded as settled that the late war between the so called Confederate States and the United States was a public war, and a war not only between the respective governments, but between all the inhabitants of the one territory on the one side, and all the inhabitants of the other territory on the other side, so that all the people of each must be regarded as having been enemies of all the people of the other during the continuance of the war. And not only on general principles did the existence of such war import a prohibition of all unlicensed commercial or business intercourse and correspondence between persons domiciled in the one territory and persons domiciled in the other, but by the express provision of the act of July 13th, 1861, and of the proclamation of the president of August 1861, issued in pursuance thereof, all commercial intercourse between the territory that was in a state of insurrection against the United States, and the citizens of the rest of the United States, became unlawful during the continuance of such condition of hostility. Kanawha Coal Co. v. Kanawha etc. Coal Co., 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 391.

2. Cutner v. United States, 84 U. S. (17 Wall.) 517; bk. 21, L. ed. 656.

Trading with Enemy—The doctrines of international or public law and express legislative declaration avoid a contract unlicensed or unauthorized by government, made during the rebellion, between a resident of an insurrectionary State and a State which was loyal to the Union; and after the war has terminated the defendant, in an action founded upon such a contract, may plead the illegality thereof as a defence. 8th Circ. (Iowa), 1871, Phillips v. Hatch, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 571; 3 Am. L. T. (U. S.) 191.

Where a citizen of New Orleans, after its subjugation by the federal forces in the late war, went within the rebel lines and engaged actively in the services of the rebel government, and while so engaged acquired the ownership of cotton, his contracts for the cotton were clearly illegal and void and gave him no title. Desmare v. United States, 93 U. S. (3 Otto) 605; bk. 23, L. ed. 559.

A purchase of cotton made by a citizen of New Orleans of the agent of the treasury department of the Confederate States within the Confederate lines was illegal; such purchase is not protected by a license in conformity with treasury regulations issued under the act of July 13th, 1861, to trade generally within the insurgent territory. McKee v. United States, 75 U. S. (8 Wall.) 163; bk. 19, L. ed. 329.

The act of July 17th, 1863, so far restricts the provisions of the act of July 13th, 1861, as to render void all purchases made of those holding official relation to the government of the Confederate States, even by those having a license to trade in the insurgent territory, issued under the provisions of the act of 1861. S. Dist. of Ill., 1864; United States v. 137 Bales of Cotton, Int. Rev. Cas. (U. S.) 70.

Under the act of July 13th, 1861, the president alone could license and permit commercial intercourse with any State or section in a state of insurrection. The Sea Lion v. United States ("The Sea Lion"), 72 U. S. (5 Wall.) 630; bk. 18, L. ed. 618. United States v. The Reform ("The Reform"), 70 U. S. (3 Wall.) 617; bk. 18, L. ed. 105.

A treasury license to trade generally within the insurgent territory would not authorize a purchase from an important official of the Confederate States. Such property was liable to seizure at the place of purchase, and to condemnation. McKee v. United States, 75 U. S. (8 Wall.) 163; bk. 19, L. ed. 329.

Licenses given by the military authorities were nullities, and conferred no rights whatever. Whitenbury v. United States ("The Ouachita Cotton"), 73 U. S. (6 Wall.) 521; bk. 18, L. ed. 935.

Conditions Imposed by Government.—The United States government had power to impose a condition requiring the payment of four cents per pound for a permit to purchase cotton in and transported from the insurrectionary States during the late civil war. Hilton v. Dillin, 88 U. S. (21 Wall.) bk. 22, L. ed. 528.

Under the acts of congress and proclamation of the president declaring commercial intercourse between inhabitants of the States in rebellion and other citizens of the United States unlawful, unless a special licence obtained, a purchase of cotton by a citizen of Ohio from an inhabitant of an insurrectionary district passed no title. Such cotton is liable to seizure and condemnation. S. Dist. of Ill., 1864; United States v. 910 Bales of Cotton, Int. Rev. Cas. (U. S.) 66; s. p. S. Dist. of Mo., 1863; United States v. 269½ Bales of Cotton, Int. Rev. Cas. (U. S.) 2, 64; S. Dist. of New York, 1862; The John Gilpin, Blatchf. Cas. (U. S.) 291.

Section 8 of the act of congress of July 2nd, 1864, authorizing agents to purchase for the United States any products of States declared to be in insurrection, conferred no power to license trading within the military lines of an enemy. United States v. Lane, 75 U. S. (8 Wall.) 185; bk. 19, L. ed. 445.

Under the proclamation of the president of March 31st, 1863, the whole insurrectionary States were placed on the same footing as to intercourse with the loyal States, but trade, in conformity with a license granted by the president through the secretary of the treasury, and the regulations prescribed, was lawful in whatsoever part of an insurrectionary country it was carried on, and a contract to carry on trade in conformity thereto was lawful. Cham v. Merrill, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 1.

A purchasing agent of the United States had no authority to purchase products of insurrectionary States, except from the party who either owned or controlled them, or to purchase within the rebel lines. Neither the regulations nor the regulations through which was administered will protect a speculation wherein the products contracted to be sold were to be procured by a contractor within the rebel lines at the contract was made. Maddox v. United States, 82 U. S. (15 Wall.) bk. 21, L. ed. 61.

An order, excepting a person from the provisions of the Nonintercourse Act for the delivery and sale to the United States of products of the insurrectionary States, which he claims to own in which he has arrangements with par-employed to suppress. INSURRECTION. Denial of Courts of Justice.

Denial of Courts of Justice to Insurgents.—A citizen of a State in insurrection has, legally, no standing in a court of the United States.

not give him authority to make future purchases. United States, 106 U. S. 113; bk. 27, L. ed. 266.

of July 2nd, 1864, recognized the regulations of the treasury on the sub-commercial intercourse with a insurrection. United States v. ..., 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 72; bk. 27.

Treasury regulation No. 22, forbidding transportation of coin or any State or section declared insurrection's proclamation to be valid and was by the act of May 20th, 1862. United States v. ..., 80 U. S. (13 Wall.) 358; bk. 27, L. ed. 606.

Land under a power in a deed executed before the late civil war—the payment of promises, held valid, notwithstanding the place during the war and the persons therein were citizens and one of the States declared insurrection at the time of the property of such citizens. A loyal State is liable to seizure for debts contracted before the outbreak of the war, as in the case of nonresidents. Supreme Ct., ... v. Finch, 85 U. S. (18 Wall.) 21; bk. 21, L. ed. 818. Comandez v. United States, 7 Ct.

that a mortgage was made on a citizen's territory to a loyal citizen of the United States does not necessarily render the intercourse between the parties contrary to the proclamation of the president, of the August 16th, 1861, 12 Stat., 1262. The authority of the act of July 13th, 1861, ch. 3, § 5; United States v. ..., 103 U. S. (13 Otto) 595; bk. 26, L. ed. 4. Contract made in 1862, between subjects residing in France, of French birth, and persons residing within the limits of the insurrectionary States of the United States, of the other, was not a contract between enemies forbidden by the act of nations, the president's proclamation, or the acts of congress. Marx, 19 La. Ann. 491.

act of the Appropriation act was that it authorized the secretary of the interior to expend the sum appropriated in purchase of cotton seed in the places indicated in the act, and to cause the same to be transported here for general distribution. He had no power whatever to authorize the agent to transport merchandise to any state or district declared to be in a state of insurrection, under the provision of a prior act. United States v. The Reform ("The Reform"), 70 U. S. (3 Wall.) 617; bk. 18, L. ed. 105.

The Appropriation act of February 13th, 1862, is not repugnant to the provision of the prior act prohibiting commercial intercourse between States or districts in insurrection and the rest of the United States. United States v. The Reform ("The Reform"), 70 U. S. (3 Wall.) 617; bk. 18, L. ed. 105.

The act of congress July 13th, 1861, prescribes that the president shall license trade with districts in insurrection. The Sea Lion v. United States, 72 U. S. (5 Wall.) 630; bk. 18, L. ed. 619.

A license from a special agent of the treasury department to carry on such commercial intercourse was a nullity and gave to the vessel and cargo no protection. They were as much liable to capture and condemnation as any other vessel or cargo leaving a blockaded port and coming within reach of a blockading vessel. The Sea Lion v. United States ("The Sea Lion"), 72 U. S. (5 Wall.) 630; bk. 18 L. ed. 618.

1. S. Dist. of N. Y. 1863, The D. Sargeant, Blatchf. Pr. Cas. 576.

From and after the act of July 13th, 1861, and the president's proclamation of August 16th, 1861, pursuant thereto, declaring the inhabitants of Arkansas to be in a state of insurrection against the United States, and until the determination of such insurrection, an inhabitant of Arkansas could not maintain an action in the courts within the State of Oregon against an inhabitant of the latter State; and therefore the period during which such insurrection existed is not to be counted as a part of the time limited for the commencement of such an action. 9th Circ. (Oreg.) 1870, Chappelle v. Olney, 1 Sawyer (17 S.) 401; 4 Am. L. T. (U. S.) 30.

The act of July 13th, 1861, impliedly

5. Legislative Acts of Insurgents Held Void.—An act of an insurgent State legislature, intended to aid rebellion, can be given no effect by the courts.¹

authorized the president, so long as congress did not otherwise provide, to declare by proclamation that the insurrection before declared by him to exist had ceased as to the inhabitants of any State or section thereof. And the president having declared the inhabitants of Arkansas in a state of insurrection, the court does not judicially know that any portion of them, then or afterward, were within the exception in the proclamation, because they in fact maintained a loyal adhesion to the Union, or inhabited a portion of the State occupied and controlled by the forces of the United States. 9th Circ. (Oreg.) 1870, Chappelle v. Olney, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 401; 4 Am. L. T. (U. S.) 30.

Ordinarily, acts done by persons in arms against the government are tainted with the illegality of the end in view, and punishable by the criminal law, or they are a ground for the recovery of damages under the civil law; but when an insurrection assumes the proportions of a civil war, the relations of the insurgents among themselves are the same as if they were the subjects of an alien and hostile power, and no one of them can maintain an action against another for the consequences of a state of things to which they all impliedly agreed. 2 Hare's Am. Const. Law. 764.

1. Texas v. White, 74 U. S. (7 Wall.) 700; bk. 19, L. ed. 227.

The rebellion was only an insurrection; there was no rebel government de facto, so as to give any legal efficacy to its acts. Hickman v. Jones, 76 U. S. (9 Wall.) 197; bk. 19, L. ed. 551.

The legislature of any State in insurrection cannot be regarded in the courts of the United States as a lawful legislature, or its acts as lawful acts. Nevertheless, the rebel government in any such State was its only actual government, which, having displaced the regular and lawful authority and established itself in the customary seats of power and in the exercise of the ordinary functions of administration, constituted a de facto government, whose acts during its existence as such would be effectual, and, in many respects, valid. The acts of such a de facto though unlawful government, which must be regarded as valid, are those that are necessary to peace and good order among citizens; such, for example, as acts sanctioning and protecting marriage and the domestic relations, governing the course of descents, regulating the conveyance and transfer of property, real and personal, and providing remedies for injuries to persons and estate, and other similar acts. The acts of such a government which must be regarded as invalid and void are those that were in furtherance or support of rebellion against the United States or intended to defeat the just rights of citizens, and other acts of like nature. Texas v. White, 74 U. S. (7 Wall.) 700; bk. 19, L. ed. 227; Sprott v. United States, 8 Ct. of Cl. (U. S.) 499.

Enactments of De Facto Legislatures of Confederate States.—All the enactments of the de facto legislatures in the insurrectionary States during the war which were not hostile to the Union or the authority of the general government, and which were not in conflict with the constitution of the United States or of the States, have the same validity as if they had been enactments of legitimate legislatures. United States v. Home Ins. Co., 89 U. S. (22 Wall.) 99; bk. 22, L. ed. 816.

Whatever act of the legislature of a rebel State did not tend to further or support the rebellion or to defeat the just rights of citizens, but related merely to the domestic affairs of the people of the State as a community, aside from the connection of that people with the rebellion, is a valid act by a de facto though unlawful government, which will be sustained in the courts of the United States. Ct. of Claims, 1872, Home Ins. Co. v. United States, 8 Ct. of Cl. (U. S.) 449; aff'd, 89 U. S. (22 Wall.) 99; bk. 22, L. ed. 816.

Acts done under the authority of an insurgent body actually organized as a government within a large extent of territory, not merely in hostility to the regular and lawful government, but in complete exclusion of it from the whole territory subject to insurgent control, when in hostility to the regular government, cannot be recognized as lawful. 4th Circ. (Va.) 1868, Keppel v. Pittsburgh R. Co., Chase Dec. (U. S.) 167.

There was no legislation of the Con-

INTEMPERANCE—INTEMPERATE—INTEND.

MEANS EMPLOYED TO PROTECT AND ENFORCE RIGHTS IN INSURRECTIONARY DISTRICTS.—The power to carry on war or suppress insurrection is not limited to victories in the field and the dispersal of insurgent forces. It authorizes measures to prevent the continuance of the conflict, and to remedy the evils which have resulted from its rise and progress.¹

INTEMPERANCE—(See DRUNKENNESS; HABIT; HABITUAL; MODERATION).—The use of anything beyond moderation. But does not necessarily imply drunkenness.² An occasional use of strong liquors is not to be deemed intemperance, but there is an indulgence to such an extent as would be considered an

INTEMPERATE.—See HABIT; HABITUAL.

INTEND.—See INTENT.⁴

Congress which the Supreme Court recognize as having any authority against the United States, or against any of its citizens who, pending the insurrection, resided outside of the declared insurrectionary districts. Surget, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 41, L. ed. 1018.

Ex parte Ct. 1870, Stewart v. U. S. (11 Wall.) 493, 505; bk. 176.

Courts.—Trial of Civil Causes. The institution did not prohibit the trial by military authority, of the trial of civil causes during war in conquered portions of the insurgent States. Mechanics' etc. Union Bank, 89 U. S. (22 Wall.) 5; bk. 22, L. ed. 871.

It was within the constitutional authority of the president, as commander in chief, to establish provisional courts, in insurgent territory, to be held by national forces, for the trial of causes under State or Federal laws, and to establish the Federal court for the State of Texas. The Grapeshot v. Waller (the Grapeshot), 76 U. S. (9 Otto) 19; bk. 19, L. ed. 651.

Declaration of pardon and amnesty. President Johnson's Declaration of Pardon, 1868, was limited to persons who participated in the late insurrection and to the offence of rebellion against the United States or to their enemies during the war. Gay's Gold, 80 U. S. (10 Otto) 358; 20, bk. L. ed. 606.

Ex parte v. The People, 76 Ill.

Ex parte v. Home L. Ins. Co., 9 R.

4. In a patent for lands the words "intended for public uses" were held equivalent to "dedicated to public use." Com. v. Alburger, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 480.

Where a statute orders the forfeiture of liquors, "intended for sale contrary to law," the forfeiture will take place if any person has an intent to sell them unlawfully. But where the offence is keeping them "with intent" to sell, the intention on the part of the particular person charged must be proved. State v. Learned, 47 Me. 426.

A letter with a fictitious address, which cannot be delivered, is not "intended to be conveyed by mail," within the meaning of a statute prohibiting the embezzlement of such a letter. United States v. Denicke, 35 Fed. Rep. 407. Nor is a decoy letter placed in a receptacle for unmailable matter. U. S. v. Rapp, 30 Fed. Rep. 818.

The words "intended to be recorded" used in a deed in reference to a power of attorney, under which the deed purports to have been made, imply a covenant on the part of the grantor to procure the power to be recorded within a reasonable time. Penn. v. Preston, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 14; s. c., 4 Wheel. Am. C. L. 9.

Where in order to arrest on mesne process a plaintiff is required to make affidavit that "he has reason to believe that the defendant is likely to remove beyond the jurisdiction of the court," an affidavit that "he has reason to believe that the defendant intends to leave the State," was held insufficient. "A person may intend to do what there is no likelihood that he will do. And one person may safely swear that he has reason to believe that another in-

INTENT.—(See ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS; AMBIGUOUS CONTRACTS; CRIMINAL LAW; DOMICILE; FIXTURES; INTERPRETATION; STATUTES; WILLS).

- | | |
|--|---|
| 1. Definition, 366. | 6. Intention of Testator, 372. |
| 2. Legislative Intent, 366. [368. | 7. Intention as to Fixtures Between Landlord and Tenant, 376. |
| 3. Intention of Parties to a Contract, | 8. Proof of Intent, 376. |
| 4. Criminal Intent, 372. | 9. Presumption of Intent, 377. |
| 5. Animus Manendi in Questions of Domicile, 372. | |

1. Definition.—Intention is a design, purpose, resolve or determination of the mind.¹

2. Legislative Intent.—In the construction of a statute, the legislative intent is to be deduced from a view of every part of the statute taken and compared together.² If the words³ are tends to do an act which he has no reason to believe it is likely that the other will do." Wood v. Melins, 8 Allen (Mass.) 434.

A covenant for the free use of the "newly intended road whenever the same may be made," will not apply to a road which, when the parties contracted, was intended to be made, but was executed and complete before the sealing of the covenant. Crisp v. Price, 5 Taunt. 548.

1. Referred to an act, it denotes the state of mind with which the act is done. State v. Tom, 2 Jones' Law (N. Car.) 416.

* It is the exercise of intelligent will, the mind being fully aware of the nature and consequences of the act which is about to be done, and with such knowledge and with full liberty of action willing and electing to do it. Smith v. State, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 619.

2. Crawfordsville etc. Turnpike Co. v. Fletcher, 104 Ind. 97; Holl v. Deshler, 71 Pa. St. 299; Davy v. Burlington etc. R. R. Co., 31 Iowa 553; Berry v. Clary, 77 Me. 482; Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 152; Lincoln College Case, 3 Rep. 596.

3. Co. Litt. 381; 1 Blackstone's Com. 59. Where a word has a clear and settled meaning at common law, it ought to have the same meaning in construing a statute in which it is used. Adams v. Turrentine, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 147; Snell v. Bridgewater Co., 24 Pick. (Mass.) 296; Belfast v. Folger, 71 Me. 403; Daily v. Burke, 28 Ala. 328; Gordon v. State, 4 Kan. 489; Coxe v. Martin, 44 Pa. St. 322.

"Person."—The word "person" in a statute embraces not only natural but artificial persons or corporations unless the language indicates that it is used in a more limited sense. U. S. v. Ammedy, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 421; Chase v. Steamboat Co., 10 R. I. 43; Cincinnati Gas etc. Co. v. Avon, 43 Ohio St. 257; Oak Ridge Coal Lim. v. Rogers, 108 Pa. St. 147. See FRANCHISES, 8 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law, pp. 625-627.

"May."—The word "may" is construed to mean "shall" or "must," where public interests are concerned. M. v. Bank, 1 Peters (U. S.) 64; Mouth v. Leeds, 76 Me. 28; Stein v. Franklin Co., 48 Mo. 167; Kenned v. Sacramento, 10 Sawyer (C. C. U. S.) 29; Healy v. Dettra (Pa.), 7 C. Rep. 168.

"And"—"Or."—"And" may be construed in some cases to mean "or" or "or" to mean "and." Bark Esty, 19 Vt. 131; McConky v. Medina County Superior Court, 56 Mo. 83; Com. v. Griffin, 105 Mass. 185.

Elimination of Words.—Words introduced by mistake may be omitted if they changed to their obvious meaning. Thus, a statute conferring jurisdiction on courts, wherein the word "not" appears clearly by mistake in such a way as to nullify the intention of the legislature, will be read as though the word had been omitted. Chapman v. State, 16 Fed. App. 76. In Palms v. S. wano County, 61 Wis. 211, the word "south" was read "north." Hicks v. Jamison, 10 Mo. App. 11; Haney v. State, 34 Ark. 263; Pe v. Hoffman, 97 Ill. 234.

Punctuation.—Punctuation may be disregarded. Martin v. Gleason, 101 Mass. 183; Albright v. Tayne, 101

the intention is to be collected from the contract, from the provision and necessity of the law; from the mischief felt, and the remedy in view; and the intention is to be pre-ferred in accordance with what is consonant with reason and good construction of statutes,² the courts seek to ascertain the legislative intent and to give it full effect. It will never be imputed to the legislature in enacting a law intended to violate the provisions of the constitution, since such an implication involves absurdity that the legislature intended to enact a nullity. Courts will, therefore, give a statute such a construction as will make it, if possible, to have effect.³ Where a portion of a Hammock v. Loan Co., 105 Pa. St. 311; Gyger's Est., 65 Pa. St. 311; v. Bayne, 44 Cal. 366. But Mad v. Gerry, 55 Vt. 174, there was a construction of a statute provided that "no lien on real personal property sold and passing into the hands of an additional purchaser shall be lost by not attaching creditors or without notice." The court held the act should read as though a comma after "purchasers," had been inserted in the act, though not in the original.

of the legislature creating a county, instead of a decimal between figures describing the sign of a degree was between figures would have been unless the sign were taken as a point; and it was held that should be so taken. Brown v. Lea (Tenn.) 732.

r.—No mere misnomer in the name of a natural person or corporation fatal to the validity of an act of a person or corporation in which the name is collected from the words. v. Sprague, 3 Sumner (U. S.) 10; Frankel v. United States, 19 U. S. 195; State v. Timme, 56 Wis. 45; Corporations, 4 Am. & Eng. Ency. 3, etc.

sufficient authority to warrant a construction from the words of a statute to follow them would be an absurd conclusion. Perry v. Jefferson County, 94 Ill. 100; State v. Brewster, 42 N. J.

in construing a statute, punctuation should rarely be disregarded. In Albion v. Payne, 43 Ohio 8, a comma was inserted after a word to before it, to effectuate the obvious intent.

1. The evil consequences to the public, which will arise from a statute, will be considered when its meaning is doubtful, in order to give it a more beneficial construction, but when the legislative intent is clearly expressed, they cannot be considered. Hines v. Wilmington etc. R. R. Co., 95 N. C. 434. See also Middleton v. Greeson (Ind.), 3 West. Rep. 908.

2. See also INTERPRETATION.

3. "Every presumption is in favor of the validity of a legislative act." Northampton v. County Commissioners, 145 Mass. 108; Crowley v. State, 111 Oreg. 512; Alexander v. People, 7 Colo. 155.

Where the language of a statute will bear two constructions equally obvious, that which makes it constitutional is to be preferred to that which makes it unconstitutional. Grenada County Supervisors v. Brogden, 112 U. S. 261. See also Simmons v. California Powder Works, 7 Colo. 285.

Constitutionality of Statutes Always the Preferred Construction.—Reed v. Morton, 119 Ill. 118; St. Louis v. St. Louis R. R. Co., 14 Mo. App. 221; People v. Kenney, 96 N. Y. 294; Franklin County and Nashville, Chattanooga & Ry. Co., 12 Lea (Tenn.) 521; Morrison v. State, 40 Ark. 448; Re Metropolitan Gas Light Co., 85 N. Y. 526; Dewhurst v. Allegheny City, 95 Pa. 437; South & North Ala. R. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 193; State v. Exnicios, 33 La. An. 253; State v. Crowley, 33 La. An. 782; Tillman v. Cocke, 9 Baxter (Tenn.) 429; Turner v. Woodson County Commrs., 27 Kan. 314; State v. Tuttle, 53 Wis. 45; Florida Central R. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118; Ex parte Frazer, 54 Cal.

statute conflicts with the constitution, it must be treated as a lity; if the remaining part is so dependent upon the unconstitutional sections that it cannot stand alone without a manifest version of the legislative intent, the whole statute is void.¹ however, the remaining part is not dependent upon that which is unconstitutional, and is complete in itself and capable being executed, it will be sustained.²

The courts will construe a statute of another State in accordance with the construction put upon it in that State.³

3. Intention of Parties to a Contract.—In ascertaining the intent of contracting parties the agreement is to be interpreted as a whole,⁴ and the subject matter and surrounding circumstances

94; Berry v. Baltimore etc. R. R. Co., 41 Md. 446; Isom v. Mississippi etc. R. R. Co., 36 Miss 300; State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 290; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; Myers v. People, 67 Ill. 503; Rood v. McCargar, 49 Cal. 117; State v. Snow, 3 R. I. 64; State v. Copeland, 3 R. I. 33.

The practice of the legislature is entitled to weight in passing upon the constitutionality of a statute. Howell v. State, 71 Ga. 224. But the verbal opinions of a few members of the legislature afford no rule for construing a statute. Cumberland County v. Boyd, 113 Pa. 52; District of Columbia v. Washington Market Co., 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 559. The journals of the legislature may be examined. Edgar v. Randolph County Commrs., 70 Ind. 331. In Bank of Pennsylvania v. Com., 19 Pa. St. 144, it was held that in construing a charter the court would not look into what occurred during its passage. But the same court held that when the object was identification of a statute, they would look into the legislative journal. Southwark Bk. v. Com., 26 Pa. St. 450. See also Miles v. Stevens, 3 Pa. St. 42. The contemporaneous construction given by the executive department is entitled to great weight. U. S. v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 52; U. S. v. Hill, 120 U. S. 169; Westbrook v. Miller, 56 Mich. 148.

Louisiana Code.—In construing the provisions of the Louisiana code, the French text may be looked to in clearing up obscurities or ambiguities in the English text. Viterbo v. Friedlander, 120 U. S. 707; Lafourche Parish v. Terrebonne Parish, 34 La. An. 1230.

1. Jones v. Jones, 104 N. Y. 234; Re Groff, 21 Neb. 647; Burkholtz v. State, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 71; Harris v. Niagara Co. Supervisors, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 279;

Tripp v. Overocker, 7 Colo. 72; Garrison County Commissioners v. O., 7 Colo. 467; People v. Jobs, 7 Colo. 467; Allen v. Louisiana, 103 U. S. 80; Garrison v. Racine, 13 Wis. 398; Allen v. Commissioners, 22 Ind. 491; Eck v. State, 5 W. Va. 515; Warren Mayor etc. of Charlestown, 2 (Mass.) 84.

Although a proviso is ineffectual because unconstitutional, it cannot be regarded when the intention of the legislature is in question. Conover v. Potts, 79 Pa. St. 164.

2. Thus the Maine acts, 1873, ch. 10, authorizing the location of a public highway in Portland, is not unconstitutional because a clause separable from the rest of the act purports to authorize the city to lease land taken and not sold. It was held that if such clause authorized that which was unlawful, it must be eliminated. Cole v. Cumberland Co. Commrs., 78 Me. 532. But where it is improbable that provisions standing alone, would have been enacted alone, the whole act must fall. State v. Potts, 43 Ohio St. 98.

In New Jersey a statute requiring the secretary of state to furnish copies of the laws to certain newspapers was rendered unconstitutional in toto because an unconstitutional provision reducing compensation to be paid to the secretary, for furnishing such copies, was what it was when he took the office. State v. Kelsey, 44 N. J. L. 1.

3. Thus the Ohio statute of limitations was construed by a New York court in accordance with the Ohio provisions, although a similar New York statute had received a contrary construction. Howe v. Welch, 17 (N. Y.) N. Cas. 397.

4. Moneyppenny v. Moneyppenny considered.¹ Latent ambiguities may be cured by parol.² A writing is signed by the parties, it is presumed, until contrary be proved, to embody their final determination, abating preliminary negotiations.³ Contracts should be expounded as the intent was at the time the contract was made.⁴ The parties should ordinarily receive their usual and obvious mean-

Interpretation. 572; Tate v. Tate, 75 Va. 572; Vorse, 52 Iowa 417; Alford, 77 Pa. 221; Talbot v. Mass. 139; Herbst v. Lowe, 139; St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Pacific R. Co. v. Beidler, 45 Ark. 17; Bentley v. Mo. App. 481; McConnel v. Orleans, 35 La. An. 273; Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 60 Md. 300; Garner, 70 Ala. 443; Busburn, 64 Ga. 271.

Montgomery R. Co. v. U. S. 584; Berry's Estate, 14 N. D. 319; Wilson v. Roots, 8 N. D. 67. Thus, whether an instrument is a conveyance, a mortgage or a conditional sale (its language being to be determined by the intention of the parties, as shown by the transaction and attending circumstances. Rockwell v. Humphrey, 139; Browne v. Hickie, 68 Iowa 319; Flood v. Mich., 6 N. D. 175; Field v. Leiter (Ill.), 139; Lyon v. Hersey (N. D.), 319; Baltimore & Ohio v. Brydon (Md.), 3 Cent.

defendants contracted to transfer certain stock vested in them to a third person and it appeared that no stock was in fact transferred in them, but the petitioners, the defendants, admitted a liability to deliver the stock, and the case was tried on the basis of the obligation of delivery. Transfer of such subscriptions; that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover upon the intent of the parties rather than its language. Wiley, 70 Iowa 110.

Wiley v. Humphrey, 57 Wis. 110; Wiley v. Tucker, 70 Ill. 527; Iron Works v. Cottrell, 31 Ill. 54; Jennings v. Whitehead, 138 Mass. 594.

parol testimony, introduced by the defendant to show that the contract was intended to be expressed in a writing, is equally balanced, must rely wholly upon the writing to direct in its construction. C. of L.—24

Interpretation. Wilson Sewing Machine Co. v. Rutledge, 60 Iowa 39.

3. Where a contract is reduced to writing, the language of the instrument is the best evidence of the intention of the parties. Broughton v. Mitchell, 64 Ala. 210; Dwight v. Germania L. Ins. Co. (N. Y.), 4 Cent. 532; Jeffrey v. Grant, 37 Me. 236; Robb v. Bancroft, 13 Kan. 123; Walker v. Tucker, 70 Ill. 527; Dent v. North American Steamship Co., 49 N. Y. 390; McConnell v. New Orleans, 35 La. Ann. 273.

If a contract, however inartificially drawn, embraces every matter which the parties had definitely agreed to, it will be regarded as a completed contract, and not merely an agreement to agree. Bean v. Clark, 30 Fed. Rep. 225.

In Methudy v. Ross, 81 Mo. 481, an agreement was to be reduced to writing, and there was no evidence from which its exact terms could be inferred. The court held that there was a presumption that the parties understood that there was to be no contract until the terms were reduced to writing.

If parties make a writing, regarding it at the time as only provisional, but afterwards adopt it as a written contract, its language properly interpreted will control. Higgins v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 73 Mo. 598. A prior verbal contract will be merged in a subsequent written one. Carr v. Hays (Ind.), 9 West. Rep. 183.

4. The practical interpretation put upon a contract by the parties is entitled to great if not controlling influence. Topliff v. Topliff, 122 U. S. 121; Matthews v. Donahy, 26 Mo. App. 660; Butler v. Moses, 43 Ohio 166; Jennings v. Whitehead etc. Co., 138 Mass. 594; Lyles v. Leshner (Ind.), 7 West. Rep. 51. But the fact that a party to a contract for three years paid interest which, on a proper and obvious construction of the contract, he did not owe, should have no weight in the interpretation of the contract. Garard v. Monongahela College, 114 Pa. St. 337; Ins. Co. v. Doll, 35 Md. 89; Railroad ing.¹ Ambiguous words are to be construed most strongly ag

Co. v. Trimble, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 367.

In Canada Shipping Co. v. Acer, 26 Fed. Rep. 874, a contract required the defendant to ship cattle on each of the steamers of a certain line, the "contract to include all steamers of the line intended to load this season." At the time the contract was signed the defendant was shown a list of the steamers. It was held that the defendant was not required to load an additional steamer which the company afterwards decided to put on.

See also Gass's Appeal, 73 Pa. St. 39; Slater v. Cave, 3 Ohio 80; Livingston v. Ten Broeck, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 23; Adams v. Frothingham, 3 Mass. 360; Metcalf v. Taylor, 36 Me. 28; Hurley v. Brown, 98 Mass. 545; Union Pacific R. Co. v. Clopper, 26 U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 243.

1. Cincinnati, Sandusky etc. R. Co. v. Indiana, Bloomington etc. R. Co., 44 Ohio 287.

Plastering.—In Mellen v. Ford, 28 Fed. Rep. 639, the specifications of a building contract contained a general heading or title called "plastering," under which were subtitles, called "deafening," "lathing" and "plastering;" the whole title was described, and a contractor undertook "to do the plastering and stucco work" according to the specifications. It was held that there was no ambiguity raised by the double use of the word "plastering," and it was construed to mean all included under the general title, and not that alone described under the subtitle "plastering."

Support.—The word "support" includes tending and nursing in sickness. Wall v. Williams, 93 N. C. 327.

Corn.—In the United States, the word "corn" means, ordinarily, Indian corn, and not the cereal grains generally. Kerrick v. Van Dusen, 32 Minn. 317.

Each.—In a clause in a contract pertaining to the use of certain patent rights "during the terms for which said letters patent and each of them have been granted," it was held that "each" meant "every." Potter v. Berthelet, 20 Fed. Rep. 240.

Sound Order.—The words "sound order," in a contract relating to tobacco to be delivered to a manufacturer, were held to mean such order as would, with ordinary care, insure the sound condition of the tobacco for a reasonable time after its arrival until it could be used in the course of manufacture. Reynolds v. Palmer, 21 Fed. Rep. 100. See also Walton v. Black, 5 De.

Required.—Under a contract to furnish stone to the government "at certain times and in such quantities as may be required," the word "required" must be construed to refer to the wants of the service. Mueller v. United States, 10 Ct. of Cl. 581.

Raise.—In Bates College v. Trustees, 135 Mass. 487, the defendant offered to give a certain sum of money to the college on condition that it could "raise a similar sum. The court held that the college was not bound to give because the college had been promised such a sum on certain conditions. The word "raise" was construed as equivalent to "collect."

Miscellaneous Instances.—Cattle construed to include hogs, in De Bank v. St. Louis Bank, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 204; timber to include railroad ties, in Kollock v. Parcher, 52 Wis. 400; and patterns to include ties, in Mellwell v. Westchester Ins. Co., 101 Mass. 418.

In Coquard v. Kansas City Bank, 10 Mo. App. 261, there was an agreement to take certain bonds "at ninety per cent principal and past due interest;" it was held to mean not accrued interest to date of contract, but interest which had matured.

In construing a contract, the court sometimes construe or to mean and, and vice versa, in order to carry out the evident intent of the parties. Mont v. U. S., 98 N. Y. 142.

Where words in any written instrument are free from any ambiguity, the parties themselves, or where external circumstances do not create any doubt, it is no difficulty as to the proper application of these words to claimants under the instrument or to the subject matter which the instrument relates, such application is always to be construed according to the strict, plain and common meaning of the words themselves, and evidence dehors the instrument for the purpose of explaining it according to the alleged or surmised intention of the parties, is inadmissible. Dwig v. Germania L. Ins. Co. (N. Y.), 4 Fed. Rep. 532; Kyle v. Bellenger, 79 Fed. Rep. 516. See also Rubey v. Mo. C. & N. Min. Co. (Mo. App.), 3 West. Rep. 100; Gove v. Downer (Vt.), 3 N. E. Rep.

introducing them.¹ Where a word is plainly omitted in a written contract by inadvertence, or is mistakenly used, it may be supplied or corrected, to accomplish justice, by enforcing the intention of the parties.²

If an instrument is partly written and partly printed, more weight is to be attached to the written than to the printed part, and they must, if possible, be reconciled.³ Contemporaneous writings between the same parties upon the same subject are to be read and construed as one paper.⁴

A construction which will make a contract legal is preferred to one which will make it illegal.⁵ Contracts should be supported unless they can be defeated.⁶

UNIFORMITY OF INSTRUMENTS;

Yates v. United States, 15 Ct. of Cl. 120.

4. Wenner v. Hoyt, 66 Wis. 227; St. Louis, Iron Mountain etc. R. Co. v. Beidler, 45 Ark. 17; Knowles v. Toone, 96 N. Y. 534; Hill v. Parker, 10 Ill. App. 323; Makepeace v. Harvard College, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 298; Hill v. Huntress, 43 N. H. 480; Longdale v. People, 100 Ill. 263; Wilson v. Roots (Ill.), 8 West. Rep. 71; Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Indiana etc. R. Co. (Ohio), 3 West. Rep. 606.

39. v. Mitchell, 77 Ind. 388.

Instrument shows upon its face that a word was used by mistake.

tsman, as, for example, the word annually in a mortgage instrument is to be read as if it had intended had been used.

Woodward, 26 Minn. 347.

will presume from mere inference that where words give a reasonable and repugnant to the intention they were inserted by mistake.

State v. McElhaney (Mo. 1884), 10 Mo. 608.

in Russell v. Bondie, 51 N. Y. 100.

an order on a dealer containing a printed agreement to pay a certain sum in notes. On the agreement, "It is understood that the note to be given on this sale, is a Michigan mortgage;" and that the force of the printed words was destroyed, and that the liability was not a personal one, but was enforced only through the mortgage.

Bolman v. Lohman, 79 Ala. 100.

an Express Co. v. Pinckney, 100 N. Y. 100.

Woodruff v. Commercial Union, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 122; Har- v. York City Ins. Co., 22 N. Y. 100.

ark v. Woodruff, 83 N. Y. 100.

ey v. Guion, 83 N. Y. 518; etc. R. Co. v. Gourley, 99 N. Y. 100.

Miller v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 100 N. Y. 430.

contracts, which are pre- scribed by the government on printed forms, are so important that the unchangeable portion should receive a uniform and unvarying construction.

Yates v. United States, 15 Ct. of Cl. 120.

4. Wenner v. Hoyt, 66 Wis. 227; St. Louis, Iron Mountain etc. R. Co. v. Beidler, 45 Ark. 17; Knowles v. Toone, 96 N. Y. 534; Hill v. Parker, 10 Ill. App. 323; Makepeace v. Harvard College, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 298; Hill v. Huntress, 43 N. H. 480; Longdale v. People, 100 Ill. 263; Wilson v. Roots (Ill.), 8 West. Rep. 71; Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Indiana etc. R. Co. (Ohio), 3 West. Rep. 606.

Where one instrument makes reference to another, the latter may be read to explain the former.

Bradley v. Marshall, 54 Ill. 173; Wilson v. Randall, 67 N. Y. 338; Babbitt v. Globe Ins. Co., 66 N. Car. 71; Herbst v. Lowe, 65 Wis. 316.

5. Standard Oil Co. v. Scofield, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 372; Hamden v. Merwin (Conn.), 3 N. E. 534; Field v. Leiter (Ill.), 6 West. Rep. 54.

6. Findley v. Armstrong, 23 W. Va. 113; Greffey v. New York Cent. Ins. Co., 100 N. Y. 417.

But the minds of the parties must be met thus under partnership articles providing for dissolution on an offer in writing to buy or sell. One partner had sold the other an interest which was not wholly paid for, and subsequently offered to buy out that partner's share at the estimated value of its proportion to the whole business, which offer was accepted. It was held that as the offerer must have intended to have a deduction for the unpaid interest, and the other party did not so understand it, the minds of the parties had never met, and the agreement would not be enforced. Braentigam v. Edwards, 38 N. J. Eq. 542. See also Brunhild v. Freeman, 77 N. Car. 128.

4. Criminal Intent.—Where an act forbidden by law is intentionally done, the intent to do the act is the criminal intent which imparts to it the character of an offence. See CRIMINAL LAW.

5. Animus Manendi in Questions of Domicil.—The animus manendi in questions of domicil, is the present intention of residing permanently or for an indefinite period in a given country.¹

6. Intention of Testator.²—The general rule for the construction of a will is that the intention of the testator is to be collected not from any particular or detached clause of the will, but from the whole taken together.³

The object of the court is to ascertain not merely the intention but the expressed intention, of the testator, that is, the meaning

In Moulton v. Kershaw, 59 Wis. 316, A wrote to B that he was able to offer salt in full car loads at a certain price per barrel, and should be pleased to receive an order. B at once telegraphed to A to ship him 2,000 barrels at that price. The court held that there was no contract; that A's letter was in the nature of an advertisement.

See also Siebold v. Davis, 67 Iowa 560; Schenectady Stove Co. v. Holbrook, 101 N. Y. 45; Moyer's Appeal, 112 Pa. 290; Sawyer v. Hebard, 58 Vt. 375; Minneapolis etc. R. R. Co. v. Columbus Rolling Mill, 119 U. S. 148; State v. O'Neil (Vt.), 1 N. E. Rep. 781; Patton v. Taft (Mass.), 3 N. E. Rep. 693.

1. This subject is fully treated under DOMICIL, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 864.

2. See generally, CODICILS, WILLS.

3. Hinton v. Wilburn, 23 W. Va. 166; Brown v. Bartlett, 58 N. H. 511; Phillips v. Davis, 92 N. Y. 199; White v. Allen, 81 Ind. 224; Mather v. Mather, 103 Ill. 607; Welsch v. Belleville Savings Bank, 94 Ill. 191; Banks v. Jones, 60 Ala. 605; Nemmons v. Westfall, 33 Ohio 213. In Metcalf v. Framingham Parish, 128 Mass. 374. GRAY, C. J., said: "The decision of this question doubtless depends upon the intention of the testator, as manifested by the words that he has used, and an omission to express his intention cannot be supplied by conjecture. But if a reading of the whole will produces a conviction that the testator must necessarily have intended an interest to be given which is not bequeathed by express and formal words, the court must supply the defect by implication, and so mould the language of the testator as to carry into effect as far as possible the intention which it is of opinion that he has on the whole will sufficiently declared." Citing Ferson v. Dodge, 23 (Mass.) 287; Towns v. Wentworth, Moore P. C. 256; Abbott v. Midden, 7 H. L. Cas. 68; Greenwood v. Greenwood, 5 Ch. D. 954.

In Hancock's Appeal, 112 Pa. 532, it was said that the question was what the testator meant, but what the meaning of his words, and a bequest to A, "son of my sister B, only sixths of such portion as the law will give to said B, and the remaining sixths to be divided among my sisters and brothers or their heirs," contains no bequest except as to interest; A accordingly gets his share in the other parts of the estate, and the intestate law.

In Phelps v. Bates, 54 Conn. 1, the testator gave a certain estate to his son, with a gift over if he should die during minority or without issue. It was held upon a construction of the whole will that the word or should be read and, and that the son's estate bequeathed was indefeasible on his attaining his majority.

A will is not to be so construed as to require an immediate division of its whole scheme supports the theory of a postponement of the division. Precatory words are to be looked upon as determining the intent. McCartney v. Osburn, 118 Ill. 403.

One item of a will gave the testator's lands to his wife for life, in fee simple. A later item gave certain of these lands to a son, and the rest to a daughter. It was held that the wife took the estate with a remainder to the son and daughter. Vaughn v. Howard, 7 N. D. 285.

Inconsistent Clauses.—Where the clauses of a will are inconsistent with one another, if enough can be gathered

3. Heirs at Law.—A devise to the “heirs at law” of the testator’s wife, in the event of the death of a certain person, was held not to enure to the benefit that they are always used in the same sense, unless the context appears;¹ and where words are obviously miswritten, they be corrected.²

It will be presumed that a testator intended to dispose of of a child adopted by the widow after her husband's death, there being nephews and nieces of the testator and his wife then living. Wyeth v. Stone, 144 Mass. 441. See ADOPTION OF CHILDREN, 1 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 205, etc.

Legal Heirs.—A testator left property to his "legal heirs." His nearest relatives surviving him were brothers and sisters, nephews and nieces and a grand nephew. It was held that as the grand nephew would have taken nothing had the testator died intestate, he took nothing under the will. Woodward v. James, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 95.

Next of Kin.—A testator provided that if any of his legatees should die before his decease, their "next of kin" should take; it was decided that a brother of a deceased legatee should take to the exclusion of nephews. See also Re Sinzheimer, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 321; Weeks v. Cornwell, 104 N. Y. 325; Fontaine v. Thompson, 80 Va. 229. A husband is not an heir or next of kin of his wife. Ivin's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 176. See also Tillman v. Davis, 95 N. Y. 17.

Heirs.—The term "heirs" in a devise of a contingent remainder is, prima facie, used in its technical sense. Irvine v. Newlin, 63 Miss. 192; Fabens v. Fabens, 141 Mass. 395; Kelley v. Vigas, 112 Ill. 242. But it will be construed to mean "children" when such construction is necessary to effectuate the apparent intention of the testator. McCartney v. Osburn, 118 Ill. 403; McKelvey v. McKelvey, 43 Ohio 213; De Laurencel v. De Boom, 67 Cal. 362; Huntress v. Place, 137 Mass. 409; Haverstick's App., 103 Pa. 394; Henton v. Milburn, 23 W. Va. 166.

Children.—When one gives property by will to his children and has children, his grandchildren are not meant. Pugh v. Pugh, 105 Ind. 552; Re Cashman, 3 Demarest (N. Y.) 242. But where consistent with the intention indicated by the will, the term "children" may include grandchildren. Re Paton, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 497. Compare CHILD, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 231.

Family.—The word "family" in a devise may be construed to include the devisee's children and his wife so long as she continues to live with or is entitled to a support from him. Lee v. Andrews, 137 Mass. 50. FAMILY, 7 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law 803.

Dower.—In Barry's Estate, 13 Pa. (Pa.) 310, it was held that where it is apparent that the testator used the word "dower" in its popular, not its technical sense, meaning the interest in real estate to a widow by the statutes of Pennsylvania, the will is to be construed accordingly.

"Bequest," "Devise."—Where a testator uses the words "bequest" and "devise" as synonymous, his intention will control. Thompson v. Garfield, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 310; Evans v. Price, 6 West. Rep. 492.

1. In Sibley v. Perry, 7 Vesey 311, the testator made certain bequests to several persons, if living at his death; and if not, he directed that their legal issue should take the shares which their respective parents, if living, would have taken; and he made other bequests to the lawful issue, living at certain periods, of other persons. LORD DON held that as to the former children were intended, and that there was a ground for giving to the "issue" the same construction in all the other bequests. See Heasman v. Peck, 1 L. R., 7 Ch. 275. See ISSUE.

2. A testator by will directed the payment of the income of his estate to his widow, until she should die or remarry. Should she remarry, she was still to have an annual income for life. A subsequent clause of the will contained a direction for the division of the estate among the testator's children upon the death or remarriage of the widow. It was held that the word "marriage" in the last clause was to be construed through inadvertence and should be rejected. Lottimer v. Blumenthal, 10 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 360. See also Smart v. Hays, 89 Ill. 11.

In describing land devised, it is apparent that the testator meant to devise the south half of the "south quarter of section 10, which he owned" and not the south half of the "south quarter, which he did not own, it state, unless the contrary appears in clear and unmistakable terms;¹ and where the intention cannot operate to the full anticipated by the testator, the courts will carry it into effect as far as possible.

Circumstances under which the testator made his will are controlling in determining his intention;² but extrinsic evidence is admissible to alter, detract from, or add to the terms of the will. The court would make the construction and construe the description according to the intent. Severson v. Severson, 68 Iowa 656.

Hard v. Kennard (N. H.), 2 N. H. 38; Clarkson v. Clarkson, 8 N. H. 655; Byers v. Byers, 6 N. H. 313; Ferry's Appeal, 102 Pa. 7; Hancock's Appeal, 112 Pa. 17; Miller v. Pugh (Pa.), 5 Cent. Rep. 402.

Where a will contained no residuary clause, and it was manifestly the testator's intention to dispose of all his property, the words "all my property after paying all my just debts," were held to pass deposits in a savings bank and railroad stock, not specifically mentioned. Jenkins v. Fowler, 63 N. H. 63.

See also Harkness v. Harkness, 105 N. C. 195; Randenbach's Appeal, 51 Pa. St. 51; Irwin v. Zane, 15 N. H. 6.

It is held that a testator must be presumed by the will to dispose of his whole estate, applies to a will in which the bequests are to one person and the other one being "also all the property on and around the homestead consisting of one cow, two hogs, a lot of wood, and all other property of every kind," although the testator also bequeathed a lot, chattels, and notes specifically bequeathed. Taubenanz v. Taubenanz, 20 Ill. App. 262.

In determining whether a testator had the power to sell the whole or part of her estate was a life estate it was held that surrounding circumstances, such as the state and condition of the property and of the testator, are to be considered to ascertain the intention. Kaufman v. Breckinridge, 7 Ill. 305. See also Worth v. Worth, 95 N. C. 239; Byrnes v. Stillman, 5 Cent. Rep. 402.

Where land is described by a description which includes land which the testator owned, it entitles the devisee to all the land owned by the testator within the description. Bradley v. Rees, 100 N. H. 1. Compare Severson v. Severson, 68 Iowa 656.

Where there was a bequest to the "Home Mission Society," it was construed to be the "American Missionary Society," upon proof of facts, outside the will, showing that the society must have been the one intended, and there being no society of the former name. Beardsley v. American Home Missionary Society, 45 Conn. 327. In Gilmer v. Stone, 120 U. S. 586, it was held that a bequest "to be equally divided between the board of foreign and the board of home missions," might be shown by parol to have been intended for the Presbyterian boards thus named, there being similar boards controlled by other denominations. See also Webster v. Morris, 66 Wis. 366; Powers v. McEachem, 7 S. C. 293; Tuxbury v. French, 41 Mich. 7; Black v. Hill, 32 Ohio 313; Burthe v. Denis, 31 La. An. 568; Dunham v. Averill, 45 Conn. 61; Woodruff v. Migeon, 46 Conn. 236; Jenkins v. Merritt, 17 Fla. 304; Gillespie v. Schuman, 62 Ga. 252; Vermont Baptist State Convention v. Ladd, 59 Vt. 5; American Dramatic Fund Ass'n v. Lett, 42 N. J. Eq. 43; Re Mussig, 3 Demarest (N. Y.) 225.

Extrinsic parol evidence is admissible to show that the omission of a child by the testator was intentional. Peters v. Siders, 126 Mass. 135.

Persons designated in a will by their nicknames may take legacies on sufficient evidence of identity. Beatty v. Cong. Universalist Society, 39 N. J. Eq. 452.

And a legatee need not be named if he is so described that he may be identified. Cheney v. Selman, 71 Ga. 384. See also Acton v. Lloyd, 37 N. J. Eq. 5, where the name of a legatee was erroneously stated in a will, but the bequest was not thereby avoided.

3. "It would be a dangerous doctrine to establish, and one without precedent, that where the language of the will is plain, and the residuary clause, in terms, disposes of the whole estate, and there are no qualifying words in any part of the will, you may introduce extrinsic

The heir at law cannot be excluded without an express declaration or necessary implication; and such implication imports, not moral necessity, but so strong a probability that an intention to the contrary cannot be supposed.¹

The testator's intention is to be gathered from a later clause in a will rather than from an earlier one.²

7. Intent as to Fixtures Between Landlord and Tenant.—Where personal property affixed by a tenant to the freehold is converted into realty is, in great measure, a question of intention. The common law criterion of physical attachment seems to have been generally set aside. This whole subject will be found fully considered under another title, and need not be here repeated.³

8. Proof of Intent.—Intention is a fact to be proved, as any other fact.⁴ All the attendant facts and circumstances tending directly or indirectly to throw light on the intention may be given in evidence, unless excluded by some other paramount rule of evidence.⁵

evidence to show that the testator did not know that certain property which he owned actually belonged to him, for the purpose of restricting the natural meaning and operation of the will." Stannard v. Barnum, 51 Md. 440. See also Thomas v. Thomas (Ind.), 7 West. Rep. 67; Campbell v. Crater, 95 N. Car. 156; Re Huntington (N. Y.), 6 Cent. Rep. 217; Robinson v. Randolph, 21 Fla. 629.

1. Where a will is capable of two interpretations, that one should be adopted which prefers those of the blood of the testator to strangers. Wood v. Mitcham, 92 N. Y. 375. See Gelston v. Shields, 78 N. Y. 275; Irwin v. Zane, 15 W. Va. 646.

But in Powers v. McEachern, 7 S. Car. 290, a devise to testator's wife and all his then living children was held to carry the estate to a woman with whom he was living in adultery, and her children, to the exclusion of his lawful wife and her children.

2. Woodbury v. Woodbury, 74 Me. 413; Temple v. Sammis, 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 324; Murfitt v. Jessop, 94 Ill. 158; Hemphill v. Moody, 62 Ala. 510; McNeill v. Caruthers, 4 Bradwell (Ill.) 552; Bromfield v. Wilson, 78 Ill. 467; Re Manice, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 119.

But in the absence of any indication from the whole will of an intention to the contrary, a gift by words of general description is not to be limited by a subsequent attempt at a particular description. Thus where there was a devise of "all the real estate I may die possessed of, which property is situated on the north side of N street," it was held that this passed the title also to a parcel of land on the south side of N street, whereof the testator died seised in fee. Martin v. Smith, 124 Mass. 111. See also Jones v. Robinson, 78 N. Car. 156; Terry v. Smith, 42 N. J. Eq. 504.

Where, however, there is an enumeration of particulars purporting on their face to be designed as qualifications of a preceding general description, words of general devise will yield. Griscom v. Evens, 40 N. J. 402.

In Hendershot v. Shields, 42 N. J. Eq. 317, where there were three repugnant and irreconcilable provisions in a will, it was held that the last should prevail.

In Merkel's Appeal, 109 Pa. 21, a bequest to testator's widow "of my remaining personal property," followed by pecuniary bequests, was read though written at the end of the will. See also Ferry's Appeal, 102 Pa. 21.

Where a devise gives the area of a tract of land and also describes its boundary, the latter description controls. Lyon v. Lyon, 96 N. Car. 439.

3. See FIXTURES, 8 Am. & Encyc. of Law, 48; and the present subject generally.

4. "It may be different to prove the state of a man's mind at a particular time, but if it can be ascertained it is as much a fact as anything else." Huntington v. Fitzmaurice, 55 Law Rep. Chanc. 650.

5. "Where there is a question whether an act was accidental or intentional son cannot testify to another's motive or intent;¹ but parties are made competent witnesses, they may testify as to their own intentions.²

Presumption of Intent.—Where a person does an act, he is presumed to have intended that the natural and ordinary results of the act should follow.³

Each act formed part of a series of circumstances, in each of which the person doing the act was considered to be relevant." Digest of Evidence (May's Com. v. Titus, 116 Mass. 42; Thurston, 87 Ind. 437; Com. v. , 141 Mass. 590; Thomas v. State, 419; Archer v. State, 5; Padgett v. State, 103 Ind. 1; State, 32 Ohio 456; Archer v. State (Ind.), 4 West. Rep. 728. Where the intention of parties to a written contract is in issue, the contract is to be read in the light of the surrounding circumstances. West, 68 Ind. 548; Mobile & Gulf R. Co. v. Jurey, 111 U.

In the trial of an indictment for procuring an abortion by inducing a pregnant woman with a drug for that purpose, any declaration by the defendant before or after the performance of the act mentioned in the indictment, showing his purpose and intention, is admissible. Lamb v. State, 100 Ind. 100. West. Rep. 747.

Where one accused of passing counterfeit money, at the time of passing it, is shown as tending to conceal his knowledge and intent. State, 22 Ala. 43. But see Littleham (Iowa), 17 N. W.

Statements made by a party to a contract after its execution, are admissible in showing the state of his mind at the time. McRae v. Malloy, 154.

Curton v. Cureton, 36 Ala. 120; Lehr, 117 Ill. 643; Manufacturers' Bank v. Koch, 105

Blano v. Goodwin, 48 N. H. 101. J., said: "Before the statute making parties competent witnesses by ordinary way to prove their understanding was by circumstance. But now that the party himself is admitted to testify, the reason for confining his testimony to a variety of circumstances tending to show his purpose or understanding, when he knows and can testify directly what that purpose or understanding was. Accordingly . . . where the intention or good faith of a party to a suit becomes material, it may be shown directly as well as from the circumstances, and the party himself, if a competent witness, may testify directly to his intention or understanding, unless prevented by some other principle of law applicable to the particular case." See also Evidence of Intent, by W. F. Elliott, in 22 Cent. Law Jour. 271.

Parties have been permitted to testify as to their intent in questions of dedication of land to public uses. Bidinger v. Bishop, 76 Ind. 245. In questions of domicile. Kennedy v. Ryall, 67 N. Y. 380. As to the character of assignments for benefit of creditors. Seymour v. Wilson, 14 N. Y. 567; Watkins v. Wallace, 19 Mich. 57. As to intent in giving credit to another. Danforth v. Carter, 4 Iowa 230. And as to the intent of a payment. Stearns v. Gosse, 58 Vt. 38.

In Coke v. Pottsville Bank, 116 Pa. St. 264, a party to a contract was not permitted to testify to thoughts and purposes on his part undisclosed at the time of making the contract, in order to affect its legal import. See also Browne v. Hickie, 68 Iowa 330; Thomas v. Loose, 114 Pa. St. 35; McCormick v. Joseph, 77 Ala. 236.

In Indiana, where the intent with which an act is done becomes material, it is proper to ask what the intent was. Over v. Scheffling, 102 Ind. 191; Heap v. Parrish, 104 Ind. 36.

3. People v. Petheram (Mich.), 7 West. Rep. 596.

A married woman who resided in Massachusetts went to Maine, and immediately applied for and obtained a divorce for causes not a ground for divorce in Massachusetts. The presumption arose that her purpose in removing to Maine was to obtain a divorce. Chase v. Chase, 5 Gray (Mass.) 157.

Where a married man enters a house of prostitution and remains there all

INTENTION—INTENTIONALLY.

A criminal intent is presumed from the commission of an act which is criminal per se; ¹ but when a specific intent is necessary to make an act an offence, the commission of the act does not create a presumption that it was done with the specific intent. ²

INTENTION.—See INTENT. ³

INTENTIONALLY.—See INTENT. ⁴

night, the presumption is that he committed adultery while there. Evans v. Evans, 41 Cal. 103.

The exposing of oleomargarine unmarked, with pure butter or groceries, upon the shelves or counter of a store-room is an act from which an intent to sell may be inferred in the absence of rebutting evidence. State v. Dunbar, 13 Oreg. 591.

1. "When an act forbidden by law is intentionally done, the intent to do the act is the criminal intent which imparts to it the character of an offence, and no one who violates the law, which he is conclusively presumed to know, can be heard to say that he had no criminal intent in doing the forbidden act." State v. Smith, 93 N. Car. 516; State v. King, 86 N. Car. 603; State v. Voight, 90 N. Car. 741.

Thus where a person is proved to have been stabbed with a dirk knife by the defendant, from which wound he instantly died, the defendant is presumed to have intended to kill the deceased. Com. v. York, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 93. See also Murphy v. People, 37 Ill. 447; McKibbin v. State, 40 Ark. 480; United States v. Adams, 2 Dak. 305.

2. "When acts are equivocal and become criminal only by reason of the intent with which they are done, both must unite to constitute the offence, and both facts must be proved in order to a conviction." State v. King, 86 N. Car. 603; State v. Smith, 93 N. Car. 516. Thus where a statute makes a wilful, deliberate and premeditated killing murder in the first degree, and A kills B, there is no presumption that the killing was deliberate and premeditated. Commonwealth v. Dunn, 58 Pa. St. 9; Hamby v. State, 36 Tex. 523; People v. Plath (N. Y.), 1 Cent. Rep. 772.

Where a statute makes indictable an act which is merely malum prohibitum, when done "wilfully and maliciously," the existence of an evil mind in doing the forbidden act is, as a general rule, a constituent part of the offence. Thus where a defendant was indicted under an act prohibiting the wilful and malicious tearing down of a sheriff's advertisement, it was held that he had the intent to show that he tore down such advertisements without any evil design. Folwell v. State (N. J.), 5 Cent. Rep. 355.

3. An indictment charging that an assault was made with an "intention to ravish, instead of "intent," is defective. State v. Tom, 2 Jones L. (N. Car.) 100. "In Walker's Dictionary the two principal definitions of these words are the 'intent to wil', 'design', 'purpose.' Can the court say then that a charge of a felonious assault made with the 'intention' to commit a rape, i. e., with the 'design or purpose to commit a rape' different from a charge of an assault made with the 'intent' to commit a rape, i. e., with a design or purpose to commit a rape? The bare statement of the proposition shows its absurdity."

In construing the clause in an insurance policy—"in case of the death of the insured by his or her own act or intention," etc., the court said: "To mind the use of the word 'intention' in the policy before us, does not essentially vary or strengthen the legal meaning of the sentence from that of the word 'act' in the Bigelow case. The word 'act' necessarily implies intention, and it seems to me the policy in this case refers in no material import from that already decided by this court: that is to say, you get just as strong a sentence and it means practically just as much as if it said that the company shall not be liable if the assured comes to his death by his own act, sane or insane, as if you said that the company shall not be liable if the assured comes to his death by his act and intention, sane or insane." Chapman v. Rep. L. Ins. Co., 6 (U. S.) 240.

4. A statute provided that where the directors of certain corporations "intentionally neglect" to file annual reports they shall be liable for debts contracted during the period of neglect. In an action brought against the directors of a corporation below found inter alia that they had no active intention to violate the law," but reached the conclusion of

INTERCOURSE—INTERDICTION—INTEREST.

INTERCOURSE.—"Sexual intercourse," in the proper meaning of the term, is ordinary and complete intercourse; it does not include partial and imperfect intercourse: yet not every degree of intercourse would deprive it of its essential character. There are degrees difficult to deal with; but if so imperfect as to be unnatural, it would, legally speaking, be no intercourse. These words in a statute are equivalent to "carnal knowl-

INTERDICTION.—An interdiction or suspension of commercial intercourse means, ex vi termini, an entire cessation for the time being of all trade whatever.³

INTEREST.

DEFINITION. 379.
GENERAL PRINCIPLES. 379.
CONTRACTS FOR INTEREST. 380.
 (a) Express Contracts. 380.
 (b) Implied Contracts. 381.
INTEREST AS DAMAGES FOR DEFAULT IN PAYMENT OF A DEBT. 383
 (a) On Accounts. 384.
 (b) On Rents. 387.
 (c) On Legacies, Annuities, etc., 387.
 (d) On Taxes, Orders and Warrants of Municipalities. 388.
 (e) On Purchase Money. 389.
 (f) On Obligations in Writing. 390.
 (g) On Verdicts, Awards, Judgments and Decrees. 391.

V. AS DAMAGES FOR THE USE OR BENEFIT OF ANOTHER'S MONEY. 395.
 (a) On Loans and Advances. [395].
 (b) On Money Unlawfully or Wrongfully Withheld or Obtained. 397.
 (c) On Money Paid by Mistake. 398.
 (d) On Funds Held in Trust. 398.

VI. COMPUTATION. 402.
 (a) Time During Which Interest Accrues. 402.
 (b) Compound Interest. 407.
 (c) Application of Payments. 410.
VII. RATE. 411.
 (a) In General. 411.
 (b) After Maturity. 415.
 (c) Law of Place. 417.

DEFINITION.—A compensation usually reckoned by percent on the loan, use, or forbearance of money.

GENERAL PRINCIPLES.—At common law, interest was not allowed in any case. The term was synonymous with usury, and a punishable offence.⁴ In this country it is sanctioned by the statute the neglect or omission is an intentional one." This was held by the supreme court in Division of the statute . . . construed as though the word "intentionally" was omitted and yet such was the construction given it in the conclusion arrived at in Breitung v. Lindauer, 37 and executed in the heat of passion upon sudden provocation or in sudden combat, the case falls within the meaning of a statute that speaks of killing "intentionally but without premeditation." State v. Hoyt, 13 Minn. 134.

1. Doe v. A—g, 1 Rob. Ecc. Cas. 298.

2. Noble v. State, 22 O. S. C. 545.

3. The Edward, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 272.

4. Abbott's Law Dict.

2 Blk. Comm. 454; Viner's Abridgment, title Interest (c), § 7; Chitty on Contracts, § 3, 5. Harmanson v. Wilson, 1 Hugh (U. S.) 207; Pekin v. Reynolds, 31 Ill. 529; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 244; Houghton v. Page, 2 N. H. 42; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 30.

statutes of all of the States, and has been held to be entire creature of statute, and only allowed where so authorized.¹ generally allowed by law on two grounds, namely, on contract express or implied, or by way of damages,² either for a default in the payment of a debt, or for a use or benefit derived from the money of another.³ Where it is imposed to punish tortious, negligent or fraudulent conduct, it is a question within the discretion of the jury.⁴

In a case where interest as a general thing is due, as in the case of an account stated, the fact that there may be no statute in that place where the account is settled and the transaction takes place does not prevent the recovery of interest. In such a case interest at a reasonable rate, and conforming to the customs which obtain in the community in dealings of the same character, may be allowed by way of damages for unreasonably withholding an overdue account.⁵

III. CONTRACTS FOR INTEREST—(a) Express Contracts.—Interest is allowed in all cases where there is an express contract to pay

1. Ill. Cent. R. Co. v. Cobb, 72 Ill. 148; Pekin v. Reynolds, 31 Ill. 529; s. c., 83 Am. Rep. 244; Chicago v. Allcock, 86 Ill. 385; South Park Comm. v. Dunlevy, 91 Ill. 54; Hamer v. Kirkwood, 25 Miss. 95; Clay Co. Supervisors v. Chickasaw Co. Supervisors, 64 Miss. 534; Warren Co. v. Klein, 51 Miss. 807; State v. Farrier, 47 N. J. L. 383; Randall v. Greenwood, 3 Mont. 506; Denver etc. R. Co. v. Conway, 8 Colo. 1; Reece v. Knott, 3 Utah 451.

In Dunne v. Mastick, 50 Cal. 244, it was held that the legislature had power to impose on all debtors interest from the date of the adoption of the code, by way of compensation for the delay in the payment of money already due. Such a statute is not retrospective, since it operates only on the future rights of the parties. A fresh demand and refusal would be a new assertion of right and would impose a new liability.

On Claim Against County.—Where a claim against a county arises from a statute and not ex contractu, and such statute makes no provision for interest, it is error for a court to adjudge interest thereon. The general statute, in this State, on the subject of interest does not embrace such claims against counties. Warren County v. Klein, 51 Miss. 807, cited; Clay Co. Supervisors v. Chickasaw Co. Supervisors, 64 Miss. 534.

A State law abating interest does not impair the contract. Harmanson v. Wilson, 1 Hugh. (U. S.) 207.

2. Harmanson v. Wilson, 1 Hugh. (U. S.) 207; Selleck v. French, 1 Conn.

32; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 185; Rensselaer Glass Factory, 3 Conn. Y.) 393; Foote v. Blanchard, 6 (Mass.) 221; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 62.

3. Harmanson v. Wilson, 1 Hugh. (U. S.) 207; Selleck v. French, 1 Conn. 32; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 188.

4. Sedgwick on Damages, 374; v. Fiedler, 12 N. Y. 40; Vandervoort v. Gould, 36 N. Y. 639; Fasholt v. 16 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 266; Hinckley v. Beckwith, 13 Wis. 31; Buford v. 1 Bay (S. Car.) 273; s. c., 1 Dec. 615; Wolfe v. Lacy, 30 Tex.

5. Young v. Godbe, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 562.

6. Selleck v. French, 1 Conn. c., 6 Am. Dec. 185; Fake v. A. Exr., 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 76; Stearns v. Brown et ux., 1 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Edgerton v. Aspinwall, 3 Conn. Bannister v. Roberts, 35 Me. 76; Harmanson v. Wilson, 1 Hugh. (U. S.) 207; Radford v. Life Ins. Co., 12 (Ky.) 434; Redfield v. Ystalifer & Co., 110 U. S. 174.

Interest cannot be given in a judgment by default on an obligation to the day it falls due, containing a condition that on several conditions it shall bear interest from a previous date, unless the declaration shows that the conditions were fulfilled. V. Moore, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 213.

Where a bond providing for the payment of interest annually was secured by a deed of trust, and afterwards several years, when the interest was due and payable, interest notes were of course, by the laws against usury.¹ A special contract to pay interest gives a right of action to recover the interest, although the principal is not due when the interest becomes payable,² but when it is not specially contracted for, interest cannot be recovered in a separate action after payment of principal.³

Implied Contracts.—The law will imply a contract to pay interest where such has been the usage of trade, or the course of dealing between the parties, or the special custom of one party, and acceded to by the other.⁴

When the same rate of interest is provided by a legal bond, as between the parties to a deed of trust will secure the interest on these new interest-bearing contracts such interest cannot avail subsequent creditors or purchasers. Barbour v. Tompkins (W. Va. Rep. 1).

Mississippi conventional interest is not allowed upon a contract unless specially stipulated. Stephens v. La. Ann. 145.

Where the defendants agreed that the defendants' money should receive a bonus of 10 per cent. on their advances before interest. Held, 1. That, in the absence of a special promise by plaintiff, interest could be recovered on the bonus; 2. That where interest was paid on the bonus, without any agreement on the part of plaintiff, he could not recover it back, nor be allowed to set it in the accounting. Church v. Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 454; in (N. Y.) 254.

Where money due by parties is in their hands, for which they are to pay interest, they must bring the money into court to exonerate themselves from payment of interest. Butcher, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 443. The claim of a party for loss on an alleged failure of the United States to perform its contracts with him, and the manner of payment, is a political act of congress, referred to the courts of claims "to investigate the merits, to ascertain, determine and the amount equitably due, if such loss and damage," the law is applicable to the adjudication by that court in the exercise of its general jurisdiction must not include interest, not having been provided for in the contracts, cannot be recovered thereon. Tillson v. United States (U. S.) 43.

A contract to pay interest on interest yet due is inequitable, and will not be enforced, although if the interest is due it may be added to the principal, and a contract to pay interest on such new principal will be upheld. Mason v. Callender, 2 Minn. 350; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 102.

In an action on a bill single, payable at a future day certain, "with interest from date if not punctually paid," the interest, being a penalty, is not recoverable. Dinsmore v. Hand, Minor (Ala.) 126; Billingsly v. Cahoon, 7 Ind. 184.

Contra, Rumsey v. Matthews, 1 Bibb. (Ky.) 242; Gully v. Remy, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 69; Parvin v. Hoopes, 1 Morr. (Iowa) 294.

2. Fake v. Addy, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 76; Edgerton v. Aspinwall, 3 Conn. 445; Stearns v. Brown, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 530; Radford v. Southern Life Ins. Co., 12 Bush (Ky.) 434; Sessions v. Richmond, 1 R. I. 298.

3. American Bible Society v. Wells, 68 Me. 572; Howe v. Bradley, 19 Me. 31; Succession of Anderson, 12 La. Ann. 95; Southern etc. R. Co. v. Moravia, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 180; Tenth Nat. Bank v. Mayor, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 429; American Bible Society v. Wells, 68 Me. 572.

The plaintiff was the holder of city bonds. Each had coupons attached and conditions that "if the interest is not so paid this bond becomes due and payable to the holder." Upon maturity of certain of the coupons they were presented for payment, which was refused. An action was brought to recover both principal and interest. Pending the suit, the treasurer tendered payment of the interest and costs, which the plaintiff accepted. Held, that in the absence of any agreement to that effect the plaintiff did not, by his acceptance, waive his right to prosecute the suit then commenced for the recovery of the principal. Moore v. Jefferson, 45 Mo. 202.

4. Selleck v. French, 1 Conn. 32; s.

Where it is the custom of the creditor known and acquiesced in by the debtor, to charge interest on accounts after a certain time, or where such is the uniform usage of the trade, such facts, if proven to the satisfaction of the jury, are evidence of an agreement, and interest will be allowed.¹

c., 6 Am. Dec. 185; Williams v. Craig, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 313; Koons v. Miller, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 271; Meech v. Smith, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 315; Ayers v. Metcalf, 39 Ill. 307.

1. Veiths v. Haggie, 8 Iowa 163; Knox v. Jones, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 193; Rayburn v. Day, 27 Ill. 46; Fisher v. Sargent, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 250; Esterey v. Cole, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 235; Ayers v. Metcalf, 39 Ill. 307; Barclay v. Kennedy, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 350.

When parties themselves settle their accounts (at regular intervals) without charging each other with interest, it is not in accordance with law or equity to go behind such settlements for the purpose of allowing interest in favor of one party against the other. Such settlements are considered conclusive, unless impeachable for mistake or fraud; and transactions anterior to them are not interest bearing. Chandler v. People's Savings Bank et al., 61 Cal. 401.

The rule that a custom to be binding must be uniform, long established, generally acquiesced in and well known, applies to the usage of merchants in paying interest. Turner v. Dawson, 50 Ill. 85.

If usage has fixed a specific time after which book accounts bear interest, such interest need not be demanded in the copy of the claim filed; but if the bargain be for interest at an earlier period than usage would give it, or, if a special contract be relied on, it must be set forth in the claim. Adams v. Palmer, 30 Pa. St. 346.

It is not error for the court to instruct the jury that "interest cannot be claimed on an open and running mutual account, except by an agreement of the parties." Williams v. Hersey, 17 Kan. 18.

In so far as the right to interest is dependent on implication of law or discretion of juries, a State law allowing an abatement of interest does not impair the obligation of contracts. Harmanson v. Wilson, 1 Hugh. (U. S.) 207.

If a contract is silent on the subject of interest, and does not by implication exclude it on money due and payable under the contract, the law implies that interest is to be paid from the time the debt becomes payable. Vermont etc. R. Co. v. Vermont Cent. R. Co., 34 Vt. 1.

Where the only evidence that interest was to be allowed on an open account, there being no proof of any custom to pay interest or of any agreement to that effect, arose from the testimony of a witness who had inferred from a conversation with the defendant that he did not dispute his liability to pay interest from the expiration of a year. Held, that the evidence was not sufficient. Johnson v. Bennett, 1 Spears (S. Car.) 209.

In assumpsit interest on the principal sum may be made a subject of charge as one of the items of an account annexed, and may be recovered upon proof of circumstances which would entitle the plaintiff to charge it. Chadbourn v. Hanscom, 56 Me. 554.

A purchaser of goods, who is made an agent for their sale, and given a right to exchange them, is not chargeable with interest in the absence of an agreement to that effect. Chase v. Union Stone Co., 11 Daly (N. Y.) 107.

In Texas an agreement to pay interest cannot be implied from the fact that the defendant has previously paid interest on similar accounts. Adriance v. Brooks, 13 Tex. 279.

Interest is not allowed in a partnership accounting upon moneys owing between the firm and either of the partners, or between each other, in partnership transactions before dissolution, unless by virtue of some understanding or usage, or some equity implying an agreement to pay it. Sweeney v. Neeley, 53 Mich. 421.

The lex loci where a debt is contracted should govern the question whether interest is allowable on a merchant's account. Cocke v. Conigmaker, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 254; Crawford v. Simonton, 7 Port. (Ala.) 110; Porter v. Munger, 22 Vt. 191.

Interest on a balance of account held discretionary with the jury. Killingly v. Taylor, 1 Cranch (C. C.) 99.

assumption to pay a substituted obligation from which interest implies the payment of such interest although not eo nomine.¹

INTEREST AS DAMAGES FOR DEFAULT IN THE PAYMENT OF A interest is allowable as damages for default in the performance of a contract to pay money.² Whenever a debtor account current between a merchant in Philadelphia and a partner in the country, interchangeable upon the amount of the account after six months from the date of delivery. Koons v. Watts & S. (Pa.) 271.

v. Brown, 13 La. Ann.

v. Godbe, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 1.
v. Snell, 25 N. H. (5

should be allowed in all cases where it is the duty of the debtor to pay money without a previous demand by the creditor. A bona fide tender of the amount of the indebtedness prior to the accruing of interest upon a tender of payment falls from the account. Sum found to be due at the time of tender, interest runs on the balance. West Republic etc. Co. v. State, 55 Mo. St. 55.

A party's right to compensation for breach of contract is doubtful, and is not supported on reasonable grounds, and where the law requires to be delayed in suit, interest will not be allowed for the time preceding such delay. Shipman v. State, 44 interest is claimed as damages, and where it is disallowed it is within the discretion of the court, and it will not be allowed if the plaintiff has been negligent in prosecuting his claim. Where a verdict against the defendant is obtained in the States in the court below, and the opinion of the court in a higher court is made and then rested nearly wholly upon the facts before entry of judgment, and under these circumstances interest should run only from the date of the judgment. Redfield v. State, 110 U. S. 174.

Interest is not allowable generally on a loan, except from the time the debtor is in default. Fredenberger, 37 Mich. 402; North v. Co. v. Booraem, 28 N. J. 1.
d v. Duncan, 1 La. Ann. 1.
North v. Hart, 22 Ala. 343; Frederick v. Hub, 54 Me. 477; Hubbard v. Brown etc. R. Co., 11 Metc.

(Mass.) 124; Nat. Laniers v. Lovering, 30 N. H. 511; Beardslee v. Horton, 3 Mich. 560.

In an action for nondelivery of goods according to a contract, the difference between the contract price and the actual price on the day fixed for the delivery furnishes the true rule of damages on that day, and the plaintiff is entitled to interest on that amount from that day as a separate item of damage. Dana v. Fiedler, 12 N. Y. (2 Kerr) 40; Driggers v. Bell, 94 Ill. 223.

In a Texas case, where a common carrier fails to transport produce destined for market and received by him in the condition in which he received it and without unnecessary delay, the owner was held to be entitled, among other elements of damage, by way of indemnity, to eight per cent. interest on the value of the commodity from the time it should have been delivered at its market destination by the carrier. Houston etc. R. Co. v. Jackson, 62 Tex. 209.

A contractor with a county is entitled to interest on a payment deferred after the performance of the contract, if there was a stipulation that payment should be made as soon as the work contracted for should be completed. Risley v. Andrew County, 46 Mo. 382.

Subscriptions.—An allowance of interest on a subscription in aid of a railroad from the date of the completion of the road, when the promise was to pay one year after its completion and nothing is expressed about interest, is error. Steevens v. Corbitt, 33 Mich. 458.

If subscribed for and agreed to take five shares of the stock of a land and loan company, and to pay $400 per share therefor, in weekly instalments of $1 on each share until paid in full; and his name as such subscriber by his direction was entered by the company's secretary on its stock ledger about the 16th of February, 1871, on which day he made his first payment and continued to pay until the 4th of June, 1874, and had the payments entered in his book and received his dividends, knows what he is to pay and when he is to pay it, he is charged with interest if he neglects or refuses to pay it,¹ or if he delays the payment after it is due.²

(a) On Accounts.—In general, interest is not allowed upon liquidated accounts in the absence of an agreement expressly implied to pay it.³

On a suit by the receivers of the company brought the 18th of March, 1879, to recover the instalments, which he had failed to pay for more than 150 weeks last past, it was held that this subscription was not within the class of contracts on which interest is recoverable as of right.

1. Curtis v. Innerarity, 6 How. (U. S.) 146; Swett v. Hooper, 62 Me. 54; Hitt v. Allen, 13 Ill. 592; People v. New York Co., 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 331; Dodge v. Perkins, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 369.

2. London v. Taxing District of Shelby Co., 104 U. S. 771; Chicago v. Tibbetts, 104 U. S. 120; Merritt v. Pearson, 76 Ind. 44; United States v. Hills, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 618.

Interest is recoverable on a balance of an unsettled account from a reasonable time after the account accrued. Bates v. Starr, 2 Vt. 536; Willis v. Brown, 3 N. J. L. (2 Pa.) 548.

Unreasonable and Vexatious Delay of Payment.—Mere delay to make payment of money due on an account, or appearing and defending suit for its recovery, will not authorize a recovery of interest under the clause of the statute giving interest "on money withheld by an unreasonable and vexatious delay of payment."

The delay of payment must be both unreasonable and vexatious, and to make it such the debtor must, in some way, have thrown obstacles in the way of collection of the demand, or by some management have induced the creditor to prolong taking proceedings to collect the debt longer than he would otherwise have done. West Chicago Alcohol Works v. Sheer, 104 Ill. 586; Devine v. Edwards, 101 Ill. 138.

A person guilty of unreasonable and vexatious delay in making payment of a just claim cannot be relieved by offering to pay interest from the time when the delay began to be unreasonable and vexatious; he is chargeable with interest from the time it became due. Chicago v. Tebbetts, 104 U. S. 120.

A delay for ten years of payment of an account evidenced by the entries in a depositor's bank book, although demand was repeatedly made, held to be vexatious and unreasonable, and interest allowed on the account.

v. Horn, 64 Ill. 379.

Where in an action on account interest nor general relief is demanded nor any unreasonable delay in payment shown, interest should not be allowed. Marsteller v. Crapp, 52 Ind. 359.

Plaintiff had stolen from him a certificate of deposit. Defendant compelled plaintiff—who had obtained payment stopped—to bring suit at a certain judgment before it would pay amount, endorsements having been placed on the certificate after it had been stolen. Held, that plaintiff was entitled to interest on the value of the certificate from the time of deposit made. Sleppy v. Commerce Bank, 17 Sawy. (U. S.) 17; s. c., Fed. Rep.

3. McConnico v. Curzen, 2 Va. 358; Brady v. Wilcoxson, 4 Va. 239; Temple v. Belding, 1 Root (Ct.) 314; Crosby v. Mason, 32 Conn. 133; Myers v. Walker, 24 Ill. 133; Mick v. Elston, 16 Ill. 204; Allden v. Dunham, 16 Ill. 403; Shewell v. Blackf. (Ind.) 312; South v. Hard (Ky.) 527; Neal v. Keel, 4 Mon. (Ky.) 162; Harrison v. Bibb (Ky.) 443; Palmer v. Stoen, 9 Gray (Mass.) 237; Sweeney v. Ledyard, 53 Mich. 421; Bull, 3 S. 37; Flannery v. Anderson, 437; Graham v. Williams, 16 S. R. (Pa.) 257; McClintock's App. Pa. St. 360; Henry v. Rish, 1 (Pa.) 265; Williams v. Craig, 1 (Pa.) 313; Skirving v. Hobb, 1 (S. Car.) 233; Neyle v. Chis, 1 Harp. (S. Car.) 274; Holmes v. Treadw. (S. Car.) 21; Waggoner, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 603; Fraser, 37 Wis. 149. Contra, Wenger v. Randolph, 1 Miss. (Walker) 51; Houston v. Crutcher, 31 Miss. 51.

Interest is not payable upon balances between partners except by some agreement or understanding. Gage v. melee, 87 Ill. 329; Gyger's App., 1 St. 73.

Upon accounting between partners interest is chargeable against one open mutual cash accounts bear interest.¹

an account is liquidated and there is a delay in the payment interest is allowed after there has been a demand, or after correctness of the account has been acknowledged.²

the goods are sold for cash, the account bears interest from delivery of the goods.³ In mutual merchandise accounts, interest to be cast upon the annual balances.⁴

When he has actually collected the sum, from the date of receipt; to sums which he has not received, though he may have been responsible in event of non-payment. Shepard v. Penn. Ch. 627.

When by a partner for advances the firm is not an account on an account which by custom is due from the end of the year. Interest due cannot be ascertained if accounting is had between the parties. Prentice v. Elliott, 72 Ga.

Van v. Vaughan, 44 Wis. 646; W. Rensselaer Glass Factory v. N. Y. 393; 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 256; Lio-Graves, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 226; Griswold, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 226; Smith, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 226; Van v. Sherburne, 15 Johns.

99; Van Beuren v. Van Gaas-berg, (N. Y.) 496; Tucker v. W. (N. Y.) 193; Consequa v. Johns, (N. Y.) Ch. 587; Es-ple, 3 N. Y. (3 Const.) 502; W. Dunlop, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 36; etc. Co. v. Mann, 4 Rob. (N.

Knigh v. Mitchell, 3 Brev. (S. C.) 668; Treadw. (S. Car.), Const. 668; Kennedy, Riley (S. Car.) 218; W. v. McVeagh, 69 Ill. 624; W. Osborne, 75 Ill. 615; Cooper, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 105; Hen-otton Mfg. Co. v. Lowell Shops (Ky.), 7 S. W. Rep. W. Wells (Kan.), 18 Pac.

W. Brown, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 218; W. Minott, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 218; W. Thomas, Dudley (Ga.) 218; W. Finney, 16 Vt. 297.

Interest is never allowed where the result of the failure of the debtor to press the collection of his debt and where the principal cause is an unliquidated account, interest or damages are claimed in mitigation, no judgment will be rendered for either. Adams Express Co. v. Bush (Ky.) 49.

1 C. of L.—25

In Indiana interest on an open account may be allowed in a proper case, commencing twelve months after the date of the last item. Young v. Dickey, 63 Ind. 31.

Where an account is unliquidated the objection to the allowance of interest is much stronger where no sum has been named by either party as the amount to be charged until after a controversy has arisen. Clark v. Clark, 46 Conn. 586.

An agreement that one-fifth part of a crop is to be paid to the plaintiff when it is made, constitutes a liquidated demand that will bear interest. Bartel v. Andrews, 18 Ga. 407.

Tenants in common used iron ore from the common property without requiring each other to account. Held, that interest could not be charged until a balance was struck. Grubbs' App., 66 Pa. St. 117.

Where the government has made up five statements of account against a collector, and has only charged interest on the last, and all these accounts are too large in the judgment of the court, and the collector has overpaid the government before the last account, no interest is chargeable on the balance in his hands when the suit was brought on the first account. United States v. Collier, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 525.

3. Smith v. Shaffer, 50 Md. 132; Foot v. Blanchard, 6 Allen (Mass.) 221; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 624; Maltman v. Williamson, 69 Ill. 423.

An account showing the delivery of goods at a time stated prima facie shows payment due at that time, and the creditor is entitled to recover interest. Wyandotte etc. Gas Co. v. Schliefer, 22 Kan. 468.

Interest was allowed on the price of logs delivered under a contract although there was a dispute between the parties as to the quantity and quality of the logs delivered. Vaughan v. Howe, 20 Wis. 497.

4. Davis v. Smith, 48 Vt. 53.

Where parties are engaged in con-

Interest is not allowed on unliquidated accounts for work, labor and services,¹ especially where an account was not rendered before suit was brought.² When the amount is ascertained, interest is recoverable³ after a demand of payment made at the expiration of a reasonable time.⁴ If an amount is capable of being ascertained, the account is so far liquidated as to bear interest.⁵

Continuous dealings the presentation of bills at various times, stating parts of the account, does not raise the presumption of liquidation under which interest is thereafter chargeable upon the balances shown to be due. Raymond v. Williams, 40 Iowa 117.

The plaintiff supplied the defendants with wood for which they were in the habit of settling from time to time. He omitted at one of these settlements to present his claim for a certain quantity of wood, and the omission was not discovered until a long time after. Held, that he could not recover interest on this claim. Brainerds v. Champlain Trans. Co., 29 Vt. 154.

1. Murrell v. Ware, 1 Bibb. (Ky.) 325.

2. Doyle v. St. James Church, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 178; Pursell v. Fry, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 595.

3. Carpenter v. Brand, 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 551.

In an action upon quantum meruit, the court found that on a specified day a certain sum was due the plaintiff. Held, that he was entitled to interest from said day. Mix v. Miller, 57 Cal. 356; Parker v. Parker, 33 Ala. 459.

Interest is allowed on liquidated demands in admiralty the same as in law, and on seaman's wages from the time they are due. Steamboat Swallow, Ala. Adm. 334.

Interest for a vexatious delay of payment for work is allowable by Indiana statute. McKinney v. Springer, 3 Ind. 59.

Interest is not recoverable in South Carolina, on a verbal contract in which the defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff a sum certain for rendering service. Farr v. Farr, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 393.

Interest on Sum Due Attorney for Services. Where, in an action by an attorney for professional services, the complaint, which was verified, asked judgment for a sum specified as the value of the services with interest, and the defendants made default, held, that the clerk properly computed and included interest in the judgment; that if error existed in allowing interest was a judicial error, and one of substance which could not be corrected by motion; and that an order striking the interest was error. Bullard v. Sherwood, 85 N. Y. 253.

On a claim for services, interest is to be allowed without proof of demand, when the debtor by leaving the State and having no fixed abode, prevented the creditor from making demand. Graham v. Chrystal, 2 (N. Y.) App. Dec. 263.

4. Ford v. Tirrell, 9 Gray (Mass.) 401.

5. Graham v. Chrystal, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 121.

Interest can be charged upon an account only from the time such account is rendered and is not allowable on the various items, from the date of each. Wood v. Belden, 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 549.

A consigner is entitled to interest on the balance due him on account. Porter v. Patterson, 15 Pa. St. 229.

Interest is chargeable on factor's accounts for advances or purchases. Walters v. McGirt, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 287.

The rule in regard to interest on accounts against towns does not differ from that governing accounts against individuals. Langdon v. Castleton, Vt. 285.

Interest cannot be recovered on the value of goods contracted by an agreement not in writing, to be sold on credit from the expiration of the contract. Gummage v. Alexander, 14 (Mass.) 414.

Interest may be recovered on a balance due on an account, and especially so where the parties have agreed that interest should be paid on such balance. Tootle v. Wells (Kan.), 18 Kan. Rep. 692.

Where a party receives notes, property and cash for which he agrees to execute his promissory note in a certain sum, this will make the account on a liquidated one, and interest is recoverable thereon. Clark v. Dutton, Ill. 521.

On Rents.—Rent in arrears due under a written lease bears interest on each instalment.¹ In covenant to recover a ground rent is recoverable, except there be special reasons for withholding it.² Where there is a sum certain due for rent, it bears interest³ if recovered in a personal action.⁴ Where rent is recovered by distress, interest cannot be distrained.⁵

On Legacies, Annuities, etc.—A specific legacy carries interest from the death of the testator. A general legacy bears interest from the time it is payable, unless otherwise controlled by statute.⁶

St. Chicago Alcohol Works v. Ill. App. 367.

A lease of cars by the receiver of a road is valid until disaffirmed by a court, it is not such an "instrument in writing" as entitles the lessor to sue on the rent due under Rev. Stat. 1885, p. 1356. Thomas v. C. R. Co., 36 Fed. Rep. 808. An action to recover rent due on premises, when the defendant is in breach of the lease, and the time should commence was to be determined by arbitrators, held, that defendant was liable for interest on the rent found due only from the date of decision. Binsse v. Wood, (N.Y.) 624.

In Common.—It is proper to charge interest upon estimated rents where the land is occupied by the tenant of the owner, or where the land is in common holds and enjoys the land by the consent of his tenant. Vance v. Evans, 11 W.

Lee v. Ingersoll, 7 Pa. St.

Tham v. Best, 10 B. Mon. 17. Compare Cooke v. Wise, 1 M. (Va.) 463; Clark v. Barlow, 4 Johns. (N.Y.) 183; Van Rensselaer v. Jones, 2 N.Y. 135; Crane v. D. Smith (N.Y.) 448. An agreement to pay rent on a lease, interest is recoverable from the date of decision. Elkin v. Moore, 6 B. Mon. 17; Honore v. Murray, 3 Dana 17; Clark v. Barlow, 4 Johns. 183; Van Rensselaer v. Jones, 2 N.Y. 135; Crane v. Hard, 4 D. Smith (N.Y.) 448.

Clark v. Barlow, 4 Johns. (N.Y.) 183; Van Rensselaer v. Jones, 2 Barb. 644; Obermeyer v. Nichols, 6 Pa. 159; Buck v. Fisher, 4 Pa. 516; Newman v. Keffer, 11 St. 442; Guthrie v. Stockton's

Admrs., 5 Harr. (Del.) 123; Honore v. Murray, 3 Dana (Ky.) 31; Elkin v. Moore, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 462.

5. Lansing v. Rattrone, 6 Johns. (N.Y.) 43; Longwell v. Ridinger, 1 Gill (Md.) 57. Compare Albright v. Pickle, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 264. In Virginia a statute gives the right to distrain for rent with interest. Brooks v. Wilcox, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 419.

6. Keech v. Speakman, 1 Pa. Law Jour. Rep. 72; Vermont State Baptist Convention v. Ladd Exr., 58 Vt. 95; Devlin's Estate, 1 Tuck (N.Y.) Surr. 460; Geoman v. Geoman, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 180.

The rule that a general legacy in favor of a child, when given for its maintenance, will draw interest from the testator's death, does not apply to a legacy to adults, nor where the maintenance of the child is otherwise provided for, either by the will or in any other mode. Hennion v. Jacobus, 27 N.J. Eq. 28.

The rule that a legacy shall carry interest only after one year from the death of the testator, applies to the case of the bequest of an annuity. Jones v. Stockett, 2 Bland (Md.) 409.

Interest should be allowed on all advancements of money from the death of testator, where the money value is charged against the legatee in the will. Williams v. Williams, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 438.

Interest is not allowed upon money arising from the proceeds of real estate, and inherited by the testator's heirs, because legacies had lapsed. Betts v. Betts, 4 Abb. (N.Y.) N. Cas. 317.

Accord and Satisfaction.—When there is a dispute between an executor and a legatee as to the amount of interest due on a legacy, on account of the expense and delay caused by a long litigation carried on for the protection of the estate, an acceptance by the legatee of a sum less than the one due on the legacy

Interest is not, in general, recoverable on the arrears of an annuity bequeathed by will.¹ An annuity in lieu of dower carries interest.²

(d) On Taxes, Orders, Warranties, etc., of Municipalities Interest is not chargeable, in general, upon taxes,³ nor upon liability upon the State to pay interest from the date of such presentation. Whitney v. State, 52 Miss. 732.

But the State is entitled to interest on the amount of taxes due from a collector from the time they should have been paid over. Dean v. State, 54 Vt. 313.

Where the State sues a county for taxes interest is not recoverable. State v. Multnomah Co., 13 Oreg. 287.

Where less authorized by statute. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. State, 55 Tex. 314.

But in New York interest runs on the arrears of taxes owing by a county to the State, to begin after thirty days from the time when the account current is rendered by the controller to the county treasurer pursuant to the New York statute. People v. County of New York, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 331.

An assessment upon a county for road improvements being authorized to be raised by taxation, interest upon the assessment cannot be collected. Paterson Ave. etc. Commrs. v. Hudson County Freeholders, 44 N. J. 570.

An illegal assessment was valid if by act of congress providing that successive assessments might be reduced by certain commissioners, "and where certificates of assessment have been issued they shall issue to the holder of such certificate a drawback certificate for the amount of such erroneous or excessive charges," which should be received in payment of special improvement assessments or redeemed by district in a certain manner. Hart, that, although the original certificate bore interest, the drawback certificate should not. United States v. Denney, Mackey (D. C.) 463.

In a suit to recover back the amount of taxes paid without protest on an illegal assessment, the plaintiff is entitled to interest thereon from the time of demanding repayment, or from the date of the writ where no previous demand is made; but where such taxes are paid under protest, the plaintiff is entitled to interest thereon from the time of payment. Boston etc. Gas is an accord and satisfaction, if the payment is made upon the express condition that it shall be in full for the balance due, and the money accepted without protest against such condition. Vermont State Baptist Convention v. Ladd, 58 Vt. 95.

1. Isenhardt v. Brown, 2 Edw. (N. Y.) 341; Adams Admr. v. Adams Admr., 10 Leigh (Va.) 527.

Contra, Stephenson v. Arson, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) Ch. 274.

It has been held in South Carolina and in Tennessee that it lies in the discretion of the court to allow interest on an annuity under a will. Irby v. McCrae, 4 Dessau. (S. Car.) 422; Laura Jane v. Hagen, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 332.

Interest will not be allowed on the arrears of an annuity which was to be paid in agricultural products at a particular place, the value of which was to be ascertained by testimony, and in the absence of any proof of a demand at the place where it was to be paid, or of an agreement to dispense with such demand and to convert the same into money. Philips v. Williams, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 259.

2. Beeson v. Beeson, 1 Harr. (Del.) 106; Houston v. Jamison, 4 Harr. (Del.) 330; Irby v. McCrae, 4 Dessau. (S. Car.) 422.

Whether a widow is entitled to interest upon a sum secured to her by a recognizance in a proceeding in partition, depends upon the circumstances of the case, and is a question to be determined by a jury. Smyser v. Smyser, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 437.

3. Danforth v. Williams, 9 Mass. 324; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Hopkins Co. (Ky.), 9 S. W. Rep. 497.

warrants, nor upon orders payable out of taxes after a and nonpayment for want of funds.¹

Purchase Money.—The general rule in ordinary contracts sale of land which contain no stipulation for interest, and specify any day for completion, is that the purchaser is interest on the purchase money from the time he takes on, especially if he has received rents and profits.²

ston, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 181.
on v. Juniata County, 50 Pa. yer v. Covington Township,
t. 200; Jacks v. Turner, 36 warrants issued on claims althe county commissioners' ch, under the statute, can be in the order of their registrading to their class, which are o interest, and specify no time it, do not bear interest. Ashe of Harris, 55 Tex. 49.

North Carolina interest is al-upon the amount recoverable der upon a county treasurer, the chairman of the board of ommissioners from the time of and refusal. Yellowly v. oners of Pitt, 73 N. Car. 164.
der of an interest-bearing ob-the city of New York must sentation thereof when due le, and if he fails to do so, d the city liable for interest
Paul v. New York, 7 Daly

4. ouri a town warrant will not est till presentment is made suror, and endorsement made me cannot be paid for want (Wagn. Mo. St. 1,325, § the interest from that date only six per cent. State v.
tc. 61 Mo. 155. And county do not draw interest until for payment. Skinner v.
nty, 22 Mo. 437; Robbins v.
o., 3 Mo. 57.

ued by a city as currency to bear interest. Smith v. ans, 27 La. Ann. 187.

rod v. Wheeling etc. R. Co., 1.

y such case the vendee seeks the payment of interest on f default of the vendor, he ally set aside the purchase and appropriate it for the d notify him that the money
e. Steenrod v. Wheeling etc.
W. Va. 1.

But under special circumstances a jury is justified in refusing it. Fasholt
v. Reed, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 266; McCormick v. Crall, 6 Watts (Pa.) 207; Kester v. Rockel, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 365.

A grantee retaining, by agreement with the grantor, purchase money after due, to indemnify himself from loss by reason of an incumbrance, holds the same as trustee of the grantor; and if he uses it for his own benefit, he is chargeable with interest from the time it becomes due until paid. McCrea v.
Matien, 32 Ohio St. 38.

A contract for the sale of lands provided that, of the purchase money, $100 should be paid in cash at the time the agreement was made, and the remaining $600 in monthly instalments of $10 each, no stipulation as to interest being inserted. The vendee entered and continued in possession at the time of filing his bill for specific performance. Held, that he should pay interest on the instalments as they came due. Lang v.
Moole, 31 N. J. Eq. 413.

Where a bond is given for the purchase money of land sold under execution, conditioned for the payment thereof, according to the decree of the court, it does not bear interest until a decree is made. Beetim v. Buchanan, 4 Watts (Pa.) 59; Gardner v. Klinefelter, 9 W. & S. (Pa.) 59.

Where a purchaser is ready and willing to perform a contract for the purchase of real estate, and the delay is on the part of the vendor, the former is entitled to the rents and profits from the time when, according to the terms of the contract, possession should have been delivered; or if the vendor has remained in possession he is chargeable with the value of the use and occupation from the same period, and the purchaser is chargeable with interest on so much of the purchase money as has remained in his hands unappropriated.
Where, however, the purchase money has been appropriated and notice thereof given to the vendor, and the purchaser has received no interest thereon,

A purchaser at a sheriff's sale who neglects to make payment according to his contract must pay interest on the amount of his bid, or as much of it as is applicable to judgments not his own.

(f) On Obligations in Writing.—Wherever there is a written contract for a sum of money payable upon demand, or upon a day certain, interest is payable if payment of the principal sum is not made on demand, or at the time agreed upon.²

Where a note is payable in annual instalments, interest is payable on the instalments as they become due, and not annually on the whole sum.³

he is not liable to pay interest to the vendor. Bostwick v. Beach, 103 N. Y. 414.

A vendee who has been evicted under a prior encumbrance (not under paramount title) in an action to recover back the purchase money is entitled to interest from the time of eviction. Culp v. Fisher, 1 Watts (Pa.) 494.

In an action on a covenant of warranty by a grantee who had never paid mesne profits nor been damnified by an assertion of a claim to them (his evictor's right to them having been cut off by statute prior to the covenant suit), held, that the defendant could only be charged with interest from the date of the evictor's deed to the party from whom the plaintiff had purchased the evicting title, the plaintiff having enjoyed possession and profits up to that time. Wead v. Larkin, 49 Ill. 99.

Although the purchaser of land under a covenant of warranty of title, formerly on eviction, only recovered the purchase money paid without interest, yet since the introduction of the action for mesne profits, which takes from him the profits of the land, the rule is established that he may recover interest so long as he is liable for mesne profits, even from the time of a recovery on the covenant back to five years before the eviction. Wood v. Kingston Coal Co., 48 Ill. 356. See also King v. Kerr, 5 Ohio 154.

1. Atkinson v. Richardson, 15 Wis. 594; Arnold v. House, 12 S. Car. 600.

Purchasers at a judicial sale of property mortgaged to secure a large number of notes, and sold in proceedings for the collection of one of such notes only, retained in their hands the balance of the purchase money beyond the amount required to be paid upon such sale, having also the possession and enjoyment of the property purchased. They announced to the court their readiness to deposit the money in bank or otherwise, and kept on deposit in bank in their own name, to the credit of a general account, on which they were drawing from time to time for various sums, retaining at all times a sufficient amount to pay the sum due; but did not keep a special fund on deposit for that purpose. Held, that there was no such deposit nor offer to deposit contemplated by the Louisiana Code (art. 2553, 2559), whereby a depositor might exonerate themselves from paying interest. Morris v. Cain, 39 Ann. 712.

2. Jacobs v. Adams Exr., 1 Pa. 52.

In actions on obligations and promissory notes, containing no stipulation as to interest, it need not be demanded in the declaration nor its payment mentioned in the assignment of breach. Chinn v. Hamilton, Hempst. (U. S.) 438.

Interest is not allowable upon a sum named in an agreement not as a penalty, but as liquidated damages recoverable, not as the representation of an actual debt, or as a measure of actual compensation, but as the damage fixed by the parties to be recovered in case of a breach. The verdict must be for a precise sum. Hoagland v. Segura, N. J. L. 230.

Contracts in writing to pay specified rates of interest are no exception to the rule of construction of contracts in writing, the manifest intention of the parties controlling the legal effect, and where the intention is doubtful the contract is construed most strongly against the promisor. Brewster v. Wakefield, Minn. 352; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 343.

3. Bander v. Bander, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 560; Stumps v. Cooper, 59 Tenn.

A bond payable "in three equal annual instalments from this date, interest payable annually until erty must pay interest after demand.¹ Where a bond or instrument of writing for the payment of money does not specify on its face that interest is to be paid, interest is in the nature of damages, and the payment of the principal money will bar an action for the interest; but where interest is stated in the contract itself, it becomes a part of the debt and may be recovered, although the principal sum has been paid. To add to the principal interest thereon at an agreed law rate, and give a written obligation for the aggregate, without stating the rate itself, is a sufficient compliance with a statute which tolerates a limited conventional rate of interest on condition that the contract therefor being in writing.³

On Verdicts, Awards, Judgments and Decrees.—Interest is recoverable on a judgment, but by the common law it cannot be recovered in the execution, but must be recovered by a separate action.⁴ In most States the right is given by statute to in-paid—that is, one-third November 10th, 1866; one-third with the next November 10th, 1867; and one-third with the interest November 10th, 1868,—draws annual interest on the several instalments after as well as before. Watkins v. Bank of the South, 17 S. Car. 13.

Washington Bank v. Shurtleff, 4 Mass. 30; Carter v. Carter, 4 Mass. 30; Lewis v. Dwight, 10 Mass. 30; United States v. Arnold, 1 S. 348; s. c., 9 Cranch (U. S.) 252; Wallis, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 252; Probate v. Heydock, 8 N. H.

action for money paid by a bond is recoverable from the payment, without proof of a default of repayment. Ilseley v. Jewett, 168 (Mass.); Knight v. Ga. Dec. 22; Winder v. Dillard, 2 Bland (Md.) 166.

Phillips, 95 N. Car. 245; Nixon, 69 N. Car. 80; Robinson, 32 Ind. 28.

action on a treasurer's bond to pay the amount of deficits, such as being ascertainable by computation, interest may properly be allowed. School District v. Dreutzer, 51 Mich. 49.

defendant gave the plaintiff promissory notes, in renewal of earlier ones on which the interest was overpaid, new notes did not include the interest not received in satisfaction of the old interest; but the question was understood by the parties to remain an open one, the defendant saying that he would make it all right, acknowledging that he was legally liable, and urging certain reasons why the claim ought not to be pressed. The old notes were left, together with the new ones, in the defendant's possession, where they had been before, but crumpled up, and not for safe keeping. Held, that these facts would warrant a finding for the plaintiff in an action for the overdue interest. Eames v. Cushman, 135 Mass. 573.

Bond for Reconveyance of Real Estate on Conditions—Construction of.—Defendant conveyed to plaintiff certain lands in payment of a debt, and plaintiff entered into a bond to reconvey the land, provided defendant would repay him a certain sum with interest, defendant meantime to have possession of the land. Held, that defendant did not become plaintiff's debtor for principal or interest, and that, after forfeiture of the possession of the land and of the right to have it reconveyed to him, he was not liable in an action for the interest which had accrued while he was in possession. Huston v. Kline, 64 Iowa 376; Alston v. Wilson, 44 Iowa 130; Stroup v. Haycock, 56 Iowa 732.

3. Tribble v. Anderson, 63 Ga. 31.

4. Sayre v. Austin, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 496; Hodgdon v. Hodgdon, 2 N. H. 169; Watson v. Fuller, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 283; Solen v. Virginia etc. R. Co., 14 Nev. 405; Winch v. Mutual Benefit Ice Co., 86 N. Y. 618.

An audited claim against a county does not bear interest until judgment recovered thereon. Wheeler v. Newberry Co., 18 S. Car. 132. Claim in judgment allowed against receiver's fund not entitled to interest. Ex parte Brown, 18 S. Car. 87.

In Louisiana interest cannot be collected on a judgment for money which, by its own terms, is silent as to interest. Anderson's Succession, 33 La. An. 581.

Without express legislation, neither contracts, judgments nor decrees would bear interest. Hamer v. Kirkwood, 25 Miss. 95; Reece v. Knott, 3 Utah, 451.

In New York, under the provision of the act of 1870 (ch. 78, laws of 1870) in reference to compensation for causing death by negligence, which provides that the amount of damages recovered shall draw interest from the time of the death, "which interest shall be added to the verdict," the jury have nothing to do with the question of interest; that is to be added to the damages inserted in the entry of judgment by the clerk; and this although the jury, in making up damages, awarded, in fact included the interest. Manning Admr. v. Port Henry etc. Co., 91 N. Y. 664.

Interest cannot be allowed on the amount of damages assessed by the jury in an action on the case where trespass might have been brought. Ormsby v. Johnson, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 80; Holmes v. Misroon, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 209.

In an action under the railroad stock law of 1874, for the value of an animal killed by the railroad company in the operation of its railroad, held, that the plaintiff can recover only what the statute permits him to recover, and cannot recover interest on the value of the animal killed prior to the day of trial. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Gabbert, 34 Kan. 132.

A recovery of damages for simple negligence of a party to whom no benefit could accrue by reason of the injury inflicted, does not include interest. Kenney v. Hannibal etc. R. R. Co., 63 Mo. 98; Marshall v. Schrick, 63 Mo. 308; Atkinson v. A. & P. R. Co., 63 Mo. 367; Western & A. R. Co. v. Young (Ga.), 7 S. E. Rep. 912.

Interest may be recovered upon the amount of an award, after the same is due and after demand, under the common courts, although the declaration contains no counts for interest. Tucker v. Page, 69 Ill. 179.

Interest on Amount of Excessive Damages Remitted.—A judgment for plaintiff having been reversed because the damages were excessive, and the court having ordered that if plaintiff should remit from the verdict all damages except $5,000, she should judgment, "on the verdict and submission," for $5,000 and costs, held that she was entitled to include such judgment interest on the $5,000 from the date of the verdict. McAns v. City of Lancaster, 65 Pa. 240.

A judgment against a city for condemnation, etc., for a street, bears interest at six per cent. from the date of possession is taken by the public. Cicago v. Palmer, 93 Ill. 125.

Where one, entitled to an award of damages by reason of the widening of Broadway in the city of New York, made in proceedings under the act of 1869 (ch. 890, laws of 1869), accepted the sum awarded, and gave a receipt acknowledging payment in full of the amount, held, that the right to interest was thereby waived, and an action to recover the same could not thereupon be maintained against the city. This, although the claimant demanded payment of interest at the time he protested against the refusal of the comptroller to pay the same. C. et al. v. Mayor etc. of New York, N. Y. 166.

Interest Upon Compensation Awarded.—Where possession has been acquired of land for a public park, or other public use, and payment of the compensation awarded is withheld, it is proper to require the payment of interest thereon from the time possession is taken. Phillips v. South Park Commission, 119 Ill. 626.

License to use a certain wharf, long to a city was granted to it upon the payment of a stipulated monthly sum for wharfage. The city subsequently passed an ordinance authorizing a railroad company to lay tracks along the wharf, and later to widen said tracks. While thus engaged the railroad company removed certain posts from the wharf, theretofore used for the mooring of vessels, and laid a pile of stones and debris deposited thereon. A notified the city to remove the posts and remove the debris, which it neglected to do, and upon a sunrise in the river, certain rafts belonging to A and attached to the wharf by ropes away and were lost. A brought an action against the city for the damages occasioned, and asked the court interest on the judgment in the execution issued thereon.¹

That if the jury believed the s under the exclusive control y, that the city derived a rev-n it; that A. had paid wharfs use to the city, and that the guilty of negligence in allows and rubbish to remain on after notice, in consequence neglect A. suffered loss, then titled to recover therefor from The court having affirmed s, the jury found for the Held, that A. was entitled to n his claim as part of his dam-leghteny v. W. Campbell et
a. St. 530; s. c., 52 Am. Rep.

on entitled by law to damages nt of a street being opened is property is not allowed in-the award so long as he re-rents and issues of the prop-cond Street, 66 Pa. St. 132. action for the value of two $1,000 each, bearing 6 per est, which were to have been to the plaintiff as part payertain land, where defendants e value of the two to be only interest to be collected there-interest on $2,000 from a given per cent. per year. Held, tiff is entitled by this judginterest on $2,000 from the n up to the date of the judg-
; and that the words "no ine collected thereon" refer to not future interest. Stewart an's Admr. (Ky.), 7 S. W.

is not allowed upon damages upon a protested bill of ex-Murphy v. Andrews, 13 Ala. land v. Hoover, 3 Miss. (2 9.
EMAN on Judgments, §. 411.
v. Saunders, 13 Gratt. (Va.)

ct that judgments of other ar any interest whatever is a proof, and cannot be noticed urt, and in the absence of ere the judgment does not interest, it will be presumed, law of that State, no interest
l. Cavender v. Guild, 4 Cal. son v. Daily, 13 Ala. 722.

ds—Condemnation of Right Appeal; Interest on Award; adjudication.—Where a railroad company condemns right of way, and pays the award of the commissioners to the sheriff, but stops the money in his hands by taking an appeal, and takes possession of the right of way, the land owner is entitled to interest on the money at six per cent per annum from the time possession of the land is taken to the time the money is finally paid to him. But the question of interest is one which could and should be raised on the trial of the appeal, where the facts entitling the claimant thereto should be determined; and, if not so raised, and the company pays the amount awarded against it on the appeal, the land owner cannot afterwards maintain a separate action, asking that the amount of his interest be ascertained, and praying for an injunction to restrain the company from using the right of way until such interest is paid. To such a case the rule applies, that "an adjudication is final and conclusive, not only as to the matter actually determined, but as to every other matter which the parties might have litigated and had determined."

Hayes v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 64 Iowa 753. See Stodghill v. C. B. & Q. R.
Co., 53 Iowa 345.

An injunction restraining a railroad company from obstructing the complainant's lane was dissolved upon the payment into court, as security, of the amount of damages, and thereupon the company obstructed the lane. Held, that upon the final decree, interest at the legal rate should be allowed to the complainants, upon the amount, from the time of the dissolution of the injunction, although but four per cent had been received on the fund deposited. Carpenter v. Easton etc. R. Co., 28 N. J. Eq. 390.

Interest on Costs.—In New York, interest is not taxable with costs where the plaintiff is delayed by a case made by the defendant, except in actions on contract. Henning v. Van Tyre, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 101.

In an action by a sheriff to recover the costs due to him for services, interest will not be allowed on the amount thereof. Galbraith et al. v. Walker, 95 Pa. St. 481.

In an action to recover the amount of a judgment theretofore rendered, the plaintiff is entitled to recover interest upon the costs adjudged to him, from

Equity follows the law in allowing interest on decrees.¹

Interest is allowed upon a foreign judgment when a recovery had upon it in another State.²

A tribunal assessing damages has power in its discretion to add interest to the sums which it finds to represent the loss of the plaintiff in the action.³

When an action is brought upon an interest-bearing claim, there is a verdict for the plaintiff, and the defendant delays giving of judgment by a motion for a new trial, or otherwise, the plaintiff is entitled to legal interest on the verdict.⁴

the date of the original judgment to the time of recovery. Emmett v. Brophy, 42 Ohio St. 82.

1. McAlexander v. Lee, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 483; Samuel v. Winter, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 480; Crocker v. Clements, 23 Ala. 296; Moore v. Pendirgrast, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 534; Lair v. Jelf, 3 Dana (Ky.) 181.

Upon demands bearing interest at law, the courts of equity will allow interest, but where the demand does not bear interest at law, equity will or will not allow interest according to the equity of the case. Hunt v. Smith, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 465.

In respect to interest, a decree has the same force as a judgment, when it contests with other liens or claims for money. But this refers to a decree in personam, binding all the property of the debtor, and rendered against the defendant, without reference to the sale of particular property and the distribution of the fund arising therefrom. Where a decree provided for the sale of certain property, and a division of the proceeds according to certain fixed priorities, naming amounts to be paid to claimants, and there was not enough to pay principal and interest of all the debts, the decree will not be construed as giving interest to one to the exclusion of others. If the property out of which the fund arose had been productive in the hands of a receiver, the net increase would be divided proportionately. National Bank of Augusta v. Heard et al., 65 Ga. 189.

After the noninterest bearing claim against the estate of an intestate has been passed upon in the final settlement of the administrator's account, and ordered paid in due course of distribution, it bears interest. Estate of Olivera, 70 Cal. 184.

2. Mahurin v. Bickford, 6 N. H. 567; Barringer v. King, 5 Gray (Mass.)

9; Nelson v. Felder, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 395; Schell v. Stetson, 12 Pa. 187.

Foreclosure—Interest, Whether Note or Judgment Thereon.—Where a debtor, whose debt was secured by deed of trust, on an accounting settlement six months before the debt was due, gave his note, payable six months after date without interest, the sum found to be due, including interest on the original debt till maturity, and upon which judgment was immediately confessed, it was held that, on bill to foreclose the trust, it was error to compute interest on the judgment from its date, and that it should have been computed on the note, which bore no interest till maturity. Darst v. Bates, 95 Ill. 493.

3. Frazer v. Bigelow Carpet Co., 141 Mass. 126.

Where the jury find for the plaintiff in the sum of $1,161.64, with interest at seven per cent. per annum from January 17th, 1877, to date, the court in rendering judgment ought to take into consideration such interest, as the damages assessed can be computed from the face of the verdict without mathematical certainty. Citizens Bank v. Bowen, 25 Kan. 117.

An action of ejectment for the recovery of a term was referred to an assessor, who found that the fair value of the lease to the plaintiff was a certain sum for each year while he was in possession. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to interest on each year's sum of the amount named, from the time when it might have been received by him if he had not been ejected, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to have the interest computed by monthly quarterly rests, although by the terms of the lease the rent was payable quarterly. Hodgkins v. Price, 141 Mass.

4. Dowell v. Griswold, 5 Sawy.

DAMAGES FOR THE USE OR BENEFIT OF ANOTHER'S MONEY

On Loans and Advances.—Where one receives an advantage from the use of the money of another, he is chargeable with interest.¹ Interest is always recoverable in this country on a loan.² Whenever money has been received by a party ex æquo et bono he ought to refund, interest follows as a matter of course.³

Hibson v. Cincinnati Enquirer, 10 U. S. 88.

It is not, as a rule, allowed that a judgment has been prevented or delayed by the order of a court of another jurisdiction to await the result of controversy among servants. Bowman v. Wilson, 2 U. S. 294.

A district court awarded to the plaintiff a sum of money as salvage. The plaintiff appealed to the circuit court which awarded to the libellant the same sum. Held, that the libellant was not entitled to interest on such sum from the date of the decree of the district court. The Rebecca Clyde, 12 U. S. 403.

On commencement of an action, the defendants to interplead were held by the plaintiffs and by both of them, plaintiffs' money into court, and judgments rendered in their favor, was subsequently, on appeal by the defendants, reversed by the defective pleadings of the plaintiff.

The other defendant was at all times ready and willing to receive the money. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to interest from the time it became due, if it extended plaintiff's liability for the actual amount due from the accumulation of interest caused by their defective pleadings. Pfister v. Wade, 69 Cal. 133. A correct amount of compensation for property taken for street purposes has been ascertained, but the owner's receiving payment incurred through a defect in the proceedings, he should be allowed interest. Gest v. Cincinnati, 26 Ohio —A year after a suit was brought against a collector to recover taxes, the plaintiff recovered a judgment and a reference was ordered in the amount due. Twenty days occurred in bringing on the reference before the referee, but not the plaintiff's fault. Held, that he was entitled to interest. Bartels v. Redfield, 23 Blatchf. 486; s. c., 27 Fed. Rep. 286.

An action against a customs collector to recover excessive duties remained in court twenty-three years, the plaintiff finally prevailing. Held, that if the delay in terminating the suit was attributable to the plaintiff's laches, he was not entitled to interest. Stewart v. Schell, 31 Fed. Rep. 65.

1. Lewis v. Bradford, 8 Ala. 632; Miller v. Bank of Orleans, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 503; Sims v. Willing et al., 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 103; Killian v. Eigenmann, 57 Ind. 480; Curtis v. Adkins, 1 Houst. (Del.) 382; s. c., 68 Am. Dec. 422; Succession of Mann, 4 La. Ann. 42.

Whenever a debtor is prevented, through the act of his creditor or of the law, from paying his debt at and after maturity, interest should be abated during the time he is so prevented. But as it is the duty of the debtor to seek his creditor and pay his debt, he must show that the failure to pay was not the result of his neglect. Pillow v. Brown, 26 Ark. 240.

Where money is held by one as a mere bailee or on deposit, interest is not chargeable. Haswell v. Farmers' etc. Bank, 26 Vt. 100; Duncan v. Mockett, 25 Tex. 245.

As a matter of law, a receipt for money does not charge the receiptor with interest, but it is discretionary with the court or jury to allow it or not. Bell v. Logan, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 593.

2. Rapalie v. Emory, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 349; Dilworth v. Sinderling, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 488.

Where money received in partition proceedings and loaned to the administrator is by the terms of the bond taken from the administrator to be accounted for "upon a final settlement of the estate," interest begins to run only from that time, and not from the date of the bond. McIVER, J., dissenting; Kinard v. Glenn (S. Car.), 8 S. E. Rep. 203.

3. Barr v. Haseldon, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 53.

Where money is paid for the account, or to the use or benefit of another, interest is allowed from the time of such payment.¹ Money advanced by one's agent or factor is not to bear interest from the time it is paid.² This is the rule when money is paid or lent forms matter of account as well as when the transactions are detached.³ But advancements by a parent to children do not bear interest,⁴ except from the time the property is divided among them.⁵

A partnership may be liable for interest to one partner who makes advances for or to the firm, when there is a special contract to that effect, or where it may be implied from the circumstances that the firm was to pay interest for such advances; otherwise

Interest may be recovered in an action for money had and received. Pease v. Barber, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 266; Goddard v. Bulow, 1 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 45; Black v. Goodman, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 201; Porter v. Nash, 1 Ala. 452; Martin v. McRae, 1 Cheeves (S. Car.) 61.

Defendant's testator having loaned a sum of plaintiff's money, she being his wife, including it with his own funds in a mortgage taken for such loan, collected a portion of the mortgage debt, and the interest annually during his lifetime, after which defendants continued to collect such interest, both testator and defendants denying plaintiff's right to any portion of the mortgage debt. Held, in an action to establish her claim to said fund, and to recover the same, that she was entitled to interest upon the interest so collected, though she had made no demand for such interest when received. Price v. Holman, 2 N. Y. S. 184.

1. Weeks v. Hasty, 13 Mass. 218; Gibbs v. Bryant, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 118; Ilsley v. Jewett, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 168; Milne v. Remplicam, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 102; Sims v. Willing et al., 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 103; Hastie v. De Peyster, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 190; Miles v. Bacon, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 457; Breckinridge v. Taylor, 5 Dana (Ky.) 110; Goodloe v. Clay, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 236; Thompson v. Stevens, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 494; Buckmaster v. Grundy et al., 3 Gilman (Ill.) 626; Aikin v. Peay, 5 Strobb. (S. Car.) 15.

If a surety pays the debt of his principal in depreciated bank notes, he is entitled to interest on the specie value of the notes at the time of his payment. Miles v. Bacon, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 457.

A father conveyed his farm to his son conditioned for the support of himself and his then wife, the mother of the grantee during each of their lives. After the death of the grantee's mother the father married again, and upon the son's objecting to support the stepwife under the contract, the father refused him to bring his claim for her support against the father's estate, after his death, whereupon the son did sue her until his father's death. That as a matter of law the son was entitled to recover interest upon his claim against his father's estate. Sprague v. Sprague, 30 Vt. 483.

2. Cheesborough v. Hunter, 1 (S. Car.) 400; Smetz v. Kennerly, 1 (S. Car.) 218; Taylor v. K. Exrs., 1 Dana (Ky.) 391.

When an agent is required to advance by him money of his principal which is chargeable with no more than ordinary interest. Rochester v. Levering, 1 Ind. 562.

Forwarding and commission merchants are entitled to interest on cash advances. Trotter v. Grimes, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 413.

Where money is advanced upon the purchase of grain, only a portion of which is delivered, interest is recoverable upon the excess of money advanced, above the value of the amount of grain delivered. Cease v. C., 76 Ill. 484.

A receipt for money advanced in cotton in store and to arrive entitles to interest from its date. Grimes v. good, 19 Tex. 246.

3. Reid v. Rensselaer Glass Fa., 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 393.

4. Osgood v. Breed's Heirs, 17 (S. Car.) 356; Hall et ux. v. Davis et al., 3 (Pa.) 450; Green v. Howell, 6 S. (Pa.) 203.

5. Oakey, Ex parte, 1 Bradf. (N.

er will not be entitled to interest for such advances or s, but the liability of the firm will be by account.¹

Money Wrongfully or Unlawfully Withheld or Obtained.

one has received the money of another and has not the scientiously to retain it, the law imposes interest as dam-the breach of an implied promise to pay it over.² Where plaintiff's money has come into the hands of the defend-fraud or imposition,³ or, being due by a third person to tiff, is wrongfully withheld,⁴ or is the proceeds of the s property,⁵ the defendant is liable for interest from the withheld.⁶

Yundt's Appeal, 1 Harr.

ice v. Elliott, 72 Ga. 154.

ere his copartner sees the charged on the books and objections he must be con-having agreed thereto, as to t stated. Lloyd v. Carrier, (N. Y.) 364.

nting between partners, inchargeable against one, upon he has actually collected from the date of receipt; but sums which he has not re-fact, though he may have be responsible in event of collect them. Shepard v.
nn. Ch. 627.

1 v. Waite, 17 Mass. 560;
Emory, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 349;
Wilmot 22 Vt. 437; Close 3 Tex. 623.

holding money against the owner is chargeable with ough he has a set off and the e by him was not liquidated nging the action. Greenly s, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 96.

ne has the money of another nds, and uses it, he cannot payment of interest by an-at he does not know what made by its use. In such a at least liable for interest, was so employed. Lewis v.
8 Ala. 632.

ard v. Bulow, 1 Nott & M.
45; Wood v. Robbins, 11
Winslow v. Hathaway et al., ass.) 211; Arthur v. Wheeler Mfg. Co., 12 Mo. App. 335; rers' National Bank v. Perry, 313; Silver Valley etc. Co. re etc. Co. (N. Y.), 6 S. E.

upon the termination of a p, one of the partners wrongfully converted the remaining property of the firm to his own use, held, on bill filed to state account, that the complainant could recover interest on the amount found due him, from the termination of the partnership. Robbins v. Laswell, 58 Ill. 203.

4. Greenly v. Hopkins, 10 Wend.
(N. Y.) 96; Hazzard v. Duke, 64 Ind.
220.

5. Chauncey et al. v. Geaton, 1 N.
H. 151.

6. Lynch v. De Viar, 3 Johns. Cas.
(N. Y.) 303; Simpson et al. v. Feltz,
1 McCord (S. Car.) Ch. 213; Black v.
Goodman, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 201;
Rapalie v. Emory, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 349;
Shipman v. Miller, 2 Root (Conn.) 405.

Specie was shipped from Boston to Porto Cabello for the purpose of purchasing a return cargo and the vessel was obliged to put into Antigua, on account of a disaster, where the master, being destitute of funds, sold a part of the specie for the purpose of making the repairs, and the vessel proceeded to her port of destination and thence to Boston. Held, that the owners thereof were entitled to interest on the value from the time when they would have had the benefit of it at Porto Cabello if it had been carried forward with the rest of the cargo. The Mary, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 51.

A public officer retaining money in his hands after it is due is chargeable with interest from such time as it is unlawfully detained. People v. Gasherie, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 71; Slinger-landt v. Swart, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 255; Monroe Co. Supervisors v. Clarke, 25
Hun (N. Y.) 282; Cassady et al. v.
Trustees of Schools, 105 Ill. 560;
Lawrence v. Murray, 3 Paige (N. Y.)
400; Board of Justices v. Fennimore, Coxe (N. J.) 242; Stein v. People, 102

(c) On Money Paid by Mistake.—Where money has been paid and received by common mistake, and no fraud can be imputed to either party, interest will not be allowed except from the time when the mistake was explained and demand made.¹

In such case, the question of interest depends upon the facts of the defendant.²

(d) On Funds Held in Trust.—Executors, administrators, executors, and trustees generally, are chargeable with interest on the funds that they improperly retain in their hands,³ and they are al-

Ill. 540; Hudson v. Tenney et al., 6 N. H. 457; United States v. Curtis, 100 U. S. 119.

An officer charged with the disbursement of public moneys is not liable for interest thereon, if he has not converted them to his own use, nor neglected to disburse them pursuant to law, nor, when thereunto required, failed to account for or transfer them. United States v. Denver, 106 U. S. 536.

A city treasurer having failed to pay over to the county collector the county's quota of taxes, he was charged with interest upon the same from the time when he ought to have paid them. State ex rel. v. Van Winkle, 43 N. J. L. 125.

1. Simons v. Walter, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 97; King et al. v. Diehl et al., 9 S. & R. 409; Jacobs v. Adams, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 52; Ashhurst v. Field, 28 N. J. Eq. 315.

Money in Court. Where upon the motion of intervenors, acting in good faith, money for which plaintiff was suing was ordered to be paid to the clerk to await the further order of the court, and was there detained by an erroneous order of the court, whereby the cause was continued, held that the intervenors were not liable for interest on the money during the time of such detention, simply because they failed to establish their right to the money. Van Gordon v. Ormsby Bros. & Co. et al., 60 Iowa 510.

2. Gillet v. Maynard, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 85.

Taxes—Payment by Mistake on Another's Land—Recovery from Owner—Interest.—Where taxes are paid by a person upon another's land, under such circumstances as to give a right of recovery for the taxes so paid, the person paying is entitled to recover interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the time of payment, and to have a lien for the whole amount paid upon the whole land. Goodnow

v. Plumbe, 64 Iowa 672; Goodnow v. Litchfield, 63 Iowa 275, followed.

Where one of several joint owners had received a mortgage to indemnify them, which was supposed sufficient but proved insufficient, and after paying the debt, held, in a proceeding by him for contribution, he was entitled to interest from institution of suit. Loe v. Clay, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 236.

3. Schieffelin v. Stewart, 1 Johns. (N. Y.), Ch. 620; Manning v. Manning, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 528; Turner's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 46; N. Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 123; Vance v. Vance, 32 La. Ann. 186; Shaw v. Shaw, 53 Vt. 360.

After the accounts of a trust are stated, and he is ordered to pay the fund forthwith, he will be liable for interest unless he pays over to the party entitled or deposits the fund in court. Lyons v. Chamberlin, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 49.

Trustee Charged with Interest on Proceeds of Sale.—Trustee held liable for interest on the proceeds of sale received from the sale of trust property from the time when the same were received. Judd v. Dike, 30 Minn. 100.

Guardian and Ward.—The decedent's intestate was appointed guardian of complainant, his daughter, in February, 1865, and was appointed guardian to sell some of her property in July, 1865, and he gave surety in each capacity. He sold those lands, but never rendered any account of the proceeds, nor of his disposition thereof, after his report of the inventory thereof, made soon after they came into his hands, and never filed any account as general or special guardian. His ward, who was born in 1863, and lived with him thereafter. He died insolvent in 1881. On exception to the master's report as to the allowance and charges by the guardian, and his sureties' respective liabilities, held that he should be charged with ly on the amounts originally by him as general guardian, est on the rents, but the pro- the sale of the lands should luded therein, nor the interest proceeds, because, for them, es as special guardian are possible, since he never ob- y direction from the court to hose proceeds to his account l guardian. Smith v. Gum- N. J. Eq. 27.

a guardian's reports showed ot of moneys belonging to his payments made by him, but no item of interest, held county court might, on final t, charge him with interest, anding approval of the re- ennett v. Hanifin, 87 Ill. 31. a guardian acts in good faith, not make any use or profit for the funds, he is chargeable tutory rate of interest only. well, 55 Cal. 137.

dian receiving from the ad- or of the father of his wards ond bearing twelve per cent. a part of his ward's estate, investing the same, is to be the same rate of interest upon termination of his guardian- avely v. Harkrader, 29 Gratt.

dian received pension money early for nine years on ac- his ward. He never filed any from the time of his appoint- een years ago, until cited. at although there was no hat he had used the money, pay interest on the pension with annual rests. Re Dis- N. J. Eq. 227.

a collector of an estate does sit the funds collected with orated trust company as re- law, but with his firm or in- account, and it does not appear e was any profit arising he is e not with seven per cent. but with the rate the trust would have paid. [DAVIS, enting.] Livermore v. Wort- tun (N. Y.) 341.

three exēcutors managed the the estate, under an agree- all the beneficiaries that he arge no commissions for his should account and settle n once a year, and should not ed to pay interest on the bal- his hands, and should receive none on balances in his favor, and this ar- rangement was acquiesced in by the administrator of one of the beneficiaries after her death, and the executor avowed his willingness, and was, in fact, willing and ready to account to him as usual. Held, that he cannot be charged with interest on the inte- state's share. Barclay v. Cooper, 42 N. J. Eq. 516.

An administrator, making a partial settlement with the next of kin, and retaining in his hands certain interest bearing notes for the purpose of meet- ing claims against the estate then in litigation, provided they be declared valid, and who fails to keep an account of the time when the notes were col- lected and the amount of interest re- ceived, will be charged with interest during the whole time. Jackson v. Shields et al, 87 N. Car. 437.

Where the widow of an intestate took possession of the estate and man- aged it for the benefit of all concerned, supporting the infant children out of the income, held, that upon an ac- count and settlement of the rights of the parties the widow was to be charged with interest only upon the residue of the funds received by her after deduct- ing her own share, offsetting against such interest the interest upon her ad- vances for maintenance of the children. Wilkes v. Rogers, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 566.

Where an administrator, with funds to distribute, delayed for two months, during vacation and illness of the pro- bate judge to file his accounts, held that he was not chargeable with interest for the two months. Seligman's Estate, Myrick's Probate (Cal.) 8.

An administrator kept \$20,000 on de- posit for a year after the administration was substantially completed. Held, that from the expiration of a year from the time of his appointment he should be charged with interest at the rate of $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Re Mates, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 446.

Separate Estate—Husband Debtor.— If the husband, upon mortgage, note or otherwise, receive money, which is the separate estate of the wife, he will not be chargeable with interest, unless the facts and circumstances show that it was the intention he should pay interest; and when the wife brings her bill, inter- est will commence from the time it is filed and not before. Lishey v. Lishey, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 418.

If money is received by the husband chargeable when they mingle the trust funds with their own deposit them to their own credit.¹ If the trust funds are into the business of the trustee, the cestui que trust may interest,² unless he elects to take the profits of the business. If a trustee neglects to make an investment which he is directed to make by the instrument of trust, or by statute, he is liable for the interest,⁴ unless the cestui que trust elects to take the value of

for the wife and kept by him at her request until she shall call for it, his estate is not chargeable with interest thereon, no demand being shown. Boughton v. Flint, 74 N. Y. 476.

Interest on moneys of the wife expended by the husband will be allowed only from his death, when the claim is set up against his succession. Weldon's Succession, 36 La. Ann. 851.

Garnishees.—Where a debt is attached, as a general rule, interest is suspended during the pendency of the attachment proceedings. This, however, is not the case where there has been collusion, unreasonable delay, or litigation on the part of the garnishee. Jones v. Manufacturers' National Bank, 99 Pa. St. 317; Southern White Lead Co. v. Haas (Iowa), 41 N. W. Rep. 63.

A garnishee who has used the money attached in his hands is liable to pay interest from the time of attachment. Mattingly v. Boyd, 20 How. (U. S.) 128.

Where a garnishee in a suit in chancery retains the money due on the debt in respect to which he has been garnished till final decree rendered directing payment thereof, he is liable for interest accruing during the pendency of the litigation. To avoid such liability the garnishee must have paid the money into court. Smith v. German Bank, 60 Miss. 69; Work v. Glaskins, 33 Miss. 539. See also Blodgett v. Gardiner, 45 Me. 542; Candee v. Webster, 9 Ohio St. 452.

In an action to recover a fund in the hands of a city treasurer, arising out of an award made for the taking of certain land of the plaintiff for streets, held that the city, being merely a trustee of the fund for the one entitled to the same, was not liable for interest until after demand for payment. Barnes v. New York, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 236.

1. Hess's Estate, 68 Pa. St. 458; Aldridge v. McClelland, 36 N. J. Eq. 288; Estate of Perkins v. Hollister Exr., 59 Vt. 348.

It has been held in Illinois, in Scho- field's Estate, 99 Ill. 513, that the fact that an administrator mingles trust funds with his own by depositing the money belonging to the estate in his own name, as he does his individual money, cannot be held a sufficient ground to charge him with interest thereon. There is no law requiring an administrator to keep the funds of the estate separate and distinct from his own. So long as he has the money belonging to the estate at his command ready to answer the order of the court, this is all the law requires.

2. Stott's Estate, Myrick's Probate (Cal.) 168; Seligman's Estate, Myrick's Probate (Cal.) 8; Bourne v. May, 81 Mo. 676.

An executor, who deposits the money of the estate in his name as executor with a trading firm, consisting of himself and his son-in-law, he having a fourths interest in the assets and business, and being the principal manager, commits a breach of trust, and is charged with interest from the date of each deposit. In this instance, under the circumstances, the executor is charged with simple interest, and allowed half commissions. Cann v. Apperson, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 553.

3. Robinett's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 458; Kyle v. Barnett, 17 Ala. 306; Barnett v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 543; Knight's Exrs. v. Walsh, 8 C. E. (N. J.) 498.

4. Re Thurston, 57 Wis. 104. The executor collects money for the estate and permits it to remain in the estate uninvested. It not being affirmed shown that no good security could be found on which to put it out at interest, the executor failing to pay it into the estate is chargeable with it under the statute, as money retained on interest by him, and it should enter into his annual account as money so retained, and being added to the principal amount. Eppinger v. Canepa, 20 Fla. 262.

A guardian intrusted with the management of a ward's money should ent.¹ If a trustee uses trust funds to his own advantage, appropriates them in any way, he may be charged with interest not actually received delay to invest has been un-

Gott v. Culp, 45 Mich.

that the ward had disappeared had not been heard from for, is no excuse. Crosby v. 31 Minn. 342.

Money of the Ward Without of the Court.—A loan of the ward, by the guardian, estate security without the approval of the county court, is made at the guardian, and if a loss guardian cannot exonerate showing that he acted in, or that the security was taken. Winslow v. People, a guardian lends out the ward without taking sufficiency, he must be regarded as if it on his own account, and chargeable with interest on the Brewer v. Ernest, 81 Ala.

trators, like other trustees, surers, and are not expected "illible;" but while the court wish to overturn or weaken rulings heretofore made favoring those who have acted in good faith with reasonable diligence," it there was no error in this appeal from the settlement of administrator's accounts, under the instructions of the court in the administration of the estate—in the administrator with interest in his hands collected during 1868-71, after the expiration of months from the time of his death, which he was authorized by order of court, to lend out of exchange and promissory notes two good sureties, and which he lend out; although he testified for himself, "that he to lend out the money, he considered it unsafe to do so, try was so unsettled that he knew who was safe to lend and that he never used any funds belonging to the estate for his benefit, and never mixed or with his own. Nunn v. Ala. 35.

Rate of Interest.—Where C. of L.—26

trustee invests trust funds at ten per cent., but cestui que trust repudiates the investment, and the same is held to have been improper, and the trustee is held bound for the amount invested, six per cent. is the rate of interest with which he is properly chargeable. Cogbill v. Boyd, 79 Va. 1.

An administrator may, on special facts, be chargeable with interest, though he made none, and though, because threatened with, expecting or engaged in litigation, and advised by counsel to retain the money in hand, he failed to put it out and make it productive. Where the jury could have arrived at the amount of their verdict by counting interest, or by disallowing commissions and extra compensation, or partly by the one process and partly by the other, the verdict may stand. Doster v. Arnold, 60 Ga. 316.

An executor is not discharged from the payment of interest on a sum found due from him by the probate court, by showing that he invested the money in confederate bonds and received no interest. Lockhart v. Horn, 3 Woods (U. S.) 542.

An executor, whose duty it is to put money held by him at interest for the benefit of usufructuary, is estopped to deny performance of his duty, and will be held to have retained the money at interest payable by himself. Saunders Succession, 37 La. Ann. 769.

An administrator deposited the assets in a trust company, when he received four per cent. interest. Held, that he should be charged with interest at that rate only, notwithstanding he had agreed, as guardian of next of kin, with the other persons interested in the estate, to distribute immediately; since this court has no concern with damages for breach of contract. Haskin v. Teller, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 316.

1. Perry on Trusts, § 469. See McIntire v. Zanesville, 17 Ohio St. 352; Norris's Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 106, 125; Lamb's Appeal, 58 Pa. St. 142.

2. Merrifield v. Longmire, 66 Cal. 180; Whitney et al. v. Peddicord, 63 Ill. 249; Duffy v. Duncan, 35 N. Y. 187; Bruner's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 46; Aldridge v. McClelland, 36 N. J. Eq. 288; Doremus's Est., 33 N. J. Eq. 234.

Compound interest will not be

VI. COMPUTATION—(a) Time During Which Interest Accrues
On contracts for the payment of money, interest is due from the time the principal should have been paid.¹ If a contract be charged against negligent trustees, where the facts do not indicate a withdrawal of the funds from their legitimate channels of accumulation, or a realization by the trustees of profits on the assets, and do not raise a presumption that the assets would have been increased by a more strict adherence by the trustees to their line of duty. Ames v. Scudder, 11 Mo. App 168.

An administrator is not chargeable with interest, where the proof is that he has not used the assets for his personal benefit, nor unnecessarily detained the same in his hands, and has kept an account of his receipts and disbursements. Wilson v. Lineberger, 88 N. Car. 416; Bartlett v. Fitz, 59 N. H. 502.

If an executor has money belonging to the estate actually on hand and appropriates it to his own use in payment of a legacy not yet due, he must account for the interest. McClure v. Brown, 56 Iowa 768.

The payment by an administrator, with the will annexed, of a legacy which was barred by the lapse of time, is a misappropriation by him of the funds belonging to the estate; and he is chargeable with interest thereon from the date of the misappropriation. Moody v. Hemphill, 71 Ala. 169.

An administrator converted dividend paying bank stock of the estate into money, and with it paid off a mortgage on lands in which he had an interest as heir of the intestate. On exceptions to his account, credit for that payment was disallowed. Held, that he was chargeable with interest at the legal rate on that amount from the date of the payment, including the time during which litigation on the exceptions continued. Mount v. Van Ness, 35 N. J. Eq. 113.

An executor is chargeable with interest on sums appropriated by him in payment of his commissions in advance of their allowance by the surrogate, the law declaring that he shall be allowed commissions "on the settlement of his account." United States Trust Co. v. Bixby, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 494; s. c., Meyers' Est. 67 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 170.

The fact that a debtor to the decedent's estate becomes administrator thereof, and includes his debt in the inventory as an asset of the estate, does not affect his individual relation as debtor to the estate; and upon settlement of his administration as he is personally chargeable with interest until the debt was paid, amount was shown to be in his hands as administrator. Rodenbach's Est. 102 Pa. St. 572.

If a trustee wrongfully sells realties belonging to the trust estate, and converts the proceeds to his own use, an action against a surety on his bond for interest should be computed on the amount converted from the date found to be due up to the day of the execution, without restatement. Kim v. Blake, 139 Mass. 593.

Where an administrator did not reimburse all the money of the estate he received, but there is no positive evidence that he misapplied it, he is not to be charged with interest. When the time of his removal from his office as administrator he has funds of the estate in his hands, he is chargeable with interest on such funds. Grant v. Ward, 93 N. Car. 488.

Whether a trustee should be charged with any interest upon money in his hands, and if he is, then at what rate, must depend much upon the particular facts of each case. Bobb v. Egan, 111 Mo. 412; Murphey's Appeal, 6 Vt. (Pa.) 223.

An executor disbursed his own money in paying claims against the estate. It did not appear that his disbursements equalled the amount of a bond mortgage given by him to the testator and held by his co-executor. Held, that he was chargeable with interest on the mortgage. Re Ackerman, 40 N. Y. 533.

1. Ruckman v. Bergholz, 38 N. Y. 531; Williams v. Sherman, 7 We. (N. Y.) 109; Still v. Hall, 20 We. (N. Y.) 51; Adams v. Fort Plain Bk. 10 N. Y. 255.

Meaning of "After Maturity."—When a promissory note payable on a day bears interest "after maturity," the interest should be computed from the day fixed for payment, and not from the expiration of the days of grace. Less v. Williams, 62 Miss. 369; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 190.

When the verdict is so much for the plaintiff as to include interest, and the interest is to be computed from maturity of the contract, payment of a certain sum "with interest," the interest to run from the making of the contract.¹ Unless there is agreement to that effect, the interest is not payable before the on, and if less principal is than the last instalment of that, the maturity of the instalment from which to compute in Van Winkle v. Wilkins (Ga.), 7 p. 644.

ker's certificate of deposit pay- presentation sixty days after with interest, carries interest till d and paid. Payne v. Clarke, 159.

ndant contracted to pay to plain- oo "out of any moneys or prop- ceived by him from the sale or of certain patented inventions. nt assigned the patents, the as- t to take effect when the pur- ice agreed upon ($25,000) was he assignee did not pay, and nt revoked the assignment. nt, with the owners of certain tents, thereupon assigned their to H in trust, he agreeing to censes and sell royalties, and to ne proceeds as soon as received, n specified proportions, between gnors and himself, the amount ntiff, however, to be paid out of proceeds. In an action upon ract with plaintiff, held, that he e entitled to interest from the the first or the second assign- ut only from the time moneys ceived on sales or licences. v. Johnston, 82 N. Y. 271.

default in the performance of ment in the alternative to pay or in notes at three or four interest runs from the time tes or cash should have been Stuart v. Binsse, 10 Bosw. (N.

e by the terms of a written con- yments become due on a cer- in each month, it is proper to interest on such sum as may be he specified day, from that time id. Dobbins v. Higgins, 78 Ill.

action for damages for breach ract the plaintiff should be al- terest from the breach of the , not from its date. Brackett v. on, 14 Minn. 174.

discretionary for the court to al- erest from judicial demand on s for a breach of contract. Por- arrow, 3 La. Ann. 140.

1. Connors v. Holland, 113 Mass. 50.

A certificate of deposit promised "to pay the money with interest if ten days' notice was given,"—held, that the interest was due only from ten days after notice. Cruikshank v. Comyns, 24 Ill. 602.

A promissory note, payable at a future day, "with interest" at a specified rate, bears interest from date, since it would, without these words, bear interest from maturity. Campbell Printing Press & Mfg. Co. v. Jones, 79 Ala. 475.

A note was given due six months after date "without interest" on a contract, under which six months were allowed the makers of the note to perform certain stipulations necessary to the completion of the contract. Held, that the effect of the note was the same as if the words "without interest" had not been inserted, and that the note bore interest from the date of its maturity. Roberts v. Smith, 64 Tex. 94; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 744.

Where a note is made payable at a future day "with" interest at a pre- scribed rate per annum, such interest does not become due or payable until the principal sum does, unless there is a special provision in the note or contract to that effect. Tanner v. Dundee Land Investment Co., 8 Sawyer (U. S.) 187.

A promissory note payable at a day certain "with lawful interest until paid (but if the principal shall be punctually paid when due, then in that case, and not otherwise, the interest is to be deducted)," if not paid at maturity, bears interest from date. Ely v. Wither- spoon, 2 Ala. 131.

A note on demand "with interest . . . till paid," bears interest from the day of its execution. Pate v. Gray, 1 Hempst. (U. S.) 155; Pittman v. Barrett, 34 Mo. 84.

In Arkansas a promissory note payable on demand draws interest from date without a demand. Pullen v. Chase, 4 Ark. 210. Contra, Dillon v. Dudley, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 66; Bartlett v. Marshall, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 467; Patrick v. Clay, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 246; Bishop v. Sniffen, 1 Daly (N. Y.) 155; Cannon v. Beggs, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 370; Schmidt v. Limehouse, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 276.

principal on which it accrues.¹ Where a sum is due on demand, interest runs from demand.² If there is no date of demand alleged or proved, the interest runs from the time of bringing the suit.³ On unliquidated claims, interest runs from time of demand or from the time the action is brought, if there be no demand.⁴

Where goods are sold for cash, interest begins to run im-

1. French v. Kennedy, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 452; Bander v. Bander, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 560.

2. Butler v. Austin, 64 Cal. 3.

A principal is entitled to interest on money collected by his agent only from demand (date of summons here) and default of agent. Neal v. Freeman, 85 N. Car. 441; Pipkin v. Bond, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) Eq. 91; Thornton v. Thornton, 63 N. Car. 211; Deal v. Cochran, 66 N. Car. 269; Hyman v. Gray, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 155.

3. Whitaker v. Pope, 2 Woods (U. S.) 463.

In an action on a policy of life insurance, payable if the person whose life is insured survives a certain day, the plaintiff can recover interest only from the date of the writ, unless in his declaration he alleges a demand before that time. Pierce v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 138 Mass. 151.

4. David v. Conard, 1 Greene (Iowa) 336; Whereatt v. Ellis, 68 Wis. 61; Hall v. Farmers & Citizens' Savings Bank, 55 Iowa 612; Case v. Osborne, 60 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 187; Hunt v. Nevers, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 500; Brewers v. Byringham, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 547; Houghton v. Hagar, Brayt. (Vt.) 133; Tucker v. Grover, 60 Wis. 240; Gammell v. Skinner, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 45; McCullum v. Seward, 62 N. Y. 316. See Pearson v. Grice, 8 Fla. 214; Neal v. Freeman, 85 N. Car. 441; Porter v. Grimsley, 98 N. Car. 550.

Where a definite sum is ascertained to be due to a distributee upon settlement of an estate, and ordered to be paid, no demand is necessary before suit brought to entitle him to interest on the amount from the date of the decree. McRae v. Malloy, 87 N. Car. 196.

In an action for a breach of a contract by the terms of which damages for the breach are liquidated, interest is properly chargeable upon the amount fixed, from the date at which such damages became due and payable. Winch v. Mutual Benefit Ice Co., 86 N. Y. 618.

Where a defendant before suit brought has acknowledged an indebtedness for the items of the plaintiff but has reserved the right to question the amounts charged, as to interest tested as to amount, interest is chargeable only from the commencement of the action. Hand v. Church, 30 (N. Y.) 303.

Interest on a sum due for labor performed and materials furnished in a ship will be computed in a petition for the enforcement of a lien therefrom the time of filing the petition. Barstow v. Robinson, 2 Allen (U. S.) 605.

Where, in an action for money on contract or for labor performed, the petition demands interest, the plaintiff will draw interest, at least from the date of filing the petition. Swiss v. Cissna, 61 Iowa 693.

Where no time is agreed upon for payment for personal services, a charge made for them, nor present demand for payment in the lifetime of the party, and the claim has been permitted to sleep a long time from the act of the party rendering the services, no interest should be allowed on such claim except from the death of the party. Newell v. Keith, 11 Vt. 214.

A depositor in a national bank who suspends payment and a receiver appointed, is entitled from the date of his demand to interest upon his deposit. National Bank of the Commonwealth v. Mechanics' National Bank, 94 (U. S.) 437.

In Louisiana, since 1839, sum on contracts, though unliquidated, draw interest from the time of judicial demand. Barrow v. Reab, 9 How. (U. S.) 366.

Unless a claim be such that it can be set running by a demand, such case instituting suit is a suit on demand,—interest cannot be allowed from the time of the commencement of an action on a claim of such a nature that it does not draw interest from an earlier date. White v. Miller, 10 (U. S.) 393.

On a contract to pay for goods sold and delivered, from 2 Where there is a sale on credit, interest runs from the n of the credit, agreed upon or fixed by usage.³ If no evidence of length of credit, only from time of bring-4 nuities, legacies, etc., interest runs from the time they are 5 On advancements, from the death of the testator.⁶ damages arise from an injury, interest runs from the injury happened.⁷

plaintiff is entitled to interest collected by defendant from f collection, but the date of s not shown on the trial, in-be allowed only from the inf the action. Hubenthal v.
Iowa, 39 N. W. Rep. 694.
 ment provided that defend-pay for a party wall, upon t being ascertained by ap-be appointed by the parties.
 until an appraisal or done by defendant to plaintiff could not sue on the
 and the amount being una demand would not entitle erest, though defendant was wall. Thorndike v. Wells Association, 146 Mass. 619.
v. Foster, 26 Ga. 465.
 is allowed on a stated ac-n the time of signing the Dickinson v. Legare, 1 Car. 537.
g v. Henry, 30 Ala. 721;
Henry, 31 Ala. 53; Foot v.
 6 Allen (Mass.) 221; Atlan- ate Co. v. Grafflin, 114 U. S. one purchasing materials ction of a church agreed to t on any materials furnished rtain day at ten per cent., such rate might properly be from the day of delivery.
 an Church of New Boston v.
 6 Ill. 269.
lister v. Reab, 4 Wend. (N.
Bate v. Burr, 4 Harr. (Del.)
a v. Smith, 7 Wend. (N. Y.)
e v. Patton, 2 Port. (Ala.)
an v. Otto, 1 Bush (Ky.) 225.
v. Boston etc. Aid Society, 91; Clayton v. Somers, 27 N.
 ; Succession of Breaux, 38
 728; Adams v. Heffernan, 9
) 529; Lynch v. Mahoney, 2 Y.) 434; Wheeler v. Ruth-
f. (N. Y.) 491.

In an action against an attorney for moneys collected on a judgment upon which the attorney had a lien for his services the referee allowed plaintiff the amount collected with interest from the date of the collection, and deducted therefrom a sum found by him to be the value of the detandant's services, upon which no interest was allowed.
Held, error. The defendant was entitled to interest upon the amount allowed from the date of the collection of the judgment. Hover v. Heath, 5
Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 488; s. c., 3 Hun
 (N. Y.) 283.

On money of the principal detained against right the agent is chargeable with interest from the time when it should have been paid, at the rate fixed by the law of the place where it is detained. Bischoffsheim v. Baltzer, 21
Fed. Rep. 531.

While it has been authoritatively settled that liens divested by a sale made by the assignee of an insolvent, in pursuance of an order of court, cease to draw interest beyond the date of confirmation of the sale to be paid out of the proceeds, yet, if the creditor whose lien is thus divested, and who is entitled to receive his money, is not then paid the same, and it is kept or invested afterwards so as to draw interest, it is interest produced by the money to which he was justly entitled, and he can properly claim the interest thus produced. Appeal of the Brownsville De- posit and Discount Bank, 96 Pa. St. 347.

6. Steele v. Trierson, 1 Pickle (Tenn.)
 430; Roberson v. Nail, 1 Pickle (Tenn.) 124.

And this though the receipts given by the donees stipulate for the payment of interest from an earlier date. Rob- erson v. Nail, 1 Pickle (Tenn.) 124.

7. Erwin v. Neversink Steamboat
Co., 23 Hun (N. Y.) 578; The Morning Star, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 62; Ripley v. Mil- ler, 1 Jones (N. Car.) L. 479; s. c., 62
Am. Dec. 177.

Where money is paid by mistake, interest can only be recovered from the time of demand and refusal.¹ Where it is wrongfully obtained, it is due from the time it was so obtained, and not from demand.² Where it is paid at the request and to the use of another, from the time of payment.³

Interest is not recoverable on a debt due by a citizen of one State to a citizen of another State during the period the two respective countries are at war, as all unlicensed intercourse between them is forbidden; but where the payee of a note and the parties thereon are residents of the same country, they may lawfully make payments and stop interest; and they are liable accordingly in a suit against them, though by reason of their principal being an alien enemy of the creditor, the latter could not recover the interest of the principal in a direct suit against him.⁴ Neither is interest due during the time a right of action is suspended by legislative enactment; nor pending judicial proceedings.⁵

Judgments and decrees bear interest from their date.

In an action for damages, judgment should be for the amount of the verdict and interest on this amount from the date of the judgment and not from the date of the verdict. Fowler v. Balt. & Ohio R. R. Co., 18 W. Va. 579.

1. Simons v. Walter, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 97.

2. Atlantic Nat. Bank v. Harris, 118 Mass. 147.

3. Gibbs v. Bryant, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 118; Chamberlain v. Smith, 1 Mo. 718; Thompson v. Stevens, 2 Nott. & M. (S. Car.) 493. Contra, Hanley v. Crowe, 3 N. Y. S. 154.

A contract with a city for constructing a sewer provided that the contractor should receive no payment for labor or materials until the work should be completed, and the assessment to be levied therefor duly "confirmed," but advances might be made, in conformity with a city ordinance, which provided that seventy per cent. might be paid on certificates, "the remaining thirty per cent. to be reserved until the final completion of the contract," but required interest to be paid on the advances to be charged from the time of making them up to the time of final payment. Held, (1) that such interest should be charged up to the time of the confirmation of the assessment; (2) that proof that the city had for many years charged interest only up to the time of the completion of the work was immaterial. Fellows v. New York, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 249.

4. Bean v. Chapman, 62 Ala. 53.

The rule that interest was not demand-able in a certain class of cases, which occurred after the revolutionary war, does not apply to a case where a citizen resided in the Confederate States during the war of 1861-65, but had an interest in the loyal State where the debts of interest were payable, and where the principal did not become due until after the suppression of the rebellion. v. Lambert, 15 Minn. 416.

The removal of the assets of a bank and the absence of a note with the bank in the Confederate States, held not to be an obstacle to its payment as to the maker from liability for interest in the cashier having still remained in him within the federal lines. G. Union Bank, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 303.

5. Wainwright's Estate, 13 Pa. 336; Curd v. Letcher, 3 Marsh. (Ky.) 443; Tillson v. U. S., 100 U. S. 43.

Effect of Laches in Entry of Judgment.—A plaintiff obtained a judgment against the United States in the year 1861, subject to the opinion of the court on a case to be made, and rested nearly thirty years before the entry of judgment. Held, that under such circumstances interest should run from the entry of the judgment. Field v. Ystalyfera Iron Company, 10 U. S. 174.

Damages for Right of Way.—If a plaintiff recover an award of damages for a condemned and occupied for public road purposes the damage be for the excess that returned by the commissioners, the owner may have inaction upon a foreign judgment, the interest is computed date to the date of the judgment in the action.¹ Interest accrues de die in diem, and is always apportionable.² Compound Interest.—Interest upon interest is not recoverable incident, nor as a compensation for the detention of money.³

from the time he was entitled to satisfaction. Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. Brown, 13 Neb. 317.

On appeal from the award of commissioners in proceedings to set aside a railroad, as a general interest should be allowed on the whole sum assessed by the commissioners, from the filing of the petition of the commissioners. The award upon the railroad company to the existence of conditions which make the case out of this general that the sum awarded was tendered to the owner instead of paid into court, or that the owner received the amount paid, or that he has continued to use the land for the benefit of the use of the land or the value of which equals the interest. The mere fact that the company has not taken possession of the land is not sufficient. Chicago etc. R. Co., 67 Wis.

Mortgage creditor of a decedent estate is solvent, and whose land is sold by order of the orphans' court for the payment of debts, may interest on his accompanying bill for the confirmation of said sale from the date of payment. Aliter, if the estate were insolvent. Yeatman's Estate, 102 Pa. St. 297.

On appeal by the plaintiff from a judgment of foreclosure the judgment is reversed and the cause remanded for entry of judgment for a sum. Held, that the plaintiff is entitled to interest upon the mortgage from the date of the entry of the judgment upon the remittitur. Beckwith v. Kaggs et al., 61 Cal. 362.

As to the claims of creditors against the estate of one deceased is not between the time of the contract and the absolute contract. Wainwright's Estate, 13 Cal. 336.

Land belonging to the estate of a decedent is sold by order of the court for the payment of debts; interest on the debts ceases, not until confirmation of the order but the money is made, according to its terms. Meals's Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 558.

A judgment founded in tort bears interest in the District of Columbia from the date of rendition. Hellen v. Metropolitan R. Co., 4 Mackey (D. C.) 519.

1. Clark v. Childs, 136 Mass. 344; Hopkins v. Shepard, 129 Mass. 600.

2. Wertz's Appeal, 65 Pa. St. 306.

3. Stokely v. Thompson, 34 Pa. St. 210; Lewis v. Small, 75 Me. 323; Wilson v. Davis, 1 Montana 183; Force v. Elizabeth, 28 N. J. Eq. 403; Dyar v. Slingerland, 24 Minn. 267; Broughton v. Mitchell, 64 Ala. 210; Wofford v. Wyly et al., 72 Ga. 863; Denver etc. Co. v. McAllister, 6 Colo. 261.

The law is otherwise in some States. In Georgia, in a suit to foreclose a mortgage made to secure notes on which interest was payable annually at a certain day, held that interest should be allowed on all interest which was not paid from the time it became due. Calhoun v. Marshall, 61 Ga. 275.

It was held in Michigan that How. Stat., § 1599, in permitting interest to be compounded on instalments that fall due separately under some written contract, does not apply to new interest that accrues merely by lapse of time after the maturity of the debt. Voigt v. Beller, 56 Mich. 140. See also Rix v. Strants, 59 Mich. 364.

And in North Carolina when a promissory note is given with the stipulation that the interest is to be paid annually or semi-annually, the maker is chargeable with interest at the like rate upon each deferred payment of interest as if he had given a promissory note for the amount of such interest. By this mode of computation compound interest is not given, but a middle course is taken between simple and compound interest. Bledso v. Nixon, 69 N. Car. 89.

In Texas, where a contract stipulates for the payment of interest annually, interest runs on the annual interest as it accrues. Lewis v. Paschal, 37 Tex. 315.

The following words in a note mean interest at eight per cent., payable annually: "With eight per cent. annual interest." Kurz v. Suppiger, 18 Ill. App. 630.

It can only be recovered upon agreement, and upon sufficient consideration, or in mercantile transactions upon a contract implied from the course of dealing, or from custom.¹ Where there has been a settlement between the parties, or a judgment which turns the aggregate amount of principal and interest due is turned into a new principal, interest upon such new principal is allowed.² An agreement to pay interest upon interest without consideration other than a moral one has been held invalid, as usurious, in New York, except in the case of interest already accrued.³

In legal contemplation a contract for "annual interest" is the same as if written for "interest annually." Catlin v. Lyman, 16 Vt. 44.

Compound interest may properly be allowed in a decree for an accounting by way of damages for persistently and wrongfully refusing to account. Heath v. Waters, 40 Mich. 457.

A trustee who uses the funds of the trust's estate for his own profit is liable for interest at the legal rate with annual rests. Merrifield v. Longmire, 66 Cal. 180. Re Thurston, 57 Wis. 104; Thorn v. Garner, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 507; Dixon v. Storm, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 419.

1. Young v. Hill, 67 N. Y. 162; Genin v. Ingersoll, 11 W. Va. 549; St. Louis Gaslight Co. v. St. Louis, 11 Mo. App. 55.

The "mercantile method" of computing interest on unsettled demands by making annual rests, and carrying the balance, including interest, as principal into the subsequent statement, is not sanctioned by the laws of Ohio. Averill Coal & Oil Co. v. Verner, 22 Ohio St. 372.

Compound interest will not be allowed on an account between planting partners without clear proof of the debtor's acquiescence therein. Interest cannot be charged on a claim never presented to the debtor before suit, which is allowed on a quantum meruit. Baly v. Becnel, 36 La. An. 496.

Although by the terms of a contract interest is payable half yearly, yet, when, upon maturity of the contract, and default in payment of the principal, interest is to be computed for the purpose of incorporating it in a judgment for the amount of the indebtedness, any interest allowable from after maturity is awarded by way of damages and is not governed by the terms of the contract, but is computed without rests. Ashuelot Railroad Co. v. Elliott, 57 N. H.

397. See also, Re Bartenbach, Bankr. Reg. 61.

2. Stokely v. Thompson, 34 210; McClelland v. West, 70 183; National Bank of the Commonwealth v. Mechanics' National Bank, 94 U. S. (4 Otto) 437; Bainbridge v. Wilcocks, 1 Baldw. (U. S.) 536.

Where a decree was entered causing ascertaining and fixing the aggregate amount of the plaintiff's debt, giving interest on such aggregate from the date of the decree, as prescribed in the West Virginia Code, ch. 13, § 1, held, it is error in a subsequent decree, entered in the same cause, to add interest for the years thereafter, to reaggregate the debt by calculating interest on the aggregate sum to the date of the decree, then adding this interest to the sum of the first decree and giving interest on the second aggregate from the date of the last decree. The Admr. v. Minghini's Admr. et al., 11 W. Va. 314.

In rendering a decree for the amount due on a promissory note, it is to compute interest on the note from the time of its maturity and add it to the principal, and then compute interest on the gross amount from the maturity of the note to the time of rendering the decree. The proper mode of computing interest is, when there have been no payments, to compute from the time the note begins to draw interest to the time of rendering the decree. Barker v. International Bank, 80 Cal. 1.

The decree in bottomry is, to consider the sum lent and the premium on a principal, and to allow compound interest on that sum for the delay in payment after it is due. Ship Parsons v. Ship Parsons, 10 Mass. (U. S.) 255.

3. Young v. Hill, 67 N. Y. 162; Connecticut v. Jackson, 1 John. (N. Y.) Ch. 14; Van Benschooten v. L. B. Johns, (N. Y.) Ch. 313. See also Perkins v. Coleman, 51 Miss. 299.

the doctrine of the decisions generally is that the taking of compound interest cannot, per se, be considered usurious, and the agreement to pay it after the interest has become due on a loan is not only legal, but is generally just and equitable, being based upon a moral and equitable consideration.¹

Willing v. Pawling, 4 Yeates 11; Camp v. Bates, 11 Conn. 405; Chisolm v. Nott & S. Car.) Rep. 38; Rose v. Hart, 17 Conn. 246; Meeker v. Conn. 577; Radford v. South-ual Life Ins. Co., 12 Bush 41; Carter v. Carter (Iowa), 41 Rep. 168; Mueller v. McGregor, St. 265; Thayer v. Wilmington ing Co., 105 Ill. 540.

In the akota case it was held that a provision that annual instalments of interest not paid when due should bear interest. This is not compound interest. Hovey v. Edmison, 449.

Section.—A provision in a promissory note that the principal be paid "with interest at two per cent. per month; interest payable monthly, and if not paid to become part of the principal," construed to mean that the notes should bear interest at the rate of two per cent. a month, compounded monthly. Page v. Willard, 562.

A provision in a bond, providing that "in case any sum of principal or interest shall not be paid when the obligors shall pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. a month, during all the time the same remains overdue and unpaid," held that this did not authorize the compounding of interest; unpaid principal interest would draw interest at the rate of ten per cent. a month, but without rests. Morgan v. R. Co., 57 Mich. 430. The court was authorized to purchase a bond at nine per cent. territorial rate of premium as to the first four and one half per cent. of the life of the bonds. Held, that the ordinary rules of arithmetic applied to the rule of computation, and moreover, was to be made so as to compute interest on interest, but not on principal. Livingston v. Nev. 352.

An agreement in writing plaintiff to purchase the timber on certain land at a certain price per thousand feet of timber, defendants to have five years from May 1st, 1882, to wholly remove the timber, and to cut and take away a specified amount in each of the winters of the years 1882 and 1883, or, in case of failure to do so, to pay plaintiff interest on the amount of the deficiency in each year from May 1st following to May 1st, 1884, to be settled for with interest from January 1st, 1882; all timber cut in any year to be paid for on or before November 1st following, with interest from May 1st preceding, on which day the account of the timber was to be made and adjusted. Held, that the stipulation for interest from January 1st, 1882, upon the price of the timber remaining uncut on May 1st, 1884, could not be held void as inconsistent with the provision giving five years for the removal of the timber, or with the provisions for annual settlements in May, or as of May, and annual payments in November afterwards, plaintiff to receive interest accruing between those dates; that the contract was not to be construed as requiring interest upon interest, or double payment of interest, but that interest paid on deficiencies before May 1st, 1884, should be credited as prepaid interest on cuttings after that date, and that the stipulation was not so unconscionable that it should be adjudged void. Goodridge v. Forsman, 79 Me. 132.

In Oregon, an agreement to compound interest oftener than once a year cannot be enforced, but does not render the agreement void as to the principal sum secured and simple interest. Murray v. Oliver, 3 Oreg. 539.

Defendant executed her promissory notes, payable in thirty days with interest at four per cent. per month, interest to be paid monthly in advance, and if not so paid, to become a part of the principal and bear thereafter the same rate of interest, compounding monthly in advance. Held in an action on the notes that the court did not err, in calculating the interest due to plaintiff, in allowing interest on compound interest. Fisk v. Lee (Cal.), 12 Pac. Rep. 255.

Coupons payable at a certain time and place bear interest from the time they fall due without demand of payment.¹

(c) Application of Payments.—The rule is, where compound interest is not allowed, that where payments are made from time to time on a debt bearing interest, the interest is to be computed on the debt up to the time of payment, and the payment is to be deducted from the amount, principal and interest, and the balance forms a new capital; on that balance interest is to be computed from that time, but the new capital must not be more than the former. If the payment be less than the interest due at that time, the surplus of interest must not augment the capital.² If compound interest is allowed, it is only the interest on the principal which will become principal. Credits will be applied, first to the deferred amounts of annual interest, with the second to the interest accrued thereon, and the remainder, if any, to the interest accrued on the principal since the last annual period, and so on (if any remains) to the principal itself. It will be only the interest on the balance of principal from that time to the next annual period which will be next payable, or be subject to interest, and so on.³

When a higher rate of interest than the law allows has been paid, the excess of the payments above the legal rate will be credited to the principal; but when the payments have been made specifically as interest at a rate higher than the law requires, which it does not prohibit, a debtor cannot charge the excess of his payments above the legal rate.⁴

1. Langston v. S. Car. R. Co., 2 S. Car. 248; Rich v. Seneca Falls, 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 558; Humphreys v. Morton, 100 Ill. 592.

Comp. St. Neb. [1887], ch. 44, § 1, provides that any rate of interest agreed upon not exceeding ten per cent. per year shall be valid, either annually or for a shorter period, or in advance if so expressly agreed. Held, that this section forbids the allowance of interest in excess of ten per cent., and where the interest on a note is represented by coupons, providing that interest shall be allowed thereon after maturity at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, no interest will be allowed on them. Mathews v. Toogood, 23 Neb. 536; s. c. (Neb.), 41 N. W. 130.

2. Hurst's Admr. v. Hite Admr., 20 W. Va. 183; Case v. Fish, 58 Wis. 56; Hill v. Durand, 58 Wis. 160; Baker v. Baker, 4 Dutch. (N. J.) 13; s. c., 75 Am. Dec. 243.

Interest on an account for purchase money, with payments, should be computed on the basis of partial payments. Curd v. Davis, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 574.

A tender so far as the computation of interest is concerned must be considered as a payment. Hidden v. Johnson, 39 Cal. 61.

Interest is allowed upon the interest on an independent account when used to set off or counter claim to extinguish the debt, but it is not to be computed upon payments as such, the effect is to reduce pro tanto the due, interest being first discharged. Overby v. Fayetteville Building Ass'n, 81 N. Car. 56.

A note for $550 and interest bearing credit of $450. An order after maturity given on third parties for the amount of the note bore a credit of $580, which was found to include the credit on the note. Held, that the interest bearing principal should be reduced by $450 from the date of the credit of that amount. Cowles v. Curry, 96 N. Car. 331.

3. Vaughan v. Kennan, 38 Ark. 117; Heartt v. Rhodes, 66 Ill. 351; Flannery v. Flannery, 58 Vt. 576; Ankeny v. Converse, 17 Ohio St. 11; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 115.

4. Mueller v. McGregor, 28 Oh.

re a statute prescribes a mode of computing interest in cases, it does not apply to an instrument given prior to the date of the statute.¹

Interest follows the principal as an incident to it so long as it is an incident; but where it is separated and set apart from the principal by actual payment, or being carried, when due, to the credit of the owner of the principal, in his account with the creditor, and this in pursuance of a provision in the contract creating and defining the principal debt, it is so separated and severed from the principal as to cease to be an incident to and not follow it.²

RATE—(a) In General. The rate of interest which may lawfully be taken, and the rate which will be allowed in the absence of contract is generally fixed by statute.³ A person is allowed to pay the legal rate, except where there is an express see v. Rider, 60 N. H. 452; Pettis v. R. I. 344; Marye v. Strouse, (U. S.) 204.

—Contract for—Application of—Payments.—The plaintiff borrowed sums of money, at various times, from the defendant, a national bank, contracted to pay usurious interest therefrom from time to time deposited in the bank. Occasional settlements were had, at which times the sums were deducted from the principal and interest and new notes were given for the balance so found. Subsequently to the settlement, plaintiff brought an action on the national banking act to double the amount of the interest paid within two years.

(1) That in the absence of an agreement that the payments should be made in the discharge of the indebtedness defendant could not so apply the payments.

(2) That the usurious transaction was held to have occurred and that the usurious interest sought to be recovered was paid. (3) That under the facts and the rules of law, the payments must be held to have been made pro rata to the principal and interest due at the time, unless there was an agreement to apply them first to the principal interest; and that the burden was on the defendant to establish the agreement. Kinsler v. Farwell, 58 Iowa 728. Compare v. Campbell, 36 Ohio 361.

The notes were given for a loan at interest, and various payments were made, without direction as to how the payments should be appropriated, and under the contract to keep down interest or to satisfy the usury charged, there was no error in refusing to charge to the effect that such payments were made to satisfy the usury, and that as more than six months had elapsed before this defence was set up, a claim that the note was usurious was barred by the statute of limitations. The statute of limitations relied upon to defeat this defence is alone applicable to suits brought to recover usury which has been paid, or to a set off claiming such a demand. Cheapstead v. Frank et al., 71 Ga. 549.

1. Troxwell v. Fugate, Hard. (Ky.) 2.

2. Ohio v. Cleveland etc. R. Co., 6 Ohio St. 489.

3. Legal Rate in the Several States and Territories:

Alabama. Eight per cent. is the legal rate. A greater rate forfeits interest.

Arizona. Seven per cent. is the legal rate. Any rate may be agreed upon in writing.

Arkansas. Six per cent. is the rate allowed by law where no rate is contracted for. Ten per cent. may be contracted for, but a higher rate forfeits principal and interest.

California. Ten per cent. is allowed by law on debts due on instruments of writing unless the rate is fixed by contract in writing, in which case any rate will be allowed that the contract calls for. Judgments bear seven per cent.

Colorado. Ten per cent. is the legal rate. Parties may contract in writing for any rate.

Connecticut. The legal rate is six per cent. Any rate may be agreed upon.

Dakota. Seven per cent. is the legal rate. Twelve per cent. may be contracted for. A higher rate is prohibited.

Delaware. Six per cent. is the legal rate. If more is charged the principal is forfeited.

District of Columbia. Six per cent. is the rate allowed by operation of law. Ten per cent. may be contracted for. The whole of the interest is forfeited by contracting for a higher rate.

Florida. Eight per cent. is the legal rate. Parties may contract for any rate.

Georgia. The legal rate is seven per cent. Eight per cent. may be contracted for in writing. If above eight per cent. is charged the excess is forfeited.

Idaho. The legal rate is ten per cent. Any rate not exceeding $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. a month may be contracted for.

Illinois. The legal rate is six per cent. Parties may contract in writing for any rate not exceeding eight per cent. If a higher rate is contracted for the whole interest is forfeited.

Indiana. The legal rate is six per cent. Contracts in writing for any rate not exceeding eight per cent. are valid.

Iowa. The legal rate is six per cent. Any rate not exceeding ten per cent. may be contracted for.

Kansas. The legal rate is seven per cent. Contracts may be made for any rate not exceeding twelve per cent.

Kentucky. The legal rate is six per cent. If a higher rate is contracted for the excess is not collectible.

Louisiana. The legal rate is five per cent. Parties may contract for any rate not exceeding eight per cent.

Maine. Six per cent. is the legal rate. Any rate may be agreed upon in writing.

Maryland. Six per cent. is the legal rate. Contracts in excess are void as to the excess.

Massachusetts. The legal rate is six per cent. Any rate may be agreed upon in writing.

Michigan. The legal rate is six per cent. Parties may contract for ten per cent., and if contracts for a higher rate are made the excess is forfeited.

Minnesota. The legal rate is seven per cent. Ten per cent. may be contracted for. Where higher rates are contracted for the contract is void and all the interest paid may be recovered.

Mississippi. Six per cent. is the legal rate. Contracts may be made in writing for ten per cent. All contracts in excess of that rate forfeit all interest.

Missouri. The legal rate is ten per cent. Parties may contract for any rate not exceeding ten per cent.

Montana. The legal rate is ten per cent. Contracts in writing may be made for any amount.

Nebraska. The legal rate is seven per cent. Contracts may be made for any rate not exceeding ten per cent. Where higher rate is charged the principal only may be recovered.

Nevada. The legal rate is seven per cent. Any rate may be contracted for.

New Hampshire. The legal rate is six per cent. If more is taken the lender forfeits three times the excess.

New Jersey. The legal rate is six per cent. If more is taken the interest is forfeited.

New Mexico. The legal rate is six per cent. Contracts may be made in writing for any amount not exceeding twelve. To take more subjects the lender to fine and a forfeiture of the amount of interest paid.

New York. The legal rate is six per cent. For taking higher rates interest and principal are forfeited, except in case of loans payable on demand secured by collateral, when any rate may be contracted for in writing.

North Carolina. Six per cent. is the legal rate. By special contract in writing eight per cent. may be taken. If interest is forfeited if more is taken twice the amount paid may be recovered by the party so paying.

Ohio. The legal rate is six per cent. Parties may contract for any rate not exceeding eight per cent. All contracts above that rate may be charged to principal.

Oregon. Eight per cent. is the legal rate. Contracts may be made for any rate not exceeding ten per cent. Where more is charged the interest and principal are forfeited.

Pennsylvania. The legal rate is six per cent. Contracts for higher rates are void only as to the excess.

Rhode Island. The legal rate is six per cent., but any rate may be contracted for upon.

South Carolina. The legal rate is seven per cent. Contracts in writing may be made for ten per cent. Any interest is forfeited for contracting for higher rates than that also double the sum received.

Tennessee. The legal rate is six per cent. No higher rate may be contracted for. If more is contracted for only legal interest can be collected.

Texas. Eight per cent. is the legal rate.

Twelve may be contracted for. Contracts are made for more the interest is forfeited.

The legal rate is ten per cent. It may be agreed upon.

Mont. The legal rate is six per cent. All in excess may be recovered. Minn. The legal rate is six per cent. If a higher rate is contracted for the interest is forfeited.

Virginia. The legal rate is ten per cent., but any rate may be contracted for.

Virginia. The legal rate is six per cent. If more is contracted for the interest is forfeited.

Wisconsin. The legal rate is six per cent. Any rate not exceeding ten per cent. may be contracted for. If more is contracted for the whole interest is forfeited.

Writing. The legal rate is twelve per cent. Any rate may be contracted for.

Change in the Statute Rate.—An account extending over a number of years was ordered as to an interest, and the rate of interest during the time had been changed by law, so that the interest payable on account must conform to such fluctuations. Wilson v. Cobb, 31 N. J. Eq.

Where the legacies are by the will directed to be payable with interest, the lawful rate of interest is after the change, the rate of interest on legacies continues unchanged. Hard v. Woodward, 28 N. J. Eq.

Where the rate of interest has been changed by statute, the rate prescribed by the former law should be applied up to the time of the change, and that of the new law during the subsequent. Stack v. Olney, 33 Besser v. Hawthorne, 3 Oreg. 644. Esse v. Rutherford, 90 N. C. 644. Rate of interest upon a judgment determined by the law existing at the time of its entry. Prouty v. Lake, 26 R. Co., 26 Hun (N. Y.) 546; v. Aikin, 57 Tex. 511.

It is stipulated in plaintiff's mortgage which were executed prior to the passage of the act (ch. 538, Laws of 1878) reducing the rate of interest to six per cent., that the principal sum should bear interest of seven per cent. By the decision and judgment entered thereon, interest was directed to be paid on the amount found due on the date of the decision, at the rate of seven per cent. Held, error; that after entry of judgment the mortgages were merged therein, and thereafter plaintiff was entitled to interest, not by virtue of the mortgages, but of the judgment; and so, that the interest should have been at the lawful rate. Taylor v. Wing (23 Hun 233) reversed; Taylor v. Wing, 84 N. Y. 471.

In California the act of March 30th, 1868, reduced the rate of interest in case of the absence of a contract from ten to seven per cent. per annum; and the effect was that, though ten per cent. might be computed up to the taking effect of the act, only seven per cent. was allowable afterwards. White v. Lyons, 42 Cal. 279.

After the revival of a debt by a new promise it still bears the conventional rate of interest, although by a change in the law of usury made in the interval between the execution of the note and the new promise, the conventional rate exceeds the rate allowed by the new law. Vines v. Tift (Ga.), 7 S. E. Rep. 227.

By a special act of the legislature, approved April 4th, 1872, commissioners authorized to improve the Bergen Line Road, were empowered to let the work by contract, and to issue certificates of indebtedness in payment for work done. The act provided that such certificates should bear interest at the rate of seven per cent. The relators contracted for the work by a contract in writing, bearing date October 3rd, 1878. The contract stipulated for payment by certificates of indebtedness, payable out of assessments, when collected, bearing interest at the rate of seven per cent. When the act was passed, the legal rate of interest was seven per cent. When the contract with the relators was made, the legal rate of interest had been reduced to six per cent., by the general statute passed February 26th, 1878. Held: (1) That the act of 1872, under which this improvement was made, being a special statute, was not repealed by the general statute of 1878, regulating interest. (2) That the contract with the relators for certificates, which should bear interest at the rate of seven per cent., was a legal contract, and that by its terms the relators were entitled to have certificates issued to them, which should bear interest at that rate, notwithstanding the reduction of the rate of interest on contracts by the act of 1878. State ex rel. v. Dwyer, 42 N. J. L. 327.

agreement to take less.¹ In the absence of any statute, a reasonable rate will be allowed.² Where there are no statutes on the subject of usury, parties may contract for any rate they choose, provided such interest be intended as a compensation for the use of money, and not as a penalty for its nonpayment when Contracts in Writing.—Under the Tennessee act of February 21st, 1860, which provides that ten per cent. interest on loans of money may be taken provided that the parties to such contract shall have so agreed and such agreement be expressed on the face of the contract, etc., the note itself need not show that it was given for loaned money. The "agreement" referred to relates to the rate of interest. McGhee v. Trotter, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 453.

Under the Illinois statute, judgments and decrees can only draw six per cent. interest, and a decree which provides that the sum found due shall bear ten per cent. interest until paid is erroneous to the extent of the difference between six and ten per cent. interest. Haas v. Chicago Building Soc., 80 Ill. 248.

National Bank—Limitation on Rate of Interest.—Section 30 of the National Banking act (Rev. Stats., § 5197), provides: "Every association organized under this act may take, receive, reserve and charge on any loans . . . interest at the rate allowed by the laws of the State or Territory where the bank is located, and no more; except that where by the laws of the State, a different rate is limited for banks of issue organized under State laws, the rate so limited shall be allowed every association organized in any State under this act." Held, that under this section—construed with § 1918 C. C.—the national banks in this State are allowed to charge and receive such rates of interest as may be agreed upon. Hinds v. Marmolejo et al., 60 Cal. 229; Farmers' Gold Bank v. Stover, 69 Cal. 387.

1. Gaillard v. Gaillard, 1 Nott. & M. (S. Car.) 67; Bell v. Arndt (Neb.), 38 N. W. Rep. 750.

Where the rate of interest is not fixed in a note, after maturity the amount represented by the note becomes "money due upon an instrument in writing," and in such case the statute of Indiana fixes the rate at six per cent. Gale v. Cory, 112 Ind. 39.

2. Davis v. Greely, 1 Cal. 422.

On the 27th of April, 1872, the plaintiff loaned to defendant the sum of $2,500 on an agreement for interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, payable annually, and, in pursuance of the agreement, took from defendant promissory notes for $1,250 each, maturing in one and two years, with provisions therein for interest at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, payable annually, secured by mortgage; and at the same time took from defendant two promissory notes for the additional two per cent. interest agreed upon, which side payments amounting to $209, were paid. On proceedings to enforce the mortgage, the plaintiff, under the statute of 184th, 1869, commonly called the eight per cent. interest statute, was entitled to a decree for $2,500 with interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, but $209 so paid, and no more. Land v. Sorter, 39 Ohio St. 12.

A decree will draw different rates of interest, if part of the debts thereunder included draw one rate and part another. Burrows v. Stayker, 47 Iowa 477.

3. Buckingham v. Orr, 6 Colo. 307; Minnesota Gen. Stat., ch. 23, § 1, which does not enable a promisor in a note to bind himself by an engagement that in case of default in payment the note shall bear a higher rate of interest than that allowed before maturity. v. Houlton, 22 Minn. 19.

Otherwise under Maine Rev. Stat., ch. 45, § 1. Capen v. Crowell, 282.

Where by the terms of the note it appears, upon the happening of one event, that the makers were to pay a certain rate of interest, and upon the happening of another event they were simply to pay a sum with no specified rate of interest, and in a suit on the note in the court the law the happening of the latter event was proved: Held, that the judgment of the court should have been for the rate of interest allowed by law, and not at ten per cent. Daniel v. Daniel, 30 Tex. 26.

In case of a discrepancy in the rate of interest named in a bond and in the instrument attached, the amount named in the instrument controls. The holder of such instrument is not bound after its severance from the bond.

more than legal interest cannot be recovered unless there is express agreement to pay it.¹ A mere change in the form of security for a debt for money loaned will not operate to change the rate of interest to be paid from that reserved in the original contract.²

After Maturity.—Where there is an agreement to pay a certain rate up to maturity, but nothing is said as to the rate of interest thereafter, the question arises as to whether the rate stipulated for, or the legal rate, shall be charged after maturity. The question has been decided differently in the different States. In to recover the sum named in the note, if larger than that named in the note as the interest, without showing that the note or some prior holder of the note had a coupon, acquired the same in full before maturity and without showing error. Goodwin v. Bath, 77 to enforce a note provided for interest at ten per cent. per annum, and the note was executed to secure it stipulating "interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, payable annually, according to the terms of the promissory note," held, that the mortgage was proper something respecting which the note was silent and would thereupon govern. Dobbins v. Parker, 46 to promise in writing to pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum judgment entered upon the execution, will not, under Tennessee v. Canale, 1944a, make the judgment carry interest at that rate. Rickman v. Rickman, 1944a, Lea (Tenn.) 483.

57. Proper v. McNeill, 14 Ill. App. 378. Ell v. Eldred, 49 Cal. 399; Ford v. Brown, 49 Ill. 142; Rice v. Hulbert, 72 Ga. 724; Wofford v. Wyly, 72 Ga.

to be a person in a receipt for a note agrees to give a note therefor, stipulating interest at seven per cent., thereupon contract to pay such rate of interest. Atterson v. Graham, 1 N. Y.

Accounting—Trust.—Under a contract to account for and pay moneys for a trust, interest was agreed to be at the rate of one and one-half per cent. per month after demand. No devaluation having been found, it was error to compute interest at that rate. Butler v. Austin, 64 Cal. 3.

to be the payee of a promissory note appearing on its face interest at ten per cent. makes a written agreement with the maker of the note to take only eight per cent. after a specified date, and it is not shown that the agreement is without consideration, or induced by fraud, the note will draw eight per cent. only, from the specified date, in accordance with the terms of the written agreement. Warren v. Johnson, 38 Kan. 768.

When one of two parties having mutual transactions renders an account current to the other, in which the names of both appear and he charges interest at a specified rate on both sides of the account, it is a contract in writing, under which he is liable for interest at the rate charged himself in the account. It is a contract in writing by which he stipulates to pay such rate of interest. Pratolongo v. Larco, 47 Cal. 378.

A sold a house to B, but made out the deed to C, who agreed verbally with B to pay him the price with interest at the rate of seven and three-tenths per cent. In an action by B against C to enforce his vendor's lien, held, that B was entitled to interest at the rate of six per cent. from the day of purchase to the day of trial. Stephens v. Burgess, 69 Mo. 168.

In the statement of an account by an intestate, upon which action was brought against his administrator, he had charged himself with interest at the rate of ten per cent. Held, that if such statement amounted to an account stated, his estate was liable for interest at that rate. Savage v. Aiken, 21 Neb. 605.

Interest payable at stated periods may be recovered as principal from the time of payment, with interest from the time the interest becomes due, but at only six per cent. per annum. Otherwise if the interest on the interest had been stipulated for, at a higher rate authorized by statute. Dunlap v. Wiseman, 2 Disney (Ohio) 398.

2. Union Mut. Co. v. Slee, 110 Ill. 35.

the following States, interest has been allowed after maturity the agreed rate whether greater (if not unreasonable nor unlawful) or less than the statute rate:

California, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Texas, Virginia and Wisconsin.¹

Elsewhere, only the statute rate is allowed after maturity, there is no agreement upon that point, whether such rate is greater or less than the contract rate.² Where there is an express

1. Kohler v. Smith, 2 Cal. 597; Adams v. Way, 33 Conn. 419; Jefferson County v. Lewis, 20 Fla. 980; Daniel v. Gibson, 72 Ga. 367; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 845; Kilgore v. Powers, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 22; Burns v. Anderson, 68 Ind. 202; Kerr v. Haverstrick, 94 Ind. 178; Hand v. Armstrong, 18 Iowa 324; Phinney v. Baldwin, 16 Ill. 108; Etnyre v. McDaniel, 28 Ill. 201; Brannon v. Hursell, 112 Mass. 63; Pierce v. Boston etc. Bank, 129 Mass. 425; Union Institution for Saving v. Boston et al., 129 Mass. 82; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 305; Warner v. Juif, 38 Mich. 662; Meaders v. Gray, 60 Miss. 496; s. c., 45 Am. Rep.; Macon County v. Rodgers, 84 Mo. 66; Broadway Savings Bank v. Forbes, 79 Mo. 226; Kellogg v. Lavender, 15 Neb. 256; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 339; McLane v. Abrams, 2 Nev. 199; Genet v. Kissam, 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 43; Andrews v. Keeler, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 87; Ritter v. Phillips, 53 N. Y. 586; Shaw et ux. v. Rigby, 84 Ind. 375; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 96; Monnett v. Sturges, 25 Ohio St. 384; S. P. Marietta Iron Works v. Lottimer, 25 Ohio St. 621; Hydraulic Co. v. Chatfield, 38 Ohio 575; Hopkins v. Crittenden, 10 Tex. 189; Cecil v. Hicks, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 1; Spencer v. Maxfield, 16 Wis. 178; Pruyn v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 367; Thorn v. Smith, 71 Wis. 18. See Cromwell v. Sac County, 96 U. S. 51.

The statute of Ohio (Swan. 481) permitting parties to agree upon any rate of interest not exceeding ten per cent. and fixing six per cent. as the legal rate in the absence of any special agreement, held, not to apply to a chartered corporation empowered to receive loans at three per cent., but that if loans so made to such a corporation were not paid at the time agreed upon six per cent. might be demanded. Tuffli v. Ohio etc. Trust Co., 2 Disney (Ohio) 121.

In an action upon notes containing the following provision, "the rate of interest to be ten per cent. per annum not paid at maturity, and attorney's fee of ten per cent. if placed in the hands of an attorney for collection;" held, that the effect of the provision was to provide for a higher rate of interest after maturity than before and that interest at the rate of seven per cent. could be recovered after maturity. White v. Iltis, 24 Minn. 43.

In an action for specific performance of a contract to convey certain real property, the purchase price was twenty-five hundred dollars, five hundred dollars of which was paid down and time notes given for two thousand dollars, payable in one and two years from date with interest at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum. These notes were endorsed by the vendor, for value before maturity, and the property conveyed to a third party with notice. Held, that the holders of said notes were entitled to interest thereon at the rate therein provided for, after as well as before maturity. Kellogg et al. v. Lavender et al., 15 Neb. 256; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 339.

2. Gardner v. Barnett, 36 Ark. 477; Newton v. Kennedy, 31 Ark. 626; Sumfield Soc. v. Loomis, 42 Conn. 57; Searle v. Adams, 3 Kan. 513; Union Bank v. Chapin, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 47; Hamilton v. Van Rensselaer, 43 N. Y. 244; Ludwick v. Huntzinger, 5 W. & A. (Pa.) 51; Eaton v. Boissonnault, 67 Me. 540; Lash v. Lambert, 15 Minn. 41; Moreland v. Lawrence, 23 Minn. 8; Duran v. Ayer, 67 Me. 145; Brown Hardcastle, 63 Md. 484; Rushing Seabee, 12 Bush (Ky.) 198; Lucking Gegg, 12 Bush (Ky.) 208; Rilling Thompson, 12 Bush (Ky.) 310; New England Mortgage Co. v. Vader, 1 Fed. Rep. 265; Pearce v. Hennessy, 1 R. I. 223; Langston v. South Carolina R. Co., 2 S. Car. 248; Briggs v. Williams, 10 S. Car. 133; Maner v. Wilson, 16 S. Car. 469.

The United States courts have foon that a certain rate shall run after maturity, interest at is recoverable.¹

the Law of Place.—When the rate of interest at the place contract is made differs from the rate at the place of payment the parties may contract at either rate, and the contract rule in late cases that after the contract ceases and that rate only should be allowed as damages. Holden v. Sav- ust Co., 100 U. S. 72; Ewell

v. Firman, 22 Wall. (U. S.) ection of Words in Written Obli-On a note payable on de- erest runs at the rate therein until verdict on default. Colby

v. Me. 524; Paine v. Cas-
le. 80.

a promissory note, by its es a legal rate of interest per from date until paid," such draw interest at the agreed as well as before maturity. And ent or decree rendered there-aw the same rate of interest anding the legal rate upon s and decrees may be reduced xecution of the note. Bond
v. Neb. 491; S. P. Shipman
v. W. Va. 140.

ssouri a note expressed to bear from date bears the same rate st after as before maturity.
v. Kinealy, 8 Mo. App. 76;
v. Barbar, 81 Mo. 636.

Arkansas a promissory note at a future day, and bearing er cent. interest from date, aying "until paid," will bear er cent. after maturity. Gard-
v. Barnett, 36 Ark. 476.

a bond by its terms bears in-three per cent. per annum
e, a decree for the payment ould be for the aggregate sum interest being computed at the ree per cent. to the date of the d then the decree should pro-he payment of interest thereon
e of three per cent. until paid.
providing for interest at six on such aggregate sum is er-(p. 353.) Pickins v. McCoy,
v. Ga. 344.

e for advances payable at a y, secured by an agricultural h provides for interest on the at the rate of two and one-half a month from the date of each,

C. of L.—27

after maturity draws legal interest only.
Thatcher v. Massey, 20 S. Car. 542.

A note payable one day after date,
"with interest from date at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum, interest to be paid annually," draws twelve per cent. interest after maturity. Sharpe v.
Lee, 14 S. Car. 341; S. P. Piester v.
Piester, 22 S. Car. 139; s. c., 53 Am.
Rep. 711; Casteel v. Walker, 40 Ark.
117; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 5.

A bond executed January 1st, 1873, conditioned for the payment "of $1,195 in five equal annual instalments, with interest payable annually from date upon the whole amount unpaid and at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, the first instalment payable January 1st, 1874, being $239, besides interest, and the last instalment of like amount on January 1st, 1878, and the same amount with all interest due, payable on the first day of January of each intervening year," bears annual interest at the rate of ten per cent. a year after maturity of the last instalment as well as before.
Miller v. Hall, 18 S. Car. 141.

A note payable twelve months after date, "with interest from date, at twelve and a half per cent. per annum, interest payable annually," and described by the maker, in a mortgage contemporaneously executed, as a note "with interest thereon at the rate of twelve and a-half per cent. per annum till paid," draws the same rate of interest after maturity as before. The rule laid down in Langston v. S. Car. R. Co., 2 S. Car.
248, approved. Mobley v. Davega, 16
S. Car. 73; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 632.

1. Scottish-American Mortgage Co.
v. Wilson, 24 Fed. Rep. 310; Eaton v.
Boissennault, 67 Me. 540; Reeves v.
Stipp, 91 Ill. 609.

In Missouri, where a note called for interest at ten per cent. after maturity, and the time of payment was extended by agreement for a certain time at the rate of nine per cent., it was held that after the expiration of the extended time the note would bear interest at the rate of ten per cent. North v. Walker, 66 Mo. 454.

And so in Georgia, where a debt is over due, future indulgence for a defiwill be upheld.¹ Where the rate contracted for is higher than that allowed by the laws of either State, the fate of the contract depends upon the laws of the State where it was made.²

Generally, where there is a contract for interest without specifying any rate, the rate allowed will be according to the law of the place of contract for its payment.³ Where the place of pa

n. e period is a sufficient consideration for an agreement to pay increased interest. Taylor v. Thomas, 61 Ga. 472.

A note naming the rate of interest at two per cent. per month was endorsed by an agreement to pay compound interest at fifteen per cent per annum on the sum named as the amount then due. This sum was arrived at by compounding the interest quarterly, without the knowledge of the maker, according to an alleged oral agreement, which he denied. In an accounting the judgment was for the amount of the note with interest at two per cent. per month to the date of the endorsement, and from that time to the date of the decree at fifteen per cent. per annum. Held, no error, since the alleged agreement before the date of the endorsement for compounding the interest quarterly was without effect, under Gen. St., Colo., § 1708, providing that a higher rate of interest than ten per cent. may be lawful and enforced if stipulated for in writing. Beckwith v. Beckwith (Colo.), 19 Pac. Rep. 510.

Upon a note providing for ten per cent. interest after maturity, it bearing the same rate before maturity, evidenced by coupon interest notes, interest is chargeable after maturity at ten per cent. under Gen. St. Minnesota, 1866, ch. 23, § 1. Holbrook v. Usher (Minn.), 39 N. W. Rep. 74.

After maturity, municipal bonds and coupons bear interest at the legal rate unless otherwise specified, although before maturity they bore interest at a higher rate. Nash v. El Dorado Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 252.

If a mortgagee refuses to accept payment of the mortgage debt, bearing interest at a greater rate than six per cent., when tendered by the mortgagor, except upon compliance with an illegal demand, on a bill in equity to redeem from the mortgage, interest should be allowed the mortgagee only at six per cent. from the time of the tender. Donohue v. Chase, 139 Mass. 407.

Where an obligation matures before the passage of a legislative enactment changing the legal rate of interest, interest between the time of maturity and judgment is to be computed at former rate. Aged Females' Assoc. v. Eagleson, 60 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 9.

1. Story Conf. Laws, 291; Pease v. Mayo, 14 Vt. 33; Cromwell v. County of Sac., 96 U. S. 51, 62; Milburn v. Tiffany, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 298; Chapman v. Robertson, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 627; Kilgore v. Dempsey, 25 Ohio 413; Butters v. Olds, 11 Iowa 1.

But in a Pennsylvania case it was held that a contract made in California to pay monthly two and a half per cent. interest, and to compound, though lawful under the local law, not only unconscionable but deceptive, and a court of law in Pennsylvania would not enforce it, but enter judgment for amount of principal and simple interest at ten per cent. Sime v. Norris Phila. (Pa.) 84; S. P. Estate of Brown, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 197.

2. Adams v. Robertson, 37 Ill. 100; Scofield v. Day, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 100; Richards v. Globe Bank, 12 Wis. 60; Vliet v. Camp, 13 Wis. 198; s. Engler v. Ellis, 16 Ind. 475; Shipman v. Bailey, 20 W. Va. 140.

If no place of payment is specified, and the residence of the parties is shown, the legality of the interest stipulated is determined by the laws of the state where the note is dated. Richards v. Presler, 2 La. Ann. 264.

A note and mortgage drawing two per cent. interest, executed in a state where such rate of interest is allowed by law, is valid in the state where executed, although made payable in a state in which such a rate would render it usurious. Fisher v. Otis Pinn. (Wis.) 78; Kilgore v. Dempsey, 25 Ohio St. 413.

A foreign corporation may receive the legal rate of interest in Missouri upon a contract performed here, though it is larger than that which its charter and the laws of its own state would allow. Bank of Louisville v. Young, 37 Mo. 398.

3. Story Conf. Laws, 291; 2 Kent Com. 460; 2 Burge Colonial Laws, 8. See also Steward v. Ellice, 2 Paige 1

Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 285; Thompson v. Ketchum, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 118; Fanning v. Consequa, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 511; v. Gaskins, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 207; v. Belmont, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 382; Hall, 37 Ala. 702; Ala. Sel. Cas. v. Andrews, 9 Port. (Ala.) 12; Masero v. Gilbert, 24 Ill. 293, 651; Lauve, 3 La. Ann. 88; Hawley v. Little, 12 La. Ann. 815; Little v. N. H. 109; Bolton v. Street, 1 (Tenn.) 31; Summers v. Tex. 77; Whitlock v. Castro, 108; Jeffray v. Dennis, 2 Wash. 283; Cowqua v. Lauderbrun, (U. S.) 521; Bushby v. Canac, (U. S.) 206; Bank of Illinois v. McLean (U. S.) 268; Moore v. son, 18 Ala. 209; Lester v. v., 18 Ind. 246; Von Hemert v. 11 Metc. (Mass.) 210; Win- Carleton, 12 Mass. 4; Healy v. n, 15 N. J. L. 328; Consequa v. g, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 587; n v. Gee, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) Davis v. Coleman, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 424; Irving v. Barrett, 2 Grant v. 73; Roberts v. McNeely, 7 (N. Car.) L. 506; Archer v. W. & S. (Pa.) 327; Swett v. Miss. 667; Gaillard v. Gail- ott. & M. (S. Car.) 67; Gray v. 72 Ind. 567.

a general authority is given bills of exchange from a cer- on account of advances then undertaking is to replace the t that place. The interest of e is to be allowed. Lanusse v. , 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 101.

neither the bonds nor the provide for the rate of interest ury, it must be determined e provided by the law of the ere they are payable. Gray v. Ind. 567.

a debt is payable in Great d it is agreed, for the accom- of the debtor, that it may be the creditor is entitled to the of interest here from the time greement. Pearce v. Wallace, J. (Md.) 48.

missory note was drawn, in payable to parties residing in "with interest until paid in " Held, that the plaintiffs, on ent obtained in New York e makers, were entitled to in- cording to the legal rate in- only up to the time of judgment, without any allowance for the difference of exchange with England. Scofield v. Day, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 102.

Where goods were consigned from a foreign port, to be sold in this country, for the benefit of the consignor, held, that he was entitled to interest upon the proceeds for the improper detention thereof by the consignee, only at the rate allowed by law at the place to which the goods were consigned. Fanning v. Consequa, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 511.

A New York merchant consigned goods to his factor in California to be sold under a del credere commission, and the proceeds to be remitted in the usual way. Held, in an action to recover the proceeds, that the contract was to be performed in California, and that the consignor was entitled to the California rate of interest. Cartwright v. Greene, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 9.

As between the parties to a promissory note, executed in the State of New York, and made payable generally, interest will be allowed after the rate of six per cent., if it appear that it was the intention of the parties that it should be paid in Vermont. Austin v. Imus, 23 Vt. 286.

A city in Missouri issued bonds payable in New York, with interest at ten per cent. until payment; to these bonds were attached interest coupons, payable in New York, but expressing no rate of interest. Held, in an action upon one of these bonds and coupons, that under 1 Wag. Mo. St., p. 782, the plaintiff was entitled to ten per cent. interest upon the principal of the bond from its maturity to date of judgment, and that thereafter so much of the judgment as related thereto must bear the same rate; that the plaintiff was entitled to but six per cent. upon the coupons, and that thereafter the portion of the judgment relating to the coupons and accrued interest thereon must continue to bear the same rate. Fauntleroy v. Hannibal, 5 Dillon (U. S.) 219.

Where a mortgage was made and signed in New Jersey, by a resident of that State, the mortgagee being then temporarily in that State but having his permanent residence in New York, and the mortgage was delivered to the mortgagee at his place of business in New York, where he paid the money thereon; held, that the place of the contract was New York and that it was to be governed by the laws of that State in respect to interest, though both par-ment is not expressed nor implied in the contract, the law presume that it was to be paid at the place where it was made and the law of that place will govern.¹

ties were described in the bond as of New Jersey. Varick v. Crane, 4 N. J. Eq. 128.

A marriage settlement made in another state upon land in South Carolina, draws interest according to the laws of the latter State. Quince v. Callender, 1 Dessau. (S. Car.) 160.

Creditors resident in Pennsylvania, where the limit of interest is six per cent., holding a mortgage made in and on lands in New York, may receive seven per cent. thereon, if there is nothing to indicate where the securities were payable, nor that a different rate of interest than that allowed by the laws of New York was intended. Lewis v. Ingersoll, 3 Abb. (N. Y.) App. Dec. 55.

1. 2 Burge Colonial Laws, 860; Evans v. Clark, 1 Port. (Ala.) 388; Evans v. Irwin, 1 Port. (Ala.) 390; Chase v. Dow, 47 N. H. 405; Hopkins v. Miller, 17 N. J. L. 185; Butters v. Olds, 11 Iowa 1; Burton v. Anderson, 1 Tex. 93; Lynes v. Mack, 19 Ind. 223.

Where nothing in the record shows the lex loci contractus, or any other valid authority, interest on a promissory note will not be allowed at any higher rate than that permitted by the laws of the State where the note is put in suit. Booty v. Cooper, 18 La. Ann. 565.

Where there is no proof of the place where a note is made, it will be presumed to have been made and be payable within the State. A note sued upon was dated "Philadelphia" and the court held that it could not judicially know that Philadelphia was not in the State and they allowed only the current rate of Texas. Cook v. Crawford, 4 Tex. 420.

Where the co-obligors of F, in a promissory note made in New Mexico and bearing ten per cent. interest after a partial payment thereon, assume in the absence of F to renew the same for the balance still due thereon, and accordingly such co-obligors at Santa Fe subscribe a new note dated at Santa Fe, and stipulating for ten per cent. interest; and F afterwards in Missouri, with full knowledge of all the circumstances, also signs the new note, he thereby ratifies the agreement made by his co-obligors, and the new note is to be regarded as made in New Mexico, and is governed by the laws of that territory, in respect to the rate of interest accruing thereon and the legal effect of the stipulation embodied therein. Lay v. Hall, 12 Ohio St. 610.

A, who had levied an execution on the property of a mining company in Colorado, and had bought the property when sold under the levy, and was a creditor of the company, entered into an agreement in Massachusetts, which it was agreed that there would be a certain sum and interest; A should manage the property and pay it to B whenever he realized the proceeds of his demand "and interest as aforesaid," either from the property of B. Held, on a bill in equity brought against A for the conveyance of the property, that the defendant was not entitled to interest on the principal to the date of the decree, and upon advancements and payments made by him in managing the property; and that the rate of interest was to be governed by the laws of Massachusetts, although the property was to be managed in Colorado. French v. French, 126 Mass. 360.

Where an advance is obtained in Louisiana through an agent of a principal, on merchandise to be sold and sold by the latter, interest on the balance of account due him is allowed according to the laws of his domicile. Ballister v. Hamilton, 3 La. 410.

Interest is computed on contracts made in foreign States according to the lex loci, unless a different rate is shown to have been agreed upon, or to have been fixed by the law and usage of the place of contract. Longee v. Washburn, 1 N. H. 134; Hall v. Woodson, 1 N. H. 462.

In assumpsit on a note made in New York and payable there, the declaration, generally, set out the state of the law in New York in reference to interest, and a demurrer to this part of the declaration was held bad for uncertainty, it was held insufficient. Brackenridge v. Baxton, 1 N. H. 501.

Where a declaration on a note made in Kentucky does not aver the rate of interest in the place where the note was made, the rate of interest in Kentucky will be allowed. Surlott v.

where interest is allowed not under contract, but as damages, it is according to the laws of the place where the suit is brought.¹ The rate of interest in another State is a question for the jury,² where it is not specified in the contract.

J. Marsh. (Ky.) 174; s. p. in Chumaseo v. Gilbert, 26 Ill. n v. Crume, 46 Ill. 69.

"If a promissory note is dated at 'Macon' and 'payable at either of the places named in the note,' it cannot in the absence of an allegation or proof be interpreted as 'payable at Macon' if 'Macon' is in another State, to devolve upon the plaintiff the burden of proving the rate of interest in that State, especially if there is a county which comprises several villages called 'Macon,' although there is no incorporation of a bank in either. Smith v. ..., 11 Ala. 270.

"If, as it has been held that no interest can be allowed on a note payable in another State, the jurisdiction of the State in such an action, in the absence of an allegation and proof of the rate of interest at the place of payment, is not affected. Wheeler v. Pope, 5 Tex. 1; v. George, 5 Tex. 87; Able v. ..., 10 Tex. 350; Pridgen v. ..., 12 Tex. 420; Ingram v. Drinkwater, 35 Tex. 351.

Ward v. Foster, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 62; v. Cooper, 18 La. Ann. 100; v. Daus, 31 Tex. 67; Clark v. ..., 136 Mass. 344; Hopkins v. ..., 129 Mass. 600; Templeton v. ..., 9 S. W. Rep. 606.

"In an action upon a foreign judgment the plaintiff is entitled to recover interest on the judgment, both for damages and costs, from the date of that judgment to the date of the judgment in this State, computed at the regular legal rate of interest in the State where the action is brought, although a different rate of interest, being the rate in the State in which the judgment was obtained, is embodied in the record of that judgment. Clark v. ..., 136 Mass. 344; Hopkins v. ..., 129 Mass. 600.

"Where, in a suit alleging the infringement of the complainant's letters patent, the defendant is charged with an account of profits, a decree in his favor for a certain sum on appeal affirmed in the Supreme court, with 'interest until the same rate per annum that decrees bear in the courts of the State and that rate on money decrees is paid,' held, that the decree so affirmed bears interest at that rate. Chicago

etc. R. Co. v. Turrill, 101 U. S. 836.

In an action upon a note made and payable on a day certain in another State, without any agreement, express or implied, to pay interest, the plaintiff can recover only the legal rate of interest in Massachusetts, though less than that in the other State. Ayer v. Tilden, 15 Gray (Mass.) 178; Wood v. Corl, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 203.

Coupons bear interest from the date of their maturity; and in an action thereon in Missouri, coupons payable out of the State will be allowed the same rate of interest as those payable in the State, no proof of the rate of interest in the foreign State being offered. Huey v. Macon Co., 35 Fed. Rep. 481.

In absence of evidence of the rate of interest in another State, interest on a judgment there rendered and sued on in Missouri must be computed according to the Missouri rate. Crone v. Dawson, 19 Mo. App. 214.

On a note executed and payable in another State stipulating for eight per cent interest, if there is no evidence of the legal rate of interest in such other State, the judgment should allow eight per cent. interest to the date of the judgment, but only the legal rate in this State after judgment. Gordon v. Phelps, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 619.

2. *Richardson v. Williams, 2 Port. (Ala.) 239; Jaffray v. Dennis, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 253; Peacock v. Banks, Minor (Ala.) 387; Hunt v. Mayfield, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 124; Harrison v. Harrison, 20 Ala. 629; Nalle v. Ventress, 19 La. Ann. 373; Swelt v. Dodge, 12 Miss. 667; Henry v. Halsey, 13 Miss. (5 Smed. & M.) 573; Holley v. Holley, Litt. (Ky.) Sel. Cas. 505; *Ingraham v. Arnold, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 406; Johnsons v. Williams, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 489; Russell v. Shepperd, Hard. (Ky.) 44; Pawling v. Sartain, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 238; S. P. Davidson v. Gohagin, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 634.

The rate of interest due on a contract, if not fixed by agreement of the parties, nor by statute, is to be fixed by the custom of the place where the contract is made, found by a jury. Tate v. Innerarity, 1 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 33.

INTERESTED.—See INTEREST; CONCERN.¹

1. Any person who has property listed on the assessment roll of a county for taxation is "interested" in the proceedings of the county board of equalization in the sense of a statute giving him a right to appear before such board and have redress against an unjust valuation. Dundee Mort. Trust Invest. Co. v. Charlton, 32 Fed. Rep. 192.

No person has the right to appeal from the decision of commissioners of highways in laying out a new road or vacating an old one, as a "person interested," unless he is the owner of land adjoining the road to be laid out or vacated. Taylor v. Normal, 88 Ill. 527.

"The word 'interested' must receive a reasonable construction, such as will, on the one hand, protect those who have a direct and substantial interest in the matter, and, on the other hand, protect the commissioners of highways from unnecessary litigation in defending their action as such at the suit of persons who may imagine they have an interest, when, in fact, they have no such interest as was contemplated by the legislature. Every citizen of a county, in one sense, has an interest in the public highways. So, too, it may be said, and properly, that every citizen of the State has an interest in the highways in the different counties of the State. If, therefore, the language of the statute is to be interpreted literally, an appeal might be taken by any citizen of the State. But we apprehend that it was not the intention of the legislature that the word 'interested' should receive such a liberal construction. It was, doubtless, intended to give the right of appeal to those persons who had a direct and pecuniary interest not shared by the public at large; such as owned land adjoining the new road laid out or the old one vacated."

In Whitmer v. Comms. of Highways, 96 Ill. 289, in commenting on the use of the words "land adjoining the new road," etc., in the above case, it was said: "If that is to be taken in the strict meaning of touching the land, so that no person can appeal from such an order unless he is the owner of land which is actually touched by the road to be laid out or vacated, we are satisfied that the construction there adopted was a too narrow one. The language of the statute is that any person 'interested' in the decision of the commissioners of highways may appeal. Surely there may be persons who have a direct interest, ordinarily speaking, in the laying out or in the vacating of a road, merely as a thoroughfare for travel, without having any land to be taken or restored to them in consequence of laying out or discontinuing the road.

In allowing the right of appeal to persons, or to one whose land is actually touched by the road, it would not necessarily follow, as is insisted, that any citizen of the State might appeal as having an interest in the public highways. . . . A broader term here used in the latter statute, the word 'interested' admitting of a wider application than the words 'owners of land upon the route or line of road' which the highway altered, discontinued or laid out, ran, fairly indicative of the intent, think it may be said, of the intention to enlarge the right of appeal and extend it beyond the particular land owner whom it had before been given to."

Without attempting to draw the dividing line between the persons who are and who are not interested in such a decision, we are of opinion that though the vacated portion of the road here did not actually adjoin and touch the land of Sabin, yet circumstances here he was with respect to it, he had a direct interest in its continuance, and such an interest that he may properly be considered as a person interested in the decision of the commissioners of highways in vacating the road, within the contemplation of the statute giving the right of appeal to any person "interested in such a decision." Three judges dissented. In the above case the road vacated was within a short distance of Sabin's land and not far from his house, which had been built with reference to such a road and the part vacated ran diagonally across an adjoining quarter section of land, the vacation carrying the road around part of two sides of such quarter; and the road so vacated was a continuation of a road leading from Sabin's premises to the county seat, and to a railroad station, which was his principal place of business. See also Brown v. Roberts, 2 App. 461.

In Ashe v. Bd. of Suprs., 16 Pac. 783 (Cal.), it was held that an affidavit for a writ of review to an order of a board of supervisors granting the highway for a railroad, was by a "party beneficially interested" the court saying: "It does not appear from the petition in this case that the petitioner has any other or greater interest in the public highway mentioned than any other citizen of the state. The requirement that the application must be made by 'the party beneficially interested' has been commonly understood to mean 'that, in an application for a private party, his interest is of a nature which is distinguishable from that of the mass of the property.'" Linden v. Alameda Co.,

INTERESTED.

Definition.

"interested therein," who by law is entitled to notice of the proceedings of a committee to whom an application for a highway has been referred. "all who may be affected by the contemplated highway, and all persons whose interests may be adverse to those of the owner on the question of dam-Whelton v. Town of Derby, 27

owner is a "party beneficially interested" in having all the property properly assessed, and is a proper party to make affidavit for the issue of a writ of mandamus to the assessor. Allen, 54 Cal. 353.

An act provides for reasonable notice to "owners or parties interested" in the sale of property for taxes, a tax sale is not rendered invalid by failure to give the notice upon a mortgagee, if his mortgage appears on record and is not rendered invalid by failure to give the notice. Smyth v. Neff, 17 N. E. 2d 111. (Ill.). The court said: "As seen, the phrase 'or parties interested' might include persons directly or indirectly interested, and the number of persons is very large, and often it would be impossible, even if at all practicable, to give notice to every one that might be interested in the property sold. No doubt the framers of the constitution intended that the general assembly should give by law that reasonable notice be given to the owner, or to any person who had a specific or other interest in the property, as should be proper in legislative discretion. Its clear meaning and nothing less than the general assembly has provided by law for reasonable notice to the owner, but has designated no other persons who might be directly or indirectly interested in the property, upon whom notice should be served. It is, therefore, apparent, when the purchaser at the tax sale has given the proper notice to the owner, he has complied with the statutory requirements in that respect, for no other 'parties interested' are designated by law, either as a class or as individuals, upon whom he could serve notice. Had mortgagees or judgment creditors or other persons having a lien on such property of record been designated by name or as a class, such persons could have been readily ascertained by an examination of the public records. But, as the statute now is, the purchaser cannot know, from any direction given, to whom he is expected to give such notice as the statute requires other than to the owner. In that respect the statute might be regarded as meaning precisely the same as it would mean if the words 'or parties interested' had been omitted."

A mortgagee out of possession, whose mortgage is recorded, should be made a party to proceedings instituted before county commissioners to ascertain the damages of land owners for land taken for a railroad. He comes within the description of "persons having any interest in land." Wilson v. E. & N. A. R. Co., 67 Me. 358. And see Michigan Air Line R. v. Barnes, 40 Mich. 383.

In State v. Easton etc. R. Co., 36 N. J. L. 184, it is said: "The charter plainly distinguishes between the owner and persons interested throughout the entire proceedings for condemnation as provided for in the seventh and eighth sections. By owner is meant the person having some legal estate which the company proposes by the condemnation to acquire. Under the more comprehensive expression of 'persons interested' are included, not only the person in whom is vested the legal title which the company proposes to acquire, as indicated by their application, but also other individuals having some independent right or interest therein not amounting to an actual legal estate, such as an easement of a right of way, inchoate rights of dower or curtesy or encumbrances, such as by judgments or mortgages, which are charges or liens on the legal estate. The object attained in making the latter class of individuals parties to the proceedings is that their interests may be extinguished by payment out of the money awarded or compensated for under the provisions of the general statute, which authorizes the court into which the money may be paid to make allowance out of the fund in satisfaction of such interest."

In decreeing damages as compensation for the construction of a railway it was held that the trade carried on in particular premises was a thing appertaining to the premises, and, as such, was included in the "interest" of the occupier, for which compensation was to be given; and also that the meaning of "parties interested" was parties retaining a special and individual loss by reason of the works which the company had constructed. Ricket v. Metrop. R. Co., L. R., 2 H. L. 175.

A creditor is a "person interested" in proceedings relating to the settlement of estates of decedents. Byrd v. Jones, (Ala.) 4 South. Rep. 375. And see Phillips v. Smith, 62 Ala. 575; Smith v. Phillips, 54 Ala. 8.

So is one entitled to a remainder after a life estate. Campbell v. Purdy, 5 Redf. (N.Y.) 434.

The State is not "interested as a party or otherwise" in a proceeding in the nature of a quo warranto to try the title of a person to an office into which it was alleged he had intruded, in such sense as to give the supreme court jurisdiction to hear an appeal. The interest which a state must have in such a cause is a substantial interest—as a monetary interest. McGrath v. The People, 100 Ill. 464.

The meaning of the words "the party really interested" in moneys, for which an action is brought, was held to be certainly determined by no fixed rule. Whether a party has or has not the legal title, if he is the party to whom payment can legally be made, and who can legally discharge the debtor, the action may be brought in his name, although the money, when collected, is not for his use, but for that of some other persons, to whose use he is required to apply it, or to whom he is bound to pay it. Yerby v. Sexton, 48 Ala. 311.

The executor of a will who is a devisee and legatee with two trustees was held not a "person interested" in proceedings regarding the trust. Greene v. Borland, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 330.

The beneficiary in a deed of trust of personal property is a "party in interest," and may file his claim with the sheriff. State v. McKellop, 40 Mo. 184.

The trustees of a burial society who, by its constitution, could not be members, are not "persons interested," so as to be able to institute proceedings against the society. Hull v. McFarlane, 2 C. B., N. S. 796.

Under the provision of the Patent Act of 1836 enacting that damages be recovered by an action brought by the name of the person "interested," original owner of the patent, who afterwards sold his right, may recover for an infringement committed during the time he was owner. The word "interested" means interested in the patent at the time when the infringement was committed. Moore v. Marsh, 7 Vt. (U. S.) 515.

A bankrupt out of whose estate the costs is paid by the trustee in bankruptcy is not a "party interested" in the property out of which the bill is paid, so as to be able to make application to refer the bill to be taxed, even though ultimately the creditors are paid in full and there is a surplus. In re Leavitt v. Harvey, 27 W. R. 267.

A clerk in a district local board is a shareholder in a gas company which supplies gas to the district officer "concerned or interested in" a contract made with the board, and is liable to the penalties imposed by the statute. Todd v. Robinson, 54 L. R. Q. B. 47.

Where by the terms of a contract entered into with a local authority a surveyor to the local authority was to receive from the contractors, in respect of bills of quantities to be prepared for him, percentages on the amount of the bills, he should certify to be due to such contractors, it was held that in respect of each contract the surveyor was liable to a penalty as being "concerned or interested" therein. Whiteley v. Barle, L. R. Q. B. D. 154; (s. c., 57 L. J. R., 643). LINDLEY, L. J., said: "This is not a question of exacting or accepting any fee or reward, but of being 'interested in a contract,' and if a man is entitled to be paid an amount which varies with the contract price, it appears to me utterly immaterial to consider who his paymaster is. He comes immediately interested in the contract, and he is a person hit by this section."

The addition of the words "being concerned in" or "interested in," in addition to a promise not to "carry on" or "engage in" a business, shows that the parties intend to extend the contract further than the latter terms alone would do. Nelson v. Johnson, (M. S.) 36 N. W. Rep. 869.

A complaint that complainants "interested in the reversion" was dismissed upon general demurrer, a sufficient

INTERFERE—INTERFERING PATENTS.

INTERFERE.—To intervene, so as to cut off, intercept, or interrupt.¹ To come into collision; to clash; to be in opposition.

INTERFERING PATENTS.—See PATENTS.

that they were "entitled to the mail." Peck v. Peck, 35 Conn.

Common carrier engaged in carrying United States mail and also in transportation of passengers wrote to a postmaster at one of the places from which he was accustomed to deliver the mail, informing him that on a certain day one of his vessels, which did not ordinarily stop, would arrive, and also requesting him to be ready to receive the mail in readiness and to "advise the passengers who may feel interested in the mail."

Held, that the expression "all persons who may feel interested," did not refer to persons interested in the mail under the circumstances, included those who wished to take passage on the vessel; and, further, that it was not to introduce parol evidence of circumstances under which the vessel was written, and of the nature of the business in which the common carrier was engaged, in explanation of the case. "all who may feel interested" in order to show that "passengers were embraced in it." Heirn v. Heirn, 32 Miss. 19.

Interest that will disqualify a trustee must be direct and immediate and not remote and contingent. . . . A more liberal construction would be harsh, strained and technical; and would, for any just reason, merely throw obstacles in the way of suits and unnecessarily embarrass the administration of justice." Peck v. Freeholders, 35 Conn. 466; Ellis v. Ellis, 32 Ala. 353.

A probate judge who has a power of appointment from any of the persons claiming as heirs of the deceased, authorized to receive for them any money or property to which they might be entitled from the estate, and also letters testamentary giving him a percentage upon profits from the estate, is "interested" in the estate and cannot act as a trustee in any matter pertaining thereto. White, 37 Cal. 190.

A law partner and co-counsel of a defendant who was a law partner and co-counsel of a defendant in another case, and a "person interested" and unable to take a deposition. Dodd v. Dodd, 37 Conn. 216.

A sheriff is not so "interested" in an action of replevin brought against his deputy for property attached by him as to authorize a coroner to serve the writ. Browning v. Bancroft, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 88.

Nor will the owning of stock in a corporation by a sheriff disqualify him as "interested" from executing process in a case where the corporation is a party. Hardwick v. Jones, 65 Mo. 54.

1. Thus it has been held (COCKBURN, C. J., dissentiente), that the provision of the Metropolitan Sewers act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict., ch. 112, § 50, which provides that "where any work of the commissioners done or required to be done in pursuance of the provisions of this act shall interfere with or prejudicially affect any ancient mill, or any right connected therewith, or other right to the use of water, full compensation shall be made to all persons sustaining damage thereby," did not apply to cases in which the effect of the sewer was only to intercept under ground springs which would otherwise have risen into a pond, even though the pond thereby became dry. Queen v. The Metropolitan Board of Public Works, 3 B. & S. 710. See also Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. C. 349.

The provision of the constitution of Arkansas, art. 7, § 5, providing that the "general assembly shall not interfere with the term of office of any judge," does not deprive the legislature of the power to abolish the office, and thereby put an end to the term. Board of Supervisors Van Buren Co. v. Mattox, 30 Ark. 567.

A, a trader, entered into an agreement with his creditors, by deed, by which he was to have license to carry on his business for five years under supervision, and it was provided therein that if any creditor so covenanting should, during the continuance of the licence, molest or interfere with A, contrary to the true intent and meaning of the indenture, A should thereupon be exonerated and relieved from all debts and demands of such creditor, by whom the letter of license should be so contravened. A creditor, party to the deed, brought suit against A within the five years, and it was held that it was a

INTERIM—INTERIOR—INTERLINEATIONS.

INTERIM.—A Latin word, meaning in the meanwhile, in the intervening time. Used as an adjective in the sense of temporary.¹

INTERIOR.—Inland; remote or distant from the coast.²

INTERLINEATIONS.—See ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS, vol. 1, p. 497; AMBIGUITY, vol. 1, p. 525.

"molestation or interference" with A, within the meaning of the proviso, and might be pleaded in bar as such; WILDE, C. J., saying: "Then it is said that that which has occurred here is not a molestation within the meaning of the deed. Looking at all the circumstances it is impossible to doubt that suing the debtor was the very species of molestation which the parties sought to guard against, and no other. They clearly could not have had anything else in their contemplation. When, therefore, this action,—which in the ordinary course would go on to judgment and execution,—was brought, the defendant had a right to assume that it was brought for the purpose of molesting or interfering with him, and so preventing him from carrying into effect the contract he had entered into. In the absence, therefore, of anything to control it, it seems to me that the parties contemplated a molestation by suing out a writ. Gibbons v. Vonillon, 8 Manning, Gran. & Scott 483.

1. Interim Factor.—A judicial officer appointed under the Bankruptcy law of Scotland, to preserve the estate until a fit person shall be elected trustee. 2 Bell's Com. 299.

Interim Curator.—An officer appointed by the justice of the peace under 33 & 34 Vict., ch. 23, which abolished forfeiture and escheat on conviction of treason and felony, to have the custody and management of the property of the convict. 4 Stephen's Com. 462.

2. More Interior District.—In construing the 29th section of the Revenue Collection act of 1799, ch. 128, which enacts, "that if any ship or vessel, which shall have arrived within the limits of any district of the United States from any foreign port or place, shall depart or attempt to depart from the same, unless to proceed on her way to some more interior district, to which she may be bound, before report or entry shall have been made by the master, or other person having the charge or command of such ship or vessel, with the collector of some district of the United States, the master, etc., shall forfeit and pay the sum of four hundred dollars," the STORY, J., said: "The defendant master of the Schooner Hope Esther, bound on a voyage fromifax, in Nova Scotia, to the port of New York. He voluntarily put into the harbour of Hyannis in the Barnstable district, and after remaining there for sixteen hours, departed without necessity, without making any report to the collector of the district, or entry with the collector of the district of or of any other district. It is of course in the reach of the possibility that he was bound to do so, unless he was bound to a more interior district; and the question, therefore, whether New York is such a district within the sense of the act. The district court decided it, as a question of law, that New York was such an interior district, there being no doubt as to the facts of the case, and the relative geographical position of the ports in the districts being well known and not controverted. What, then, is the exposition of the phrase 'more interior district?' in the section under consideration? Does it mean any other district to which the vessel may be bound, and through which she has not already passed in her voyage, although, geographically speaking, not more inland, or indeed is less inland, than the district at which she arrived? If so, the exposition of the learned judge was right, for his opinion is understood to have turned upon the most general import which could be applied to the phrase. Or does the expression 'more interior district' apply only to those districts which, in a strict sense, deeper within the interior of the country than the district at which the vessel has arrived, through which she must go before she can reach the interior district? I think to be the true meaning, it is agreed to be the opinion of the learned judge cannot be maintained, for New York is not a district with reference to Barnstable. There are many such districts within the United States upon our long river and extended bays, such as Hudson's

LOCUTORY.—(See also DECREE; DEFINITIVE; ERROR; ; FINAL; FINAL JUDGMENTS; JUDGMENT; ORDER).
 cutory (in law) means that which decides, not the cause, settles some intervening matter relating to the cause.¹

ver, Penobscot bay, Chesaetc. I confess that, after ction, I have reluctantly conclusion that this last is se of the terms, and that in the legislature intended, by rior district," a district a reference to local and l position, and in common emed interior to another, er within the indentations the contiguous or surround-y, than that in which the ready arrived, and through would or might ordinarily er to reach such inner dise not found the words used r section of the act, but in in the 18th section the words et" occur in a sense exactly hich I feel constrained to section under examination.
 ions of the act may be hard s; but if they are so, the with congress, and not of law." U. S. v. Bearse, 4 S.) 192.

r. The Sun Mut. Ins. Co., (N. Y.) 304; s. c., 22 How.
 60.

ory and Final Distinguished.

rds have received frequent , of which the following es: "According to Harri-ice in Chancery (622), 'a nal when all the circumfacts material and necessary complete explanation of the litigation are brought before and so fully and clearly by the pleadings on both sides the court is enabled, from ect the respective merits of the litigant, and upon full consideration of the case made out and result, determines between them as to equity and good conscience. 'A decree is interlocutory when it disposes of some material fact, necessary to be brought before the court, is either not made out by the pleadings, or so imperfec-ted by them, that the court, without that defect, is unable to decide finally between the parties; or, by a reference to, or an enquiry before, a master, or a trial of the facts before a jury, becomes necessary to have the doubts occasioned by that defect removed. The court, in the meantime, suspends its final judgment, until, by the master's report, or the verdict of a jury, it is enabled to decide finally.' " Travis v. Waters, 12 Johns.

 (N. Y.) 500. See also Griffin v. Or-man, 9 Fla. 22, 46.

"An interlocutory decree is one made in the progress of a cause for the purpose of ascertaining some matter of fact or law, preparatory to a final decree. This is done by a reference to the master, a commissioner or jury, in an interlocutory decree, by the terms of which, the principles governing the rights of the parties, are generally settled, but a more perfect ascertainment of the facts to which they apply are necessary for a final disposition of the case. Bar. Ch. Pr. 326. A decree is final when all the facts and circumstances material and necessary to a complete explanation of the matters in litigation are brought before the court, and so fully and clearly ascertained on both sides, that the court is enabled, upon a full consideration of the case made out, finally to determine between them according to equity and good conscience. Bar. Ch. Pr. 330. . . . A decree which disposes of the whole merits of the cause, leaving nothing for the future judgment of the court in the case, which will make it necessary to bring it again before the court for final decision, is a final decree." Delap v.
 Hunter, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 101.

"The distinction between final and interlocutory decrees is oftentimes exceedingly nice, yet of most important consideration in practice, as the kind of proceeding to be had after a decree depends upon its character. When to take appeals, the time limited for petitions for rehearing, or bills of review, or whether to question the decree on motion, or by original proceeding, are all involved. A want of observing at all times the distinction between final and interlocutory decrees, has introduced some doubt and uncertainty in practice. A decree is final which disposes of the whole merits of the cause, and leaves nothing for further consideration of the court. A decree is interlocutory which finds the general equities, and the cause is retained for reference, feigned issue, or consideration, to ascertain some matter of fact or law, when again it comes under the consideration of the court for final disposition. When no further action of the court is required, it is final; when the cause is retained for further action, it is interlocutory. Further decrees and orders of the court sometimes become necessary to carry into effect the rights of parties fixed by final decree; and final decrees oftentimes direct an act to be done, as in case of specific performance, that on payment of the purchase money as specified in the final decree the vendor shall execute a deed; or in case of redemption, that on payment of the money due, the mortgage be cancelled, and even sometimes all the rights of the parties being found, and all the consequences to flow from a certain fact having been finally determined, a reference as to such fact may be had to a master, and still the decree be final. The confusion has sprung up from failing to observe the distinction between facts and things, to be ascertained preparatory to final decree, and facts and things to be ascertained in execution of final decree. Because a final decree might direct that certain facts should be ascertained in execution of such decree, it will not make it interlocutory; nor, on the other hand, because a decree finds the general equities of the cause, and reference is had to a master to ascertain facts preparatory to final disposition, will it be regarded as final. It seldom happens that a first decree can be final to conclude the cause, and yet, in all cases, the general equity should be found, and the principles laid down for the government of the master, before reference had. But such decrees are never held to be final. Indeed it is remarked by JUDGE SPENCER, in Jaques v. Methodist Episcopal Church, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 548, that no case can be found in which a decree directing a reference to a master, or a feigned issue, for the purpose of ascertaining a material fact, has been held final. But under the practice of our courts, a decree finding the general equities of the case, for the purpose of reference, etc., has been held final to support an appeal, but for no other purpose. In case of a final decree, an appeal of course brings up the whole merits of the cause. Proceeding upon the principle that a party questioning the finding of the generally, he can appeal from a decree, may possibly dispose of the case, without the expense of reference or proceeding, or he may await the action of the court, and then appeal if he be desired. In all cases where a decree is interlocutory, the merits of the cause are before the court for consideration, and it is their duty to render such final decree as equitably good conscience, from a view of the whole case, may require. Even decrees whilst they rest in paper, before enrollment, are within the control of the court for modification, annulment, or to be set aside. And in this State, final decrees are always under the control of the court, during the term in which they were rendered, the decree being but one day for the purpose of justice." Kelly v. Stanberry, 13 Ala. 408, 421.

Judgments are either interlocutory or final. Interlocutory judgments are such as are given in the progress of a cause upon some plea, proceeding by default, which is only intermediate, and does not finally determine or conclude the suit, but contemplates further proceedings for that purpose. 2 Tomlyn's Law Dict. 287; Bingham on Judgments, 2, 3 Bl. Com. 396. Final judgments are such as at once finish the proceeding by declaring that the plaintiff has or has not entitled himself to the redress he sought, and by ascertaining what amount he shall recover. Bingham on Judgments 2; 3 Bl. Com. 396. Tomlyn's Law Dict. 288. Decrees are either interlocutory or final, and their character is to be ascertained by a comparison of the tests we have laid down. Bouv. Law. Dict. 295." Elliott v. Field, 3 Ala. 223.

On the question of § 4191 of the Georgia Code, which provides "No cause shall be carried to the supreme court upon any bill of exceptions so long as the same is pending in the court below, unless the decision complained of, if it had been rendered as claimed by the plaintiff in error, would have been a final disposition of the cause," BROWN, C. J., says: "It follows, therefore, that the cause is still pending till the remedy which the law affords is reached, or finally denied, and all issues or orders springing out of the main cause of action and ancillary to it, are collateral only."

Definition.

or decrees rendered upon not final judgments, and can-ought up to this court, by any ceptions, till the final disposi-cause. Bouvier says: A ment is one which puts an suit. An interlocutory judge-given in the course of a final judgment. Blackstone, 8, says: Final judgments are once put an end to the ac- clarating that the plaintiff has titled himself, or has not, to the remedy he sues for. The or, vol. 3, p. 396, says: Inter- gments are such as are given iddle of a cause, upon some eeding, or default, which is mediate, and does not finally or complete the suit. Ac-these standard common law
, and the reported decisions preme Court of the United is clearly obvious, that a de-der, granting or dissolving an which springs out of a suit pending, and is intended to ly till the final hearing, is an interlocutory only, and is not a final of the cause. And, as the cause is still pending in the law, and the right of the plain-plainant, to the remedy for sues, has not been finally den that court, the statute says shall not be brought to this on any bill of exceptions." The e Hydraulic Mining Co. v.
Ga. 309, 320. See also Ward
7 Tex. 389; Snell v. Bridge-con Mfg. Co., 24 Pick.
36.
all discussion of this subject, s to the meaning of interlocu- final, but also as to what and decrees, etc., are interand what are final, see the notes
v. Field (2 Wis. 421), 60 426. in judgment creditors of one d made an assignment for the creditors, filed a bill in equity pose of setting aside the as-and having the property on their judgments. They an injunction upon the assigning him "from selling, as-sionveing, or in any way or sposing of or encumbering or intermeddling with, etc., receiving or collecting any of the property of the defendant." Pending the injunction, the property of B was levied on by the sheriff and sold by him. Subsequently the injunction was dissolved and suit was brought by the assignee against the sheriff's personal representatives for the alleged conversion of the property so levied on by him. More than three years having elapsed between the sale of the property and the bringing of the suit, the court held the statute of limitations was a complete bar to the action; SMITH, J., saying: "Did the injunction order restrain the commencement of an action for the recovery of such property or damages for the taking thereof? I think it did not. It clearly does not in express terms. No words in the injunction order restrain the commencement of a suit to recover for taking the property in question from the plaintiff's possession. He is forbidden to sell, assign, or in any way or manner to dispose of or encumber the property. These words do not forbid the commencement of a suit. If there is any such prohibition it must be embraced in the words intermeddling with such property. The words receiving or collecting any of such property apply to notes and accounts, or property not in possession of the plaintiff at the time of the service of the injunction. What is the meaning of the phrase intermeddling with such property? Webster defines the word intermeddling as follows: 'To meddle with the affairs of others in which one has no concern; to meddle officiously; to interpose or interfere improperly; to intermix.' Intermeddling with the property referred to in the injunction order meant to meddle with it improperly, to do some thing to or with it that might affect injuriously the plaintiff's rights in that action. It was used as a more comprehensive word than any other employed to forbid such interference with the property. It did not mean that the defendant should not take care of or protect such property. One of the articles of property was a carriage. If this carriage had happened to be in the street or field, exposed to rain or other injury, certainly it would not have been intermeddling with the same, in the sense of the in-

INTERMEDIATE.—Intervening; interposing; lying between.

INTERNAL.—Used in the phrase INTERNAL COMMERCE in the sense of "within the boundaries or limits of a State," as contrasted with commerce between States, or commerce among the States.²

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENT.—See IMPROVEMENTS.

INTERNAL REVENUE.—See REVENUE LAWS.

junction order, to have put it under cover or in a place of safety. Suppose the lumber also seized by the defendant had been exposed to injury from any cause, it would not have been a violation of this clause of the injunction to have taken care of it. The plaintiff was a trustee of this property. It was in his possession as such trustee. The title to it was in him, as against all persons except some judgment creditors who might impeach it for fraud. It was a trespass, prima facie, for the defendant's testator to seize such property. Such seizure could only be justified by proof of fraud in the assignment from Brown to the plaintiff, and a lien upon such property under judgment and execution against Brown. Having accepted the assignment from Brown and entered upon the duties of assignee, and received the property in question in that capacity, it was his clear duty to protect and defend such possession and preserve the property. If he had permitted any person to remove the property from his possession he would have been liable therefor. Until a receiver had been appointed in the creditor's suit, no one but the plaintiff could protect the property from waste, conversion or destruction. As it was thus his duty as a trustee to take care of and protect and preserve such property, he could maintain an action of trespass against any person who interfered therewith. The commencement of such action would be in furtherance of his duty, and could not be in contempt of the injunction order. If he had lain still, and suffered such property to be taken away and it had carelessly been lost, he would have been clearly liable therefor. This seems to me to settle the question that to commence an action against a person who assumed to take such property out of his possession would not be intermeddling with such property improperly or within the sense and meaning of this injunction order. It follows that if he could commence such suit and it was his duty to do so to protect the property, the injunction order could not be construed to forbid commencement of such action. It clearly did not. The right to sue arose upon the taking of the property by the defendant's testator out of the plaintiff's possession. Such action was not suspended by the injunction order, and consequently the statute of limitations is a good defense in this action. Judgment should therefore be given for the defendant on the verdict." McQueen v. Brown, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 337.

1. Intermediate Orders.—An order of prohibition used in the New York Code of Procedure, title ii, § 11, subd. 1, declaring the jurisdiction of the court on appeals. This section provides: "The court of appeals shall have exclusive jurisdiction to review every appeal, every actual determination of an appeal after made at a general term, and every order of the trial courts, 'in the following cases: (1) no other, etc.; and upon appeal from any such judgment to review a judgment of an intermediate order involving the merits of the case necessarily affecting the judgment of the court below.'"

Orders denying motions to set aside the verdict are not intermediate orders within the provision, and are not reviewable. Selden v. The Hudson Canal Co., 29 N. Y. 634.

Nor is an order substituting a personal representative of a decedent for a plaintiff in his stead. Hacker v. State, 47 N. Y. 624.

Intermediate Tolls.—Tolls levied on persons who travel over a turnpike but who neither pass by, through, nor around the toll gates. Holl v. State, 29 Ohio St. 552.

2. Internal Commerce.—Used in the phrase INTERNAL COMMERCE. In McQueen v. Brown it was held that an injunction could not lie to restrain a steamship company from plying between New York and Troy on the Hudson, the State of New Jersey, on the ground that the State of New York has the sole right to navigate these waters for a term of years. Steamboat Company v. Kingston, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 713.

INTERNATIONAL LAW—(See ADMIRALTY; CHINESE; CON-AND AMBASSADORS; CONTRABAND OF WAR; DIVORCE; DIATIZATION; EXTRADITION; NATURALIZATION; SHIPPING).

- tion, 431.
 ons, 432.
Moral or Natural Law of Nations, 432. [435-Customary Law of Nations, Conventional Law of Nations, 436.
Principles of International Law, 438.
 eignty, 439.
Attributes of, 439.
Exercise of, 440.
Terms "State" and "Sovereignty", 440.
National Intercourse, 442. ies, 445.
Construction of Treaties, 448.
Equality Laws, 449.
Argo Laws, 450.
Intercourse Laws, 452.
License, 453.
Declaration of War, 455.
Rights of Property in Public War, 457.
Enemy Property Seized on Land, 458.
Enemy Property in General, 462.
Debts, 463.
Trade Permits, 463.
Enemy No Judicial Standing, 464.
Trade with the Enemy's Allies, 465.
Intercourse Under Truce, 465.
When Neutral May Recover His Property Wrongfully Condemned as Hostile, 465.
Neutral Nations in War, 466.
Right of Search, 467.
Trade, 468.
- a. Notification of Blockade, 471.
 b. Breach of Blockade, 471.
 c. Leaving Blockade Port, 472.
 d. Ships in Delicto, 473.
15. Communications Between Belligerents, 474.
 a. Armistice, 474.
 b. Capitulation, 475.
 c. Passports, 475.
 d. Cartel, 475.
 e. Ransom, 475.
16. Contraband of War, 476.
 a. Forfeiture, 476.
 b. Contraband Articles, 477.
 c. Jurisdiction of a Neutral State, 477. [478.
17. Captures on Navigable Waters,
 a. Domicil, 479.
 b. Traffic, 479.
 c. Property on the Ocean, 479.
 d. Hostile Flag and Pass, 480.
 e. Ships Sailing Under Cartel, 482.
 f. Neutral Vessels with Knowledge of War, 482.
 g. Recapture, 483.
18. Capture of Prizes by Public Vessels, 484
 a. Bringing Prizes in, 484.
 b. Prize Adjudications, 485.
 c. Jurisdiction, 485.
 d. Prizes in Court, 486.
 e. Monition, 487.
 f. Bonding Prizes, 487.
 g. Naval Captures on Land, 488.
 h. Prize Statutes, 488. [489.
 i. Testimony in Preparatorio,
19. Treaty of Peace, 490.
 20. Piracy, 491.
 21. The Slave Trade, 492.

Definition.—International law is the recognized rule of action governing the intercourse of enlightened nations.¹ It is the system of jurisprudence which appertains to political governments, governing not only what they have agreed upon in their conventions but what they have adopted in practice, without any pre-compact, but also whatever commends itself to the enternational law, as understood by civilized nations, may be defined as consisting of those rules of law which reason deduces, as consistent with justice, from the nature of the existing among independent nations with such definitions and modifications as may be established by general consent." Lawrence's Wheat-on's Int. Law, p. 26.

International law is "the system of which christian states acknowledge to be obligatory upon them in their relation to each other and to each other's lightened reason and conscience of publicists and jurists and right among nations in dealing with each other.¹

Distinction may be drawn between international law and law of nations, in some respects, though these terms are used as convertible, and properly so used for the most part. The former is law between or among nations, jus inter gentes, while the latter is broader, jus gentium, and may comprehend the laws of nations, not merely those governing their intercourse. Conflicts between those general laws give rise to questions which properly come within the domain of international law; while different national systems clash, there the publicist finds occasion to apply the recognized rules of intercourse which Christian nations have adopted; but wherever the systems agree, the broader designation is applicable and rather preferable.²

It is proposed here to treat the rule, or system of rules governing intercourse among civilized and enlightened peoples rather than to descant upon the general systems of jurisprudence prevailing in different countries. Conflicts between those systems will not be treated, except those interfering with national intercourse.

2. Divisions.—International law may be divided into: moral or natural rules, deducible from reason and conscience applicable to nations in their intercourse. What ought to be the measure of obligation among them is that measure, if it can be ascertained. Publicists have differed about this; and many writers have sought to reconcile them by saying that one has written of what ought to be; and another, of what is true among nations. But what is the final resort of an enlightened subjects. It is the jus inter gentes as distinguished from the jus gentium." Bouvier's Law Dict.

1. The duties of men, of subjects, of princes, of lawgivers, of magistrates and of states, are all parts of one consistent system of universal morality. Between the most abstract and elementary maxim of moral philosophy, and the most complicated controversies of civil or public law, there subsists a connection. The principle of justice, deeply rooted in the nature and interest of man, pervades the whole system, and is discoverable in every part of it, even to its minutest ramification in a legal formality, or in the construction of an article in a treaty. Mackintosh, Miscellaneous Works, p. 183.

2. "Hobbes, in whose work we discover the hand of a master, notwithstanding his paradoxes and miserable maxims,—Hobbes was, I believe, the first who gave a distinct, though imperfect, idea of the law of nations. He divides the law of nature into the law of man, and that of states; and that is, according to him, what we call the law of nations. 'The rule,' he adds, 'of each of these laws is precisely the same; but as states are established, assume personal principles, that which is termed the natural law, when we speak of the duties of individuals, is called the law of nations when applied to whole nations or states. This author has well observed, that the law of nations is the law of nature applied to states or nations. But I see, in the course of this work, that I was mistaken in the idea that the law of nature does not suffer any change in that application, and that from which he concluded that the maxims of the law of nature and of the law of nations are precisely the same. Puffendorf declares that he reservedly subscribes to this law as espoused by Hobbes. He has therefore, separately treated of determining a question between litigants? In the absence of any written law, and of any common rule established by custom and recognized by general consent, he asks: What is natural law? and he decides accordingly. So, when, between nations, there is a dispute which neither prior treaty nor established custom has settled, resort must be had to an enquiry into the rights of the parties, and to justice and conscience. The nations must recognize the forum of conscience when deciding questions between nation and nation, just as a judge upon the bench does when adjudicating between man and man. In the absence of there is such a thing as the moral code, or the rule of natural law, to be observed by nations in their relations towards each other.¹

This international morality is to be designated and staked out, not to be more definitely stated than to say that the opinions of publicists of acknowledged standing and recognized authority are generally received as valuable, if not conclusive, as to what is just or unjust among nations.² Their general principles are confidently received. The application of those principles to particular cases, however, must be left to the judgment of arbitrators appointed to settle particular disputes among national publicists have differed as to the nature and effect of the but blended it with the law of nature. Vattel's Law of Nations, preface, p. 10.

Moderns are generally agreed in the appellation of "the law of nature" to that system of right which ought to prevail between nations or sovereign states. It is only in the ideas they entertain of the origin whence that system of the foundations upon which rests. The celebrated Grotius has it to be a system established by the common consent of nations and he thus distinguishes it from the law of nature, "When several nations at different times and in various places maintain the same thing as certain coincidence of sentiment attributed to some general law, in the question before us, it must necessarily be one or the other of these two—either a just law drawn from natural principles of universal consent. The former we call the law of nature, the latter the law of nations." Law of Nations (Chitty), vol. 8, citing De Jure Belli et Pacis, translated by Barbeyrac; Preface, § 41.

Law of Nations.—"The term natural law of nations is a particular science, consisting of those rules of justice which ought to govern the conduct of men, as moral and accountable beings, living in a social state, independently of positive human institutions (or, as is commonly expressed, living in a state of nature), and which may more properly be called the law of God, or the divine law, being the rule of conduct prescribed by Him to His rational creatures, and revealed by the light of reason, or the sacred scriptures." Lawrence's Wheaton's Int. Law, p. 2.

According to Vattel, the law of nations, in its origin, is nothing but the law of nature applied to nations. Lawrence's Wheaton's Int. Law, p. 12.

3. Application of Natural Law.—There certainly exists a natural law of nations, since the obligations of the law of nature are no less binding on states, on men united in political society, than on individuals. But to acquire an exact knowledge of that law, it is not sufficient to know what the law of nature prescribes to the individuals of the human race. The application of a rule to various subjects cannot otherwise be made than in a manner agreeable to the nature of each subject. Hence, it follows, that the natural law of nations is a particular science, consisting law of nations, though generally agreeing substantially on principles.¹ There may have been fallacies in their reasoning but of the frequent use of the terms law and international, each senses different in the same argument.² What ought to be the law of nations is succinctly expressed in the golden rule.³ Considered as human beings aggregated, a nation possesses rights and has obligations resting upon it. It has the right to be in a just and rational application of the law of nature to the affairs and conduct of nations or sovereigns. All treatises, therefore, in which the law of nations is blended and confounded with the ordinary law of nature, are incapable of conveying a distinct idea, or a substantial knowledge of the sacred law of nations. Vattel's Law of Nations (Chitty), preface, p. 7.

1. Grotius considers the law of nations as a positive institution, deriving its authority from the positive consent of all, or the greater part of civilized nations, united in a social compact for this purpose. While Rutherford denies the existence of any such social union among nations, and concludes that what is called the law of nations, when applied to states, is nothing more than what is called natural law when applied to individuals as parts of these collective bodies. Hobbes and Puffendorf also consider the general principles of natural law, and the law of nations, as one and the same thing, and the distinction between them as merely verbal, while others define this law to consist only of the usages, customs and conventions adopted and observed among nations. The definition here given avoids any reference to those questions which have been so much discussed by publicists, and upon which there is very little prospect of a general agreement. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 43, citing Vattel, Droit des Gens, Prelim. § 3; Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 1, ch. 1, § 11; Bentham, Morals and Leg., vol. 2, p. 256; Foelix, Droit Int., tit. Pre., ch. 1, § 1; Polson, Law of Nations, p. 1; Manning, Law of Nations, pp. 2, 57-58, etc.

2. Abuse of Terms.—The expression "International Law" is (MR. JUSTICE STEPHEN argues) inexact, ambiguous and misleading, because it is applied to a variety of rules and principles, some of which are not law, while the remainder are not international. "When it is applied to principles and rules prevailing between independent nations, the word 'law' conveys a false idea, because the principles and rules are not to be not and cannot be enforced by any common superior upon the conduct to which they apply. When it is applied to parts of the law of each nation in which other nations are interested, the word 'law' is misleading, because though such laws are in the fullest sense of the word and are enforced as such, they are laws of each individual nation, not laws between nation and nation. The stipulations of treaties are as an instance of the first class of laws, and the law that ships may be captured for breach of blockade as an example of the second. Lawrence says, p. 28.

3. Golden Rule of Nations.—The general law of natural society is, that every individual should do for others the same thing which their necessities require, and which he can perform without neglecting the duty that he owes to himself: a law which all men must observe in order to live in a manner consonant to their nature and conformable to the views of their common Creator, a law which our own safety, our happiness, our dearest interests, our duty render sacred to every one of us. It is the general obligation that binds us to the observance of our duties. We fulfil them with care, if we wisely endeavor to promote our own advantage. Vattel's Law of Nations (Chitty), preliminaries, ix.

Natural Right.—A nation is an aggregation of individuals, and has no rights of attack and defence that are not in a state of nature would have. It is a part of the law of nature. Whatever is right in the law of nature is such a one could lawfully do. It is never is right in itself, a nation may lawfully do. There being no parliament or tribunal of nations to agree upon rules of right, we may say in general that the true law of nations, as of every individual person, is the law of nature. Certainly both communities and y the territory on which it stands, etc., and it owes to nations all that it may reasonably ask of them for Common or Customary.—International law is that which is upon the usages of nations. Maritime law is an illustration. Commerce has given rise to rules of trade which are generally recognized and observed. Unwritten law, originating in custom and growing into favor among enlightened nations because of convenience and facility which it affords in dealing one with another, is now well established with regard to most of the matters that concern international intercourse.²

A division is called, by JUDGE STORY and others, the “customary law of nations,” embodying the usages which have been found conducive to the interest, convenience and rightful privilege of different peoples in dealing with each other. What the customary law is in a particular country, the habit of nations regarded by christian states as just and equitable, and constituting the basis of the system, is to them. And those states hold even barbarous nations to this system, since there is no other rule when there are are bound to act justly, mercifully and reasonably. Morality is inapplicable upon both. The law of nations is summarily written in the ten commandments.

It is not unjust, unmerciful or unkind for a man or a nation to defend itself when attacked. Both may not be the antagonist's weapons, and both may not be able to strengthen the enemy, but each may defend his life, if necessary. A nation's self-defence, may not only cripple the resources of the enemy, seize his property, destroy them, but may also take the life of the enemy. Waples on Proceedings in 372.

Natural and Necessary Law.—“Nations,” says WOLF, “do not, in their relations to each other, acknowledge any other law than that which nature has established. Perhaps, it may seem superfluous to repeat the law of nations, but it is not from the law of nature. But to entertain this idea have not been fully studied the subject.

Nations, it is true, can only be considered as so many individual persons living together in a state of nature; and, for this reason, we must apply to them the same duties and rights which nature has assigned to men in general, being naturally born free, and equal to each other by no ties but those of justice alone. The law which arises from this application, and the obligation resulting from it, proceed from that immutable law founded on the nature of man; and thus the law of nations certainly belongs to the law of nature; it is, therefore, on account of its origin, called the natural, and by reason of its obligatory force called the necessary law of nations. That law is common to all nations; and if any one of them does not respect it in her actions, she violates the common rights of all the others.” Vattel's Law of Nations (Chitty), preface, p. 11.

2. The principles of natural justice, applied to the conduct of states, considered as moral beings, must therefore constitute the foundation upon which the customs, usages and conventions of civilized and christian nations are erected into a grand and lofty temple. The character and durability of the structure must depend upon the skill of the architect, and the nature of the materials; but the foundation is as broad as the principles of justice, and as immutable as the law of God. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 51, citing Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 1, ch. 1, § 10; Montesquieu, Esprit des Lois, liv. 1, ch. 3; Ward, Hist. Law of Nations, vol. 1, ch. 1; Grotius, De Jur. Bel. ac Pac., lib. 1, ch. 1, § 14; Leibnitz, Juris. Gent., pref.; Manning, Law of all Nations, p. 59; Martens, Precis du Droit des Gens, § 9; Bowyer, Universal Public Law, ch. 5, § 7; Mackintosh, Miscellaneous Works, p. 183.

no compacts to bind them, except the general, natural or law, which is not so well defined.¹

In treating hereafter of the laws of war, and of peace, and commercial intercourse, of offences against nations, and other subjects connected with international intercourse, it will be seen that the common or customary law must govern.² It is proposed to present these topics in order under this particular head, but the legal reader will perceive readily that they are embraced under it where they cannot be classified under the head. It is convenient to treat them, however, under other well established classifications.

c. Conventional international law is that which is established by compacts and treaties. It is not general, like the two foregoing divisions, but is binding only on the parties to compacts on the particular nations which contract a treaty. The term is more "high, contracting parties" which enter into stipulations.

1. "The customary law of nations embodies," says Mr. JUSTICE STORY, "those usages which the continued habit of nations has sanctioned for their mutual interest and convenience." As the law is founded on the tacit or implied consent of nations as deduced from their intercourse with each other, in order to determine whether any particular act is sanctioned or forbidden by this law, we must enquire whether it has been approved or disapproved by civilized nations generally, or at least by the particular nations which are affected in any way by the act. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 48, citing Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 1, ch. 1, § 9; Story, Miscel. Writings, p. 536; Vattel, Droit des Gens, prelim., § 25; Heffter, Droit International, § 5; Bello, Derecho Internacional. No. Prel., § 5; Wildman, International Law, vol. 1, ch. 1; Polson, Law of Nations, § 1; Manning, Law of Nations, pp. 67 et seq.; The Herstelder, 1 Rob. Rep., p. 115.

Voluntary Law.—Wolfins, and his abridger, Vattel, distinguish between particular and general usages, and confine the term customary to the former, and introduce a third division of the positive law of nations, which they call the voluntary law of nations to designate that universal voluntary law of usage or of custom, which has been established and sanctioned by the frequency of its recognition and the numbers who have approved of it. From this subdivision they would exclude all usages which are confined to particular periods or to particular nations and countries. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 49, citing Vattel, Droit des Gens, prelim., § 25, 27; Wolfins, Jus Gentium, proleg., § 25; Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 1, ch. 1, first edition, § 13; Chitty, Comm. Int. Law, pp. 28, 29; Wildman, Int. Law, vol. 1, ch. 1; Wheaton, Hist. Law of Nations, p. 139; Bello, Derecho Internacional. No. Prelim., § 4.

2. Customs which are lawful and innocent are binding upon the nations which have adopted them; but customs which are unjust and illegal, and in violation of natural and divine law, have no binding force. "When a custom is generally established," says Vattel, "either between all the civilized nations of the world or only between the nations of a certain continent, as of Europe, or of America, or between those who have the most frequent intercourse with each other, if that custom is in its nature indifferent, and much more if it is useful and reasonable, it becomes obligatory on all the nations in the world, which are considered as having given their consent to it, and are bound to observe toward each other as they have not expressly declared that their intention of not observing it was. But if that custom contains something unlawful or unjust, it is not obligatory; on the contrary, every nation is bound to relinquish it, and nothing can oblige or authorize a nation to violate the law of nature." Halleck's Int. Law, p. 48, citing Vattel, Elem. Int. Law, p. 48; Wolfins, Jus Gentium, proleg., § 26; Manning, Int. Law, vol. 1, ch. 1; Manning, Law of Nations, pp. 61-73; Fenwick, Lord Grenville, 1 Taunt. Rep.

themselves only.¹ Vattel says that the treaty making is justifiable in forming a confederacy for the purpose of punishing a sovereign who disregards a treaty made, who deserves to be treated as an enemy of the human race. This cannot be true, unless the violator is a party to the treaty; and, therefore, the learned publicist did not design that his remark should be given greater latitude.²

Under a treaty mutually obligatory, there should be free voluntary concurrence of two or more minds (speaking of official persons contracting as though they were natural persons), there should be right and ability to contract, and there should be actual contract.

Nations, competent and willing to treat with each other, are bound to carry out the provisions agreed upon in perfect good faith. The right to treat carries with it the right to abrogate a treaty by mutual consent. But one contracting party cannot do so without violation of its honor and subjecting itself to the possibility of war. Nor can one alone interpret a treaty where misunderstanding arises between the parties. Arbitrators should be appointed to decide any disputed matter. And, if a treaty has a fixed time for fixing a time during which it shall remain in force, one party alone is competent to shorten the period.³

Conventional law of nations rests upon the stipulations of treaties, and upon the rules of conduct agreed upon by the contracting parties. As a treaty binds only the contracting parties, it is evident that the conventional law of nations is not an abstract law, but a particular law. Nevertheless, these agreements are not altered by the intercourse of the contracting parties with each other, and do not affect their intercourse with other nations, and are, moreover, frequently intended to express opinions or establish rules of action, with respect to particular points or questions in the relations; they belong to history, and have an important influence in regulating the general intercourse of nations, and in modifying and determining the principles of international law. The stipulations of treaties between civilized nations form an important branch of the general law of nations. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 48, note 1; Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 1, c. 1, § 9; Vattel, Droit des Gens, § 24; Wolfens, Jus Gentium, § 25; Polson, Law of Nations, § 25; Manning, Law of Nations, pp. 1, 2.

Customs.—Certain maxims and principles have been consecrated by long use, and observed by nations in their mutual intercourse with each other as a kind of conventional law, form the customary law of nations, or the custom of nations. This law is founded on a tacit consent, or, if you please, on a tacit convention of the nations that observe it toward each other. Whence it appears that it is not obligatory except on those nations who have adopted it, and that it is not universal any more than the conventional law. The same remark, therefore, is equally applicable to the customary law, viz. that a minute detail of its particulars does not belong to a systematic treatise on the Law of Nations, but that we must content ourselves with giving a general theory of it; that is to say, the rules which are to be observed in it, as well with a view to its effects as to its substance; and with respect to the latter, those rules will serve to distinguish lawful and innocent customs from those that are unjust and unlawful. Vattel's Law of Nations (Chitty), prelim., lxx.

3. Equality.—Modern International Law, of which Grotius must be considered the father, was, in its origin, an attempt to find a working substitute for the exploded theory of universal supremacy. It obtained rapid and complete success because it pressed into

3. Sources of International Law.—The system of law recognized among nations has been derived from various sources, of which the following may be specified: the writings of publicists; treaties; ordinances governing the taking and adjudication of prizes of war; arbitrations of disputes between nations; and the settlement of questions between influential powers in which distinct principles are formulated and acted upon.¹

The commercial regulations of particular states in time of peace, and the rules adopted for the conduct of war upon the high seas have proved valuable contributions, since they have been generally adopted when found worthy of imitation by other powers.²

New rules are added to the international code from time to time. Principles, once established, have obtained firm footing, and additional regulations have been received generally from nations only after they have been found useful in themselves and in accord with the recognized system.³ Treaties, though binding on its service the generally received doctrine of the existence of a state and a law of nature. It set forth that since states had no common superior they were in the same condition as men before civil governments arose, and, like them, were ruled in their mutual intercourse by natural law. Natural law postulated the equality and independence of those who lived under it, and, therefore, all fully sovereign states were equal and independent. Lawrence's Essays, p. 204.

1. Sources of International Law.—1. Text writers of authority, showing what is the approved usage of nations, or the general opinion respecting their mutual conduct, with the definitions and modifications introduced by general consent.

2. Treaties of peace, alliance, and commerce, declaring, modifying or defining the pre-existing international law.

3. Ordinances of particular states, prescribing rules for the conduct of their commissioned cruisers and prize tribunals.

4. The adjudications of international tribunals, such as boards of arbitration and courts of prize.

5. Another depository of international law is to be found in the written opinions of official jurists, given confidentially to their own governments.

6. The history of the wars, negotiations, treaties of peace, and other transactions relating to the public intercourse of nations, may conclude this enumeration of the sources of international law. Lawrence's Wheaton's International Law, pp. 27-31.

2. Laws of States.—The ordinances and commercial laws of particular states, and the rules prescribed for the conduct of their commissioned cruisers and prize tribunals, may also be referred to for illustrations of the customary law of nations, as understood and practiced by such states. They, however, should be investigated with caution, and are received only as partial admissions of general principles. Nevertheless, some of the most important modifications and improvements of the modern law of nations have originated in the ordinances and commercial regulations, the proclamations and manifestoes of particular states. "These public documents furnish the basis of events," says Phillimore, "decisions of law against any state which afterwards departs from the principles which have thus deliberately invoked; and, in such case, thus clearly recognize the fact that a system of law exists which ought to regulate and control the international relations of every state." Halleck's International Law, p. 57, citing Polson, Laws of Nations, § 3; Phillimore on International Law, vol. 1, § 57; Wheaton, Elements of International Law, pt. 1, ch. 1, § 12; The Santa Clara, Rob. Rep., p. 61.

3. New Rules.—Since 1648, international law has had no rival system to contend with. It has been enriched by many new rules; and some of its ancient precepts have given place to new ones deduced from the changed practices the parties, have contributed much to the general stock of law; for, if many treaties are made between influential states, all embodying the same rule or principle, it is likely to pass into general respect, so that nations, not parties to any of these treaties will come to act upon it, and finally the publicists will set it down as part of international law.¹

Sovereignty—a. Attributes of.—A state is sovereign when it possesses the supreme power of controlling its citizens or subjects, of making war and peace, making and enforcing laws for the whole, and dealing with perfect equality in its intercourse with other sovereign nations of the earth.²

Sovereignty is an indivisible quality. Whether found in one state or in several conjoined; whether in a single state or in a confederated; whether simple or complicated in any particular case, it is always a unit, not susceptible of subdivision. More than one emperor has ruled in unison over a people at one time; many councils, consistories, many persons together, may wield the same authority, but that authority preserves its single character.

In the United States, sixty million inhabitants bear the same sovereign rule, and exercise much of their internal authority through "State" governments, yet is there one sovereignty only, necessarily so.³

times. It has altered some of the process of growth; but the continuity of its life has never been interrupted, and any change that may take place in its principles seems likely to be gradual. In spite of modifications and additions, it stands to-day as in all essentials as Grotius left it. Lawrence's Essays, p. 207.

Compacts.—Express compacts between states, and treaties of peace, and commerce, declaring, modifying, or defining the rules which regulate their mutual intercourse, furnish a fruitful source of international law. Such treaties and conventions are binding force only upon the contracting parties, and they cannot alter the original and pre-existing laws of nations to the disadvantage of those which are not direct parties to the compacts; but where they relax or modify the primitive law in favor of nations, or furnish a more definite practice in matters which have heretofore been subject to conflicting pretensions, the international laws thus introduced are obligatory upon the contracting parties, but constitute a rule to be observed by them toward the rest of the world. And although one or two states, varying from the general usage of nations, cannot alter the pre-existing international law, yet an almost perpetual succession of treaties, establishing a perpetual rule, will go very far toward proving what that law is upon a disputed point. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 60, citing Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 1, ch. 1, § 12; Phillimore on Int. Law, vol. 1, § 52; Polson, Law of Nations, § 3; Wildman, Int. Law, vol. 1, ch. 1; Manning, Law of Nations, p. 74 et seq.; Bello, Derecho Internacional, No. Prel., § 7; Heffter, Droit International, § 8; Masse, Droit Commercial, liv. 1, tit. 2, ch. 2; Ortolan, Diplomatie de la Mer, liv. 1, ch. 5.

2. Supreme Authority.—Sovereignty is that public authority which commands in civil society, and orders and directs what each citizen is to perform to obtain the end of its institution. This authority originally and essentially belonged to the body of the society to which each member submitted, and ceded his natural right of conducting himself in everything as he pleased, according to the dictates of his own understanding and of doing himself justice. Vattel's Law of Nations (Chitty), p. 12.

3. State in the Union.—The term State, as used in the constitution of the United States, differs in meaning from the same term used in international

b. Exercise of Sovereignty.—This is divisible. Recurring to our own country as an illustration, here are millions of sovereigns, but, ex necessitate, the exercise of the power is delegated. It is impossible for each man and woman to exercise directly. The sovereignty is, therefore, delegated. And it has been found convenient to divide the exercise of it between the federal and the State governments. All that concerns the nation has been confided to the former for exercise. So when international law is concerned, we have to do with the federal government only, of the two agents who act for the sovereign people, who, in the aggregate, bear the supreme rule. They exercise many sovereign powers—they hang citizens pursuant to their respective laws—but they exercise no powers of an international character.¹

c. "State" and "Sovereignty."—The terms "state" and "sovereign" are frequently used synonymously. A state may embrace several races under one authority, constituting a single nation.

Sovereignty is divided in its exercise into internal and external sovereignty. The former springs from the constitution of a country: the latter is the general expression of national power and independence towards other nations. The former has no reference to intercourse with other states.²

Sovereign states are deemed equal. Whatever their p law. Texas v. White, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 700.

In the constitution, the word applies to a member of the union; so there can be no such State de jure when out of connection with all the sister States, or when its constitution has been so changed as to render it no longer in harmony with the federal constitution. Scott v. Jones, 5 How. (U. S.) 343, 377; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 1, 18.

1. Federation.—The union of the United States of America by the federal constitution of 1787 is regarded, in international law, as a composite state, or supreme federal government. So, also, of the Republic of Mexico, both as a confederation of states, and as a more central organization under the departmental system. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 71, citing Phillimore on Int. Law, vol. 1, § 118 et seq.; Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 1, ch. 2, §§ 22, 34; Story on the Constitution, b. 3, ch. 3; Martens, Precis du Droit des Gens, § 29; Heffter, Droit International, §§ 21, 22.

The several States of the union possess none of the national powers. McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wh. (U. S.) 316; Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wh. (U. S.) 419; McIlvaine v. Cox, 4 Cr. (U.

S.) 209; Buekner v. Finley, 2 S.) 586; Bank of United States v. Daniel, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 32; Island v. Massachusetts, 12 S.) 657; Dodge v. Woolsey, 1 (U. S.) 336; United States v. 92 U. S. 214; United States v. Shank, 92 U. S. 542; Pennoy v. 95 U. S. 714; Crandall v. N. Y. Wall. (U. S.) 35; In re St. Josephine, 39 N. Y. 19.

2. Internal and External Authority.—Sovereignty is the supreme power which any state is governed. The supreme power may be exercised internally or externally.

Internal sovereignty is that inherent in the people of any state, vested in its ruler, by its municipal constitution or fundamental laws. The object of what has been called internal public law, droit public interne, but which may more properly be termed constitutional law.

External sovereignty consists in the independence of one political body in respect to all other political bodies. The law by which it is regulated, therefore, been called external public law, droit public externe, but more properly be termed international law. Lawrence's Wheaton's Int. L.

influence or power, they are considered equal to each other in respect to their rights. They make treaties as independent contracting parties.¹ It is said that sovereignty may be qualified by treaty stipulations; unequal alliances established, and protected by one nation to another. Hence arises the term, "sovereign states," which some publicists employ. It may be better to say that some states are restricted in the exercise of their sovereignty. Tributary states cannot be said to maintain their sovereignty. There may be a union of states, with one common sovereignty, while they are not tributary. In such case they would constitute but one state, so far as external sovereignty is concerned. Other nations would deal with them as represented by their federal head. Each might exercise internal sovereignty. Distinction must be drawn (as previously remarked) between sovereignty itself and its exercise. The United States of America furnish a good illustration. Each State exercises certain powers of sovereignty, while the federal government exercises the external sovereignty wholly and exclusively; but sovereignty itself is vested in the people.²

It has been written on the subject of State sovereignty that the idea that the State governments themselves are sovereign powers; and, on the other hand, it has frequently been maintained that the sovereignty of the Republic is lodged in the federal government. The better view is, that each citizen is a sovereign; that the entire sovereignty is lodged in the people in aggregate; that the people, through the federal government, exercise the external sovereignty, and also the internal in part; and they, through the State governments, exercise no external sovereignty, but most of the internal.³

Foreign nations have the rights of self defence and preservation. A sovereign state is generally deemed to be any nation or people, whatever may be the form of its internal government, which governs itself independently of foreign powers. Law-son, Wheaton's Int. Law, p. 58, cited; Droit des Gens, liv. i, ch. i, international law does not recognize the State of the American Union as a sovereign. The insurgents during the Civil War "setting aside the previous governments," and "making war on the United States, did not accomplish a separation of those governments from the union. Shortridge v. State, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 58. The acts of the legislatures in aid of rebellion are nullities. Luter v. Hunter, 30 Tex. 888; Canfield v. Hunter, 6 Tex. 166; Thompson v. State, 31 Tex. 166; Head v. State, 43 Ala. 340. Comynolds v. Taylor, 43 Ala. 420, Ray v. Thompson, 43 Ala. 434. Their state governments de facto, however, have been held to be binding on the inhabitants in probate and other matters. Cassell v. Backrack, 42 Miss. 56; Thomas v. Taylor, 42 Miss. 651. See Shepherd v. Reese, 42 Ala. 329; Chisholm v. Coleman, 43 Ala. 204.

3. Organized People, a State.—A state is a body politic, or society of men united together for mutual advantage and safety. Such a society has affairs and interests peculiar to itself, and is capable of deliberation and resolution; it is, therefore, regarded as a kind of moral person, possessing a will and an understanding, and susceptible of rights and obligations. From the nature and design of such a society, it is necessary that there should be established in it a public authority, to order and direct what is to be done by each individual in relation to the end and object of the tion, which they may exercise by resort to war, when other means are inadequate. Each has the right to select its own officers, make its own laws, provided it do not encroach upon the rights of other powers. Equality and independence are among the essential attributes of a state, and they must be respected as belonging to other powers.¹ A state, considered as an artificial person, is held to moral obligations. These spring from natural duty or from conventional stipulations. They are not destroyed by a change of government or by any act of the obligor. Whatever may be the change of policy; whatever the revolution of government occurring in any particular state, other nations consider it as one continuous government, bound by its obligations. They look upon it as a government de facto, troubling themselves little about its de jure character. They will not interfere with domestic affairs, as a general rule. But there are exceptions. Nations may rightly interfere when it has done something threatening their own self-preservation, tending to disturb the equilibrium of nations, or creating such a state of things as to render interference justifiable. In Europe, nations interfere to preserve "balance of power."²

5. International Intercourse.—A sovereign state is usually represented at the courts of other nations, in times of peace, by persons authorized to attend to its interests of a national character. It also keeps agents in the principal ports of other nations to attend to its interests in commercial affairs. The former are said, in technical phrase, to reside "near" governments to which they are accredited. There are several classes of public ministers: ambassadors, envoys, ministers plenipotentiary, resident ministers, and chargés d'affaires. A state to which any of these is sent is not absolutely bound to receive association. This political authority, whether vested in a single individual or in a number of individuals, is properly the sovereignty of the state. This term, however, in international law, is usually employed to express the external rather than the internal character of a nation, with respect to its ability or capacity to govern itself, independently of foreign powers.

A sovereign state may, therefore, be defined to be any nation or people organized into a body politic and exercising the rights of self government. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 63. citing Grotius, De Jur. Bel. ac Pac., lib. 1, ch. 1, § 14; Vattel, Droit des Gens, liv. 1, ch. 1, § 4; Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 1, ch. 2, § 12; Burlamaqui, Droit de la Nat. et des Gens, tome 4, pt. 1, ch. 4; Martens, Precis du Droit des Gens, §§ 16-19; Gardien, De Diplomatie, liv. 1, § 3; Bello, Derecho Internacional, pt. 1, ch. 1, § 1; Droit International, §§ 16-25; Repertoire verb. Souverainete.

1. Equality.—The doctrine that completely sovereign states are equal before the law has scarcely ever been challenged since the days when Grotius made it one of the fundamental principles of his system. It has been admitted that the more powerful a state is, the more influential it will be, but it has been asserted at the same time that superiority in power cannot confer no legal preeminence. The smallest and weakest of independent political communities has, said, exactly the same rights in international law as the strongest and most extensive empire. Lawrence's Int. Law, p. 208.

2. Nations or states are bodies or societies of men united together for the purpose of promoting their ould it refuse, it could hardly expect its own representative accepted at the court of the power thus refused representation. The exchange of legates, though a matter of comity, is so common among the great powers, that a refusal to receive one other than personal grounds would seem to be unfriendly. Long ministers, ambassadors rank as the first class; but of the second may be clothed with powers as important. Distinction between the two, formerly very nice, is now almost entirely obliterated. Ministers resident and chargés d'affaires are accredited to sovereigns, as well as ambassadors, and their functions may be as important. Their relative rank has been much discussed by the older publicists.¹

Letters of credence are furnished to ministers addressed to the sovereign to which they are sent. The minister has an authentic copy. In this letter, his authority to negotiate a treaty, or other especial authorization, may be expressed. Besides this, he usually bears private instructions, written for his own direction and the necessary passport. He presents his letter to the sovereign minister representing the government to which he goes, and is introduced to the authorities with which he has to do, and to the reigning sovereign or the chief officer of the republic, as the case may be.²

Ministers are not generally subject to the jurisdiction of the government to which they are accredited, nor are their families, private and official. Even their dwelling house and personal property are free from the operation of the local law. Under the notion that they still live in their own country, they and their families, and the members of their households, and their servants are held not amenable to either civil or criminal law when and advantage by the joint efforts of their combined strength. . . . of nations is the science which determines the rights subsisting between nations or states, and the obligations consequent to those rights. Vattel's Nations (Chitty), Prelim. 49. The third class are included ministers resident, and special ministers charged with a particular mission, and accredited to sovereigns. Vattel thus distinguishes between a minister resident and one called simply minister, and gives us the origin of the word resident formerly applied to the continuance of the minister's stay, and it is frequent in his time ambassadors in ordinary to be called only residents. But since the establishment of different orders of ministers, the name of resident has been limited to ministers of the third class, and to the character of which general law has annexed a lesser degree of regard. The resident does not represent the prince's person in his dignity, but only in his affairs." . . . "Lastly, a custom still more modern has erected a new kind of ministers, without any particular determination of character. These are called simply ministers, to indicate that they are invested with the general quality of a sovereign's mandates, without any particular determination of character." Halleck's Int. Law, p. 204, citing Vattel, Droit des Gens, liv. 4, ch. 6, §§ 73, 74; Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 3, ch. 1, § 6; Real, Science du Gouvernement, tome 5, p. 49; Horne on Diplomacy, §§ 1, 11, etc.

2. An ambassador is considered as peculiarly representing the honor and dignity of his principal, and, if the representative of a monarchical government, he has been regarded as entitled to the dignity and exact ceremonial of one representing the person of his sovereign. The terms ordinary and extra-representing their country at a foreign court. There are exceptions to, or rather modifications of, the rule of nonresidence.

If the minister is a subject of the country to which he is accredited, he continues to be subject to its laws. So, also, if he is in the employ of that power while he represents another country at its court. So, also, if he voluntarily makes himself a party to a lawsuit. So, also, if he is engaged in a conspiracy against the country to which he is accredited. In the last mentioned case he is so far responsible that his person and papers may be seized and he may be sent out of the country by the injured power on account of violation of its amicable relations with the country to which the unworthy minister belongs.

For criminal offences committed by a minister's domestic attendants offenders should be sent home for trial by the minister himself. He may discharge them from his service, renounce the privilege which appertains to himself rather than to them, and give them up for punishment under the local law of the country. Ministers are not liable to taxation under the law. Their personal and family use are exempt from tariff duties. They, their families, and messengers bearing dispatches to them, are exempt from visitation, seizure and search. As a general rule, they pass through other countries on their way to or from their destination without the usual annoyances to which travellers are subjected. This is a matter of comity rather than international duty. It extends to envoys¹ and chargés d'affaires.²

Ordinary rules are applied to designate the time of their intended residence and employment, whether for an indeterminate period, or only for a particular or extraordinary occasion. In Europe, the right of sending ambassadors is considered as exclusively confined to crowned heads, to the great republics, and to other states entitled to royal honors. Papal legates or nuncios, at Catholic courts, are usually ranked as ambassadors. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 203, citing Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 3, ch. 1, § 6; Vattel, Droit des Gens, liv. 4, ch. 6, §§ 70-79; Martens, Précis du Droit des Gens, liv. 7, ch. 9, § 192; Martens, Guide Diplomatique, §§ 9, 13; Horne on Diplomacy, §§ 1, 9; Phillimore, Int. Law, vol. 2, § 222 et seq., etc.

1. Envoys and other public ministers not invested with the peculiar character which is supposed to be derived from representing generally the dignity of the state or the person of the sovereign, come next in rank to ambassadors. They represent their principal only in respect to the particular business committed to their charge at the court to which they are accredited. They are variously named, as envoys, extraordinary, and ministers plenipotentiary, and internuncios of the Pope. MARTENS says: "A distinction is made between the envoy and the extraordinary, and between the extraordinary and the plenipotentiary. But these distinctions have no importance with regard to precedence." Horne on Int. Law, p. 203, citing Martens, Précis du Droit des Gens, § 195; Rostk, Derecho, Pub. Int., lib. 2, caps. 2; Real, Science du Gouvernement, tome 5, p. 42; Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 3, ch. 1, § 6; Horne on Diplomacy, § 1, § 10; Phillimore on Int. Law, vol. 2, § 219; Martens, Guide Diplomatique, § 8, 14; Hugedorn, Discours sur le Rang, etc., § 7; Garden, De Diplomatie, liv. 5, §§ 3-6.

2. Charges d'affaires, near the rank of the monarchical government in Europe, are not accredited to the sovereign, but to the ministers of foreign affairs. They are divided into two classes, according to the nature of the subject of their appointments, viz., mission may be terminated when its object has been accomplished; when its time has expired; when the minister is recalled by his own government; when he is sent out of the country for reasons by the government to which he was accredited; when his diplomatic rank has been changed; when he has withdrawn himself to represent some indignity, or for any cause; when the sovereign to which he was accredited has died, abdicated, or been deposed; and when war has been declared between his own country and that to which he was accredited.

When the minister is recalled by his government, it is usually by a formal letter sent to him that he may deliver it to the minister of foreign affairs, who thereupon introduces him to the king or emperor, the exponent of sovereignty, that he may take his leave in accordance with international etiquette.

Recall of recall and its attending ceremonies are not usual. There is a misunderstanding between the two governments when the minister is called home on that account.

Treaties.—The mutual consent of two nations to certain conditions agreed upon by their respective representatives, when made and ratified, are subject to no particular form.¹ Some treaties are made by those representatives pursuant to express instructions, others are made under powers implied. Agreements of peace, capitulations, and other matters incident to war, are of the class of the latter. Should an instructed commissioner exceed his powers, the treaty would yet be susceptible of ratification.

A treaty, though duly ratified, may be inoperative because of impracticability; because of a mutual mistake by the contractions ad hoc, who are originally accredited by their government in that capacity, and charges them par interim, who are substituted in the place of the minister of the respective nations during his absence. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 205; Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 3, § 6; Merlin, Répertoire, verb. Int. Public, § 1; Webster, to Am. Minister at Vienna, June 8th, 1803, in Orne on Diplomacy, §§ 1-11; Hall, Précis du Droit des Gens, § 1; Phillimore on Int. Law, vol. 2, p. 10.

Usage.—Usage has not prescribed a necessary form of international agreement. A valid agreement is, therefore, concluded so soon as one party has manifested his intention to do or to refrain from a given act, conditionally upon the acceptance of his declaration of intent by the other party as constituting an engagement, and so soon as the acceptance is clearly indicated. The binding force of contracts, which barely fulfil these requirements, and of those which are couched in solemn form, there is no difference. From the moment that consent on both sides is clearly established, by whatever means it may be shown, a treaty exists, of which the obligatory force is complete. Hall on Int. Law, p. 275, citing De Marten's Précis, § 49; Klüber, § 143; Heffter, § 87; Phillimore II, § 1; Bluntschli, § 422.

2. Requisites.—The antecedent conditions of the validity of a treaty may be stated as follows: The parties to it must be capable of contracting; the agents employed must be duly empowered to contract on their behalf; the parties must be so situated that the consent of both may be regarded as freely given; and the objects of the agreement must be in conformity with law.

All states which are subject to international law are capable of contracting for whatever object they may wish. The possession of full independence is tracting parties; or because of a change of circumstances be the control of either nation of such a character as to render the treaty futile.

Each contracting party is governed by its own municipal law in making a treaty, while both are alike subject to international law. Impediments in the way of one party owing to its municipal regulations, should have effect before the making of a treaty. It is too late afterwards to urge them as a reason for violating it.¹

Once made, a treaty must be considered as a part of the preme law of the land. It must be so considered, though made with one of the weakest nations of the earth. When a treaty has been signed, and its ratification is pending, it must be considered sacred till the respective powers have had time to ratify it. If one nation has already ratified, it cannot violate the terms without disgrace, while the other party has not yet had time to ratify or reject it. The passage of a law in conflict with the treaty at an early stage of the negotiation would be repugnant to the law of nations. The recent action of congress in passing a bill prohibiting Chinese immigration before knowing that China accompanied by full contracting power, but the nature of the bond uniting members of a confederation, or joining protected or subordinate states to a superior, implies either that a part of the power of contract normally belonging to a state has been surrendered, or else that it has never been acquired. All contracts, therefore, are void which are entered into by such states in excess of the power retained by or conceded to them under their existing relations with associated or superior states. Hall on Int. Law, p. 272, citing Bluntschli, § 403; Vattel, liv. 2, ch. 12, § 155; Calvo, § 579.

1. Different Kinds of Treaties.—Treaties are of various kinds. They may define private relations, like commercial treaties, or political relations. They may be temporary or of unlimited duration, and among the latter, some, or some provisions which they contain, may be dissolved by war, and others, intended to regulate intercourse during war, may be perpetual. They may secure co-operation merely, as treaties of alliance, or a closer union, as confederations, or the uniting of two or more states into one. All the intercourse of nations may come under the operation of treaties, and they may reach to the explanation or alteration—as far as the parties are concerned—of international law. Hence the importance of collections of treaties and of the history of diplomatic intercourse.

Besides these leading divisions, treaties may differ from one another in various ways. They may, for instance, be made by the treaty making power in person or by their agents, may be open or secret or with articles of conditions, may be absolute or conditional, may contain promises of performance on one or on both sides, may be absolute or not with a pecuniary payment, may be revocable at the will of either party or irrevocable. They may be principal, accessory, preliminary or definitive. They may be simple, consisting of a single engagement, or contain many engagements. Some are leading, others subordinate. They may contain new provisions, confirm or explain old treaties, or be some of the more important treaties of those of Westphalia and Utrecht, which have been confirmed many times. Woolsey on Int. Law, § 102.

2. Ratification.—Except when a treaty is an international contract is personally concluded by a sovereign or other person exercising the sole treaty making power in a state, or when it is made in a state of the power incidental to an international station, and within the limits of the power, tacit or express ratification is necessary to the supreme treaty making power of the state is necessary to its validity. Hall on Int. Law, p. 276.

upon a pending treaty, cannot be successfully defended.¹ Nations are free to make treaties provided they do not contravene the rules recognized as governing all nations.² They may acquire rights by treaty which they would not have under general rules alone.³ In treating, however, they must observe all the essentials of international contracts.⁴ Nations may combine to enforce the observance of a treaty. Non-parties to the treaty may join in the combination when invited to its observance.⁵

Observance of Treaty.—Treaties, like contracts, are violated when one neglects or refuses to do that promised to the other party to engage in a transaction. It is not every petty breach or delay to fulfil a treaty which authorizes the other party to regard it as broken, and demand reparation. When a treaty is broken by one party, the other can still require its observance. See on Int. Law, § 108.

Commercial Treaties.—Since a nation has a full right to regulate her commercial affairs by what is useful and advantageous to her, she may make commercial treaties as she thinks fit, and no other nation has a right to take offence, providing those treaties do not affect the perfect rights of nations. If, by the engagements contracted with a nation, unnecessarily, or for powerful reasons, renders her incapable of joining in the general alliance which nature recommends to nations, she trespasses against her treaty. But, the nation being the sole sovereign in this case, other nations are bound to respect her national liberty—she is free in her determination, and we cannot suppose that she is actuated by partial reasons. Every commercial treaty, therefore, which does not deprive a nation of the perfect right of others is allowable between nations; nor can the violation of it be lawfully opposed. See Law of Nations (Chitty), p.

nations termed conventional. The treaty that gives the right of commerce is the measure and rule of that right. Vattel's Law of Nations (Chitty), p. 39.

4. Essentials.—Martens says, that in order to make a treaty obligatory, the following five things are necessarily supposed: 1st. That the parties have power to contract. In other words, that the person or authority making the treaty, or ratifying it, had full power for that purpose. 2nd. That they have consented. The form of such consent is entirely unimportant, provided it is fully and clearly declared. 3d. That they have consented freely. The consent must have been a voluntary act of the contracting party. The plea of fear, however, cannot be opposed to the validity of treaties between nation and nation, except, at most, in cases where the injustice of the violence employed is so manifest as not to leave the least doubt. 4th. That the consent is mutual. 5th. That the execution is possible. The last two requisites are too plain to require explanation or comment. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 895, citing Martens, Precis du Droit des Gens, § 48; Vattel, Droit des Gens, liv. 2, ch. 12, § 157 et seq.; Phillimore on Int. Law, vol. 2, § 45; Riquelme, Derecho Pub. Int., lib. 1, tit. 1, ch. 15; Real, Science du Gouvernement, tome 5, ch. 3, § 7.

5. Combinations to Enforce Treaties.

—"As all nations," says Vattel, "are interested in maintaining the faith of treaties, and causing it to be everywhere regarded as sacred and inviolable, so likewise they are justifiable in forming a confederacy for the purpose of repressing him who disregards it. . . . Such a sovereign deserves to be treated as an enemy of the human race."

The foregoing remarks of Vattel, with respect to nations combining together for the punishment of a state which violated its treaty stipulations, Treaties are terminated by war, and all dealings between enemies are unlawful unless justified by necessity.¹

It is now becoming the practice for nations, in making a commercial treaty, to insert an article by which they agree to submit to arbitration any question that may arise under the treaty. This important advance towards the amicable adjustment of differences and disputes tends to an improvement in international law itself. The influence of the great powers may accomplish it, though they may claim that those powers have authority superior to that of other nations. States can hardly be admitted.³

a. Construction of Treaties.—The courts follow the executive department in exposition of treaty stipulations; that is, they allow the interpretation which that department puts upon an international agreement to have great weight when it is not de-are not sustained by later authorities. A plain and indisputable violation of a treaty is, undoubtedly, a violation of the law of nations. While a treaty imposes, on the one hand, a perfect obligation, it produces, on the other, a perfect right. To violate a treaty is, therefore, to violate a perfect right of him with whom it was contracted. Moreover, such violations are injurious to other states who are not parties to the treaty, for, in the words of Vattel, "we can no longer depend on the conventions to be made, if those that are made are not maintained." Nevertheless, they cannot be classed with piracy, or violence to the person of an ambassador. One who openly violates the obligations of a treaty will incur the disgrace of infamy and the reproach of mankind, but, so far as penal consequences are concerned, it is only the injured party who is justified in resorting to open and solemn war for the purpose of inflicting punishment. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 893, citing Vattel, Droit des Gens, liv. 2, ch. 15, §§ 221, 222; Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 4, ch. 4, § 8; Phillimore on Int. Law, vol. 2, § 44; Kent, Com. on Am. Law, vol. 1, p. 181; Riquelme, Derecho Pub. Int., lib. 1, tit. 1, ch. 15; Heffter, Droit International, § 104.

1. The only exceptions to this strict and vigorous rule of international jurisprudence are "contracts of necessity, founded on a state of war, and engendered by its violence." All ransom bills come under this exception, as, also, bills of exchange drawn by a prisoner in the enemy's country for his own subsistence. In the case of a bill of exchange drawn upon England, by a British prisoner in France, for his own subsistence, and endorsed to an alien enemy, the latter was allowed to enforce its return of peace. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 359, citing Kent, Com. on Int. Law, vol. 1, p. 68; Wheaton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 4, ch. 1, § 15; Bynkershoek, Quaest. Jur. Pub., lib. 1, ch. 2, § 1, toine v. Morehead, 6 Taunton R. 237.

2. Arbitration.—Till almost the middle of the last century, arbitral tribunals have been almost entirely unknown. It was not until the latter part of the eighteenth century that the quarrel has broken out and the means of settling it have been sought in vain. But in recent years the practice has arisen of inserting in treaties of commerce clauses by which the contracting parties to refer to arbitration any differences which may arise between them regarding the interpretation of the treaty. This is a step forward, and it is due to the initiative of Signor Mancini, till then Italian minister for foreign affairs. During his tenure of office it fell to him to make or renew many treaties of commerce between Italy and other countries, and in every one of them he succeeded in inserting an arbitration clause. Lawrence's Essays, p. 26.

3. The "Great Powers."—It is clear, then, that the six great powers have by modern international law acquired an authority superior to that of other States, but that the method of enforcing it, and the subject-matter with respect to which it should be exercised, are by no means fully defined. They depend rather upon the will of the powers themselves, and the circumstances of each particular case, than upon any general rules. The law.¹ Should a treaty be inconsistent with local law, that be no argument against it, for it is a part of the supreme legislative enactments must give way to it.² Construing our treaty with Denmark, which gives that all the commercial advantages accorded to the most nations, the supreme court held that, for adequate compensation, our government might yet give another nation better rates than those governing imports from Denmark.³

Neutrality Laws.—It is the duty of a State to preserve amity with other powers; not only to do so in her relations with them as a government, but also by requiring her own citizens to respect the rights of other States. In furtherance of the latter, neutrality laws are enacted by civilized nations fixing a penalty for the violation of neutral duties by subjects.

The duty of neutrality renders all aid, given to one belligerent with another, not only wrongful to the injured party, but a crime against the neutral country to which the wrongdoer is subjected, if the aid be given while he is still under its jurisdiction. Belligerent vessels, in the United States, to cruise against any nation with which we are at peace, renders the vessel culpable by legal process and subjects the personal offender to severe penalties; and actually engaged in "privateering" against such a nation is a crime of offence against our neutrality laws.⁴ To leave this may be said of the means of enforcing obedience to their decisions. There is no definite sanction capable of being laid down beforehand, and sure to be obeyed by any state which sets at naught the law of Europe. But when the powers have come to an agreement, any question, they generally consent to make their decision rest on. Sometimes one or two of the powers engage actual hostilities against the neutral state, as the formal or informal mandates of the others. Sometimes a naval demonstration, or a declaration of war, is sufficient. Sometimes the powers consent to a compromise, and forego a portion of their demand in condition of compliance with the neutral power. We have not yet arranged a formal European Areopagus. See Essays, p. 230.

Construction.—The construction of a treaty by the executive department is binding on the courts when it is not repugnant to the language and purpose of the treaty. Castro v. De Uriarte, 16 N. Y. 93.

A treaty supersedes all local statutes. Kull, 37 Hun (N. Y.)

3. The provision of the "favored nation" clause, in the treaty with Denmark, held not violated by exacting a duty on sugar greater than that exacted on it from the Hawaiian Islands—the treaty with the latter power providing for compensation for the concession. Bartram v. Robinson, 122 U. S. 116.

4. Neutrality Laws.—Vessels are liable to condemnation for being fitted out as privateers to cruise against belligerent powers at peace with the United States, in contravention of the neutrality laws of this country, and American citizens engaged in fitting out such vessels are subject to punishment under those statutes. And for actually engaging in privateering without commission, offending vessels and persons are amenable under those laws. United States v. Guinet, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 321; Talbot v. Janson, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 133; Geyer v. Michel, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 285; Moodie v. The Alfred, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 307; Moodie v. The Phœbe Anne, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 319; U. S. v. Quincy, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 445; The Arrogante Barcelona, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 496; The Irresistible, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 551; La Armistad de Rues, 5 Wheat. (U. S.)

country with a vessel to be employed as a "privateer" against a nation with which the government is at peace, would be a violation of those laws; but a citizen may leave it with intent to enlist in a foreign army, without offending them.¹

Should a privateer be commissioned by one of the belligerents, that fact would not relieve from the penalty of sailing from the country to aid that belligerent against a nation friendly to the other.

8. Embargo Laws.—The laws of nations recognize the right of making contingent seizures, captures or reprisals, which are understood under the term embargo; but the practice is little followed and is unpopular in the United States. When employed by neutrals for the purpose of protecting commercial vessels against the depredations of belligerents, it is known as civil embargo, to distinguish it from hostile. The latter is a species of reprisal by which a vessel is detained in port pending the settlement of some national dispute as a kind of security against a threatened wrong.³

When the United States had established embargo laws, n

385; Swartz v. Ins. Co. of N. A., 3 Wash. (C. C.) 117; Arnold v. Delcob, Bee (U. S. D. C.), 5; Kemball v. Rhineland, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 130; The Gran Para, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 471.

1. It is not a crime under the neutrality act of 1818, to leave this country for the purpose of enlisting in a foreign army. 3 Stat. at L. 447; U. S. v. Kazinski, 2 Sprague (U. S. D. C.), 7; The Santissima Trinidad, 1 Brock. (C. C.) 478.

2. "A capture made by a vessel fitted out and armed in an American port in contravention of the laws of neutrality, and proceeding thence on a cruise, cannot be justified, whether the vessel was with or without a commission." The Santa Maria, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 490; The Fanny, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 659; La Concepcion, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 235.

A vessel commissioned with intent to violate our neutrality laws is confiscable. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5283.

"Most of the statute in which this provision is found appertains to personal prosecutions for the violation of neutrality; and, in such prosecutions the forfeiture of the vessel, etc., may, perhaps, be pronounced as a part of the penalty. But that congress meant that proceedings in rem might be instituted against the vessel appears from the eighth section of the act respecting the seizure of such vessel with her prizes, and the restoration of such prizes 'in the cases in which restoration shall be adjudged.'

"The prizes, so called, illegally captured by offenders, are not prizes in the sense of the law of nations; they are not hostile things with relation to the United States, but are adjudged merely for the purpose of doing justice to their wronged owners by restoring them; a piratis aut latronibus dominium non mutant; while it is clearly a thing guilty when it has contravened the neutrality law, it is not enemy property, unless owned by insurgent enemies.

There has been some judicial interpretation of this act, though requiring any special discussion in connection. The Estrella, 4 S. 298; The Gran Para, 7 (U. S.) 471; The Santa Maria (U. S.) 490; Monte Allegre (U. S.) 520.

The Chapman having been detained within a loyal state, during the rebellion in this country, for the purpose of cruising against the commerce of the United States, under a letter of marque issued by J. Davis, was libeled and condemned on the instance side of the admiralty court, and the seizing officers were denied the motion of the court holding them not entitled to either under the law of prize or acts against piracy." Proceedings in Rem, 4 Sawyer 501; W. Chapman, 4 Sawyer 501; W. Proceedings in Rem, p. 312.

3. An embargo (from the Portuguese, embargar, to detain, the root of which is the same as that of bar, barricade) is, in i necessity would excuse their violation.¹ Vessels were for-or contravention of them, and if a liable vessel escaped the jurisdiction so that she could not be prosecuted in action would lie to recover double her value.² The of such a vessel was confiscable, and a suit for double its also might be instituted in case it should escape by going the territorial jurisdiction of the United States. When prohibited by law was laden at an interdicted port and to this country, there was legal presumption of intent to the statute.³ Where there was not design to export pro-goods, they could be removed from one vessel to another, of our ports, without contravening the embargo laws.⁴ jurisdiction was in admiralty, it was held, even when part cargo (of a vessel and cargo proceeded against) had been upon land.⁵

detention of vessels in a port, they be national or foreign, for the purpose of employing their crews in a naval expedition was formerly practiced, political purposes, or by reprisals. A civil embargo aid for the purpose of national or safety, as for the protection of commercial vessels against the rules of war, which would extend to capture.

A embargo is a kind of reprisal by which vessels within its ports are taken to another nation with which no peace exists, for the purpose of doing justice. If this measure is followed by war, the vessels are to be captured, if by peace, restored.

"Species of reprisal," says Kent is laid down in the books as a measure according to the usage of nations, but it is often reprobated, and not well distinguished from the practice of seizing property found in territory upon the declaration of war.

Woolsey on Int. Law, § 114. Evidence must be clear and of that necessity which will exaltation of the embargo laws. United States v. Cranch, 2. Compare The New York, (U. S.) 59; United States v. 2 Gall. (U. S.) 485.

essel, sailing from one port of the States to another, was obliged, by a justifiable necessity, to put into a port and sell her cargo. Held, was not guilty of a violation of embargo laws. The William Gray, (U. S.) 16. But see the United States v. The James Wells, 3 Day (Conn.) 296.

2. A forfeiture of the vessel, imposed by the embargo laws, cannot be enforced after she has arrived within the jurisdiction of a foreign power; but the United States must then resort to the penalties imposed by those laws, and proceed for double the vessel and cargo, to which it is entitled upon their violation. Parker v. United States, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 361.

3. Where a prohibited cargo is taken in at a prohibited port, and brought into a port of the United States, it will be presumed that the cargo was laden with an intention to import it into the U. S. This presumption may, however, be repelled by evidence. U. S. v. Shearman, 1 Pet. C. Ct. 98.

Where, after a vessel had taken on board a cargo to be carried, the embargo law prevented the vessel from sailing, and the cargo remained on board upwards of a year, when it was sold at the port of shipment. Held, that the owner of the vessel could recover nothing of the shipper, either in the nature of freight or damages. Kelly v. Johnson, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 45.

4. It was no offence against the embargo laws of the United States to take goods out of one vessel and put them into another, in the port of Baltimore, unless it were with an intent to export them. The Juliana, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 327.

5. The Sea Nymph and her cargo were seized for a violation of the non-importation laws, in importing the goods seized into the port of Philadelphia. The vessel and part of her cargo s regulations, however, the presidential licenses were reand facilitated, while other permits were granted by sub-officers presumably under the authority of the presi-supreme court applied the general law of nonintercourse territory of the rebellion in this country.² The earlier course laws subjected both vessels and cargoes to confis-but neutrals were excusable for apparent violations circumstances which they could not control.⁴ The latter similar import.⁵

Trade License.—Commerce, otherwise illegal in war, may be permitted. Licenses for the purpose are usually re-to particular persons, to certain kinds of goods, to the exchanged, and to time and place. There may be, how-general licenses when war has been suspended for a period.
general and special are granted by supreme authority, or presumably acting under it. There is such presumpfavor of licenses issued by a commanding officer, to have

United States v. Weed, 5 Wall.
Butler v. Maples, 9 Wall.
Gay's Gold, 13 Wall. (U.
Maddox v. U. S., 15 Wall. (U.

United States v. Lapene, 17 Wall.
Montgomery v. U. S., 15
S.) 395. In the former case all commercial contracts with its or in the territory of the either made directly by one indirectly through an agent tral, are illegal and void.⁵

Nonintercourse Laws.—Unnonintercourse laws of the ates which existed before the vessels were liable to seizure, and condemnation; and so cargoes. Little v. Barreme, 169; Murray v. The Charm-
2 Cranch 64; Amory v.
14 Johns. (N. Y.) 24; Clark States, 3 Wash. 101; The k, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 59; The ia, 1 Paine 256; United States ags of Coffee, 8 Cranch 398;
ates v. The Mars, 8 Cranch
Richmond, 9 Cranch 102; 10
Rum, 1 Gall. 188; The Rose,
The Mary, 1 Gall. 206; The Gall. 239; The Nancy & Carash. 281; An Open Boat, 5
The Adventure, 1 Brock.
Patriot, 1 Brock. 407; Graves
5 Duv. (Ky.) 108.

neutral vessel without knowlexisting or impending war, to harbor during a storm and there awaiting orders after having been prevented from going out by a mutiny of her crew, did not thereby violate the Nonintercourse act of 1809. (See ante, EMBARGO.) The Fanny, 9 Cranch 181. See The Pitt, 8 Wheat. 371; The Frances and Eliza, 8 Wheat. 398. That act applied to all goods of British manufacture, though imported into a neutral country before the passing of the act.

10 Hogsheads of Rum, 1 Gall. 188; The Rose, 1 Gall. 211; The Mars, 1 Gall.
237. Importation in violation of that act was completed by voluntary arrival with intent to unlade. The Mary, 1 Gall. 206; The Boston, 1 Gall. 239. If British goods are laden with intent to bring them into the United States, that is held to be intent to violate the act.
The Boston, 1 Gall. 239; The Nancy and Caroline, 3 Wash. 281.

5. The nonintercourse laws passed during the rebellion have been construed by the courts in several cases.
The Reform, 3 Wall. 617; The Washita Cotton, 6 Wall. 521; Mc-
Krell v. Metcalf, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 533;
Leathers v. Com. Ins. Co., 2 Bush (Ky.) 296; Mrs. Alexander's Cotton, 2
Wall. 404; United States v. Weed, 5
Wall. 62; The Cotton Plant, 10 Wall.
577; United States v. Steamer Hommeyer, 2 Bond 217; McKee v. U. S., 8 Wall. 163; Gay's Gold, 13 Wall. (U.
S.) 362; Maddox v. U. S., 15 Wall. (U.
S.) 58; United States v. La Pene, 17
Wall. (U. S.) 603; United States v.
Mora, 97 U. S. 415.

effect within his lines, or between him and the force immediately opposing when there is agreement for the purpose with the proper commanding officer. Trade licenses have been granted for the protection of an enemy, and also for that of subjects of a friendly power with an enemy.¹

The license must not only be issued by lawful authority, but when issued by a commanding general without express authorization by the supreme power, it can only be justified by special circumstances, but it must be confined strictly to its proper objects, the person or persons to whom it has been granted.²

A trade license cannot be assigned. The trustworthiness of the person to whom it is granted is taken into consideration in giving the permit; so he cannot transfer it to another person. It might be made negotiable by the grantor, but such is not its proper usage. Goods brought in under a transferred, unnegotiable license are confiscable.³

Vessels are licensed with description of their nationality. If the vessel is designated as neutral, one belonging to the enemy of the power issuing the license could not be used in the enterprise contemplated—certainly an enemy ship could not be employed. It is said that where a license authorizes enemy goods to be brought in, there is an implication that an enemy ship may be used for that purpose.⁴

A ship, licensed to import specified goods is protected in going out for them in ballast; and the converse is true; a ship may safely return in ballast after having delivered her cargo to the enemy's country, under license. Should the vessel so authorized have the privilege in taking out goods when authorized to bring in, or in returning with them when only licensed to take out, both ship and cargo would be liable to condemnation.⁵

Any fraud on the part of the favored trader, such as taking out or bringing in goods different from those licensed, or a greater quantity than that authorized, would subject them to condemnation, and also involve the ship in the same liability.⁶

Violation of license cannot be excused on the plea of necessity or compulsion as a general rule. There must be strict observance of the license.

1. The Hope, 1 Dodson 226; The Charlotte, 1 Dodson 387; The Cosmopolite, 4 Rob. 11; Shiffner v. Gordon, 12 East 296; Vandyke v. Whitmore, 1 East 475; Johnson v. Sutton, Doug. 254.

2. "It is absolutely essential that the will of the grantor shall be observed; that only shall be done which he intended to permit; whatever he did not mean to permit is absolutely interdicted. Hence, the party who uses the license engages not only for fair intentions, but for an accurate interpretation and execution of the grant." 1 Duer on Ins., 598.

3. The Jonge Johannes, 4 The Acteon, 2 Dod. 48; Pearson, 15 East 419; Busk v. East 3; Feise v. Thompson, 122; Morgan v. Oswald, 3 Warin v. Scott, 4 Taunt. 60; Scott, 5 Taunt. 674; Rodgers v. Morris, 5 Taunt. 725.

4. 1 Duer on Ins., 609 et seq.; Leck's Int. Law, p. 682.

5. Id. 683, and cases there cited.

6. 2 Wildman's Int. Law, 11; Jonge Clara, 1 Edw. 371; The Wolforth, 1 Edw. 363; The Cosmopolite, 4 Rob. 11.

of the grant, not only with respect to quantity and quality of goods as specified in the grant, but also with respect to the route indicated and the destination mentioned. To touch an interdictioned port without permission is to forfeit the license subject the ship to the consequences of trading without it.¹

Declaration of War.—There is not now any formal declaration of war notified to the opposite belligerent as a general rule.² Cessation of peaceful relations is ordinarily indicated by the withdrawal of the minister resident at the court of the nation to which war is to be waged. The former practice of announcing war by heralds has grown into disuse. Whether there is a proclamation of war or not, a state of war exists when hostilities have commenced.³ Declaration of war may be optional.⁴

See Catharine Maria, 1 Edw. Europa, 1 Edw. 341; The Deborah, 1 Dod. 160; The 1 Dod. 357; Wainhouse v. 4 Taunt. 178; The Diana, 2

Declaration of War.—It is not necessary to adopt the artificial doctrine of notice must be given to an enemy entering upon war. The doctrine has never so consistently acted to render obedience to it at any obligatory. Since the middle of the century it has had no sensible influence upon practice. In its bare form it is now with little support, compared with that which it formerly received. In the form of an assertion of manifesto must be published, it is feeble as to be meaningless. Int. Law, p. 321.

A state of actual war may exist without having been formally declared by any party, equally in foreign and in domestic conflicts. Prize Causes, 2 Black 635. Declaration of war by congress does not imply authorization to the president to extend the area of the war by States by conquest. Fleming v. 9 How. (U. S.) 603.

Whether war exists is a political question, not one for the courts. Sutherland v. Tiller, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 593. Courts should take cognizance of a state of war. Cuyler v. Ferrill, 1 U. S. 169. They note the close of a proclamation by the political authority. Philips v. Hatch, 1 Dill. 571; v. Mason, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 223; States v. Anderson, 9 Wall. (U.

Beginning of War.—If a declaration of war is no longer necessary, a State which enters into war is still bound (1) to indicate in some way, to the party with whom it has a difficulty, its altered feelings and relations. This is done by sending away its ambassador, by a state of nonintercourse, and the like. (2) It is necessary and usual that its own people should have information of the new state of things, otherwise their persons and property may be exposed to peril. (3) Neutrals have a right to know that a state of war exists, and that early enough to adjust their commercial transactions to the altered state of things, otherwise a great wrong may be done them. Such notice is given in manifestoes. "These pieces," says Vattel, "never fail to contain the justificative reasons, good or bad, for proceeding to the extremity of taking up arms. The least scrupulous sovereign would be thought just, equitable, and a lover of peace; he is sensible that a contrary reputation might be detrimental to him. The manifesto, implying a declaration of war, or the declaration itself, which is published all over the State, contains also the general orders to his subjects relative to their conduct in the war." Woolsey on Int. Law, § 116.

4. Demand, with War Contingent.—

Declarations of war may be either absolute or conditional. Hostilities result at once from the former and the two nations are regarded as belligerents from the date of the declaration. But the demand of the one power upon the other may be accompanied by a notification that hostilities will be commenced unless satisfaction upon some matter specified be obtained immediately, or within a certain limited time. In this case the war dates from the commencement of hostilities. Sometimes,

The fact of war should be certain.¹

When war has become a fact, not only the two contending governments are hostile to each other, but their respective subjects or citizens are deemed to be so. Commerce between contending powers and their allies is suspended.² Not only citizens and subjects of the opposite belligerent power are deemed enemies, but the enemy character is impressed upon all their property. This principle is generally held by the civil law publicists. The rule has been so relaxed in practice that it is not unusual among nations to confiscate property of enemies found on land, though the right exists if the nation waging war chooses to exercise it. So far has the rule been relaxed that some nations hold international law to have been modified in this respect. Certainly it has been so far modified as to render legislation necessary to authorize and direct the courts to take action on these premises. But the general right of a belligerent to cripple an enemy by taking from him the wealth and resources, which however, it is very difficult in such cases to fix the exact point where belligerent rights begin, and when the duties of neutrals, and the obligations of subjects, incident to the new relations of the two states, have commenced. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 355, citing Grotius, De Jur. Bel. ac Pac., lib. 3, ch. 3, § 7; Vattel, Droit des Gens, lib. 3, ch. 4, § 53; Emerigon, Traite des Assurances, ch. 12, §§ 4, 25, etc.

1. War Indicated.—War between independent sovereignties is, and ought to be, an avowed open way of obtaining justice. For every state has a right to know what its relations are towards those with whom it has been on terms of amity,—whether the amity continues or is at an end. It is necessary, therefore, that some act show, in a way not to be mistaken, that a new state of things, a state of war, has begun. Woolsey on Int. Law, § 115.

When a sovereign power prosecutes its rights by force of arms against another sovereign power, public war exists. It exists, whether there has been any proclamation of war or not, though many writers have contended that it does not legally exist unless declared by the sovereign. In this they follow Grotius, who says that the law of nations demands such declaration though the law of nature does not. Emerigon, Vattel and Puffendorff support this position, though Bynkershoek takes the opposite view. Other writers, among them Lord Stowell, following Bynkershoek, take the sensible ground that war may exist, and lawfully exist, without formal declaration by either belligerent.

The existence of war is a fact, and when nations are fighting and warring with each other, it cannot alter that fact. One should show that the conflict has not been previously declared in some form. Waples on Proceedings, Rem, p. 379.

2 Commerce Suspended.—War is an end at once to all dealings and communications with each other. It is equally the doctrine of all the authoritative writers on the law of nations and of the maritime ordinances of the great powers of Europe. It has frequently so decided by the courts of the United States, during the Revolutionary war, and, again, during the Supreme court of the United States during the war of 1812. This renders null and void all contracts with the enemy during the war; it renders illegal the insurance of enemy property, prohibits the drawing of bills of exchange by an alien enemy, and makes a subject of the adverse government the purchase of bills on the enemy's country, or the remission and discount of funds there, and the remission of bills to subjects of the enemy. It prohibits endeavors at trade with the enemy, and the intervention of third persons in partnerships, are equally forbidden. No artifice can legalize any transaction of this character, without the express permission of the government. Int. Law, p. 358, citing Kent, inews of war, if he deems such course advisable, remains . And the property of private citizens, which constitutes health of a nation, is not exempt.¹

ceptions to this rigorous rule have been found in debts due foreign creditors, vessels and cargoes within the enemy country have not had time to leave since the commencement of ilities, public libraries, and other property usually excepted e publicists.

the general doctrine is that all enemy property is confiscable, not justifiable without an expression of legislative will.

Rights of Property in Public War.—The right of a nation in to appropriate to itself property belonging to citizens or cts of the opposite contending power is based upon the fiction that the hostility of the owner is imparted to his erty. Goods are captured, not because they are, by such guilty or offending things, but because they are hostile
s. Possession or control by an enemy is equivalent to ownby him, so far as the right of capture is concerned; for ns at war cannot look nicely into titles and determine them the municipal law of the opposite belligerent. All prop-owned or controlled by an enemy, or by his subjects, is pred to strengthen him, and, therefore, it may be taken by his y weaken him. Aside from modern restrictions of the right, igerent may, at his option, appropriate to himself any prop-of an enemy.²

is right exists in a civil as well as in a public war, and with-nce to property on land or sea; and the right to appropriaw, vol. 1, pp. 66, 68; Wheaton ptures, pp. 220-223; Phillimore Law, vol. 3, § 70; Bynkershoek,

t. Jur. Pub., lib. 1, ch. 3, etc.

Enemies and Enemy Property.—A ly declared, or officially recog-is not merely a contest between governments of the hostile states in olitical character or capacity; on trary, its first effect is to place individual of the one state in hostility to every individual of the other is composed, and these uals retain the legal character of es, in whatever country they may nd. In the next place, all the ty of the one state, and of each citizens, is deemed hostile with t to the opposing belligerent.
important consequences, as to the of persons and property, are de-from these principles. We allude only to the general doc-of the effects of a declaration of Halleck's Int. Law, p. 357, citing ton, Elem. Int. Law, pt. 4, ch. 1, Wattel, Droit des Gens, liv. 3, ch.

5, § 70; The Hoop, 1 Rob. Rep., p. 198;
Manning, Law of Nations, p. 122;
Kent, Com. on Am. Law, vol. 1, p. 55; Phillimore on Int. Law, vol. 3, § 67, etc.

2. "A state, taking up arms in a just cause, has a double right against her enemy: First, a right to obtain possession of her property withheld by the enemy, to which must be added the expenses incurred in the pursuit of that object, the charges of war and the reparation of damages, for, were she obliged to bear those expenses and losses, she would not fully recover her property nor obtain her due. Secondly, she has a right to weaken her enemy, in order to render him incapable of supporting his unjust violence; a right to deprive him of the means of resistance. Hence, as from this source originate all the rights which war gives us over things belonging to the enemy, we have a right to deprive him of his possessions; of everything which may augment his strength and enable him to make war. This every one endeavor ate it in a war against a domestic or foreign enemy alike, is found in its ownership by an enemy.¹ The right is held to be in accord with a state of war.²

b. Enemy Property Seized on Land.—It is not the practice of modern nations to confiscate property belonging to an enemy's subjects or citizens, found upon land. Distinction is made between that and property captured at sea. The right exists in both cases, but there should be legislative authorization for the exercise of the right with regard to land, in view of the modern modifications above mentioned.³ Whether in a domestic war or insurrection this right shall be exercised is a political question, and therefore dependent upon legislative action.

The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that the property of citizens in armed rebellion may be treated precisely like that of public enemies; that civil wars have the same legal character relative to confiscation as wars between nations; that "all persons residing within the hostile territory, whose property may be said to increase the resources of the hostile power, are liable to be treated as enemies, though not foreigners;" and "that it is unconstitutional to treat the property of domestic enemies differently from that of foreign enemies."⁴

That court recognized the right of confiscating enemy property of insurgents, taken on land, as warranted by the law of nations, and held that the legislative expression of will, by statute during the late war, to exercise that right, was in accord with the law of nations.⁵

ours to accomplish in the manner most suitable to him. Whenever we have an opportunity, we seize on the enemy's property and convert it to our own use; and thus . . . in a word, we do ourselves justice." Grotius, De Jure Gentium, lib. 3, ch. 6.

1. McCulloch v. State of Md., 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 413 et seq.; The Santissima Trinidad, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 306; Rose v. Himly, 4 Cranch 272; Brown v. U. S., 8 Cranch 148; The Prize Cases, 2 Black (U. S.) 636; The Andromeda, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 404, CHASE, C. J.; The Venice, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 258, CHASE, C. J.; The Sallie Magee, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 451; SWAYNE, J.; The Hampton, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 375; MILLER, J.; The Ouchita Cotton, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 521; The Cotton Plant, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 577; vide United States v. Weed, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 62; Mrs. Alexander's Cotton, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 404; The Hampton, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 372; Radich v. Hutchins (5 Otto), 95 U. S. 210; Union Insurance Co. v. United States, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 259; The Foundry Cases, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 765; Morris' Cotton, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 507; United States v. Hart, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 501; Semmes v. United States, 91 U. S. 414; Miller v. United States, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 292; Tyler v. Defrees, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 331; Brown v. Kennedy, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 591; The Confiscation Cases, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 116. Contra, Brown v. Forrest, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 339; Miller v. United States, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 292; Day v. Micou, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 291; Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 291.

2. Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dal. (U. S.) 227; Cooper v. Telfair, 4 Dal. (U. S.) 14; The Emulous, 1 Gal. (U. S.) 14; Thompson v. Carr, 5 N. H. 51; Asherton v. Johnston, 2 N. H. 1; Brown v. United States, 8 Cr. 122, 123; McNeill v. Bright, 4 Cr. 282, 304; Gilbert v. Bell, 15 Mass. 1; Smith v. Maryland, 6 Cr. (U. S.) 121.

3. Brown v. U. S., 8 Cranch 121.

4. The Amy Warwick, etc., 2 Wall. (U. S.) 636.

5. The United States Supreme Court said of the Confiscation act of 1862, Stat. at L. 589, that it "was designed to introduce the principle of confiscation of enemy property, seized on land, in that court had, long before, under the lead of CHIEF JUSTICE SHALL, laid down the doctrine that enemy property found on land at the commencement of hostilities might be seized and confiscated under the law of nations, if the legislative power should authorize the exercise of the right; that "the modern law would seem to be that tangible property belonging to an enemy and found in the country at the commencement of the war ought not to be immediately confiscated." Further, it was said: "The constitution of the United States was framed at a time when this rule, introduced by commerce in favor of humanity, was received throughout the civilized world. In expounding that constitution, a construction ought not lightly to be adopted which would give a declaration of war an effect in this country it does not possess elsewhere, and which would fetter the exercise of entire discretion respecting enemy's property, which may enable the government to apply to the enemy the rule which he applies to us. If we look to the constitution itself, we find this general reasoning much strengthened by the words of the instrument. That the declaration of war has only the effect of placing the two nations in a state of hostility, of producing a state of war, and of giving those rights which war confers: but it does not operate, by its own force, any of those results, such as the transfer of property, which are usually produced by ulterior measures of government, is forcibly deducible from the enumeration of powers which accompanies that of declaring war. 'Congress shall have power'—'to declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water.' It would be restraining this clause within narrower limits than the words themselves impart, to say that the power to make rules concerning captures on land and water is to be confined to captures which are exterritorial. If it extends to rules respecting enemy property found within the territory, then we perceive it expressly grant to congress, of the power in question, as an independent, substantive power, not included in that of declaring war."¹

Under this rule, the power to decide whether enemy property found upon land shall be confiscated or not in any war waged by the United States, is a political one, and congress must decide the question in any such war.²

found on water. Applying the construction, however, to the property of a new class of enemies instead of to enemies, it was conceived that the reasoning should be, in its essential features, analogous to those which the courts of admiralty were accustomed to use in property captured at sea." Ware v. Hiltion, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 222, 231; Cross v. Harrison, 16 How. (U. S.) 164, 189, 190.

were expressed by JUDGE STORY in the same case. And were held by CHANCELLOR KENT, 1 Kent, p. 59 et seq. And the doctrine had been previously avowed by the supreme court. Ware v. Hiltion, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 222, 231; Cross v. Harrison, 16 How. (U. S.) 164, 189, 190.

². Williams v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 13 Pet. (U. S.) 420; Garcia v. Lee, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 511; Foster v. Neilson, 2 Pet.

Early during the rebellion, the supreme court held the doctrine most emphatically, and maintained its constitutionality, saying that the war between the United States and its citizens in rebellion gave the government the same rights and powers which it could exercise against the public enemy; that "the right of a belligerent not only to coerce the other by direct force, but to cripple his resources by the seizure and destruction of his property, is a necessary result of a state of war."¹

Later in the rebellion the same doctrine was strongly put.

(U. S.) 307; Taylor v. Morton, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 454; United States v. Palmer, 3 Wh. (U. S.) 610; Scott v. Jones, 5 How. (U. S.) 343; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. (U. S.) 1; Clark v. Braden, 16 How. (U. S.) 635; Fellows v. Blacksmith, 19 How. (U. S.) 366; United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 407; The Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 1; Georgia v. Stanton, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 73; Miss. v. Johnson, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 500; The Protector, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 700; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cr. (U. S.) 166; Jones v. Walker, 2 Paine (U. S.) 688; Wisconsin v. Duluth, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 406; United States v. Baker, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 6; Van Antwerp v. Hulburd, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 426; Grossmayer v. United States, 4 Nott & H. (Ct. of Cl.) 1; The Hornet, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 35.

1. The Amy Warwick, Cranshaw Hiawatha, and Brillante, 2 Black (U. S.) 636, 671. And the court but followed the doctrine previously announced, that the property of citizens in rebellion may be treated as that of public enemies, and the rules of public wars applied to civil wars. Rose v. Himely, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 272; The Santissima Trinidad, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 306; Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 29, 32.

2. "It is certainly enough to warrant the exercise of this belligerent right that the owner be a resident of the enemy's country, no matter what his nationality. The whole doctrine of confiscation is built upon the foundation that it is an instrument of coercion, which, by depriving an enemy of property within reach of his power, whether within his territory or without it, impairs his ability to resist the confiscating government, while at the same time it furnishes to that government means for carrying on the war. Hence any property which the enemy can use, either by actual appropriation or by the exercise of control over its owner, or which the adherents of the enemy have the power of devoting to the enemy's service, is a proper subject of confiscation.

"The question, therefore, is, whether the action of congress was a legitimate exercise of the war power. The constitution confers upon congress express power to declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules respecting captures on land and water. On the exercise of these powers no restrictions are imposed. Of course, the power to declare war involves the power to execute it by all means, and in any manner in which war may be legitimately prosecuted. It therefore includes the right to seize and confiscate all property of any enemy, and to dispose of it at the will of the captor. This is always has been an undoubted belligerent right. If there were any uncertainty respecting the existence of such a right it would be set at rest by the express grant of power to make rules respecting captures on land and

"It is sufficient that the right to confiscate the property of all public enemies is a conceded right. Now it is that right, and why is it allowed? It may be remarked that it has no force whatever to the personal property of the owner of confiscated property. The act of confiscation is not a proceeding against him. The confiscation is not because of crime, but because of the relation of the property to the belligerent—a relation in which it has been brought in consequence of its ownership.

"War existing, the United States is invested with belligerent rights in relation to the sovereign powers prevailing. Congress had then full power to provide for the seizure and confiscation of any property which the enemy or adherents of the enemy could use for the purpose of maintaining the war against the government. It is true that the war was not between two indepen-

the decisions that followed, property either captured or d, belonging to insurrectionists, and being of some one of classes of property designated by statute to be taken, was ed as enemy property, whether belonging to an insurgent n or to a resident alien aiding the rebellion.¹

Notwithstanding the above decided enunciations that the rules of international law should govern enemy persons and property in domestic wars and rebellions, and that such enemy property is designated by statute should be confiscated pursuant to expression of legislative will, the doctrine was not invariably accepted. It was held that an insurgent enemy, without returning to his allegiance, might respond to monition in a proceeding against his property, and have standing to plead in court;² that property in rem condemning enemy property was not final against all the world, including interested nonappearing and deceased persons;³ that the proceedings and judgments were not proceedings, though against property—in rem as the statutes provided—but were criminal proceedings against persons to punish them for crimes.⁴ But these decisions cannot change the established law of nations.

Contracts between persons within the Union lines and those in the confederate lines, during the rebellion, were frequently

s. But because a civil war, the government was not shorn of any of its rights that belong to belligerency. There is never a presumption that inhabitants of an enemy's territory are rebels, even though they are not parts in the war, though they are citizens of neutral states, or even sub-citizens of the government prosecuting the war against the state in which they reside." Miller v. United States, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 308, 313. Semmes v. United States, 1 Otto (91 U. S.) 21. "Properties condemned as enemy to the United States, under the act of congress, become the property of the United States from the date of the decree of condemnation, 12 U. S. 1, § 7. Judgment of forfeiture was rendered in this case on the 5th of May, 1865, and the land in question, from that date, the property of the United States; . . . the title to the land was lost to him [Semmes] when it became vested in the United States." . . . "Beyond doubt, the decree of the district court was correct and correct." . . . "Such proceedings under the confiscation act are justified as an exercise of belligerent rights against a public enemy, and are not, in their nature, a punishment for treason. Consequently, confiscation being a proceeding distinct from, and independent of, the treasonable guilt of the owner of the confiscated property, pardon for treason will not restore rights to property previously condemned and sold in the exercise of belligerent rights, as against a purchaser in good faith for value. Miller v. United States, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 267; Confiscation Cases, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 92; Gay's Gold, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 351." In accord, see Tyler v. De Frees, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 331; Burbank v. Semmes, 99 U. S. 138; The Union Ins. Co. v. United States, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 759. Compare Bigelow v. Forest, 9 Wall. 339; McVeigh v. United States, 11 Wall. 259; Day v. Micon, 18 Wall. 160; Claim of Marquard, 20 Wall. 114; Wallach v. Van Risnick, 2 U. S. 202; French v. Wade, 102 U. S. 132; Pike v. Wasel, 94 U. S. 711; Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 291.

2. McVeigh v. United States, 11 Wall. 259; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274; Gregory v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 284.

3. Bigelow v. Forest, 9 Wall. 339; Day v. Micon, 18 Wall. 160; Wallach v. Van Riswick, 2 U. S. 202; Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 291; French v. Wade, 102 U. S. 132.

4. The cases last cited.

reprobated by the courts as invalid and inoperative, as being in contravention of international law as well as of the nonintercourse laws of the United States.¹

c. Enemy Property in General.—Enemy property belongs to the capturing sovereign.² As against him, others cannot acquire title to it by illicit transactions.³ Contracts good before the war are suspended by it when the contracting parties become mutually enemies.⁴ Then further dealings are inhibited.⁵ This is true in a civil war, though the contracting parties owe allegiance to the same government.⁶ They cannot contract across military lines.⁷

A neutral may subject his property to confiscation by attempting to bring it out of an enemy's country.⁸ He might suc-

1. Contracts between residents of the loyal States and those of that portion of the country which was in rebellion have been frequently held invalid. Nobloin v. Milborne, 21 La. Ann. 641; Nobloin v. Swords, 21 La. Ann. 647; Bank of West Tennessee v. Citizens' Bank, 21 La. Ann. 18; Mansfield v. McLearn, 22 La. Ann. 216; Billgerry v. Branch, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 393; Wright v. Graham, 4 W. Va. 430; Patton v. Gilmer, 42 Ala. 548; Philips v. Hatch, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 571. Exception has been made when the transaction was not voluntary on the part of one of the contracting parties. Hawver v. Seipert, 4 W. Va. 586. The burden of proof rests upon the party trying to enforce the contract to show that its purpose was not hostile. Leak v. Richmond County, 64 N. C. 132. Other exceptional cases: Kershaw v. Kelsey, 100 Mass. 561; Barrell v. Hanrich, 42 Ala. 60; Rau v. Boyle, 5 Bush (Ky.) 253; Ledoux v. Buhler, 21 La. Ann. 130.

2. Effect of War.—Property taken from an enemy, in a war on land, belongs to the sovereign of the captor. Cook v. Howard, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 276.

3. Parties engaged in trade with the rebels during the late war acquired no rights thereby that could be enforced by the courts. Marchand v. Coyle, 18 La. Ann. 632.

4. Contracts are affected by war. A British subject could not recover interest on a debt due him from a subject of the United States during war between them and England, it was repeatedly held. Hoare v. Allen, 2 Dall. 102; Foxcraft v. Nagle, 2 Dall. 132; Brewer v. Hastie, 3 Call. (Va.) 22; Martin v. The Auditor, 4 Rand. (Va.) 264; Bordley v. Eden, 3 Har. & M. (Md.) 167; Dickenson v. Le Gare, 1 Dessau. (S.

Car.) 537; Higginson v. Air, 1 D. (S. Car.) 427; Blake v. Quash, 3 Cord (S. Car.) 340. But the contracts themselves were not cancelled, and a remedy for their collection could be obtained by treaty after the war. St. Brailsford, 3 Dall. 1; Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dall. 199; Dunlap v. Ball, 2 C. 180; Higginson v. Mein, 4 Cranch 180; Conn v. Penn, Pet. C. C. 496; K. Hanson, 4 Call. (Va.) 259; Brevint v. Hastie, 2 Call. (Va.) 22; Beattie v. Munf. (Va.) 254; Commonwealth v. Walker, 1 Hur. & M. (Va.) 144.

5. Dealings with the insurgent persons within the Union lines were frequently reprobated by the courts as unlawful, during the rebellion. Reform, 3 Wall. 617; The Union, 5 Wall. 62; The Gray Jay, 5 Wall. 342; The Hampton, 5 Wall. 630; The Sea Lion, 5 Wall. 630, and other cases decided by the Supreme Court. Also, The Cotton Cases, 5 Wall. 529; Blakely v. United States, 3 Ct. of Cl. 323. Compare Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 291.

6. "A deed executed during the war of 1861-5, within the federal lines by a citizen of the United States, by a person who was within the confederate States and an alien enemy, held, void as a contract between enemies." Fidelity v. United States, 3 Ct. of Cl. 25.

7. "During the late civil war a contract entered into between a person residing within the military lines of the United States and another residing within the military lines of the confederate States was null and void." Hennen v. Gilman, 20 Ann. 240. Compare Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 291.

8. Enemy Property.—It is held that claim it by establishing the friendliness of his character and se, but not if he should claim property partly hostile and friendly.¹ His own neutrality would not avail him if he member of a partnership which is hostile.² Whether a part-a sole trader, he would have the presumption against him he bring property from the enemy's country.³ He could but it if he voluntarily invested his means there after know-the commencement of hostilities.⁴

Debts.—Debts due to an enemy are not usually confiscated e of war. Though the right exists, it is not politic to exer-
; for if one belligerent should do so, the other would rein the same way, and the balance of advantage might be t the party which first began such confiscation. Great a has been foremost in the relaxation of the practice of cating enemy's debts. Owing to her extensive commerce, nceived the relaxation to be beneficial to herself, and she used stipulations to be inserted in treaties made with the s that both should refrain from the exercise of the right.
e great commercial powers have generally followed the ole.⁵

Trade Permits.—Though the subjects of different belliger-may not lawfully trade with each other during war, it is com-merican citizen sends a vessel to my's country to bring out his property, that property is liable to

, as though belonging to the
The Rapid, 8 Cranch 155.
he has his domicile in a foreign , and war arises between the States and that country, his y, shipped before he had knowlthe war, may be captured by an cruiser and condemned as property. The Venus, 8 (U. S.) 253; The Mary and 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 46; The schaft, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 105. mere act of illicit intercourse followed by capture during the
, has been held not to warrant nation. The Thomas Gibbons, ch (U. S.) 421. It would have fferent under the later noninteracts, which authorized seizure as capture.

hen neutral is blended with property, and a claim for both with the fraudulent view of covne latter, both may be condemned er. The St. Nicholas, 1 Wheat.
417. If the neutral constitutes small part of the cargo on an s ship bound for the enemy's y, all the cargo is deemed hostile.
ondon Packet, 5 Wheat. (U. S.)

132. The neutrality of the shipper will not save a cargo otherwise confiscable.
The Ann Green, 1 Gall. 274; The Francis, 1 Gall. 445. Nor will the property of our own citizens, captured in transit to or from the enemy, be treated as anything less than enemy property.
The Rapid, 1 Gall. 295; The St. Lawrence, 1 Gall. 467; The Joseph, 1 Gall.
545.

2. Partnership property in a trading house in the enemy's country is lawful prize, though some of the partners may be neutrals. The St. J. Indiano, 2 Gall.
268.

3. The presumption is that shipment from an enemy's country is hostile.
The Flying Fish, 2 Gall. 374; The London Packet, 1 Mass. 14.

4. It has been held that "by investing his means and participating in the trade of a belligerent nation, a neutral affixes to himself the hostile character of that nation." The Mary Clinton, Blatchf. Prize Cases, 556.

Further, on the right of capture and its effect upon property, see The Sarah Starr, Blatchf. Prize Cases, 69; *Slocum
v. Wheeler*, 1 Ct. 429; The Alexander, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 169; 30 Hogsheads of Sugar v. Boyle, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 196;
The Divina Pastora, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 52.

5. Wheaton's Elements, p. 379.

petent for either of the opposing sovereignties to permit trade by license. This, when done, is usually under limitations. For instance, only certain trustworthy persons are allowed to trade; or only a certain species of trade is permitted; or intercourse is confined to a specified district; or it is limited to certain times. During the great rebellion in this country, certain trade districts were established; the character of the trade in them was prescribed; certain persons were specially authorized; cotton was allowed to be brought within the federal lines under safeguards and restrictions; and a complicated system of trade regulation was prepared by the secretary of the treasury under the authorization of congress.¹

A power which has the right of closing a war and declaring peace may mitigate the rigors of the contest by exercise of license power. Partial intercourse with the enemy, commerce or otherwise, may be deemed expedient, and cautiously granted.

f. Enemy Has No Judicial Standing.—A contract between enemies cannot be enforced in the courts of either country. A suit, the life of a suit, cannot be made upon an enemy defendant who is beyond the military lines within which the plaintiff resides. Notice by publication is not presumed to reach him. Should the defendant really gain knowledge of the existence of a suit against him, he cannot come within the lines to plead. Can he lawfully communicate with an attorney to employ him in the cause. And the principle is well established in international law that an enemy has no standing in the courts of the opposing belligerent. The reason is that it would be repulsive to the principle by which the war itself is justified, to allow an enemy to enter a court which he is fighting to destroy.³ And yet in

1. "Every one is at liberty to renounce his right; a nation, therefore, may lay a restriction on her commerce in favor of another nation, and engage not to traffic in a certain kind of goods, or to forbear trading with such and such a country, etc. And, in departing from such engagements, she acts against the perfect right of the nation with which she has contracted, and the latter has a right to restrain her. The natural liberty of trade is not hurt by treaties of this nature; for that liberty consists only in every nation being unmolested in her right to carry on commerce with those that consent to traffic with her; each one remaining free to embrace or decline a particular branch of commerce, as she shall judge most advantageous to the state." Vattel's Law of Nations (Chitty), p. 146.

2. Trading with the enemy is sufficiently interdicted by international law. Congress, however, has thought proper to express the sovereign intent to apply the principles governing public war to insurrectionary strife at home. However it attains to such dimensions as to call forth the president's proclamation that a state of insurrection exists, it is only to express such intent, but it forbids commercial intercourse between the insurgents and other citizens so long as such condition of hostility continues," and to declare that all property in transitu between the territory occupied by the enemy, and that of the country, and all vessels and vehicles conveying such goods or persons, to or from the rebellious district shall be forfeited. But the president may permit intercourse for certain purposes. Waples on Proceedings in Insurrection, act 13th July, 1861, 12 St. 257; 31st July, 1861, Ib. 284; Rev. 5301; acts July 13th, 1861, 12 St. 257; 2nd July, 1864, 13 St. at L. Rev. St., § 5304.

3. An enemy has no judicial standing in the courts of the opposite belligerent.

on, after an enemy had been refused entry into a court une should first swear allegiance to the government and thus nce his enemy character, he was held, upon an appeal of the entitled to plead.¹ It is believed that though there were decisions than one to this effect, rendered by the highest al of this country—and that, too, after they had held that osition of rebel enemies was precisely that of public enen a war between two belligerent nations—the general rule ernational law on the subject will not be considered as ed by the publicists of the world.²

No Trade with the Enemy's Allies.—The rule that enemies t trade with each other extends to the allies of the respectarties. The property of the latter is liable to capture as precisely like that of the two belligerents. It would rea mutual agreement to relax the rule.

Intercourse Under Truce.—There is a degree of intercourse be-belligerents themselves which is necessary, and, therefore,

For instance, the exchange of prisoners of war has grown almost a necessary practice in modern warfare. Neither is obliged to do this by any positive rule of the law of na-but the practice is both convenient and humane. The nge is effected under a cartel—a special convention between nding powers. Good faith between the parties is a matter tional honor. A breach of it incurs forfeiture of all rights the cartel, and it is frequently retaliated by reprisals.
st dealing among enlightened nations at war with each other emed such a matter of course that officers and private rs are often released upon their own parole to return at call, e purpose of exchange under the cartel.

When Neutral May Recover His Property if Wrongfully Cond as Hostile.—When ships taken by an enemy are recapsalvage compensation is allowed to the captors while the itself is restored to its owner. It is not allowed for the ture of neutral vessels and cargoes, as a general rule. The n is that the neutral owner could have recovered the value s vessel had she been condemned as prize in the courts of ord v. Mumford, 1 Gall. 366; The us, 1 Gall. 563; Johnson v. Goods, e 639; Crawford v. The Wm.

Pet. C. Ct. 106; Wilcox v. Henry, 69; Bell v. Chapman, 10 Johns.
) 183; Jackson v. Decker, 11
(N. Y.) 418; Griswold v. Wadn, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 479, and the ous cases there cited.

Compare Windsor v. McVeigh,
S. 274, with the cases last cited.
l correspondence, intercourse, and ss transactions with enemies are ited by public law. Maclachlan on (2nd ed.) 518; Wheaton, Int. Law, otts v. Bell, 8 Term R. 561; The Rapid, 8 Cr. (U. S.) 155; The Julia, 8

Cr. (U. S.) 193; Jecker v. Montgomery,
18 How. (U. S.) 113; The Bagaley, 5
Wall. (U. S.) 405; United States v.
Huckabee, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 434; Griswold v. Waddington, 16 Johns. (N. Y.)
479; Dean v. Nelson, 10 Wall. (U. S.)
172; Lasere v. Rochereau, 17 Wall. (U.
S.) 439; Woods v. Wildet, 43 N. Y.
168; United States v. Grossmayer, 9
Wall. (U. S.) 75; White v. Bromley, 20
How. (U. S.) 249; The Hoop, 1 Rob.
196; Exposito v. Bowden, 7 Ell. & Bl.
779; 1 Chitty on C. & M., 379; 1 Duer on Ins. 419; 3 Phill. Int. Law, 108. Compare Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 291.

the opposite belligerent; therefore he is not pecuniarily benefited by the restitution.

12. Neutral Nations in War.—Neutral States must be equally impartial between belligerents. They must avoid acts of hostility of every kind. They must hold their territory inviolable, not allowing either belligerent to occupy any part of it for war purposes. They should prevent their own subjects or citizens from violating neutrality, as far as possible, though they are not accountable for every unfriendly act of subjects.

They are not bound to restrain their people from engaging in contraband trade, breaking blockade, resisting search, and the like; for the penalty for such hostile acts falls upon those who perpetrate them, by means of the forfeiture of their property when captured and condemned.¹

A neutral vessel may not invariably be condemned as prize for carrying enemy property, though the goods themselves may be condemned.²

Presumption is against goods found on an enemy's ship; but they will share the fate of the ship unless they are proved to be neutral.³

The flag and pass of an enemy must not be used by a neutral ship. They will create such enemy character for her as to subject her to capture as prize; and she cannot be defended by denying the character which the flag and pass professedly give, thus taking advantage of her own fraud.⁴

If a neutral vessel is chartered to an enemy for his private use, she is confiscable. If the owner permits her to become a carrier of military stores to the enemy, she and her cargo become prize on capture. If she knowingly carries enemy dispatches, she does an unfriendly act and becomes liable. If she engages in commerce, not open to neutrals generally, but entirely in the control of a belligerent, she may acquire the hostile character by thus aiding that power. In other words, "where neutrals are granted a special indulgence, are permitted in time of war to engage

1. 1 Duer on Ins., pp. 531, 749, 754 et seq.; The Sheperdess, 5 Rob. 264; Medeiros v. Hill, 8 Bing. 231; Harrott v. Wives, 9 Barn. & Cress. 712; Naylor v. Taylor, 9 Barn. & Cress. 715.

2. "Whatever may be the true original abstract principle of natural law on this subject, it is undeniable that the constant use and practice of belligerent nations, from the earliest times, have subjected enemy's goods, in neutral vessels, to capture and condemnation as prizes of war. This constant and universal usage has only been interrupted by treaty stipulations, forming a temporary conventional law between the parties to such stipulations. The regulations and practice of certain maritime nations at different periods, not only considered the goods of the enemy, laden in the ships of a neutral, as liable to capture, but have done so, confiscation the neutral vessel of which these goods were on board. The contrary rule now prevails. See Wheaton's Elem. Int. Law, pt. 1, c. 13, § 1.

For discussion whether free goods and enemy ships may be captured, see Halleck's Int. Law, pp. 631-634.

3. 1 Duer on Ins. 534.

4. "If a neutral vessel enjoys the privileges of a foreign character, it must expect, at the same time, to be subject to the inconveniences attending that character." 1 Kent, p. 8.

commerce of the enemy which is purely national, and from which they are excluded in time of peace [such trade] necessarily impresses them with a hostile character."¹

13. The Right of Search.—The belligerent right of search cannot be exercised in time of peace unless authorized by treaty. In time of war, a lawfully commissioned cruiser may visit and search any merchant ship on the high seas without reference to the destination. The exercise of this right is necessary to the practice of maritime captures, the prevention of contraband transportation, and, indeed, to the successful conduct of war. And the exercise implies the right of using lawful force in case of resistance. Neutral vessels have no right to resist. The searching belligerent, however, must not transcend his privilege, but must confine himself to the examination of the vessel and cargo to ascertain her destination, and to learn whether she is about to aid the enemy. There should be no protracted detention of the vessel. Violent resistance of the right of search on the part of a neutral may subject her to confiscation in a prize court. It has been held by eminent writers that even if the neutral vessel is attended by an armed convoy of her own nationality, she and they would yet have no right to resist search. A public vessel—a ship of war—belonging to a neutral, is not liable to be searched on the ocean or elsewhere.

The United States, in treaties with foreign powers, in several instances, have stipulated that—the commander of a convoy stating that the vessel or vessels under his protection have no contraband goods on board—the right of search shall be abandoned. Some publicists contend that the right of search does not exist, under the law of nations, as to neutral merchantmen under armed convoy.

Sailing under an enemy's convoy is good reason for the condemnation of a merchant ship. The cargo, too, has been held confiscable under such circumstances. If the object of taking a convoy is to resist search, that very act has been thought to be hostile, though it would not justify condemnation unless actual resistance should follow.²

1. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 645.

When the United States have recognized war between another state and its colonies they should treat both as belligerents. The Santissima Trinidad, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 283.

"In the existing war with the so-called Confederate States, the rebels are at the same time belligerents and traitors, and subject to the liabilities of each, while the United States sustain the double character of belligerents and sovereign, and have the rights of both, their rights as belligerents being unimpaired by the fact that their enemies owe allegiance." The Amy Warwick, 2 Sprague 123; The Lilla, 2 Sprague 177; Monongahela Ins. Co., 5 Chester 43 Pa. St. 491; Cochran v. Tucker, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 186.

2. Halleck's Int. Law, ch. 25; 2 Wildman's Int. Law, pp. 40, 119; Kluber, Droit des Gens, § 93; Lawrence's Visitation and Search, pp. 4, 61, 181; Wheaton's Elem. Int. Law, pt. 4, ch. 3; 3 Phillimore, Int. Law, § 326, 328; 1 Kent, pp. 153; 1 Duer on Ins. p. 725; 6 Webster's Works, pp. 329, 335-9; Wheaton's Hist. Law of Nations, p. 706; The Anna Maria, 2 Wheat. (U.

It has been held that a neutral may charge and lade a belligerent armed merchant ship with impunity, though he must not participate in such ship's resistance to capture.¹

If, upon search, the necessary papers are not found, or if papers are discovered, or any requisite thing that should be revealed is fraudulently concealed, or contraband goods are found, under circumstances showing that they are destined for the enemy, the vessel is liable to capture.²

14. Blockade.—Blockade must be established by order of the government, and must be made so effective as to prevent commerce, before neutrals are bound to respect it. A mere declaration without the effectual establishment, is called a "paper blockade," and it may be disregarded with impunity. When a blockade is once established, a temporary suspension would not justify

S.) 327; The Antelope, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 66; The Marianna Flora, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 42; The Diana, 1 Dodson 95; The Louis, 2 Dodson 238; The Nereide, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 427; The Eleanor, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 358; The Jenne Eugenie, 2 Mason 439.

"Why was it that navigating under the convoy of a neutral ship of war was deemed a conclusive cause of condemnation? It was because it tended to impede and defeat the belligerent right of search, to render every attempt to exercise this lawful right a contest of violence, to disturb the peace of the world, and to withdraw from the proper forum the determination of such controversies by forcibly preventing the exercise of its jurisdiction." Wheaton's Elem. Int. Law, pt. 4, ch. 3.

"It is a clear maxim of national law that a neutral is bound to perfect impartiality as to all the belligerents. . . . He is bound to submit to the belligerent right of search. . . . If he resists this exercise of lawful right, or if, with a view to resist it, he takes the protection of an armed neutral convoy, he is treated as an enemy, and his property is confiscated. Nor is it at all material whether the resistance be direct or constructive. The resistance of the convoy is the resistance of all the ships associated under the common protection, without any distinction whether the convoy belonged to the same or a foreign neutral sovereign; for upon the principles of natural justice, a neutral is justly chargeable with the acts of the party which he voluntarily adopts, or of which he seeks the shelter and protection." The Nereide, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 438; STORY J. dissenting opinion.

"The resistance of a neutral ship will undoubtedly reach the property of the owner, and it would, I think, be also to the whole property entrusted to his care, and thus fraudulently attempting to be withdrawn from the operation of the rights of war." The Clarendon, 5 Rob. 232, SIR J. SCOTT, J.

1. The Nereide, 9 Cranch 438; The Atlanta, 3 Wheat. 409. Compare The Fanny, 443.

2. "A neutral is bound, not to submit to search, but to have his ship duly furnished with the genuine documents requisite to support her neutral character. The most material documents are the register, passport, sea letter, muster roll, log book, charter party, invoice, and bill of lading. The want of some of these papers is strong presumptive evidence against the ship's neutrality, yet the want of one of them is not absolutely decisive." 1 Kent, p. 157.

"The concealment of papers necessary for the preservation of the neutral character justifies a capture and condemnation into a port for adjudication, though it does not absolutely require a capture." Kent, p. 161. See The Brothers, 1 Rob. 131; The Rising Star, 2 Rob. 104; The Anne Green, 281; The Pizzaro, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 281; The Polly, 2 Rob. 362.

The spoliation of papers, taken from them overboard, and the use of false papers, are considered strong positive facts against a neutral ship. Kingston v. Gilchrist, 7 Cranch 544; The Hunter, 1 Dod. 480; The Ann and Katy, 6 Rob. 192; The Anne, 1 Gall. 275; The Sallie, 1 Gall. 4 neutral in treating it with contempt. His knowledge of the existence of the blockade is presumed by international law.¹

When a blockade is broken by the opposite belligerent, neutrals are no longer bound to regard it. They should not, however, enter the prohibited port while the question of the actual breaking is unsettled. A single breach by the enemy, who successfully runs a blockade, is not such breaking of it as to entitle a neutral to go into and out of the prohibited port.

Intent to violate blockade, if made apparent from the papers found on board of a ship, from the character of the cargo, or from any other source, renders the vessel capturable as prize from the beginning of her voyage. The cargo shares the fate of the ship. Nothing but imperious necessity will justify a neutral in entering a blockaded port without license. She is liable to capture on her return voyage, but not afterwards. The entire cargo becomes good prize upon capture, if only a part of it was put on board with intent to violate blockade, it has been held. When the ship and cargo belong to the same owner, they are condemned together for breach of blockade. By whomsoever owned, they are alike capturable, though there are circumstances under which an innocent owner of a part of a cargo may save it from condemnation. Intent to violate blockade ceases to be cause of condemnation when the blockade is raised before the intent is carried out in practice; also if the intent is abandoned prior to capture.

When a vessel has been captured, she may be condemned as Alexander, 1 Gall. 536; The Betsy, 2 Gall. 384; The St. Nicholas, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 417; The Fortuna, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 245; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Pratt, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 308; The Vrouw Hermina, 1 Rob. 163; The Jonge Tobias, 1 Rob. 329; The Calypso, 2 Rob. 154; The Rosalie and Betty, 2 Rob. 343; The Emuron, 2 Rob. 9; The Carolina, 3 Rob. 75; The Nancy, 3 Rob. 122; The Phoenix, 3 Rob. 186; The Graaff Bernstorff, 3 Rob. 109; The Convenientia, 4 Rob. 201; The Johanna Thaler, 6 Rob. 72; The Mars, 6 Rob. 79.

Searching neutrals in times of peace, or indeed at any time, for the purpose of impressing seamen, is not countenanced by international law. Daniel Webster, secretary of state, wrote to Lord Ashburton: "The American government is prepared to say that the practice of impressing American seamen from American vessels cannot hereafter be allowed to take place. That practice is founded on principles which it does not recognize, and is invariably attended by consequences so unjust, so injurious, and of such formidable magnitude, as cannot be submitted to. . . . In every regularly documented American merchant vessel, the crew who navigate it will find their protection in the flag which is over them." Letter of August 8th, 1842, Webster's Papers, p. 101.

1. It is now a well settled principle of international jurisprudence, that a lawful maritime blockade of a fort requires the actual presence of the blockading force. A mere proclamation or notification of one belligerent that such a port of the other belligerent will be blockaded at such a time, and thus closed to neutral commerce, is not sufficient to constitute a legal blockade; the force must be actually present at the entrance to the port, or sufficiently near to prevent communication. Nor is the mere presence of a hostile force sufficient, of itself, to make the blockade a legal one; it must not only be actually present, but it must be large enough to prevent communication, or, at least, to render it dangerous to attempt to enter the port. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 539, citing Kent, Com. on Am. Law, vol. 1, p. 144; Duer on Ins., vol. 1, pp 647, 648; Grotius, De Jur. Bel. ac Pac., lib. 3, ch.

lawful prize if her papers are false, concealed or destroyed. is also liable if she has resisted search which is lawful in. The right of search in time of peace is not generally conferred by treaty and confined to merchant ships.

Though a port must be actually blockaded to render it unlawful for a neutral to enter it, yet there may be temporary relaxation without an abandonment of the blockade. For instance the blockading squadron may be suddenly scattered by a storm. Neutral vessels have no right to take advantage of such an accident.

When a port is left unguarded by reason of a storm or other unavoidable mishap, it should have its actual blockade resumed as early as possible, always within reasonable time, since neutrals would be entitled to pass in and out should the delay in resumption be such as to create the presumption that the blockade had been raised. It is not altogether settled, however, that neutrals are obliged to respect a temporary suspension for such cause as any other. If the blockade ceases to exist in fact, it is as though it had been only a paper obstruction from the first, and is entitled to no regard.¹

A blockade is de facto when it is established without previous notification. It is public when both established and proclaimed. In case of a violation of the former, the belligerent establishing it must prove the existence of the blockade in order to punish a neutral for a breach; in case of the latter, the rule is otherwise as to the burden of proof. The establishment is presumed if the vessel caught in its violation must prove the contrary, or a relaxation of the investment to keep herself from confiscation at a court of nations.²

Dissolution of Blockade.—If the blockading squadron is driven off by the enemy, the restoration of blockade must be notified by a subsequent notification to neutrals and actual re-establishment.

The withdrawal of the blockading force operates as a dissolution of the blockade. If only a part of it is withdrawn, the effect is practically the same, if there is not sufficient force left to prevent the ingress and egress of vessels. A fickle maintenance of the investment—the presence of an adequate force alternated by its absence—would justify neutrals in disregarding it. So, if there should be places unguarded, through which vessels might easily enter, though the main entrance be well invested, the blockade as a whole would be imperfect, and not entitled to 1, § 5; Manning, Law of Nations, pp. 322, 323; Bynkershoek, Quaest. Jur. Pub. lib. 1, ch. 11.

1. The Betsy, 1 Rob. 92; The Mercurius, 1 Rob. 84; The Columbia, 1 Rob. 154; The Frederick Molke, 1 Rob. 73; The Trihelm, 6 Rob. 65; The Hoffnung,

6 Rob. 116; Radcliff v. U. Ins. Johns. Cases (N. Y.) 38; Laine Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Cases (N. Y.)

2. The Neptunus, 1 Rob. 17; Betsy, 1 Rob. 331; The Vrow J. 2 Rob. 109; 1 Duer on Insur. 649.

general respect. Taking goods through the mouth of a blockaded river, by any means, for the purpose of exportation, is a breach of blockade. Though there may be channels of communication which cannot be wholly guarded, neutral commerce cannot be legally carried on through them without violation of the duties of the neutral nation towards the besieging belligerent.¹

As the object of a blockade is to prevent commerce, it is the duty of a neutral to avoid defeating the object. To convey supplies to a belligerent, in defeat of the primary purpose of the blockade, would be a gross violation of duty. It would be assisting the enemy by giving them that which is contraband of war. Such a breach is deemed hostile, subjecting both vessel and cargo to confiscation.²

a. Notification of Blockade.—Neutrals cannot plead ignorance of a blockade after notification. Notice is given by official communication to the different neutral states, or by public proclamation to the world. The particular ports invested, or to be invested, are specified. Either form of notice must be followed by an actual investment of the ports named. If, without formal notice, neutrals have knowledge of the existence of a blockade, they cannot violate it with impunity. Proof of knowledge must be made by the libellant of the vessel charged with breach, if no notice has been given and the existence of the blockade is not notorious, and the investment itself is ineffectual. If the neutral began the voyage without knowledge, it is yet confiscable for continuing if notified on the way.³

b. Breach of Blockade.—Actual running of a blockade is not essential to its violation. An attempt to do so completes the offence. Sailing with the design is a hostile act, rendering the ship confiscable. Sailing with an innocent purpose, and without knowledge, will not save the vessel from liability to forfeiture if, upon arrival at the invested port, she do not desist from her purpose of entering, upon learning there of the existence of the blockade. Sailing with the intent of making a breach renders her liable upon the high seas from the commencement of her voyage.⁴

Intent to make a breach may be inferred from the vessel's clearance to a blockaded port, the character of her cargo and other circumstances. But these are not conclusive, and the vessels may rebut the presumptions thus created. A vessel clearing from a distant port, though laden with supplies such as the invested enemy may greatly need, is not confiscable because of her

1. Halleck's Int. Law, pp. 544-547, and cases cited.

2. 1 Duer on Insurance, p. 656-658; 1 Kent, p. 147; 3 Phillimore, Int. Law, § 298.

3. 1 Kent, pp. 147-8; The Apollo, 5 Rob. 286; The Rolla, 6 Rob. 368; The Calypso, 2 Rob. 298; Manning's Law of Nations, p. 323; 3 Phillimore, Int. Law, § 302.

4. The Spes and the Irene, 5 Rob. 76; The Shepards, 5 Rob. 262; The Nereid, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 440; Yeaton v. Fry, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 335; Olivera intent to enter a forbidden port, if really ignorant of the fact that a blockade has been established.¹

Hovering about a port to catch a chance of entering in a friendly, and creates presumption of hostility. To enter, even in ballast, is a breach; for the presumption is that a neutral vessel thus entering means to make her egress laden with goods obtained from the enemy. Only physical necessity—that of escape from a storm, for instance—would justify such ingress.

The declaration of a neutral master, seriously made, that he intended to break a blockade, is evidence against the ship of having intended to enter. It would not be conclusive in the face of other evidence to the contrary. If he persist in attempting to carry out his intent after legal warning, the vessel cannot be exonerated on the plea that she innocently set out upon the voyage.

A neutral vessel may innocently enter when she has a license to do so from the blockading belligerent. A general license for trade with the country, issued before the establishment of a blockade, would not be sufficient. And, as before remarked, a vessel may innocently enter when constrained by necessity, such as want of water or provisions, need of repairing a leak, or absolute necessity for repairs, when there are no other means of relief than that of entering the port.

c. Leaving Blockaded Port.—Egress may be innocent in peculiar circumstances, such as being found within the port at the commencement of hostilities; but should the vessel take out her cargo from the enemy's country, the act would be hostile, and the consequence incurred would be liability to forfeiture. A ship which has entered a port of necessity has the right to clear out again in ballast. So, if she has entered under license, her right to return is implied. So also if she has innocently entered through ignorance she ought to be allowed to leave in the same condition in which she entered; that is, with or without a cargo, though she cannot sell what she took in and take out a new cargo. A neutral vessel that goes out when war is expected between her own country and that of the port she leaves, may take a cargo purchased from the enemy during the blockade with full knowledge of the neutral owners, when the investment is necessary to save the property from confiscation by the enemy in case the war should be inaugurated.²

v. Union Ins. Co., 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 196 n.

1. It seems a just inference from the decisions that where the blockade has been constituted simply by the fact of an investment, although its existence was known at the port of departure previous to the sailing of the neutral ship, she may clear out, provisionally, for the blockaded port; but that, in this, as in former cases, the inquiry upon the result of which the right to complete the voyage must depend, must be made at a port of the blockading state, and not at a neutral power. I see no reason to doubt that the prohibition to proceed from the mouth of the blockaded port embraces all cases of a previous knowledge from whatever source the knowledge may have been derived; and that its violations are subject to the same penalty. 1 Duer on Insurance, 669, 670.

2. 1 Duer on Ins., pp. 682-3; Hall, Int. Law, pp. 560-2.

A cargo innocently purchased before the establishment of a blockade, though laden upon a vessel which subsequently becomes confiscable herself for bringing it out, may be free from the penalty of forfeiture. But there must be entire good faith on the part of the owners of the cargo.¹

d. Ships in delicto.—Ships violating blockade are deemed in delicto throughout the voyage. It is essential to their guilt (or hostility, which is the preferable term) that three things should concur: an actual blockade, knowledge of it, and intent to make a breach.²

The existence of a blockade is a fact made known to neutrals by communication or proclamation, as previously stated. The actual existence is when there is a sufficient force to prevent ingress and egress at the port.

A river at its mouth, a roadstead or part of a coast may, like a port, be blockaded. The amount of force necessary to render the investment valid may be fixed by treaty. France and Denmark agreed that it should require two or more vessels, or a battery of cannon, so placed as to make it perilous to a vessel attempting to pass. Holland and the two Sicilies fixed upon six vessels of war nearly within cannon shot of the invested place, or a battery on the coast, commanding the place, as the minimum of the necessary force. Russia agreed with Denmark, as France had done, that two ships, etc., would be sufficient.³

A vessel laden before the establishment of a blockade may be brought out.⁴ The right is the same when a government closes its own ports.⁵ The closing must be effectual, in order to entitle it to respect, whether it be enforced by land or naval forces.⁶ When effectual, it must be treated in good faith by neutrals; they should not subject themselves to the presumption against them arising from suspicious circumstances.⁷ They cannot defend themselves on the plea that the blockade was not effectively established when it has proved sufficient for their own capture.⁸

It should not be considered a suspicious circumstance when a vessel sails near a blockaded port to make proper inquiries or to obtain necessary relief in distress.⁹ She must be in delicto to jus-

1. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 564.

2. 1 Duer on Ins., p. 688.

3. Woolsey's Int. Law, §§ 186-7.

4. A blockade does not deprive a neutral vessel, previously laden, from coming out with her cargo. Olivera v. Union Ins. Co., 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 193.

5. A government may close its own ports. The United States Supreme Court held the right of the government to blockade ports in that portion of the country where the rebellion existed. The Prize Causes, 2 Black (U. S.) 635.

6. Batteries on shore may be used to blockade a port though there should be a naval force to warn friendly vessels, and capture hostile ones. The Circassian, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 135.

7. Intent to violate a blockade may be inferred from circumstances. The Josephine, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 83; The Cornelius, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 213; The Cheshire, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 231; The Admiral, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 603.

8. The capture of a ship attempting to violate blockade tends to prove that the establishment of the blockade was effective. The Hallie Jackson, Blatchf. Prize Cas. 41.

9. A vessel may approach a blocktify her capture.¹ When a blockade has been raised by the nation which established it, or effectively and permanently broken by the opposite belligerent, neutrals may avail themselves of the changed condition.²

15. Communications Between Belligerents.—Warfare between civilized nations is somewhat relieved by a species of communications. They have to deal with each other when exchanging prisoners, when agreeing upon an armistice, when entering into communications to lessen the rigors of war, and when communicating under flags of truce.

a. Armistice.—The contracting belligerents obligate themselves by a truce, though the individual subjects of neither are said to be responsible for the breach of it without previous notice. It is usual, however, to give notice of the period during which hostilities are to cease, and thereafter the subjects of the contracting powers are responsible—each belligerent punishing its own offending subjects.³

A nation, empowered to declare war and to conclude peace, is equally competent to agree with the enemy upon a temporary truce. This power is frequently exercised by the military or naval officer in chief command acting presumably under the sovereign authority. Such a truce binds the contracting enemies to observe it in good faith and national honor. During the truce the parties may act as though permanent peace had been restored. They are not ordinarily prevented by the terms from collecting provisions and munitions of war, nor even from receiving reinforcements and creating fortifications and repairing those under siege. A besieged place cannot be repaired or strengthened during truce, nor can works to attack it be built or improved during that time; nor can supplies or reinforcements be received by either party in violation of the armistice as usually agreed upon.

Hostilities may be renewed at the termination of the truce.

added port to inquire about the blockade. The Forest King, Blatchf. Prize Cases, 45. And she may visit such port when it is necessary in order to obtain supplies for the further prosecution of her voyage. The Argonaut, Blatchf. Prize Cases, 62. Compare The Delta, Blatchf. Prize Cases, 133; The Cheshire, Blatch. Prize Cases, 151; The Empress, Blatch. Prize Cases, 175. If she sails for such port without knowing of the blockade, she cannot be confiscated for attempt to enter; nor if she does so to obtain provisions or water. The Nayade, 1 Newb. Adm. 366. But for approaching and delivering letters and papers to a person from the shore, when aware of the existence of the blockade, a vessel would be liable to capture. The Coosa, 1 Newb. Adm.

1. To render a ship confiscable violating blockade, she must be caught in the act, or while going to or from the invested port. She cannot be captured and condemned for it having made the round voyage. Manski v. Plassan, 20 La. Ann. 90.

2. As a matter of course, the termination of a blockade may be followed by free egress and ingress of vessels. When a government has closed its ports (as during the rebellion) it may open them at will. The Baigou, Wall. (U. S.) 474; The Josephine, Wall. (U. S.) 83; The Alma, 2 Sp. (U. S.) 203.

3. 1 Kent, 160; 3 Phillimore, Int. Law, § 116.

the truce. If no time was specified, notice should be given before a renewal of warfare.¹

b. Capitulation.—When a surrender is made under terms of agreement, it is usually stipulated that the inhabitants of the surrendered place shall be secure, that certain privileges shall be granted to the discomfited troops, etc. The surrendering garrison are often allowed to march out with their arms and colors; officers are allowed to retain their side arms, and the honors of war are accorded. Since these privileges are not matters of right, they must be stated in the terms of the capitulation if the conqueror means to grant them. The commanding officer of each army, or of each naval party, represents his own nation in making the capitulation—that is, the one in command at the place and time. He has no authority to enter into stipulations unknown to the rules and usages of war; nor can he represent his nation in such general matters as the accession of territory.²

c. Passports.—A passport is a written instrument to secure the safe conduct of the bearer. In war, it is given to an alien or even to an enemy, enabling him to travel where otherwise he could not safely go, under the laws of war. It is entirely personal; it cannot be used, without fraud, by one to whom it has not been granted. It may be revoked before the time specified for its termination. An officer in command may grant safeguards for the protection of property and persons within his own lines from disturbance by his own troops.³

d. Cartel.—The ransom or exchange of prisoners is usually effected by an agreement. The respective belligerents mutually protect the agents who, under a flag of truce, carry out the cartel stipulations. Should either belligerent violate the cartel, he would forfeit all his rights thereunder.⁴

When a vessel is employed in effecting such agreement, she bears a flag of truce, and is called a cartel ship. She can bear no arms except a signal gun, nor can she carry any cargo. Both parties are bound to protect her. She may be a merchantman or a ship of war, but she need not be prepared to defend herself against either enemy, since she relies upon the honor of both. She would be liable to condemnation were she to act fraudulently in the interest of either party.⁵

e. Ransom.—In modern civilized warfare, prisoners are not released by the payment of a sum as ransom, as was formerly the case. It is common now to release them on their word of honor not to fight again until they are exchanged, and this is called parole. The term ransom is now mostly applied to property. What is paid for the return of captured property is called ran-

1. Halleck's Int. Law, ch. 27.

2. Vattel, Droit des Gens, liv. 3, ch. 16, §§ 237-8; 3 Phillimore, § 122.

3. 1 Kent 163; 2 Phillimore, Int. Law, pp. 28, 29.

4. La Gloire, 5 Rob. 492; The Mary, 5 Rob. 200; The Carolina, 6 Rob. 336.

5. 3 Phillimore on Int. Law, § 111; The Venus, 4 Rob. 355; The Daifjie, 3 Rob. 141; 1 Duer on Ins. 539.

some money. The practice is almost wholly confined to naval fare.¹

Authority to ransom is included in that to capture. It is usually exercised by a ransom bill guaranteeing the safe conduct of the vessel which is the subject of the contract. The effect of the contract is the suspension of hostilities between the parties with respect to the vessel and the transaction.²

16. Contraband of War.—Commerce of certain kinds is prohibited during war because it interferes with the operations of the contest and prolongs it by aiding the enemy. No nation can engage in prohibited commerce without violation of the law, subjecting the vessel to loss of freight and expenses, and to forfeiture if she is owned by the owner of the prohibited cargo.

When the transportation of contraband goods is prohibited by treaty, and the government of the neutral carrier is a party to the agreement, the ship itself is forfeited for violation of the treaty. So, too, if the ship bearing such goods is found with false papers on board or is attempting otherwise to conceal its destination. Misconduct on the part of the officers of the vessel, showing that they knew of the presence of contraband goods on board; knowledge, on the part of the ship owner, of the presence, etc., may involve the ship. Good faith and ignorance on the part of the ship owner, however, and good conduct of the officers will not save contraband goods from confiscation. And even other articles intermixed with the contraband will share the same fate if belonging to the same owner.³

a. Forfeiture.—Liability to forfeiture for carrying contraband of war owned by the owner of the vessel, begins at the inception of the voyage; and the goods themselves are confiscable at that time, whoever may own the vessel. Liability ends upon the completion of the entire voyage, so that neither the vessel nor the proceeds of the contraband cargo can be disturbed after.⁴

If, however, after the inception of the voyage, the international law takes inhibited goods to an enemy is abandoned before the capture of the vessel, the penalty cannot be inflicted.⁵

1. Maisonnaire v. Keeting, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 337; Story, J.; Miller v. Resolution, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 15. "Other maritime nations [other than England] regard ransoms as binding, and to be classed among the few legitimate commercium belli. They have never been prohibited in this country, and the act of congress of August 2nd, 1813, interdicting the use of British licenses or passes, did not apply to the contract of ransom." 1 Kent 105; Brooks v. Dorr, 2 Mass. 39; Spafford v. Dodge, 14 Mass. 66; Girard v. Ware, 1 Pet. (U. S. C.) 142; The Saratoga, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 164; Goodrich v. Gordon, 15 Jo. (Y.) 6.
2. 1 Kent 105; Wheaton's Elements of Law, pt. 4, ch. 2, § 28; Miller v. Resolution, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 15; The Hoop, 169; Ricard v. Bettenham, 3 Burr. 100; The Joseph, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 100; The Nancy, 3 Rob. 127; The Rob. 158; The Christiansberg, 381; Carrington v. Ins. Co., (U. S.) 521.
3. Halleck's Int. Law, 570-571.
4. The Caledonia, 1 Wheat. 100; The Joseph, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 100; The Nancy, 3 Rob. 127; The Rob. 158; The Christiansberg, 381; Carrington v. Ins. Co., (U. S.) 521.
5. The Trendesostre, 6 Rob. 1; Duer on Ins., pp. 629, 571-2.

Transportation of contraband goods from one enemy's port to another is a hostile act incurring the same penalty as original importation. Transporting them in the interest of the enemy, though not to his country, is illegal.¹

b. Contraband Articles.—Implements and munitions of war, naval stores, and whatever strengthens the enemy, are contraband. Under the last designation may be mentioned marine engines, paddle wheels, cylinders, screw propellers, cranks, boilers, horses, wagons, harness, steam machinery, coal, money, etc.²

All articles used in the manufacture of gunpowder, such as sulphur and saltpetre; all articles much in demand during war, such as pitch, tar, hemp and ship timber, copper in sheets, iron in any form suitable for war purposes or easily susceptible of being converted into such purposes, are especially contraband.³

While these and like articles are always contraband, there are others which are not so in themselves, but become so if destined for the enemy's use—such as wheat, corn, rice, flour, meal, hay, fodder, and, in short, all provisions.⁴

An article may be contraband or not; may indeed be contraband in relation to one enemy and not to another, according to the use to be made of it. Gen. Butler declared slaves to be contraband during the war of the rebellion. Considered as property by the insurrectionists, who used them to further their cause, they were indeed contraband in such sense that they could not have been conveyed from Missouri (for instance), which was within the national lines, to any State within the enemy's lines, without violation of the rules governing contraband of war. On the other hand, persons held in slavery by the insurrectionists while being conveyed to a place where they would have their liberty, could not be considered contraband of war. The term is usually applied to merchandise, and denotes something prohibited by ban. It is supposed to be derived from the Italian word contrabando.⁵

Distinction is made between absolute and conditional contraband of war. Nations often fix by treaty what shall be understood as belonging to the latter. All articles absolutely necessary to the carrying on of war, universally are held to be contraband.⁶

c. Jurisdiction of a Neutral State.—Belligerents have no right

1. The Commercen, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 322.

2. Halleck's Int. Law, pp. 577-582.

3. 3 Phillimore, Int. Law, §§ 229, 251; Wheaton's Elem. Int. Law, pt. 4, ch. 3, § 24; 1 Duer on Ins., p. 636; The Charlotte, 5 Rob. 305; The Staat Embden, 1 Rob. 26; The Apollo, 4 Rob. 158.

4. The Commercen, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 382; The Edward, 4 Rob. 68; The Zel- den Rust, 6 Rob. 93; The Ranger, 6 Rob. 126.

5. Twiss on the Law of Nations, p. 234.

6. "Where the neutral owner knew that his vessel was peculiarly adapted to the purposes of war, and was avowedly going with it to the enemy's country with the intention and expectation of selling it to the enemy to be to interfere with trade within the jurisdiction of a neutral State. There a neutral may sell even firearms to opposing belligerents provided no favor is shown to either party to the injury of the other. Articles thus sold may become contraband when beyond the neutral's jurisdiction, on the high seas, and destined to the country of one of the belligerents. They would then be capturable by the other. It is not the practice of nations to prohibit merchants to purchase and take away goods of such character to be confiscable by a belligerent should he capture them on the high seas.¹

17. Captures on Navigable Waters.—It is enemy ownership which gives hostile property its character. Whatever is under the control of an enemy is deemed to be owned by him without reference to the nice distinctions of title recognized by municipal law. Property used by an enemy for hostile purposes acquires an enemy character. Property takes its status from that of the owner, or by reason of the hostile usages to which it is subjected.²

Whether property captured upon the sea is lawful prize

employed as a vessel of war, LORD STOWELL had no hesitation in condemning the vessel as contraband of war." The Richmond, 5 Ch. Rob. 331. This illustrates "conditional contraband." Further illustration, The Brutus, 5 Ch. Rob. appendix, p. 1.

1. "A neutral nation may indeed bind itself by treaty engagements with a belligerent nation not to allow merchants to purchase within its jurisdiction certain articles, if they are to be carried to the ports of the adverse belligerent; but the observance of such treaty engagements will be inconsistent with neutrality unless the neutral nation should apply the same prohibition equally to all merchants intending to carry such articles to the ports of either belligerent." Twiss on Law of Nations, p. 296.

"The practice of nations received in Europe at the present day permits a commerce in time of war between neutrals and belligerents. It has only subjected it to certain restrictions with regard to the immediate necessities of war, and in respect of places under blockade. It does not forbid neutrals to sell to the subjects of a belligerent power articles which serve immediately to the purposes of war, when the belligerents purchase the articles in the neutral country, and export them themselves." Klüber, Droit des Gens, § 288.

Neutral goods bound to a block port are to be considered as contraband of war, it has been held. Richards v. Maine Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 102. These provisions are contraband if destined for the enemy's military use. Commercen, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 1. Compare N. Y. Fireman Ins. Co. v. De Wolf, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 56.

"The confession of the defendant that he did carry contraband goods on a vessel, and the testimony of the other that the goods carried were contraband by the laws of great Britain were sufficient evidence of the fact that country." Smith v. Elder, 3 (N. Y.) 105.

2. Enemy character may thus be attributed either to persons of neutral nationality and to their property, or to property of neutrals in virtue of its origin and the use to which it is applied.

The chief test of the existence of such an identification of a neutral with an enemy state as will entitle it to clothe him with an enemy character is supplied by the fact of domicile.

For, belligerent purposes a person may be said to be domiciled in a country when he lives there under circumstances which give rise to a reasonable presumption that he intends to make his sole or principal residence there for an unlimited time. Hall on Int. Law, p. 427.

war or not depends upon its character as hostile or friendly.¹

a. Domicil.—Domicil fixes its owner's status as hostile or friendly. This rule is subject to exceptions. A neutral, domiciliated in an enemy's country, is not deemed hostile if he is preparing to remove, and does actually remove within reasonable time. He should be allowed opportunity to gather up his property and take it out of the country. If, while doing so, he engages in new enterprises, as a resident, his character as hostile is thus established. Whether his ships upon the sea retain their neutral character while he is attempting to remove from the enemy country has been a subject of contention.²

Ministers, consuls and other agents representing their governments in a foreign country are not deemed enemies because of their residence there, after war has been declared against it. Should one of them purchase property, however, for the purposes of trade on his private account, after the commencement of hostilities, such property would be immediately clothed with the enemy character. It would be liable to capture upon the high seas.³

b. Traffic.—Enemy character is imputed to property by the traffic of its owner irrespective of his place of residence.⁴ If he trades under the enemy's license; if he leaves his effects with his partners in business who are domiciliated in the enemy's country; if he is a partner in a firm located there though he himself lives in a neutral country, he is deemed an enemy so far as to communicate hostile character to his property there.

c. Property on the Ocean.—Enemy property found upon the high seas is subject to capture and to condemnation in prize courts, under the rules of international law, without any special expression of legislative will by the capturing power. Cargoes

1. As domicil is acquired for private purposes of business or pleasure, and the consequences to a man of its possession by him flow, not from an attitude of hostility on his part, but from the accidental circumstance that his conduct is of advantage to a belligerent, he is not tied down to the domicil in which he is found at the beginning of war. So soon as he actually removes elsewhere, or takes steps to effect a removal in good faith and without intention to return, he severs his connection with the belligerent country. He thus recovers his friendly character, and with it recovers also the rights of a friend. Hall on Int. Law, p. 430.

2. Wilson v. Marryatt, 8 Term 31; The Venus, 8 Cr. (U. S.) 288; Bentzon v. Bogle, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 191; The Anne Greene, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 284; The Dos Hermanos, 2 Wheat. 76; The Nereide, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 388; The Diana, 5 Rob. 60; The Harmony, 2 Rob. 322; Mc-

Connell v. Hector, 3 Bos. & Pull. 114; The Bernon, 1 Rob. 103; Elbers v. Ins. Co., 16 Johns (N. Y.) 128; The Ann, 1 Dod 221; The Venus, 8 Cr. 279; La Virginie, 5 Rob. 98; The Joseph, 1 Gal. (U. S.) 545; The St. Lawrence, 1 Gal. (U. S.) 467.

3. The Indian Chief, 3 Rob. 27; The Josephine, 4 Rob. 25; The Dree Gebroeders, 4 Rob. 232; 1 Kent's Com. 44; 1 Wheat. Int. Law, 282; Albrecht v. Sussinan, 2 Ves. & Beames, 323; Arnold v. United Ins. Co., 1 Johns. Cases (N. Y.) 363.

4. A vessel engaged in unlawful trade with the enemy is liable to capture and condemnation at any time during the voyage in which the offence is committed, but not after the voyage is completed. If, however, the voyage is continuous and entire, although consisting of separable parts, she is liable to capture while any portion of it remains to be performed, even where the in transit from a neutral to a belligerent country, or from the latter to the former, are capturable if they belong to an enemy or if they are to be his upon their arrival. But if they are shipped from an enemy country to a neutral one, pursuant to a contract of sale made prior to the commencement of hostilities, they belong to the neutral consignee as soon as they are delivered to the master of the ship, and are therefore exempt from capture. If, however, any right of property is left in the hands of the consignor, the rule is otherwise. During the transit, no communication between such consignor and consignee can affect the character of the cargo. The rule is: "Once hostile, always hostile to the end of the voyage." Even though the owner should cease to be an enemy, he cannot immediately change the character which has been impressed upon his property while it is on the sea.¹

It cannot be changed by sale to a neutral, if there is a reservation of right to resume ownership at the close of the war, or if the enemy retains a lien upon the things sold. This is the rule with respect to the sale of ships and other vessels.²

d. Hostile Flag and Pass.—A ship becomes hostile so soon as she hoists the enemy's flag. The rule is the same if she sails under his pass. The cargo does not necessarily take character from the flag.³

part in which the offence was committed has been completed. This point has been fully discussed and decided in the supreme court of the United States. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 505, citing Wildman, Int. Law, vol. 2, pp. 20, 23; Duer on Insurance, vol. 1, pp. 570, 571; The Joseph, 8 Cranch (U. S.), pp. 454, 455.

1. Transfer in transitu being legitimate in time of peace, transfers effected up to the actual outbreak of war are prima facie valid: where, however, it appears from the circumstances of the case that the vendor has sold, to the knowledge of the purchaser, in contemplation of war, the contract is invalidated, notwithstanding that the purchaser may have been in no way influenced in buying by a wish to assist the vendor. The transaction is held to be in principle the same as a transfer in transitu effected during the progress of war.

"The nature of both contracts," says LORD STOWELL, "is identically the same, being equally to protect the property from capture during war, not indeed in either case from capture at the present moment, but from the danger of capture when it is likely to occur. The object is the same in both instances, to afford a guarantee against the same crisis. In other words, the goods are done for the purpose of eluding belligerent right, either present or expected. Both contracts are made with the same animo fraudandi, and are in my opinion justly subject to the same rule." Hall on Int. Law, p. 100, citing The Jan Frederick, 5 Rob. 137.

2. Sale by an Enemy to a Neutral.—The sale of a ship by an enemy to a neutral is null by public law, unless there be a stipulation that the contract shall be revoked at the close of hostilities, or if the vendor retain a lien upon the vessel for the price; and also, where the enemy vendor retains control of the vessel. Waples on Proceedings in Rem, p. 396, citing The Noydt G. 2 Rob. 137; The Sechs Geschw. 4 Rob. 100; The Vigilantia, 1 Rob. 16; The Embden, 1 Rob. 16; The Jan Frederick, 5 Rob. 137.

3. Change of Flag.—A ship which is previously neutral becomes immediately hostile the moment she hoists the enemy's flag, or sails under his flag. And the general rule is that the goods, laden in time of peace, follow the fate of the vessel.

The cargo, however, does not necessarily change character with the vessel when she dons the enemy's flag. Goods, laden in time of peace, Cargo.—Goods laden before the commencement of war, belonging to an innocent owner, are not affected, unless put on board in contemplation of approaching hostilities, and of their conveyance under such flag.

Goods may have the enemy character impressed upon them by the nature of the commerce in which they are employed. If they are produced in a hostile country, they are there subject to the enemy, and assume the character of the country. They may be captured in transit during war, though shipped before the commencement of hostilities.¹

Neutral Ship Liable.—A neutral's vessel, loaned to a belligerent, may be captured while used by the latter. A ship is lawful subject of prize when found with military enemies on board as passengers, but not for conveying enemy civilians from one neutral port to another without hostile intent. Knowingly conveying public despatches of a belligerent renders a neutral ship capturable, though she would not be liable for innocently conveying a passenger with such despatches in his pocket.² out contemplation of war, do not become hostile by reason of the breaking out of war, though the ship does if her owner thus becomes a belligerent by his nationality; provided, however, the neutral character of the owner of the goods has not been changed. Of course the goods, under such a flag, would be confiscable, if laden in view of approaching hostilities, and with knowledge that the enemy's flag was to be raised over them.

Simulated papers are evidence of the hostile character of a cargo, nominally neutral, though it be laden before the declaration of hostilities, in case the vessel bearing it should become hostile by such declaration. Waples on Proceedings in Rem, 397, citing The San Jose Indiano, 2 Gal. (U S) 285; The Princessa, 2 Rob. 49; The Susa, 2 Rob. 256; The Anna Catharina, The Vigilantia, 1 Rob. 13; The Vrow Elizabeth, 5 Rob. 5; Sleight v. Rhineland, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 531; Barker v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 321; The Ann, 1 Dod. 221; The Success, 1 Dod. 132.

1 Any attempt by a subject to import goods from the enemy's country without the license of his own government is a violation of duty on his part, and involves his property so employed in the penalty of confiscation. It is not necessary that these goods should be the fruits of any purchase, barter, contract or negotiation in the enemy's country after hostilities had commenced. The sailing of the vessel with the goods on board after the party had a knowledge of the war, completes the offence, stamps the cargo with an illegal character, and subjects it, during its transportation, to a rightful seizure. The propriety of strictly adhering to this rule is vindicated by JUDGE STORY, with his usual ability, in the case of The Rapid, where the question is fully discussed. Halleck's Int. Law, p. 499, citing Duer on Insurance, vol. 1, pp. 556-559; The Lady Jane, cited 1 Rob. Rep. 202; The William, cited 1 Rob. Rep. 214; The Juffrow Louisa Margaretha, cited 1 Rob. Rep. 202; The St Phillip, cited 8 Term Rep. 556. etc.

2. Use of a Neutral Vessel by an Enemy. If the owner, nominally neutral, of a vessel allows a belligerent to use her, both she and he are deemed of hostile character in case she be captured while in such use. He cannot be heard to defend her, not even upon the plea of duress. Conveyance of military belligerents, even without knowledge of their character, by the master of a vessel has been held to render her lawful prize, though she and her owner had been previously neutral. The rule does not extend to the conveyance of enemies not military, as mere passengers from neutral port to neutral port, without knowledge of their character and without design to aid the enemy.

The conveyance of public dispatches of a belligerent, by the master of a

e. Sailing Under Cartel.—Ships conveying prisoners of war, for exchange, or engaged in any other service, under cartel, are not capturable as prize, either on the direct or the return voyage, so long as they are true to their trust.¹

Right to Capture.—The right to take prizes is one of the rights of national law; and cannot be created by statute. Nations may make what they term prize laws, but they are merely regulative provisions. Methods of capture must be according to international usage, but methods of distributing prizes after condemnation may well be determined by statute. Any particular government may restrict some of its international rights by statute, but cannot enlarge those rights.²

In this country we have statutes, directory and regulative, for judicial proceedings in prize cases, taking testimony, admission, distribution, appeal, etc. Naval captures on land and in waters not navigable have been thus regulated.³

f. Neutral Ships Having Knowledge of the War.—With respect to a nominally neutral ship, with knowledge on his part, renders both ship and cargo confiscable; but a passenger on board might be the bearer of such official communications without involving such consequences. Waples on Proceedings in Rem, p. 398, citing The Phoenix, 5 Rob. 20; The Vrow Anna Catharina, 5 Rob. 167; Bentzon v. Boyle, 9 Cr. (U. S.) 191; The Carolina, 4 Rob. 256; The Orozembo, 6 Rob. 430; The Friendship, 6 Rob. 420.

The circumstances of the capture of Slidell and Mason, and the correspondence thereon, may be referred to as an illustration, though Captain Wilkes did not capture the neutral ship with them.

The Atlanta, 6 Rob. 440; The Caroline, Id. 461.

1. Ships under cartel are exempt from capture, since, otherwise, prisoners could not be conveyed by sea from one enemy's country to another for exchange. And the exemption continues with the cartel on the return voyage. Should a cartel ship violate her trust by engaging in trade, she would at once become confiscable. Waples on Proceedings in Rem, p. 405, citing The Daifgie, 3 Rob. 139; La Gloria, 5 Rob. 192; The Mary, 5 Rob. 200; The Venus, 4 Rob. 355; The Carolina, 6 Rob. 336.

2. There cannot be the slightest doubt that for a century past the views of statesmen and jurists, both on the continent of Europe and in America, have been pronounced, with increasing emphasis, in favor of the prohibition of the capture of private property at sea, unless such property happens to be contraband of war or engaged in an attempt to break blockade. The one ship treaty with Prussia, negotiated by Franklin in 1785, the rejected motion of the French Assembly in 1793, the isolated judgments of one or two writers of no great distinction, have been the springs of a mighty current of opinion, which has shown its force in modern times by the prohibition of captures in the Seven Weeks' War, 1866, the treaty of 1871 between the United States and Italy, the repeated decision of the Institute of International Law, and the almost unanimous voice of the great continental jurists. In 1856, the new Declaration of Paris, had not the opposition of Great Britain caused the rejection of the American proposition in 1823. Having agreed to give up for ever the right of capturing enemy goods under a neutral flag, our statesmen declined to go further along the concession to commerce. The inevitable result of their action was on the part of the United States the declaration. But, though unwilling to pledge themselves, they regarded as a dangerous measure, they have not given up their traditional policy of endeavoring to secure exemption from capture of property at sea; and in this the sympathy and support of the great continental states of Europe and the doubtful exception of England. Lawrence's Essays, p. 279.

3. We have an example of a directory and regulative one in the Prize Act of 1864; of a directory, regulative edge that hostilities have been declared or actually exist, a neutral vessel cannot set out upon a commercial voyage to one of the belligerent countries.¹ Though licensed by one belligerent, she may be captured by the other.² She would be involved with hostile cargo if attempting to save it fraudulently.³ Cleared from one neutral port to another, she and her cargo would be confiscable if the clearance to the neutral port was done in fraud while the real destination was the port of the enemy.⁴ Such action would render her enemy property.⁵

Congress applied the rules, applicable to foreign enemies and their property, to domestic enemies during the rebellion.⁶

g. Recapture.—Recapture from an enemy is governed by different laws in different countries. The rule of reciprocity as to the restitution of the property of friendly nations, recaptured from an enemy, prevails among the most enlightened nations. The rule in this country is that vessels and cargoes belonging to residents of the United States which have been taken by an enemy and recaptured before condemnation as prize, shall be restored to their owners. One-eighth of the value must be paid to naval captors when the recapture is by them; or one-half, if the vessel was armed; one-sixth if she was unarmed and was the property of the government, and was recaptured by private vessel; one-twelfth if she belonged to the government, was unarmed, and was recaptured by a naval ship, etc.⁷

strictive one, in the confiscation sections of the Confiscation act of 1862. The legislative power, in furthering the prosecution of war, whether public or civil, need not direct the capture of naval prizes (since that usage generally prevails among nations), but it is always found necessary to enact regulations for governing the exercise of the right. That power should, however, direct the capture or seizure, for confiscation purposes, of hostile private property found on land, if such is the sovereign will, since such confiscations are contrary to modern usage among nations. And if less than all hostile property found on land is meant to be condemned, the statute must be restrictive, so as to limit the seizures and confiscations to such property as the sovereign will has elected to take. In all cases, it is found necessary that the statute should be regulative of the proceedings. Waples on Proceedings in Rem, p. 407.

1. A vessel was held to be good prize of war, captured while bringing a cargo of enemy goods from a belligerent's country, to which she had sailed after knowledge of the war. The St. Lawrence, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 434.

2. A ship sailing with an enemy's license is confiscable. The Ariadne, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 143; The Hiram, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 440.

3. The ship of a neutral owner is confiscable if he has lent his name fraudulently to save the cargo. The Fortuna, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 236.

4. Trade with the enemy's country during war renders ship and cargo confiscable, though a neutral port be the ostensible destination, and fraudulently made to give neutral color to the voyage. Jecker v. Montgomery, 18 How. (U. S.) 110.

5. Property ostensibly neutral, if seized while it is being used to violate neutral duties, is quasi-enemy property and therefore confiscable. Maissonnaire v. Keating, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 339.

Bearing despatches to the enemy renders the ship confiscable. The Tulip, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 181.

6. The act of congress authorizing the seizure and confiscation of vessels belonging to the citizens of states in insurrection is "within the legislative competency of congress." The act of July 13th, 1861; The Ned, Blatchf. Prize Cases 119.

7. Wheat. Elem. Int. Law, p. 443.

18. Prize—Captures of by Public Vessels.—It is the duty of ships of war to make captures. When more than one take a prize, capture is said to be joint. All ships of war of the same bell, and within sight at the time of the capture, are deemed joint captors. Prior or subsequent service will not entitle the ship rendering it to a share in the prize, since it has no effect upon the actual capture.

A capturing fleet is considered a single body, and the members of it entitled to their share of the prize money. But vessels constituting a fleet, though temporarily associated, do not necessarily all share in a prize; only those actually or constructively making the capture are thus entitled. Even a vessel belonging to the fleet but temporarily detached at the time of the capture would lose her interest therein. But any material aid given entitles a ship to recompense in prize money. Though one ship may be in the rear while other ships are chasing an enemy vessel and finally capturing her, they are considered as supporting the forward ships, and entitled to share in the prize. Ships and allies are joint captors.¹

Captures made by boats and tenders are presumably made for the ships to which they belong. Captures made by non-commissioned vessels called privateers, entitle such vessels to be considered as the principals, though public ships may have assisted as joint captors.²

a. Bringing Prizes in.—The captor must bring his prize into port and surrender it to the jurisdiction of the proper court without delay. Nothing but necessity would justify the selling the prize elsewhere and the submission of the proceeds to the adjudication of the court. Some of the officers of the capturing vessel, or it may be some of the crew, or even passengers found on board, also all the papers of the captured vessel, and, of course, the cargo, are brought in, under charge of a prize master, and delivered to the executive officer of the court, who, in this country, is the United States marshal of the district in which the port is situated. The persons brought in are to be used as witnesses responding to the interrogatories in preparatorio, and their papers are to be examined as evidence. The respective rights of captors and joint captors; of all vessels and persons entitled to share in the prize, are passed upon in the court. The statutes of each country regulate the terms of the distribution.

The captors acquire no right of property in the ships and

1. 3 Phillimore on Int. Law, §§ 399, 401; 2 Wildman on Int. Law, 330-9; Talbot v. Three Brigs, 1 Dal. (U. S.) 95; The Galen, 2 Dod. 19; The Santa Brigada, 3 Rob. 52; La Flore, 5 Rob. 238; The Drei Gebroeders, 5 Rob. 339; L'Amitie, 6 Rob. 261; The Jan Frederic, 5 Rob. 120; The Robert, 3 Rob. 194; The Lord Middleton, 4 Rob.

153; The Spankler, 1 Dod. 35; Neimen, 1 Dod. 9; The Union, 1 Dod. 346; The Rattlesnake, 2 Dod. 33; The Financier, 1 Dod. 61; The Heron, 2 Dod. 96; The William T. Edw. 6.

2. 2 Wildman's Int. Law, 33; Halleck's Int. Law, 737-740, and there cited.

goes they take. That right vests in their government—the sovereign. What they get—usually a moiety—is bestowed upon them by their government. And every sailor entitled to prize money receives it as an extra reward for services—not as property interest—acquired in the prize by the capture. All right to prize money claimed by any captors, from the commander of a squadron to a common sailor, is liable to forfeiture for improper acts connected with the capture and the conduct of the vessel to the court for adjudication. Whenever there is forfeiture, the amount forfeited goes to the government.¹

The prize master, after delivering his ship, cargo, documents and prisoners to the court, should make oath that the papers are as he found them, or he should explain any changes in them. Bulk must not be broken between capture and delivery.²

b. Prize Adjudications.—Vessels and cargoes captured at sea are tried in admiralty courts on the prize side. Such courts sit as international tribunals when trying prizes. They have jurisdiction over the property captured anywhere on navigable waters and brought within their respective districts. The testimony upon which they pass judgment is preserved so that any nation may afterwards review it, so that if injustice has been done to any power or its subjects, the matter may form a subject of negotiation and arbitration. Such courts, therefore, while sitting to try prizes, are properly called courts of nations, though they are wholly created and constituted by their own country.

c. Jurisdiction.—A prize may not be taken into any country for adjudication; the country of the captor has exclusive jurisdiction. One reason of this is that that country is responsible to other nations if the prize be unlawfully condemned. Another reason is that that country is interested in the prize as well as the captors, who are subjects thereof; and only in that country should distribution be made between the various claimants for prize money.

There are exceptions to the rule that the prize must be adjudicated in the country of the captor. If the capture is made within the bounds of a neutral state, or by a vessel fitted out there, the prize may be adjudicated there. This is to enable it to vindicate its neutrality by refusal to condemn, and by an order of restoration of the prize to the rightful owner, if the capture was unlawful. A neutral state not interfering in a war, and standing impartial between belligerents, should take cognizance of captures

1. The Arabella and Madeira, 1 Gall. Montgomery, 13 How. (U. S.) 516.
 (U. S.) 368; The Susannah, 6 Rob. 48;
The Falcon, 6 Rob. 194; L'Ecole, 6
 Rob. 220; La Dame Cecile, 6 Rob 257;
The Pœnona, 1 Dod. 25; The George,
 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 408; The George, 2
 Wheat. (U. S.) 278; The Bothnea, 2
 Wheat. (U. S.) 169; The Experiment, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 261; Jecker v.
 2. Wilcox v. Union Ins. Co., 2 Binn.
 (Pa.) 574; The St. Lawrence, 2 Gall.
 (U. S.) 19; The Brutus, 2 Gall. (U. S.)
 526; Bingham v. Cabot, 3 Dall. (U. S.)
 19; Kean v. Brig Gloucester, 2 Dall.
 (U. S.) 36; Hill v. Ross, 3 Dall. (U. S.)
 331; Penhallow v. Doane, 3 Dall. (U. S.)
 54; The Louis, 5 Rob. 146.

made within its territory, and decide upon prizes without favoring either party, thus maintaining its own neutral character.¹

The judicial power extends to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction in the United States by constitutional provision. The state courts have no jurisdiction in prize. This constitutional power cannot be delegated to a court in another country, nor can our federal courts sit beyond our national territory. Condemnation of a prize in a neutral port, when the capture was not made in the country of the court, would not be entitled to respect. This is a generally received doctrine. No belligerent can confer power upon a prize court sitting in a neutral country to decide upon the ownership of vessels captured within the belligerent's territory.²

Territory under military occupation by a belligerent is temporarily a part of his country, and captures made within it may be adjudicated in prize courts in his own country. The enemy cannot object to this, and neutral nations have the opportunity of reviewing the testimony as in other international courts.³

The jurisdiction of a prize court sitting in a belligerent country is over property brought into court after capture in war on the high seas, in foreign harbors, and on foreign land, by the navy of the belligerent power. It also embraces captures made on navigable waters of his own country, and also to prizes and embargoes made in war or in prospect of it. Surrenders to naval forces are subject to this jurisdiction. All maritime captures and incidental matters involving pecuniary questions growing out of naval warfare come within the jurisdiction.⁴

d. Prizes in Court.—Prize property must be in court to give jurisdiction. The statutes of a country may lawfully prescribe which of its national courts shall have authority; and it is up to them to do so. The proceeding is in rem, and, therefore, the presence of the property is essential to the jurisdiction. Constructive presence gives jurisdiction when an intangible interest is proceeded against. If a prize, under pressure of necessity, is carried into a neutral port and sold, the proceeds must be actually brought into a court of the captor's country and deposited in its registry for adjudication. The exceptions to the general rules sometimes stated by writers, and even in decisions, are both rare and doubtful.⁵

1. L'Invincible, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 238; The Estrella, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 298; La Amistad de Rues, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 385; The Santissima Trinidad, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 284; La Concepcion, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 235; Talbot v. Jansen, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 133; The Brig Alert and Cargo v. Blas Moran, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 359.

2. The Betsy, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 6; The Flad Oyen, 1 Rob. 136; The Heinrich and Maria, 4 Rob. 45.

3. Jecker v. Montgomery, 13 L. (U. S.) 515; Cross v. Harrison, 16 L. (U. S.) 165.

4. 1 Kent 35; The Two Friends, Rob. 237; The Peacock, 4 Rob. 198; The Emulous, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 563.

5. Hudson v. Guestier, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 293; Williams v. Arrmold, 7 Cr. (U. S.) 523; The Arabella and Mac, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 368; The Falcon, 6 Rob. 198; La Dame Cecile, 6 Rob. 21; Phillimore on Int. Law, § 361-5;

The prize being in custody, the court may order its sale before adjudication, if it is necessary, to prevent deterioration, to change a perishable commodity, or a sinking ship, into imperishable cash to be adjudicated upon in its stead. And it may sell a condemned prize though an appeal from its judgment be pending.¹

e. Monition.—Since the judgment is in rem, and it is to conclude all the world, general notice must be given to all by published monition, so that all interested persons, except enemies, may appear and claim.²

The reason an enemy cannot respond to monition addressed to all the world is found in the impracticability of permitting him to appear, and in the manifest inconsistency and absurdity of allowing him to come and ask justice of a tribunal which he is fighting to destroy. He can neither appear personally nor by proctor.

What then is the object of the monition? It is to invite persons not enemies to appear and claim their interest. It is not usual in prize causes to allow mere lien holders to make claim, but any country may grant that right to them. A neutral may appear and claim ownership and deny the hostile character of the vessel captured as the property of an enemy.

f. Bonding Prizes.—After an appeal from the decree of restitution; after the preparatory testimony has proved insufficient for condemnation, and the captors have been permitted to offer further proof; and when the claimant shows that the property is of peculiar value to him beyond what it would bring in market overt, and in no other cases, he may be allowed to give bond and take possession of the property. Under any of the three circumstances stated, the court may allow him to take possession by depositing the sum at which the prize has been appraised.³

Sale.—The sale is by the marshal, through the prize auctioneer, after due publication. The statutes allow the war or navy de-ning's Law of Nations, p. 382; 1 Kent, 103, 358.

1. The Nereide, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 171; The Concord, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 387; The Maria, 4 Rob. 348; The Rendsberg, 6 Rob. 142; Smart v. Wolff, 3 Durn. & East. 323.

2. 3 Phillimore on Int. Law, § 470 et seq.; 2 Wildman on Int. Law, 378; The Betsy, 1 Rob. 93; The Mentor, 1 Rob. 181; The Conqueror, 2 Rob. 303; The Der Mohr, 3 Rob. 129; The George, 3 Rob. 212; The Huldah, 3 Rob. 239; The William, 4 Rob. 215; The Susanna, 6 Rob. 48; The Adeline, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 244.

3. Bonding.—Claimants cannot bond prizes, except in the following cases:

1. Where there has been a decree of restitution and the captors have appealed.

2. Where the court, after a full hearing on the preparatory proofs, has refused to condemn the property, and has given the captors leave to take further proof.

3. Where the claimant satisfies the court that the property has a peculiar and intrinsic value to him, independent of its market value.

In any one of these three cases the court may, in its discretion, allow the claimant to take the property, on stipulation, deposit, or other security, if satisfied that the interests of others will not be prejudiced. The amount of deposit or stipulation is the appraised value of the property; and the nearest assistant treasurer is the proper custodian of such deposits. Waples on Proceedings in Rem, p. 412.

partment to have the prize turned over to it upon deposit of its value.¹

g. Naval Captures on Land.—Enemy property captured on land, or upon waters not navigable, by one of our naval vessels is not maritime prize. If it is enemy property, and belongs to any class which statutes of the United States have declared subject to seizure and capture, it may be liable to condemnation; but its capture by a naval vessel on land or on navigable waters would not render it naval prize under the prize legislation of Congress.²

h. Prize Statutes.—The right to take prizes is under the law of nations; it cannot be originally created by the statute of one nation. Prize statutes are directory of the method of condemnation and distribution in matters not established by a general system of international rule. They may be restrictive since a state, at its option, may exercise less than its full right.

The prize legislation now in force in the United States, in consonance with international law, regulates capture, judicial proceedings, judgment, execution, distribution, and other subordinate matters.³

It is required that prizes be taken under the authority of the United States or subsequently adopted by that authority. The adoption, actual or presumptive, retroacts to the capture, rendering it valid ab initio. The direction for conveying the prize to the court does not materially modify the method heretofore described, the usual one under international law. The court must be the one most conveniently reached from the place of capture. The captor may be instructed to take it to some other place. The secretary of the navy has power to instruct (and it is his duty to do so) when the prize itself cannot be brought in, and is subsequently sold and appraised; that is, when the interests of the captor, or of the government, require it to be passed upon in some court. Actual delivery of the prize to the court not being possible by reason of its condition, it may be sold and the proceeds brought in and regularly accounted for.⁴

1. Provisions Relative to Sale and Distribution—Sale of prizes, pendente lite, shall be made:

1. When found liable to deteriorate, perish, or depreciate in value.

2. When the costs of keeping are found disproportionate to the value; and, may be made,

When all the parties in interest who have appeared in the cause agree thereto, after the return day on the libel.

After condemnation, prizes must be sold, simply because the statute so requires, unless accepted by one of the departments at the appraised value. The war or navy department may retain a condemned prize, but the act requires the deposit of the value that the moiety may be due to the captors. Appeal does not prevent sale. The prize auctioneer must sell, under the direction of the court. Waples on Pro. in Rem.

2. Mrs. Alexander's Cotton (U. S.) 404; The Andromeda (U. S.) 481; The Florida, 101

3. U. S. Rev. St., §§ 4613-4614, constituting title, liv. 54, which is wholly made up from the Prize Act of June 30th, 1864, 13 St. at L. 31. The title applies to naval prizes—naval captures. The latter are governed by other provisions.

4. See the Naval act, July 17,

i. Testimony in Preparatorio.—When a prize is captured, some of the captured officers are kept on board the vessel and brought in with her to the court for examination. They are required to answer prepared questions—a long list of them. These interrogatories are the same in all prize cases in this country, and the fate of the vessel depends upon the answers and the ship's papers found on board.¹ The court, however, may grant an order for "further proof" upon the application of the libellant sustained by affidavit. If the ship has been taken from possession of any enemy, there is presumption of her enemy character; and if claimants allege her to be friendly, the burden of proof is on them.² Her enemy character alone is sufficient to condemn her.³ If that character is plainly shown in the first instance, further proof should not be allowed.⁴

Further proof is generally allowed under the following circumstances:

1. If the captured master does not honestly answer the questions in preparatorio. 2. If the ship was bought in the enemy's country. 3. If the consignor and consignee are not named in a shipment claiming to be from neutral to neutral. 4. Where the ship's papers are defective or are suppressed. 5. If the voyage itself was suspicious and apparently fraudulent.

The testimony taken in prize cases is preserved that any nation feeling itself aggrieved by the judgment may investigate it.

The capturing governments' right to the prize does not date from the judgment condemning it, but from the time it became enemy property, on the broad principle that the property of a national enemy, at the time of the legal commencement of hostilities, assumes the hostile status.⁵

Also the Confiscation acts of August 6th, 1861, 12 U. S. St. at L 319, and of July 17th, 1862, 12 U. S. St. at L. 589; Mrs. Alexander's Cotton, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 404. What is necessary to condemnation of a naval prize is its enemy character. The Andromeda, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 481; The Florida, 101 U. S. 37. See The Venus, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 258. But enemy's property, seized or captured, when not naval prize, should be described in the libel so as to bring it under the particular statute declared upon.

Further, as to captures by the navy upon inland waters, see The Hampton, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 372; The Washita Cotton, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 521; United States v. Weed, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 62; The Cotton Plant, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 577; The Steamer Homeyer, 2 Bond (U. S.) 217.

1. Wheaton on Captures, 494; The Frances, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 614 and 8 Cr. (U. S.) 348; The Diana, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 93.

2. The Resolution, 2 Dal. (U. S.) 19; The Magnus, 1 Rob. 31; The Twee Juffrowen, 4 Rob. 242.

3. The Elsebe, 5 Rob. 173; The Nelly, 5 Rob. 219; The Alexander, 8 Cr. (U. S.) 169; The Julia, 8 Cr. (U. S.) 181; The Thomas Gibbons, 8 Cr. (U. S.) 421; The Joseph, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 545.

4. The Adriana, 1 Rob. 313; The Romeo, 6 Rob. 351; The Sarah, 3 Rob. 330.

5. Rose v. Himley, 4 Cr. (U. S.) 272; The Santissima Trinidad, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 306; Brown v. United States, 8 Cr. (U. S.) 121; The Andromeda, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 481; The Venus, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 258; The Sallie Magee, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 451; The Hampton, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 375; The Amy Warwick, The Crenshaw, The Hiawatha, and The Brilliance, 2 Black (U. S.) 636; McCullock v. State of Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 413; The Ouchita Cotton, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 521; The Cotton Plant, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 577; Union Ins. Co. v. United

19. Treaty of Peace.—The contending powers usually close the war by entering into a treaty in which they mutually declare hostilities to be at an end and agree upon the terms under which peace is proclaimed. The treaty is made by representatives of the two nations—ambassadors, ministers, commissioners or arbitrators by any name, who subscribe to negotiations subject to the ratification of their respective governments. The high contracting parties are bound, from the time of the negotiation, to maintain national honor; and from the time of the ratification by the compact itself. Subjects of belligerents are bound from the time when they have notice of the treaty. Restoration of property, acknowledgment or relinquishment of damages, reparation for fortifications, and whatever else may be the subject of the treaty must be performed in accordance with its letter and spirit. To violate one article of the national contract is to transgress the whole. It abrogates the treaty and justifies a renewal of hostilities by the injured party. The wrong-doing nation, however, cannot take advantage of his own act and claim that the treaty has been abrogated.¹

The interpretation of peace treaties does not differ from that of others. It is done by arbitrators mutually agreed upon, or by some friendly power to which the parties submit the question of dispute.²

Neutral nations may become parties to a treaty of peace, joining with the late belligerents.³

States, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 765; United States v. Hart, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 772; Morris' Cotton, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 507; Slidell's Land, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 92; Conrad's Lots, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 117; Miller v. United States, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 292; Semmes v. United States, 1 Otto (U. S.) 21; Osborne v. United States, 1 Otto (U. S.) 474; Grotius, De Jure Gentium, lib. 3, ch. 6; Id., ch. 2, § 2; Vattel's Droit des Gens, liv. 2, ch. 5, 2, §§ 81, 82; Bynkershoek, lib. 1, ch. 7; Puffendorf, lib. 1, 8, ch. 6; Martens' Law of Nations, lib. 8, ch. 3, § 9.

1. War is terminated by the conclusion of a treaty of peace, by simple cessation of hostilities, or by the conquest of one, or of part of one, of the belligerent states, by the other.

The general effect of a treaty of peace is to replace the belligerent countries in their normal relation to each other. The state of peace is set up, and they enter at once into all the rights and are bound by all the duties which are implied in that relation. It necessarily follows that, so soon as peace is concluded, all acts must cease which are permitted only in time of war. Hall on Int. Law, p. 482.

2. The same thing is true of treaties of peace as of all other conventional treaties; that they are of no validity where the government exceeds its constitutional powers in making them. Besides this, there is a moral restriction, which nations have been allies in war. A treaty of alliance requires the parties to co-operate in war until a certain end is gained, nothing but an extreme necessity, such as the hopelessness of future exertion, can authorize one of the parties to make a peace with the common enemy. Even if the treaty of alliance for the purposes of war is definite, it is dishonorable for one above all for a principal party, to desert his confederates and leave them at the mercy of the foe. Allies may reserve each his own peace and obtain special concessions, but they are bound in good faith to act together, and to secure another, as far as possible, against a power which may be stronger than any of them separately. Woolsey on Law, § 151, citing Vattel 4, 2, §§ 117, 118.

3. The Crimean war was fought for the object, among others, of taking the destinies of the subject Christian populations of Turkey in Europe out of

20. Offences Against Nations—Piracy.—Piracy is robbery upon the seas. It is a crime against all nations—all mankind.¹ Any nation may, therefore, capture a piratical ship and bring it with the criminals on board to be disposed of by judicial order in the court of any country.² Distinction has been drawn between piracy under the law of nations and piracy under the statute of a particular nation. In this country the definition of the crime in the law of nations has been adopted. The constitution of the United States confers upon congress the power "to define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offences against the law of nations;" and congress has defined piracy to mean what the law of nations declares it.³ The act of congress on the subject makes no exceptions in favor of privateers. Commissioned cruisers are usually understood to be excepted, however. They would be treated as pirates in the absence of their commissions.⁴

A piratical vessel has no national character, and she may be captured by anybody, anywhere, and condemned in a court of any country.⁵

A vessel built or fitted for piratical purposes is liable to seizure and condemnation. Even though intended to be used as a privateer in a war between two nations at peace with our own, and to sail under a commission from one of them, she would be liable to condemnation for being fitted out for such purpose in this country.⁶

An attempt to commit the crime is deemed the consummation of the crime itself.⁷ The concurrent jurisdiction of all nations over piracies is not such as to authorize a trial in a court of nations hands of Russia alone, and confiding them to European control. Among the powers who negotiated and signed the treaty of Paris, of 1856, which closed the war, were Austria and Prussia. They had not been belligerents, but they were allowed to become parties to the treaty in their quality of great powers. In the same way England, France, Germany and Austria took part in the settlement of eastern affairs made in 1878 by the treaty of Berlin, though none of them had been engaged in the previous war between Russia and Turkey. Lawrence's Essays, p 225.

1. With piracy, however, the law of nations has to do, as it is a crime, not against any particular state, but against all states and the established order of the world. Piracy is robbery on the sea, or by descent from the sea upon the coast, committed by persons not holding a commission from, or at the time pertaining to, any established state. It is the act (1) of persons who form an organization for the purposes of plunder, but who, inasmuch as such a body is not constituted for political purposes, cannot be said to be a body politic; (2) of persons who, having, in defiance of law, seized possession of a chartered vessel, use it for the purpose of robbery; (3) of persons taking a commission from two belligerent adversaries. The reason for ranking these latter among pirates is that the animus furandi is shown by acting under two repugnant authorities. Woolsey on Int. Law, § 137.

2. The Marianna Flora, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 1.

3. Const., art. 1, § 8, clause 10; 1 Stat. at L., ch. 36, § 8; The United States v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 610.

4. United States v. Klintock, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 144.

5. United States v. Pirates, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 184.

6. United States Rev. Stat., § 4296; United States v. Pirates, infra.

7. United States v. Brig Malek Adel, 2 How. (U. S.) 210.

as in case of prize. Each nation may condemn a piratical vessel, in its own courts. The ship is tried, not as an enemy, but as a guilty thing. It is tried in the admiralty, but captured upon water, but tried on the instance side of court.

The pirate cannot claim any rights as an enemy, on the ground that he is defined, in international law, as the enemy of all nations. He is simply a prisoner, to be tried in a criminal court. A piratical ship is simply offending property, to be confiscated on the instance side of the admiralty, as above remarked. It is not treated as a prize; testimony in preparatorio is not taken, and is preserved for the inspection of any nation that may deem itself aggrieved. Under a United States statute, however, distribution to the captors is made as in case of prize.¹

21. Slave Trading.—Slave trading consists in being employed in the trade; receiving persons on shipboard at sea or in a country, to be held or sold as slaves; or taking any person on board and transporting him to any place for the purpose of selling him as a slave. Our admiralty courts have jurisdiction over prisoners accused of this crime and brought before them, and the offence may have been committed in a foreign country, for the reason that the offence is against international law, and against all mankind, and may be punished by any nation. The jurisdiction may be condemned, and his vessel confiscated, anywhere, for the jurisdiction of all nations is concurrent. All the great powers have recognized this jurisdiction. Eight nations united in the treaty of Paris to suppress the slave trade. Its suppression was declared to be authorized by public law in the congress of Aix la Chapelle a year later (1815), and three years after this was reaffirmed by the congress of Aix la Chapelle, and four years later (1819) by the congress of Verona, and it is now generally held by all civilized nations. In 1845 the British parliament held that the courts of Admiralty had jurisdiction over Brazilian slaves.

Slave trading is deemed piracy, and has been declared so by all international conventions. The older publicists were divided as to whether slavery could exist consistently with the law of nations; but it has long been well established that slave trading is a crime against international law.

Slavers are tried on the instance side of admiralty courts, precisely as pirate ships are tried. It is not as a court of prize that the admiralty adjudicates upon slavers. Distribution is made as in case of prize, in this country, because it is so prescribed by statute in cases where the capture is by the United States. When slave trading vessels are not thus captured, but seized by civil persons, private or official, that rule of distribution is not applied.

Slave traders themselves are tried like other criminals.

1. The Palmyra, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 1.

circuit courts of the United States, which have no original prize jurisdiction.

The United States statutes against slave trading are in accord with international law. There may be said to be six offences imputed to vessels for which they may be condemned under our slave trade laws.¹ 1. Receiving persons at sea or in a foreign country, to be sold or held as slaves. 2. Receiving anywhere and transporting a person to be sold as a slave, if done by a citizen of the United States.² 3. Hovering on our coasts or our inland waters with a person on board to be landed for sale as a slave.³ 4. Sailing from the United States to engage in the trade.⁴ 5. Being built, fitted, prepared, or laden within the United States for the purpose.⁵ 6. Any part of a slave trading vessel owned by a citizen or resident of this country is forfeitable if his interest is held for the unlawful purpose of slave trading.⁶

Wherever the word "person" occurs in the statute it is qualified by the word "colored," so that word should be supplied wherever it occurs in the foregoing paragraph. But international law makes no distinction among races with reference to the crime of slave trading. Negroes are more frequently mentioned than other persons in treaties to suppress the trade, because they mainly have been the victims of the traffic.

A vessel was condemned for this offence though she had not taken persons on board to be transported and sold as slaves.⁷ Transportation completes the crime without sale.⁸ A ship was forfeited for transporting two slaves shipped with the knowledge of the captain,⁹ by the supercargo.

A vessel may be condemned as a slave trader when she has been prepared for the illicit traffic, before she has engaged in it. And intent to engage in the trade may be inferred from circumstances.¹⁰

1. Rev. Stat., § 5553.

2. Rev. Stat., § 5554.

3. Rev. Stat., § 5555.

4. Rev. Stat., § 5551.

5. Rev. Stat., § 5551.

6. Rev. Stat., § 5556.

7. The Alexander, 3 Mason (U. S.)

175.

8. The Catharine, 2 Paine (U. S.)

721.

9. United States v. Smith, 4 Day (Ct.) 121; The Porpoise (U. S.), 2 Curtis (U. S.) 307.

10. The Wanderer, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 515; The Slaver Reindeer, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 383; The Emily and Caroline, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 381; The Plattsburgh, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 133; The Slaver Kate, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 350; The Slaver Sarah, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 366; The Slaver Weathergage, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 375; The Slaver Reindeer, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 383.

See further, The Bark Isla de Cuba, 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 205; The Isla de Cuba, 2 Sprague (U. S.) 26; The Schooner Anne and Cargo, Taney (U. S.) 413; The Brig Caroline, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 496; The Antelope, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 66.

Authorities.—Vattel's Law of Nations, 7th Am. ed.; Grotius' De Jur. Bel. ac Pac.; Bynkershoek's Quaest. Jur. Pub.; Burlamaqui's Droits de la Nat. et des Gens; Wolfius' Jus Gentium; Puffendorff's De Jur. Nat. et Gent.; Hautefeuille's Des Nations Neutres; Marten's Droit des Gens; Manning's Law of Nations; Bowyer's Public Law; Wheaton's Elements of International Law (8th ed. by Dana); Wheaton, with Lawrence's Notes; Boyd & Wheaton's Int. Law; Wildman's Int. Law; Leiber's Political Ethics; Phillimore's Int. Law; Sprague's Int. Law;

INTERPLEADER—(See EQUITY; EXECUTION; JOINDER)

1. Definition, 494.
2. Jurisdiction, 494.
3. Parties, 496.
4. Circumstances, 499.
5. Practice, 502.

1. Generally, 502.
2. In Sheriff's Int. 505.
6. Bill in the Nature of Interpleader, 506.

1. Definition.—Interpleader is a mode of compelling more persons, who severally claim the same thing, debt from the party liable therefor, to litigate the title thereto themselves, the party liable having incurred no indebtedness to any of the claimants, and being merely in the position of a stakeholder, without interest in the matter himself.¹

2. Jurisdiction.—This remedy was employed to a limited extent at common law,² but much more freely in equity.³ In Polson's Law of Nations; Heffter's Int. Law; Ward's Law of Nations; Twiss's Law of Nations; Woolsey's Int. Law (5th ed.); Bar's Int. Law; Duer on Marine Insurance; Kent's Commentaries (13th ed.); Story's Conflict of Laws (8th ed., Biglow); Wharton's Conflict of Laws (2nd ed.); Halleck's Elements of Military Art and Science; Halleck's Int. Law; Hall's Int. Law; Gardner's Inst. Int. Law; Lawrence's Essays (2nd ed.); Field's Int. Code (2nd ed.); Pomeroy's Lect. on Int. Law; Upton's Mar. Warfare and Prize (2nd ed.); Waples on Proceedings in Rem, bk. 4, Things Hostile.

1. The effect of an interpleader may sometimes be attained by other means; e. g., where executions had issued against the defendants, and counter claims were made by a third party, and the defendants, to avoid a sale, paid the money to the sheriff with notice not to pay it over, the plaintiffs ordered the money into court and ruled the claimant to show cause why they should not receive it. It was held that the court, being legally in possession of the fund, was bound to decide its ownership as on an interpleader. Pennypacker's App., 57 Pa. St. 114.

Interpleader should not be confused with the intervention of third parties in a suit, of their own motion, to protect their own interests. See infra, n. 7, and JOINDER.

2. Use at Common Law.—Its chief use was in the action of detinue, as where a chattel had come into a man's possession by accident, or where two parties concurred in the bailment of a deed, but brought several actions therefor; or where the deed was claimed by the heir who was entitled to the land by the bailor. Where debt was brought by one of the parties depositary was entitled to sue by the process called ga. sol. whereby he could give notice to the other depositor, in such a case, the garnishee, a third party, to appear and be substituted for the defendant. The interpleader was used where two writs of quod damus were brought for the same land; or where two writs of ward were brought for the same wardship; or where two writs of office in different parts of the same office had each been issued to be heir of a tenant to the use of the same. Reeves's Hist. Eng. Law (2nd ed.), Br. Abr., tit. Enterpleader.

In Pennsylvania, the absence of a court of chancery led in early times to the use of interpleaders in common law actions, a third party being brought in by rule or sci. fa., on the suggestion of the defendant, to become a party to the suit; or on suggestion he could be brought in voluntarily, without order of court. Heller v. Jones, 4 Binn. (Pa.) 100; v. Roberts, 4 Raw. (Pa.) 100; v. Clingen, 9 Pa. St. 49, 51; Church, 65 Pa. St. 9.

3. Use in Equity.—It is the chief use of the interpleader. CHIEF BARON GILBERT (F. C. ch. 4, p. 47) to be the same as tertius interveniens of the Roman law, "which in both laws is where a person comes to remove either the plaintiff or defendant; as if a man as a third party brings his bill against the mortgagee to redeem, and another person, claiming a right to redeem, prefers his bill, both to remove the first plaintiff and to redeem from the defendant."

times, it has been made available in England¹ and the United States² in any form of action where the circumstances call for mortgagor brings his bill against the mortgagee to redeem, an alienee of the mortgagee may bring his bill, both to remove the defendant and to receive the money on the redemption."

The use of bills of interpleader was extended to all cases where the same thing, debt or duty was the subject of more than one claim. Mitford's Equity (5th ed.) 141; Cranshaw v. Thornton, 2 M. etc. 1, 21; Burton v. Black, 32 Ga. 53.

The equity originates in the double claim made on the defendant and the inadequate protection afforded him at law. Oil Run etc. Co. v. Gale, 6 W. Va. 525. The fact, therefore, that both the claims are legal does not preclude the party from resorting to equity. Lowndes v. Cornford, 18 Ves. 299.

Nor that one is legal and the other equitable. Duncey v. Angore, 2 Ves. Jr. 312; Lanston v. Horton, 3 Beav. 464; Slavey v. Sidney, 18 M. & W. 801; Burton v. Black, 32 Ga. 53; Whitney v. Cowan, 55 Miss. 626; Lorzier v. Ackerman, 2 N. J. Eq. 325; Yates v. Tisdale, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) 71.

The extensive statutory use of interpleader in actions at law has in modern times greatly diminished the necessity for bills of interpleader. (See Adams' Equity, 7th Am. ed., *203.) Except where no action has yet been brought, but one is merely threatened. Chamberlain v. O'Connor, 1 E. D. Sm. (N. Y.) 665; s. c., 8 How. (N. Y.) 45; Beck v. Stephani, 9 How. (N. Y.) 193; Paterson v. Perry, 14 How. (N. Y.) 505.

In Pennsylvania, the remedy in equity is held peculiarly applicable to cases where there are several independent claimants. Penn Mut. Ins. Co. v. Watson, 2 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 485; Wilbraham v. Horrocks, 8 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 485.

And in general where the statutory remedy might be substituted for that by a bill of interpleader (or a code action in the nature thereof), the two are regarded as concurrent. Bd. of Educ. v. Scoville, 13 Kan. 17.

1. Statutory Interpleader in England.

—By St. 3 & 4 Will. 4, ch. 58, § 1, a defendant in assumpsit, debt, detinue or trover could apply for an interpleader. By St. 23 & 24 Vict., ch. 126, § 12, this privilege was extended to defendants in other forms of action also, though if the stakeholder had not been sued, his only remedy lay in equity. Parker v. Linnett, 4 Dow. 562. It was at first held that an equitable claim was not the subject of an interpleader summons. Hurst v. Sheldon, 13 C. B., N. S. 750. But the practice was afterwards settled the other way. Rusden v. Pope, L. R., 3 Ex. 267; Bk. of Ireland v. Perry, L. R., 7 Ex. 14; Duncan v. Cashin, L. R., 10 C. P. 554; Engelbach v. Nixon, L. R., 10 C. P. 645. By rule 2 of order 1 of the rules of the supreme court of 1875, the practice under the above acts was made applicable to all actions and in all divisions of the high court of justice. It is now governed by order 57 of the rules of 1883, and by 22 & 23 Vict., ch. 126, § 17, being substantially the same as before, except that the same form of remedy is used whether suit has been brought or not.

2. In America.—The statutory interpleader is practically the same whether adapted to a common law system of pleading or enacted as part of a code of practice. In states which retain a separate system of procedure in equity, a bill of interpleader must be filed where the stakeholder has not yet been sued.

In Alabama, the statutory interpleader is applicable to cases where the defendant in an action could have filed a bill of interpleader in equity. Johnson v. Maxey, 43 Ala. 54.

In Pennsylvania, the act of 11th March, 1836, § 4 (P. L.), 77; 2 Pur. Dig. 1360, pl. 37, provides that the defendant, in any action for the recovery of money, or of any goods, chattels, or the value thereof in damages, which "shall have lawfully come into his hands or possession," may, before plea, disclaim all interest in the subject matter of the action, offer to bring the same into court, and suggest, by affidavit, that the right thereto is claimed by a third person, and the court may thereupon order an interpleader.

It has been held of the almost identical local act of 27th March, 1848 (P. L.), 265, that the words "shall have lawfully come," etc., refer only to goods and chattels and not to money. Bechtel v. Sheaffer, 21 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 65; s. c., 11 Atl. Rep. 889.

An attachment execution was at one time held not to be an action within the its application, even to try the title to goods levied upon sheriff.¹

3. Parties.—Anyone threatened with separate liability claims which are substantially one and the same, can have interpleader;² and as the remedy exists exclusively for the meaning of the act. Snyder v. Wetherly, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 325. But the contrary view is now taken. Pratt v. Kratz, 2 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 521; Wasserman v. Bank, 3 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 475.

Trover is an action within the act, if the defendant came by the goods lawfully, and if he offer to bring them into court or dispose of them as the court shall order. Tierman v. Stille (Pa.), 1 Tr. & H. Prac., § 493.

By the New York code, § 820, "A defendant against whom an action to recover upon a contract, or an action of ejectment, or an action to recover a chattel, is pending, may, at any time before answer, upon proof by affidavit that a person not a party to the action makes a demand against him for the same debt or property, without collusion with him, apply to the court, upon notice to that person and the adverse party, for an order to substitute that person in his place, and to discharge him from liability to either, on his paying into court the amount of the debt, or delivering possession of the property, or its value, to such person as the court directs. The court may, in its discretion, make such an order."

This provision of the code is, as to actions already begun, a substitute for the old action of interpleader, and is governed by the same principles. It appeals to the equitable discretion of the court, and the application should not be granted where the third party's claim appears, on the face of the papers, to be frivolous and invalid. Pusket v. Flannelly, 60 How. (N. Y.) 67.

Where no action is pending, resort must be had to an action in the nature of a bill of interpleader. Beck v. Stephani, 9 How. (N. Y.) 193.

1. Sheriff's Interpleader.—In England, this was provided for by Stat. 3 and 4, Will. 4, ch. 58, § 6. It is now regulated by rules 2 and 3 of order 57 of the rules of 1883. Application may now be made when "claim is made to any goods or chattels taken or intended to be taken in execution under any process or to the proceeds or value of any such goods or chattels by any person other than the person against whom the process issued."

This practice has been adopted in one form or another, through the United States.

In Pennsylvania, for instance, act of April 10th, 1849, § 9 (P. Pur. Dig. 750, pl. 56, closely follows the English act, so that an interpleader may be asked for before actual judgment. Phillips v. Reagan, 75 Pa. St. 381. Day v. Carr, 7 Exch. 883. A plaintiff in the execution (that is, the claimant) may perhaps insist on his own security, on an actual inventory. Phillips v. Reagan, Pa. St. 381.

The sheriff is entitled to interpleader though he has levied on the property. He is not bound to discharge his own responsibility, whether the property is real or personal. McWilliams, 2 Weekly Notes 353.

The act does not apply to different plaintiffs requiring the sheriff to levy on the same goods or chattels against different defendants. Tr. & Ha. Prac., § 1136.

Nor to the case of property under distinct executions against the same defendant, in which case the sheriff is entitled, apart from the act, to compel the judgment debtors to plead and settle their respective claims. Lawson v. Jordan, 297.

Nor where the sheriff levies on the property of a third person, as where he levies on the real estate of a tenant. Maurer v. Sheaffer, Pa. St. 339.

In North Carolina, such interpleader cannot be granted before sale. White, 65 N. Car. 225.

By the New York code, §§ 820 and 821, the sheriff does not apply for interpleader, but may, in his discretion, empanel a jury to try the validity of the claim.

2. Instances.—Where different persons claimed, some by special assignment, others under an assignment, due on an insurance policy issued by their debtor, since insolvent, the insurance company filed a bill of interpleader.

tection of a person so situated, he alone can apply for the interpleader, whether at law or in equity.¹ Only those who have a to determine the rights of the respective parties. Spring v. S. Car. Ins. Co., 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 268.

Where a person sues for money deposited in a bank by him as agent for the trustees of a corporation, and other parties claim to be the trustees, the plaintiff may be required to interplead with them. Ware v. Western Bk. (Pa.), 1 Trou. & Ha. Prac., § 496.

Where a dividend due on certain shares of stock, originally held in trust, fraudulently transferred by the trustee, and through mesne transfers to a third party, is claimed both by such party and the cestui que trust, the corporation can have a bill of interpleader to determine who is entitled to the dividend, but not whether the corporation is liable for permitting the transfer. Mills v. Townshend, 109 Mass. 115.

An interpleader will be decreed for the relief of a judgment debtor who has been summoned as garnishee of the debt under an attachment execution against the creditor. Webster v. McDaniel, 2 Del. Ch. 297.

Pending an action by a husband and wife against the maker of a note payable to the wife, the money due was attached in the maker's hands by the husband's creditors, claiming that the note was fraudulently made payable to the wife, and the maker was allowed a bill of interpleader. Fahie v. Lindsay, 8 Oreg. 474.

Where an attorney holds money of his client, claimed by two creditors and disclaimed by the client, an interpleader lies. Flammis v. L'Engle, 19 Fla. 800.

The attorney for several creditors obtained from the debtor an assignment of insurance policies then payable to him, and agreed in writing to pay the claims represented by him, and to pay over the residue to the attorneys of certain other creditors. Before this was done he was garnished by still other creditors, whose claims were not recognized by the attorneys to whom he was to pay. Whereupon he was allowed an interpleader against them and the other creditors. Moore v. Barnheisel, 45 Mich. 500.

Where a county treasurer had issued a large number of notes, but only those issued within the limits of his authority were valid, and the county supervisors admitted their liability on the valid notes, their bill against the holders of the notes was held a bill of interpleader. Saratoga Co. Sup. v. Seabury, 11 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 461. See also Mitchell v. Hayne, 1 Sim. & St. 63; Hastings v. Cropper, 3 Del. Ch. 165; Perkins v. Trippe, 40 Ga. 225; Bd. of Educ. v. Scoville, 13 Kan. 17; School Dist. v. Weston, 31 Mich. 86; Rohrer v. Turrill, 4 Minn. 407; Hyman v. Cameron, 46 Miss. 725; O. W. Ditch Co. v. Larcombe, 14 Nev. 53; Leddell v. Starr, 20 N. J. Eq. 274; Atkinson v. Mauks, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 691; Bedell v. Hoffman, 2 Pal. (N. Y.) 199; Cady v. Porter, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 463; B. & O. R. Co. v. Arthur, 10 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 147.

1. In a few States, the rule given in the text is not followed. The North Carolina code, § 189, provides that the court may by interpleader determine any controversy, where it can be done without injury to the rights of other parties. Under this, it has been held that in a supplemental proceeding to subject a fund to the payment of a judgment, a new claimant may, of his own motion, come in and interplead. Munds v. Cassidey, 98 N. Car. 558.

In New Hampshire, it is held that where a debtor could file a bill of interpleader to determine the conflicting claims of creditors, one of the latter can file it in his own behalf. Webster v. Hall, 60 N. H. 7.

But as a general rule, the intervention of third parties is a practice wholly distinct from interpleader. See JOINER.

In Pennsylvania, a claimant cannot intervene under the interpleader act, if the defendant or garnishee has not asked for an interpleader. Allison v. Elbertson, 1 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 388.

In Michigan, where a bill of interpleader was filed against two persons, one of whom disclaimed all right to the fund, a stranger sought to be admitted, on petition, to contest the interest of the remaining defendant. It was held that there was no practice which would allow him to get into the cause by petition; that the bill could not be amended so as to reach him, because it was filed to guard against known, not unknown, claims. M. & O. Plaster Co. v. White, 44 Mich. 25.

claim upon him, and whose claims conflict, can be made defendants,¹

1. Varrian v. Berrien, 42 N. J. Eq. 1. Where the money due on a mortgage was claimed by an alleged agent under a power of attorney from the owner of the mortgage, and the owner's daughter declared that her mother was of unsound mind when she executed the power, and the mortgagor filed a bill of interpleader against the alleged agent and the daughter, it was held that the owner and her daughter were the proper parties, for if the alleged agency was inoperative for the cause stated, the alleged agent was a stranger to the complainant. Blake v. Garwood, 42 N. J. Eq. 276.

It must be certain that the parties sought to be made defendants are in rerum natura. Metcalf v. Hervey, 1 Ves. 248.

In England, an interpleader will not be granted where the crown is a party to the proceedings. Candy v. Mangham, 1 D. & L. 745.

The plaintiff must admit a title as against himself in all the defendants. Hence, where he is confessedly a wrongdoer as against some of them, or where the matter to be determined involves the question of whether or not he is a wrongdoer, he cannot maintain an interpleader. Tyus v. Rust, 37 Ga. 574; Mt. Holly etc. Tpke. Co. v. Ferree, 17 N. J. Eq. 117; United States v. Vietor, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) 153; Quinn v. Green, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 229.

Where A, a bailee, agreed to sell the goods for C, a third party, on a written order from B, the bailor, and did so, retaining the proceeds for a debt owed him by C, but B had revoked the order verbally before the sale, though he did not do so in writing till afterwards, an interpleader was refused, for if C's title were good at the time of the sale, B had no claim against A, while if A sold the goods wrongfully for C's account, the court could not aid him. Hatfield v. McWhorter, 40 Ga. 269.

Agents, Tenants, etc.—An agent or attorney, sued by his principal, cannot compel him to interplead with a third party, nor can a tenant compel his landlord to interplead with a stranger. The title of a principal or landlord cannot be controverted in this way. It would be exceedingly vexatious and unjust to allow a tenant to put his landlord on the same footing as a stranger.

Nickolson v. Knowles, 5 Mad. 47; Cook v. Rosslyn, 1 Giff. 167; Crane v. Burntrager, 1 Cart. (Ind.) 165; W. V. Can. Co. v. Comegys, 2 Cart. (Ind.) 469; Snodgrass v. Butler, 54 Miss. 45; Dodd v. Bellows, 29 N. J. Eq. 127; Marvin v. Elwood, 11 Pai. (N. Y.) 365; Delaney v. Murphy, 31 Supr. Ct. (N. Y.) 503.

If, however, after the tenancy or agency is created, the landlord or principal transfers his interest to, or creates an interest in, some other person, a claim by such person may give rise to an interpleader. Dungey v. Angove, 2 Ves. Jr. 303; Cowtan v. Williams, 9 Ves. 107; Shulter v. Harvey, 65 Cal. 158.

Hence an attorney who has collected money may have an interpleader in respect of the same against defendants who set up a derivative claim from the person for whom it was collected. Gibson v. Goldthwaite, 7 Ala. 286.

Or if rent is claimed by both the devisee and the heir of the lessor, the tenant can have an interpleader. Badeau v. Tyler, 1 Sand. (N. Y.) 270.

A sub-tenant, moreover, can maintain interpleader in case rent is demanded by both the original lessor and the original lessee. Ketcham v. Brazil Block Coal Co., 88 Ind. 515. See also Adams v. Beach, 1 (Phila.) Pa. 99.

An executor or administrator is bound to protect the legatees and distributees; hence he cannot have an interpleader against a legatee and one claiming by a title paramount to the testator's. Adams v. Dixon, 19 Ga. 513. Or against the creditors and distributees of an intestate, and an adverse claimant of the assets of the estate. Blue v. Watson, 59 Miss. 619.

But he may have an interpleader against legatees whose claims conflict. Crosby v. Mason, 32 Conn. 482. See also Osborne v. Taylor, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 17. Or where the description of a legatee in a will is in some respects applicable to different persons, each of whom claims the legacy. Morse v. Stearns, 131 Mass. 389.

A bailee sued by his bailor cannot compel the latter to interplead with a stranger. First Nat. Bk. v. Binninger, 26 N. J. Eq. 345.

Nor a debtor his creditor and a third and all such should be made so¹.

4. Circumstances.—The party seeking the interpleader must be in danger of having to discharge his liability at least twice over.² All the parties against whom he seeks relief must claim of him party claiming by title paramount, adversely to the creditor, such third party having no privity with the debtor. Bost. Bk. v. S. W. & B. Lumb. Co., 132 Mass. 410.

An insurance company cannot compel an assignee for value of the policy to interplead with a subsequent assignee for creditors and the insolvent assignor, who wrongfully refuse to consent to the payment of the sum insured to the first assignee. His title is superior to theirs. Desborough v. Harris, 3 De G. M. & G. 439, overruling Fenn v. Edmonds, 5 Hare 314.

1. The attachability of a note payable outside the jurisdiction of the court issuing the writ is an open question in some States. Hence, in such States, if the maker of a note is garnished, he can have an interpleader against the attaching creditor and an assignee with notice of the attachment. Fitch v. Brower, 42 N. J. Eq. 300.

Foreigner Outside the Jurisdiction.—It was formerly held in England that there could be no interpleader if one of the claimants were a foreigner residing outside the jurisdiction of the court. Patorni v. Campbell, 12 M. & W. 277; Lindsey v. Barrow, 6 C. B. 291. Now, this is no ground for rejecting the application, though it may be a reason for making such claimant give security for costs or barring him altogether. Attenborough v. St. Kath. Docks, L. R., 3 C. P. D. 450; Belmonte v. Aynard, L. R., 4 C. P. D. 221; Credit Gerundense v. Van Weede, L. R., 12 Q. B. D. 171.

2. The plaintiff need not actually have been sued by both parties, nor, in fact, by either. Strange v. Bell, 11 Ga. 103; Newhall v. Kastens, 70 Ill. 156; Richards v. Salter, 6 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 447.

The criterion is simply whether there be the slightest doubt or risk arising from conflicting claims. The fact that a stakeholder might by great attention and caution make himself secure does not disqualify him from filing a bill of interpleader. Nelson v. Barker, 2 H. & M. 334.

There must, however, be some risk. Hence one who can by ordinary diligence inform himself, to which of the claimants payment should be made, or in any way avoid the double claim, cannot maintain interpleader. Sulzbacker v. S. & L. Bk., 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 269; McDonald v. Allen, 37 Wis. 108.

Nor can one who denies that the defendants have any valid, legal or equitable claim against him compel them to interplead. Hellman v. Schneider, 75 Ill. 422.

Illegal claims are not the subject of an interpleader; e.g., it will not be granted in favor of the holder of stakes on an illegal race. Applegarth v. Colley, 2 Dow. (N. S.) 223.

If the claim has already been paid to one party, a demand by another party is no ground for an interpleader. Tiernan v. Rescaniere, 10 G. & J. (Md.) 217; Am. Tel. Co. v. Day, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 128; Phila. S. F. Soc. v. Clarke, 15 Phila. (Pa.) 289.

So if judgment has been recovered on the claim. Cornish v. Tanner, 1 G. & J. 333; Un. Bk. v. Kerr, 2 Md. Ch. 460; McKinney v. Kuhn, 59 Miss. 186; Cheever v. Hodgson, 9 Mo. App. 565; French v. Robschard, 50 Vt. 43.

But if the suit be allowed to go to verdict merely to ascertain the amount recoverable, that is no bar to an interpleader. Hamilton v. Marks, 5 De G. & Sm. 638.

Nor is a judgment a bar, if it be appealed from. Griggs v. Thompson, 1 Geo. Dec. 146.

It is immaterial that one claim is legal and the other equitable. Newhall v. Kastens, 70 Ill. 156.

Interpleader Not Allowed for Other Purposes.—A filed a bill of interpleader, alleging his indebtedness to B for certain goods, and that two parties claimed the money. On decree, he paid the money into court. He afterwards filed a supplemental bill stating that it had been decided in an action at law that the goods belonged to C, and praying that C be made a party defendant. It was held that as A had no right to an interpleader unless he were indebted to B he could not use the proceeding to determine whether he owed B anything or not, and the supplemental bill was dismissed. Wolf's App. (Pa.), 7 Atl. Rep. 163.

the same thing, debt or duty,¹

1. Turner v. Kendall, 3 M. & W. 171; s. c., 2 D. & L. 197; Hayes v. Johnson, 4 Ala. 267; Adams v. Dixon, 19 Ga. 513; Burton v. Black, 32 Ga. 53; Rohrer v. Turrill, 4 Minn. 407; Yarborough v. Thompson, 11 Miss. 291; Cannon v. Kinney, 1 Sm. & M. Ch. (Miss.) 525; Tpke. Co. v. Ferree, 17 N. J. Eq. 117; Atkinson v. Manks, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 691; Badeau v. Rogers, 2 Pai. (N. Y.) 209; Aymer v. Gault, 2 Pai. (N. Y.) 284; Yates v. Tisdale, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) 71; Prov. Bk. v. Wilkinson, 4 R. I. 507.

When the subject in dispute has a bodily existence, no difficulty can arise on the ground of identity; for no dispute can arise as to identity of matter. But where the subject in dispute is a chose in action, which has no bodily existence, it becomes necessary to determine what constitutes identity. Where the claims made by the defendants are of different amounts, they never can be identical." Equality in amount is prima facie evidence of identity, but it is far from conclusive. Glyn v. Duesbury, 11 Sim. 139.

Instances of Different Subject Matter.—Where an auctioneer was sued for breach of warranty of a horse sold by him, and the original owner claimed the purchase money from him, interpleader was not allowed. Wright v. Freeman, 48 L. J., C. P. 276.

So, where an auctioneer, by direction of the owner, had sold to two persons successively, receiving a deposit from each, he was not allowed a bill of interpleader against the owner and the two purchasers; because, though there was one question in common between the purchasers, viz., which was to be the purchaser of the estate, their claims against the auctioneer were for two different things, viz.: by each for his own deposit. The bill was, therefore, dismissed as against the second purchaser, with costs, and it was decreed that the seller and the second purchaser should interplead as to the first deposit. Hogart v. Cutts, Cr. & Ph. 197.

It has even been held, where a purchaser of tea was sued by the seller for the price, and was also sued in trover, by one alleging himself to be the real owner, not to be a case for interpleader, for one party was seeking to recover the price of the goods, the other, damages for their conversion. Slaney v.

Sidney, 14 M. & W. 800. Enactment of rule 3 of the rules of 1883 this case would now be followed, the criterion being substantial identity of the subject, not the form of action.

The purchaser of mortgage for part cash and part to maintain interpleader against different persons, one holding gage note and the other purchase money note, the note not being for the same debt. Son v. Seavey, 74 Ala. 243.

Interpleader will not lie against parties demanding repayment of taxes paid under protest, or holding municipal orders for amounts paid. Wallace v. Mich. 159.

Where a company issued certificates of stock on a forged attorney, and the owner of the forged certificates brought suit, the company could not maintain interpleader against the owners of the certificates; the claims of the owners to be recognized as stockholders being identical. Am. Tel. & C. Co. v. N. Y. Super. Ct. 128.

Claims Not Necessarily Coextensive.—In Attenborough v. Docks, L. R., 3 C. P. D., it was held in the common pleas that the remedy of the plaintiff claimant must be coextensive with the remedy against the defendant to admit of an interpleader. The remedy was reversed in the court of error (same vol., 450); BRETT, L. "I do not think that the statement merely where the opposing claims are coextensive; I think that the wider construction." Of such a case, "in whatever case ultimately be made, care will be taken to preserve any claims for which the plaintiffs fancy themselves entitled to." Per BRAMWELL, J.

Interpleader as to Part of Claim.—Another application of the modern doctrine allows a defendant an interpleader as to part of his claim, while he defends as to the rest. Reading v. School Board, Q. B. D. 686. The English courts formerly the other way. Hayne, 2 Sim. & St. 63; Campbell, 12 M. & W. 277; Sidney, 14 M. & W. 800.

adversely to each other,¹ and he must be ignorant or in doubt as to the validity of their respective titles.² He must not have acknowledged the title of either claimant,³ and must claim no interest in the matter himself,⁴

American rule seems to remain so still. Nelson v. Goree, 34 Ala. 565; Chamberlain v. O'Connor, 8 How. (N. Y.) 45; Bird v. Neff (Pa.), 1 Tr. & Ha. Prac. § 497.

1. Separate Liability to Both Claimants.—An interpleader will not be granted where the claims, though arising from the same subject matter, are not necessarily adverse, but might both be valid, as where the defendant had sent the plaintiff a blank acceptance in payment of a debt, and the latter never received it, and it came into the claimant's hands in the form of a bill properly endorsed, taken bona fide for value. Farr v. Wood, 2 M. & W. 844.

So, where a life insurance company had issued a policy on the life of A, payable to B, but allowed A without B's consent, to surrender the policy and take a new one payable to C, after A's death the company could not make B and C interplead, the question of its liability to both being involved. Nat. L. I. Co. v. Pingrey, 141 Mass. 411. To the same effect, Cochrane v. O'Brien, 2 Jo. & Lat. 380; Randall v. Lithgow, L. R., 12 Q. B. D. 525.

2. La. St. Lot. Co v. Clark, 16 Fed. R. 20; Pfister v. Wade, 56 Cal. 43; Strange v. Bell, 11 Ga. 103; Dreyer v. Ranch, 42 How. (N. Y.) 22; s. c., 10 Abb. N. S. (N. Y.) 243; 4 Da. (N. Y.) 434; Bell v. Hunt, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 391.

3. The most familiar illustrations of this rule are found in the cases of tenants, agents, bailees, etc., which have been noticed, ante, p. 498, n. 1.

The rule was formerly given a much wider application than is now the case in England, and was usually expressed thus: "The party seeking relief must have incurred no independent liability to either claimant. *Adams' Eq. 204; Bispham's Eq., § 421. It was laid down by LORD CHANCELLOR COTTENHAM, in Crawshay v. Thornton, 2 My. & Cr. 1, "that where the party seeking to interplead had entered into any contract with or lay under personal obligation towards either claimant, he would not be allowed to do so. This doctrine was followed in the common law courts (see James v. Pritchard, 7 M. & W. 216; Patoni v. Campbell, 12 M. & W. 277; Lindsey v. Barrow, 6 C. B. 291; Hor- ton v. Earl of Devon, 4 Ex. 497; Turner v. Mayor, 13 M. & W. 171) with but very few exceptions (Johnson v. Shaw, 4 M. & G. 916; Crellin v. Leland, 6 Jur. 733) until 1860, when the Common Law Procedure act, § 12, provided that interpleader might be granted, "although the titles of the claimants to the money, goods, or chattels in question, or to the proceeds or value thereof, have not a common origin, but are adverse to and independent of each other." This provision (re-enacted in rule 3 of order 57 of the rules of 1883) "was intended to do away with the effect of." Crawshay v. Thornton, which is now no longer law in any court in England. See remarks of BLACKBURN, J., in Meynell v. Angell, 32 L. J., Q. B. 14; and of BRAMWELL, L. J., in Attenborough v. St. Kath. Docks Co., L. R., 3 C. P. D. 450.

Hence where a defendant was sued for work done by the plaintiff, with whom he had contracted, and a third party claimed that the plaintiff was his agent in contracting and doing the work, an interpleader was granted. Meynell v. Angell, 32 L. J., C. B. 14.

And where the defendants were sued for the detention of wine for which they had given dock warrants, endorsed for value by the plaintiff, and the wine was claimed by a third party. Attenborough v. St. Kath. Docks Co., L. R., 3 C. P. D. 450. To the same effect Best v. Hayes, 1 H. & C. 718; Evans v. Wright, 13 W. R. 468; Tanner v. European Bk., L. R. 1 Ex. 261.

In America, the doctrine of Crawshay v. Thornton seems to be still regarded as law. Bechtel v. Sheaffer, 21 Weekly Notes (Pa.) 65. It was, however, held in that case that where a contract relation existed between the stakeholder and one of the claimants, by the terms of which the former was bound to pay money to the latter, this fact alone would not necessarily deprive the former of his right to an interpleader.

4. Killian v. Ebbinghaus, 110 U. S. 568; Long v. Barker, 85 Ill. 431; Snodgrass v. Butler, 54 Miss. 45; Anderson v. Wilkinson, 10 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 601; Dohnest's App., 64 Pa. 311.

Hence there can be no interpleader except for charges and costs.¹

5. Practice—1. Generally.—An interpleader is applied for by bill if in equity; by motion if at common law; or by such other form of application as may have been authorized by law. Application should be made before or immediately after the applicant has been sued, without waiting until there is a verdict and judgment against him.² It must state the applicant's rights,³ and the claims against him which constitute the reason for the interpleader.⁴ It must allege his ignorance as to the validity of these claims, or at least that he is in such doubt that he cannot at the instance of a party who admits a liability for the principal sum demanded only, but not for the interest. Bridenburg Mfg. Co. App., 106 Pa. St. 275.

An insurance company had cancelled certain policies at the request of the insured, and issued them anew to other beneficiaries, claims being presented upon both new and old policies. It was held to have such an interest in the defeat of one of the claimants as to incapacitate it from maintaining interpleader. Conley v. Ala. G. C. I. Co., 67 Ala. 472.

It is no objection that the plaintiff in the interpleader has an interest in the success of one of the parties, as; e. g., where it would increase his own chance of success in a suit which might be brought in regard to other property. This is only an interest in the question, not in the particular suit. Gibson v. Goldthwaite, 7 Ala. 281; Oppenheim v. Wolf, 3 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 371; McHenry v. Hazard, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 657.

It necessarily follows from this requirement of absence of interest that a definite claim must be admitted to be due. The court cannot be called upon to settle by interpleader the amount of the claim. B. & O. R. Co. v. Arthur, 90 N. Y. 234.

In Connecticut, this has been allowed, however, no demurrer having been taken. Cons. Pres. Soc. v. Staples, 23 Conn. 544.

And in any case, if the parties can agree on an amount, that is sufficient. Finlay v. Am. Exch. Bk., 11 How. (N. Y.) 468.

1. A party claiming a lien on goods, irrespective of the rights of different parties claiming the goods, can demand an interpleader. Cotter v. Bk. of Eng., 3 Moore & S. 180; s. c., 2 Dow. 728; Attenborough v. St. Kath. Docks, L. R., 3 C. P. D. 450.

But it is otherwise if the lien attached only in respect of one of the parties claiming the goods. Braddick v. Smith, 2 Moore & S. 131; s. c., 9 Bing. 84.

It has been held that an auctioneer sued for the deposit, by both his principal and the purchaser, could not have an interpleader so long as he claimed a right to deduct his commission. Mitchell v. Hayne, 2 S. & S. 63; Moore v. Usher, 7 Sim. 384; Bignold v. Audland, 11 Sim. 24; Jacobson v. Blackhurst, 2 J. & H. 486. But in Best v. Hayes, 32 L. J., Ex. 129; s. c., 3 F. & F. 113, the judges refused assent to this doctrine, though the case was decided on another point.

2. See supra, n. 10.

This fact should appear in the affidavit. Frost v. Heywood, 1 Dow. (N. S.) 801.

In Pennsylvania, an interpleader cannot be granted under the statute until after statement (formerly declaration) filed, nor can it be applied for after plea. 1 Tr. & Ha. Prac., § 496.

3. Story's Eq. Pl., § 292.

